Reports from the southern part of the state indicate that the blizzard there was far more severe than here, in that it was colder and froze harder, in addition to the severe wind and snow storms.

Mr. W. H. Hurlbut is building a dock in front of his lot near the site of the old planing mill. This lot has been intended as the site for a grist mill, and we hope to see one built there before the close of another season.

The circuit court convened on Tuesday, with 26 cases on the calendar. There was but one jury case tried, and the calendar was completed and court adjourned at 9:30 Wednesday evening. The proceedings will appear in next week's JOURNAL.

A late letter from F. W. Hathaway, of the Redpath lyceum bureau, Chicago, reports business booming with them. Mr. H. spent several weeks in our village last summer, and went away with a good opinion of it. We shall expect him again next summer.

The body of Moses Detwiler, drowned at Petoskey on the 19th, has been recovered. The body of Mr. Moody, one of the number drowned off the schooner Lucy J. Clark, near Cross Village, a week ago, was also found washed ashore near that place last Sunday.

J. Milo Eaton's brush handle factory is enclosed and ready for occupancy. He has just received the bill for the machinery, which will double his present capacity, and he is in good time. When started, this will make a valuable addition to our manufacturing interests.

A large force of men are at work on the walls of the new planing mill, and a week or two of good weather will so far enclose it that another blizzard will not entirely stop business there as the one last week proved to do. Mr. See is crowding business as fast as possible.

Rev. Mr. Iddings has selected as the subject for thanksgiving sermon at the M. E. church next Thursday. "The Model Republic." He would like to see our business men generally lay aside their labor, during the hour of service at least, and properly observe the occasion.

The JOURNAL has in progress various maps and illustrations of Charlevoix and surroundings, to be used for advertising purposes, which are expected to surpass in accuracy of detail and beauty of finish any other work issued. More will be said when they are finally ready for public criticism.

Next Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Iddings, at the M. E. church, will discuss the question, "Is there a hell?" Text: Luke, 16:23. The plan of the sermon will be laid in the fact that there is a law of the moral world by which each experience, pursuit, and object has a dark and foreboding side.

Last Sunday night fire destroyed the store of W. F. Empey & Co., of East Jordan, in which building were also located the Enterprise printing office, the post office, and telegraph office. Empey & Co.'s goods were insured for $4,000, but the printing office was not insured. In the latter place all books and accounts were lost.

C. R. Bellinger has just finished for Chas. Swallow a handsome ring. The report of the new presiding elder, Mr. Stinchcomb, was highly satisfactory. The earnest efforts, give promise for a new departure in the northern work.

J. Milo Eaton has had platted into village lots the thirty-five acres south of the village, known as the Griswold place, and will soon have the lots on sale.

The quarterly conference of the M. E. church voted in favor of a Charlevoix circuit, which will be perfected and established as soon as circumstances will permit.

Our neighbor the Sentinel prints this week an excellent map of Charlevoix county, of a size suitable for back envelopes, which will become a valuable element in advertising our resources and advantages.

The Detroit Evening Journal has adopted the new railroad time, and its two o'clock edition is hereafter to be designated the "fourteen o'clock edition." The change is carried to every department of the paper. The railroads are so much a factor in business that the new method will doubtless soon come into general use.

For some years past Dr. M. L. Leach, of Traverse city, has been preparing a full and complete history of the Grand Traverse region, and the Herald has secured the manuscript, and will publish it as a serial during the coming winter. It will greatly increase that paper's already large circulation and importance in northern Michigan.

Those who love to dance should not forget the firemen, at Lewis' hall next Thursday evening. The boys are trying to perfect arrangements to give the best entertainment for the money ever given in Charlevoix, and they deserve the solid support of our citizens. None of us know what cold night we shall need the services of these same "fire boys."

Mr. Mitchell, civil engineer, of Ludington, has arrived, and will superintend the removal of the obstruction at the mouth of the channel. A wrecking tug from Milwaukee is daily expected for the purpose of removing the wrecked B. Parsons. Mr. M. will also look after repairing the damage to the revetment. He states that the damage here is much less comparatively than at any other place on the lakes.

Mr. W. F. Orrell informed us on Thursday of last week that he received a letter from Mr. B. Sabenstill, of Chicago, requesting him to look after his cottage on the point opposite the Belvedere house, and that on going there he found that the cottage had been broken into and ransacked. Mr. O. did not know whether anything had been carried away, and will not until he hears from Mr S., after comparing a list of articles found with what was known to have been left there. Mr. O. stated at the same time that one of the cottages on the south side had been broken into and ransacked in a similar manner.

During the past summer there has been considerable strife between the Pine lake boats in the matter of speed, and frequent races have been had with various results. One between the Clara Belle and North Star resulted in a slight advantage to the latter, and this was circulated and boasted by the up-lake people as showing the superiority of that boat over the Clara Belle. Last Friday, however, the Clara Belle got even and something to spare, leaving the North Star one-half mile behind in a fair race of five miles. This naturally makes our bays feel pretty good, and when navigation opens next spring it is safe to predict more of the same sort of excitement.

Historical Society.

This society met at the parlors of Mrs. E. H. Green on Tuesday evening and the following program was presented:

Vocal duet, by Mrs. E. H. Green and Miss Esther Buttars.

Paper by Dr. Preston; subject: "Efforts to secure peace prior to the revolution."

Mrs. G. S. Thomas and Miss Abbie Bennett rendered a piano duet, which was considered a rare treat.

After an intermission, W. A. Smith favored the audience with a fine tenor solo.

Miss Maggie and Master Fred Green rendered a piano and violin duet, followed by a recitation by Mrs. Bradley.

A vocal duet by Miss Abbie Bennett and Mrs. Ella Smith, and a piano solo by Mrs. O. D. Wood, closed the exercises of the evening.

The society will meet next Tuesday evening at the parlors of the Fountain City house.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the JOURNAL by VERMONT RACE, real estate dealer.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Nov. 20, 1883, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Mason to Oates, e ½ of n e ¼, 10-33-7, $150.
Rickland to Sellers, n ½ of s e ¼, 11-31-7, $250.
Meade to Gaultier, s ½ of n w ¼, 26-33-8, $200.
Mooshington to Soller, lot 16, blk 16, Charlevoix, $200.
Nesbell to LaClair, w ½ of n w ¼, 25-32-7, $157.
Miller to Porter, n ½ of n w ¼, 19-32-8, $200.
Porter to Bowers, e ½ of n e ¼, 20-32-8, $170.
Alger to Williams, n ½ of n e ¼, also s w ¼ of n e ¼, and s ½ of n w ¼, 25-33-7, $1,200.
Talcot to Stoner, w ½ lot 8, blk 7, Charlevoix, $300.

To the Patrons of the East Jordan Enterprise.

By the burning of our office on Monday morning Nov. 20, we lost our subscription list. If our subscribers and patrons will please send us their names and address on a postal card, we will regain our list. We intend to resume the publication of the Enterprise in about 30 days, or as soon thereafter as is possible.

Respt. yours
PALMITER & NELSON.

$100 REWARD

is offered for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally. Price 75 cents. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

Chandler.

Mr. Crouch has finished sawing wood in Chandler, and has returned to his home near Petoskey.

Miss Jennie Walker is on the sick list, this week.

Andrew Walker shot a large deer last week, weighing about 180 pounds.

J. L. Reigle, supervisor, is busy making out the tax roll for his township.

A certain man living in Chandler says it is enough to make a boy leave home, rather than to live in single cussedness. Brace up young man and come to the front like a little captain.

The oyster supper and dance at William Gallop's was a success, there being about thirty people present. The music was furnished by Upon, Pardee & Co.

There are a great many trying to kill deer, but very unsuccessful thus far, there being only one killed in the town as far as we know.

SCRATCH AWL.

Hayes.

Hayes township is to have another saw mill.

The storms last week played havoc with the docks in this region.

A few of our citizens have been hunting deer the past week.

As Mr. G. Barlow was repairing his house, a board slipped from the roof, hitting him in the face, resulting in a broken nose.

Alex. Ross, jr., who has been cruising on Lake Michigan the past fall is now domiciled in Hayes.

ZEKE.

If Catarrh has destroyed your sense of smell and hearing, Hall's Catarrh Cure will cure you. 75 cents per bottle. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS. Sealed proposals will be received at the office of J. Milo Eaton, until Wednesday, November 28, 1883, at 2 o'clock p. m. for the furnishing of Sixty Cords of Body Maple Block Wood, to be sawed to 3 inch. Said wood to be delivered at places designated by the village of Charlevoix on or before Jan. 15, 1884. The right to reject any or all bids is reserved by the board.

By order of the school board.
J. MILO EATON, Director.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION. The partnership heretofore existing under the firm name and style of Miller & Skinner, wherein Robert A. Miller and Lemuel W. Skinner, of the township of Marion, Charlevoix county, Michigan, were general partners, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, and the said Robert A. Miller retains the business and assumes the obligations of said firm.

Dated October 20, A. D. 1883.

ROBERT A. MILLER.
LEMUEL W. SKINNER.

DISSOLUTION OF COPARTNERSHIP. The co-partnership heretofore existing under the style and firm name of S. M. See, Sisson & Co., wherein S. M. See, Oscar D. Mason, John F. Mason, and Henry O. Cook, were general partners, doing business in the village of Charlevoix, Mich., is this day dissolved by mutual consent. The said S. M. See is hereby appointed by said firm to settle up the books of said firm, to collect all accounts, and dispose of all the property belonging to said firm in the best advantage possible, and after the firm debts are paid, to divide the surplus, if any, among the partners of said firm.

Dated Nov. 20, A. D. 1883.

(Signed)
OSCAR D. MASON,
JOHN F. MASON,
HENRY O. COOK,
S. M. SEE.

PROBATE ORDER. State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the estate of Levi Sisson, late of said county, deceased. Notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, administrator of the estate of said Levi Sisson, on the 20th day of November, A. D. 1883, by the Hon. Judge of Probate for the county of Charlevoix, there will be sold at public vendue, on the 19th day of December, A. D. 1883, at the front door of the court house in the village of Charlevoix, in said state, on Saturday, the 19th day of December, A. D. 1883, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day, subject to all encumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of the death of said deceased, or at the time of sale, and also subject to the right of dower and the homestead rights of the widow of said deceased, the following described real estate, to wit: The north half of the northeast quarter of section thirty-three (33), in township thirty-four (34) north, of range seven (7) west, except ten acres in the southeast corner of said description, forty rods square.

REUBEN WILLIS, Administrator.
11-23

MORTGAGE SALE. Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by Peter Sabegoda, Mary Sabegoda his wife, joining to her her dower rights in the premises, to mortgage, to Lemuel D. Earl...son, mortgagee, bearing date the eleventh (11th) day of January, A. D. 1882, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix, on the twelfth (12th) day of January, A. D. 1882, at 4 o'clock, p. m., in liber "C" of mortgages, on page 405. That upon the thirteenth (13th) day of July, A. D. 1883, said mortgage was duly assigned by E. M. Clark, which assignment was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix on the fourteenth (14th) day of July, A. D. 1883, at nine o'clock a. m. in liber "N" of mortgages, on page 18. On which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of fifty-one dollars and forty cents ($51.40), principal and interest, and an attorney fee of ten dollars and no cts. ($10) provided for in, should any proceeding be had to foreclose the same. And no proceeding at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the sum secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale therein contained, I will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, on Saturday, the ninth day of February, A. D. 1884, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front staircase of Lewis Hall, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, the said Lewis Hall being the place for the holding of the circuit court within the said county of Charlevoix. The premises to be sold are described in said mortgage as follows: The west one-half (½) of the southwest one quarter (¼) of the southeast one quarter (¼) of section twenty-eight (28), in township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, containing twenty acres of land according to the United States survey.

Dated November 14, A. D. 1883.

E. M. CLARK,
Assignee of mortgage.
CHURCH, GRANT & GRIFFEN,
Attorneys for assignee of mortgage. 18-30

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish,

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West Side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Car Blades,

WAGON TONGUES,

Shingles, Lath, &c.

Lumber Sawed & Bills Filled

TO ORDER.

LIVERY

The undersigned has purchased the livery formerly owned by him, and installed

Geo. Durance, Manager.

There has been added a new stock of

Horses and Carriages

And a cordial invitation is extended to all old friends and patrons to call and see him whenever they need anything in that line.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

HALL'S

Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE IT FAILS TO CURE.

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you are troubled with this distressing disease, ask your Druggist for it, and ACCEPT NO IMITATION OR SUBSTITUTE. If he has not got it, send to us and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

DR. CROUTER, Agt., Charlevoix. 7

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS.

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery,

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

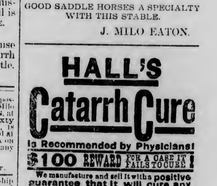
Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's new

Opera Block

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,



Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of boilers promptly attended to.

THE FIGHT AT THE FORD—A LEGEND OF THE WAR.

ONE dinner at ease he with Rapidan's strong,
In the shimmer of sunset his mettled sorrel
From the swift-flowing waters that back in its bound
Till the shadowy gloom slants the portals of dusk.

While the equine thirst slowly fade from the hide,
And the ardors of nature are hushed and asleep,
Then I dare to review a fair vista that thrills
Each chord of my heart as I gaze on the scene.

'Tis a spot in whose tranquil repose one may pause
And forget for a season the tumults of life,
Yet recalls in its quietude recent events
Have been cast in the vortex of vengeance and strife.

There grim legions opposing in combat were met,
And the green-sward was strewn with the shat-ter-ded hillell,
In the night that roared fiercely from midnight till dawn,
When the river ran red with the blood that was spilled.

Then the conquished were fled, and the victors ensconced
But to guide the wounded and bury the dead
Over heard or at last, while amid Mercy constram d
The stern hearts that before to Destruction wended.

But no eye all were gone from the Rapidan's side,
Where was garnered the terrible harvest of death,
Save one—yet in the contest, whom more had decreased
As he lay by the river's margin gasping for breath.

In the cause he upheld none more noble than he
Most to lament when left him to perish alone,
With no balm for his anguish, no solace to bear
How a brave heart could suffer with never a moan.

Though he uttered no plaint his sad fate to lar-wall,
There came one in the hoary of manhood's morn,
From her home that was nigh to the death-stricken vale
To weep o'er the scene of War's merciless storm.

While the gentle girl grieved for the havoc she found,
Yet she moved, as if led by a hand from on high,
To the dell where yet living, but prone on the ground,
Was the former of the soldier so spotless in die.

Though the soil of the battle begrimed his war form,
Though unstanched was the wound that bled
in his side,
With that pity that pe-ks not of person or place,
Softening Per-mathon to do what she might, ex-he-sted.

Quick with water caught up in the sash she had worn,
From the river that smiled on the dead whilly flowed,
She laved and refreshed the young soldier lor-lorn,
Till his eyes were relumed with a wonder that glowed.

"Art thou come from yon heaven, rarest angel before?"
By degrees his faint voice found the language
he bore;
"Let me bless thee, dear soul, for the joy that I know,
Ere thy presence of loveliness passes away."

"Nay—no angel," she said, "but a weak, timid maid,
Who is glad to be-hold that your life is still spared
Rec-ognized, injured youth, while I like no for good,
That your hurts may be tended and retuge prepared."

Lo! he dwells in the vale, though long years have sped be,
Since the light of the foret where wild Rapidan flow
For the soldier once savored, who the night had in vain
Ha returned to require what his gratitude owes.

And the maiden, no longer a maiden, is there,
Still a matron whose loveliness days but increase,
Where peace in him whom she saved from dea-spair—
Whom she crowns with her love to the ending of years.
—Anne H. Bridges.

Miss Wickersham's Romance.

BY M. C. FARLEY.

It was an old, old house. Teddy looked up at the many gabled, moss-grown roof, and the failed red-brick walls with feelings of both anger and sorrow.

He was the only heir. In the natural course of events Wickersham farm and the old ivy-grown mansion, built in Colonial times, by one of his forefathers, would be his nothing to offend his aunt, the present incumbent.

Teddy groaned inwardly at the recollection. For two and twenty years Miss Wickersham had been a mother to him. If some people declared that Miss Wickersham had no heart, and was proud and overbearing in disposition and hard to please —her nephew at least had never been made to feel that side of her nature until now.

Some six months previous Maj. Willis had returned from Europe with his daughter, and settled down quietly at Fern Fields, a tumble-down old manor house, which report said was all there left to him of the once great Willis fortune.

The Major had lived abroad the better part of his life. His child had been born on a foreign land, and his wife was buried there. Still, for some unknown reason, he had gathered together the remnants of his once splendid fortune, and, coming home to Fern Fields, was now Miss Wickersham's nearest neighbor.

From the very day of the Major's return to the home of his boyhood, Miss Wickersham had persistently ignored him. Fern Fields, she said, was nothing to her; she wanted nothing whatever to do with the people who lived there, and continued her nephew, upon pain of her displeasure, never to have the slightest intercourse with the Willis family. All went smoothly for a short time, when, in some unaccountable manner, Teddy and the Major's daughter came to meet, and Ted-ll it bend over heels in love with her at first sight. What was his consternation to find, upon accompanying his aunt with the turn of affairs, that she suddenly flew into a violent passion and ordered him never to speak to the young lady again. It was all very easy for Miss Wickersham to execute such a command, but it was simply impossible for Teddy to obey it.

There were stolen interviews and long walks by the riverside, and many an hour was spent in company with the Major himself, when Ted found it impossible to inveigle the young lady out of doors. Of course there could be but one ending to the affair. Recklessly Ted proposed, was accepted, and the Major gave them both his paternal blessing.

Proud and happy the young man went home to his aunt and told her plainly what he had done, not doubting but that she would accept the inevitable, with tolerable grace at least, when she found it was to be. But he was appalled at her manner.

"If you marry that girl, Teddy, not a cent of my money shall you ev r have," screamed Miss Wickersham at the top of her shrill old voice. "I detest the whole family, root and branch, and there shan't a dollar's worth of my property ever go to benefit one of them in any way if I can help myself, and I guess I can."

Teddy's face fell. It was a bright, handsome, young face, framed in with a lot of yellow hair, that was his aunt's especial pride—though she was too much overcome with rage now to pay any attention to his good looks.

"And to think," she went on, in her thin, high-tinkling voice, "that of all persons in the world, you should select Nellie Willis to be your wife. And you know very well, Teddy, what my opinion is of the Willis family—a poor, proud, shiftless set, to make the best of you."

Teddy grew very red.

"If rumor is true, Aunt Wickersham, you did not always rate the Willis' at such a low figure—particularly the Major," retorted he, indignantly.

The pale pink that yet lingered in Miss Wickersham's delicate old face turned suddenly to a vivid scarlet. She clinched, and hesitated an instant.

"This from you, Teddy," said she re-peacefully.

Directly he had the grace to feel ashamed of himself.

"Forgive me, aunt" he cried. "I am a brute."

"Say no more," said she coldly, declining him to leave the room. The delicate color in her face having now taken all round, from first to last."

"That plaster-cast had a crevice in the top of it. The note must have slipped into it in that way," said she, meditatively.

"Well, Rebecca, [have waited a long time—thirty years, by your reckoning. I must have my answer," he persisted.

"But we are old now," objected Miss Wickersham, her face in a flutter.

"The older, the better," said he, blandly. "My dear, true love is like wine, improved by age."

"But what will Teddy say?" cried she, faintly, quite willing to be persuaded, when the persuader was the lover of her youth.

"Teddy gives his free consent, and wishes you a long life, full of happiness, in their behalf," said the Major, at the doorway. "And we'll be one family, after all, won't we, Major?" cried Ted, embracing his aunt.

"Thank God, we will indeed," replied the Major. And they were.—Chicago Ledger.

PRIDE, ill-nature and want of sense are the three great sources of ill-manners and disagreeableness in company. Of these three the same amount of feed will produce a far greater amount of flesh and fat when fed with plenty of charcoal.

EPITAPH of an Arizona man who loved his neighbor's horses, not wisely but too well, and who was also bad in other ways: "He was pretty mean in some respects; but, then, he was mean er in others."

A VIRGINIA judge has laid down the broad legal principal that an elopement is not necessarily a felony.

Cæsar's Dream.

A queer old Dutchman by the name of Y. A. B. Cæsar, who lived in New Albany, used to come to our part of country (Lawrence county, Ind.), buy cattle and drive them to New Albany and Louisville. On a certain occasion he bought some cattle of Ari Armstrong, who lived some eight or ten miles from Bedford. Cæsar, in taking away his drove, let one of Armstrong's calves follow the cattle off. Armstrong sued the Dutchman and made him pay a very big fine for the calf. Armstrong being a member of the church and a very wealthy farmer, the old Dutchman being poor, had few friends, and could scarcely speak English so as to be understood, it was an easy matter to get judgment. After this, it appears that Armstrong sold the Dutchman some mules, and on delivery swindled old Cæsar out of $150. Cæsar used Armstrong, seeing how he fared in his former suit, he employed one of the most influential attorneys at the bar, who took a great deal of pains to have justice dealt out to his client. Cæsar was not so big a fool but what he could see the prejudice in favor of the rich man, but his lawyer made out his case in spite of the prejudice, and Armstrong was obliged to pay over the $150. Cæsar wanted to rebuke the court and the church for trying to shield a rich man; so, on meeting a neighbor of Armstrong, whom he knew would tell Armstrong, chuckled and cried, he said:

"What you dinks, Mr. Tannehill? I hadt a dream! I dream I been dead already, and I go straight to Baradise. Mr. Obossle Beter come und say: 'Who be'a here a coomin' into Baradise?' Und I say: 'Johannes Atam Haller Cæsar, cattles-buyer fon Ni Albany.'

"What do you want, Mr. Cæsar?'

"'To be anged and haf vings.' Und I goes right in to get my vings. But Mr. Obossle Beter say:

"'Stop a bit, Mr. Cæsar, we haf a charge to you.'

"Mr. Obossle Beter bring der big book und look him up mit reat out loud:

"'Johannes Atam Haller Cæsar, cattles-buyer fon Ni Albany, stealt one calf fon Ari Armstrong, vorth fife dollar. Mr. Cæsar, you no haf my vings.'

I say: 'Mine Got in Himmel! What I do?'

"I dream some more right away. I dream Ari Armstrong und me been in de coom to Baradise, und Mr. Obossle Beter say:

"'Who be'a here a coomin' into Baradise?'

"Und Ari say:

"'Ari Armstrong, rich farmer and member of de church fon Lawrence county.'

"Mr Obossle Beter say:

"'Walk right in, Mr. Armstrong.' I say: "Stop a bit, Mr. Obossle Beter, und ping oud der pig pook und I look und read out loud:

"'Ari Armstrong, rich farmer, cattle raiser and member of the church fon Lawrence county, steal mules from Cæsar vort $450.' What you dinks o dot, Mr. Obossle Beter?' He say:

"'Oh, dot's all right; walk right in, Mr. Armstrong.'

"I say, 'Tunder and bliken! How is dot, Mr. Obossle Beter?' Mr. Ari Armstrong's beefs cuff de fines ant cattle oudt und he goes mit my cattle off mit himself, und I see dot calf not yet, und I say Ari Armstrong has de calf for dot calf und for dot I haf got nottings. Ari Armstrong steal mules fon Y. A. B. Cæsar vort four hunnet und fifie tollars, und you say, 'dot is all right, dot is all right; walk right into Baradise.'

"Mr. Obossle Beter say: 'Mr. Cæsar, dot man dot do a pig pennis is held in dis court in the utmost respect.'

"I say: 'Mine Got in Himmel! what I do, dot I may haf vings?'

"He say nothings. I goes back und steal all der cattles in Hoosier, und dat makes me respectoble!"—Cor. Los Angeles (Cal.) Iverreation.

Chinese Finger Nails.

The Chinese are very inconsistent in their talk about the dignity of labor. Once a year the Emperor and chief noblemen at his court go into a field and plow up a few furrows, while the lesser princes and governors of the realm do the same in their provinces, to set a good example to their subjects. At the same time they allow the finger nails to grow to an extent that incapacitates them for labor of any description. It is considered a sign of great gentility, and a remarkable amount of time and talent is expended in polishing and sharpening them. When they have reached a few inches in length, they are inclosed in silver or gold sheaths, and turned backward to the elbow for protection. One gentleman in Shanghai has grown his nails to the length of eighteen inches. The women, as is well known, have their feet bound from infancy, so as to be small, and when they are grown the exceedingly-tine ladies have to be helped around by their maids, so useless have they become! I have seen women whose feet were only three inches and a half in length.—Shanghai letter.

CHARITY should be fed to hogs and poultry. It has been clearly demonstrated that the same amount of feed will produce a far greater amount of flesh and fat when fed with plenty of charcoal.

ELIZA BANGS, a native of Scriven county, Ga., went to Florida at 6 years of age, married at 13, and her first child was born when she was only 14. She is now 31 and has eighteen children (twins twice), fifteen of whom are living.

LOUDO V. BRYANT, a colored lady, practices law in Colorado.

HUMOR.

[From Texas sittings.]

STRENGTH and health go together with the exception of butter.

BEECHER allows the use of his photograph on a soap advertisement. There is one the cleanest things Beecher did.

THERE is a marked similarity between a beefsteak and a pump "take." At times both are more "fat."

M. WORTH, the Parisian fashion king, is bald-headed. That's what happens to a man who makes so much feminine misfits.

REV. DR. TALMAGE says the sermons of the future will be sensational. Talmage's sermons of the present are not sensational, heaven help posterity in the future!

A TEXAS horse-thief is said to have recently been ridden with shot. Seeing from pure, personal experience, we candidly declare that this is much better than being shot with riddles.

IF a man in Pennsylvania says: "It is my wife," the law considers him a liar. So if a married actor pranced on from left-second entrance, and with shrieks, "Stiteth, villain! This is my wife!" he commits bigamy. Tramps, and other born storm-ers, can route for Pennsylvania, will please take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

THE Pinchback family, of Anderson, considered one of the meanest, stingiest and close-fisted of any in Texas. One night a new baby made its appearance in the Pinchback home, and when Johnny Fizzletop heard the news, he said: "Golly! won't that be surprised when it comes to find out what kind of a stingy crowd he has to associate with!"

[From Carl Pretzel's Weekly.]

SOMETHING to Attar—Girls.

SOMETHING to batter—Horses.

A CANDIDATE had his chest cut open by robbers. They hammered away at it until they saw it successfully accomplished. It was plain that their object would augur no good, as there was nothing in it. An officer had run his eyes on them, and when he asked them what they were doing they attempted to file off in different directions. He caught them and put them under lock and key, and the morning the Judge chisled them out of all that they could get.

PATIENT to a physician—"Can you relieve my suffering?" "I can ex-."

"Why do the wild waves murmur?" We suppose it is because they run against the bank" and get broke.

A HARD-HEARTED landlord tells us bones away from a delinquent debtor has always belonged to an end-ranged minstrel show.

JOHN HENRY BEE gazed on a gas-light in a store window and remarked that he knew it was a gas-light because he knew from his tunes a farm-and-line. And now it is a matter that is clear.

[From Puck's Sun.]

SOME people never lay by anything for a rainy day. They can't even have an umbrella.

It is proposed to call it matrimony a crusty, disappointed old bachelor calls it "Matter o' money." Well, may be, sometimes.

A Missouri man has named his son his aunt. Now let some paragrapher begin calling the man uncle to his brother-in-law to his own mother-in-law to his own grandfather. That will do as a starter to a fine complication.

An exchange says "the Prince of Wales is learning to play the bass." Wonder if the Prince is going into the musical business and coming over to this country to reap American dollars to help liquidate his $3,000,000 debt?

A MAN in Winchester county, Ky., aimed a gun at a rat, and riddled a $300 pound wife with shot. If the rat had only aimed his gun at his wife it would have been spared a terrible ordeal. It is strange how people will do things.

YALE college has added a course of study relating to railroads, at most three. This is unfortunate. The graduates will now expect to take positions as general managers of railroads as soon as their time expires at Yale, and they will find it is necessary to commence pumping a handcar, be promoted to shoveling on a gravel train, and work up gradually to a freight or passenger train before they can get a railroad. A Yale graduate sometimes up a narrow gauge railroad twelve years long so it would take a good man a year to straighten it out.

AN English clergyman has started a dancing-school in connection with his church. He isn't a Shaker, but the idea is to keep the young out of the company which they might meet at other schools.

RAILLERY is sometimes more profitable than wrongful; because while a right to resent injuries, but it is ridiculous to be angry at a joke.—Rochefoucauld.

CIRCUMSTANCES do change, frequently diminish, positions improve, but it becomes endurable by habit, but persons who are disagreeable to us, irritates us more and more.

TO LISTEN kindly is often an act of the most delicate interior mortification and helps us very much to speak of ourselves.

SPEND a cent less than your income and you will always be rich.

THE STEAM PLOW.

When and Where Invented. How Constructed and Where Used.

An apparatus for steam plowing was first patented in the United States on Sept. 19, 1833, by E. C. Bellinger, of South Carolina. It was not received with sufficient favor by farmers or dealers to encourage the manufacture of the machines. In England, Francis Smith took out a patent as early as 1723 for an engine to plow, harrow, and do other farm work without the aid of horses. Several other attempts at raising steam plows were made, but to no practical purpose, until 1849, when a Maj. Pratt patented a steam-plowing apparatus, employing two engines stationed on opposite headlands, drawing plows by means of endless chains or ropes. An improved form of this machine was patented by Mr. Heathcote, M. P., in 1852, which is said to be the first that was ever worked successfully in the field. Alexander made improvements on Mr. Heathcote's machine in 1846 and 1849; but the practical results were insignificant until in 1851, when John Fowler, of England, brought forward an improvement on the plans of Bellinger, Pratt and others, since which time various changes and additions have been made, and steam plowing has gone into successful practice on many of the large farms of Great Britain and in the West and West Indies, about 1,500 steam plows being now in use in England alone.

Many attempts in invent a successful traction engine for steam plowing have been made.

The plan called cable traction, invented in part by Pratt, in part by Bellinger, and improved by Fowler, has been operated with greater success than any other. It consists of a single locomotive engine, of from twelve to fifteen horse power, with a windlass under the boiler, around which passes a single steel-wire cable, which, by means of hinged clips, lays hold of the earth with a grip proportioned to the pull. This continuous cable, twice the length of the plat to be plowed, passes around a heavy anchor-frame, fastened to a self-acting anchor fixed on the opposite side of the field to the engine. This "anchor" consists of a low truck on four wheels, having short, steel edges, which cut into the soil that it will not give under the traction is applied. A box filled with stones, or some other weight, on the outer side of this frame keeps it from tilting when the power is applied to the plows. A sheave on the anchor-frame serves to guide and take up another cable attached to it or anchor in the direction in which the plows are to proceed each other, and that the machine may be shifted sideland on which it is stationed during the plowing progresses, being at all times directly opposite the locomotive engine, which is moving in the opposite headland in the same direction. The plows are attached to the frame, the especial invention of Fowler, and are in duplicate, pointed back to back, so that when the set-end of the frame is at work the other end is carried along the cable to the next land. The plow frame is hauled to one side of the field in the direction of the engine and the movable plows by reversing the action of the engine. It is shaped to turning two to eight furrows at once, according to the power of the engine and the character of the soil. The amount of land plowed by such a machine varies from three to eight acres a day for two-furrow going, according to depth of furrow from twelve inches to four inches. An eight-furrow gang will do more than twice this amount of work per day.

The various reasons steam plowing is not in use to any noticeable extent in the United States, but it is probable that the advantages of this mode of working the soil to a depth not practicable by animal draft becoming better known, and other changes transpiring, will go into successful operation before long, as they have done in England.—Chicago Journal.

Boys, Learn a Trade.

Learn a trade even if you are in a position which may seem to insure you a good salary as long as you may live, for you may not follow a trade for a living. Time invested in learning a trade, learning it thoroughly, is the key-note of a capital stock on which you find it very convenient to draw at times. Life is said to be an uncertainty, but to some individuals it is more uncertain than to others. You may be a rich man, but by some unlucky investment in trade great reverses may come upon you, you have nothing to fear. You are exhausted, poverty stricken and penniless. Not only learn the theory of a trade, but learn its practical worth, learn it thoroughly. At the close of Blakes' convention in New Haven the committee on appreciation reported in favor of re-storing the system of indentureing apprentices, so that they could learn their trade. John W. Britton, of New York, one of the seven wants of society, said our trade is good boys. Boys are deteriorating, as a class.

The greatest difficulty that we have in New York is that of getting boys to have brains and are willing to learn a trade thoroughly. Parents will learn who have made "mill-ions" in a few years is held up before their boys in school, and the boys become filled with the notion that they must have millions, and be able to found princely colleges before they die, or else have trades and become paupers. Europe for her most skilled and finest workmen, simply because her young men might be ministers of the trade they go to learn, and merely obtain a superficial or general knowledge of it. We have too many professional men in the country to-day, and, as the speaker above referred to says, our schools love to dwell too much on the achievements of professional men. A man with a trade well learned, next to the farmer, is the most independent, and most to be envied among men. He is prepared for any emergency.

A Cautious Politician.

During the political life of Martin Van Buren, he was assailed by such epithets as "The Little Magician," "The Kinderhook Fox." These epithets derived their offensiveness from the fact that Mr. Van Buren was inclined to act upon Talleyrand's maxim, "Language is given us to conceal our thoughts," and was very cautious about committing himself to an opinion. The following anecdote illustrates his peculiarities:

When Secretary of State he once wrote a letter, but before sealing it he handed it to one of his clerks in the department to read. "I want you to read this letter and tell me what you think of it," said the Secretary.

The clerk politely obeyed, and returned the letter, saying that it was as much enlightened to him as if it had been written in Chaldee or Greek.

The Secretary smiled as he received it, saying, "That will do, I think it will answer," and seemed as much pleased as a man who has invented a cryptogram of which he alone had the key.

His non-communittalism was a standing joke among his friends. Once a knot of politicians was discussing his claims to the Presidency on board an Albany day-boat.

In discussing his private character, one of the gentlemen remarked that he was one of the most accommodating men that ever lived. When the boat landed at Kinderhook, to the surprise of the party Van Buren was aboard.

In order to test the point of discussion a wager was laid between two of the politicians that Van Buren would not give a categorical answer to the simplest question that could be propounded.

One of the party was deputized to go to the "Fox" and ask a question which had been agreed on.

When the question was asked "Mr. Van Buren, in order to settle a dispute, may you tell me whether you are a Democrat or a Federalist?" the latter hemmed and hesitated, and presently said, "The terms exist and were in existence when I was born."

"Hold on, that will do," interrupted the other: "I have lost the bet."

One of the Elect.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—The Plain Dealer reports that Hon. Marion A. Foran, Congressman-elect from the Cleveland district has used St. Jacobs Oil in his family, and has always found it safe and reliable. The phone are attended to by Mr. Foran's son, Mr. Ned. Warner, N. H.

She Wasn't Irish.

A New England lady was asking her cook about a waitress she proposed to employ. "Is she Irish?" "Why, no, ma'am," said Mary, "she's American." "What is her name, Mary?" "Her name is O'Connor, ma'am." "Why, then, of course she is Irish, Mary." "No, ma'am, she was born in Lynn." "Oh, but that makes no difference, Mary; she is an American, of course." "Well, in faith, perhaps she ain't, ma'am. They tell me the real one is red."

Good qualities are the substantial riches of the mind; but it is good breeding that sets them off to advantage.—Locke.

BALTIMORE, Md.—Rev. W. H. Chapman says: "Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is a most excellent remedy for coughs and colds."

"Good-bye" in the telephone reminds one of autumn. It's the yell of leaves.

TORONTO, CAN.—Dr. J. P. Newman says: "Brown's Iron Bitters are very popular and valuable. They are highly satisfactory."

It is a mere matter of "form," said the lady as she adjusted her corset.

ARE YOU BILIOUS? Try the remedy that cured Mrs. Clement, of Franklin, N. H.—Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is truly a blood purifier.

Some men are rash footed, but it is the policeman who is club-waisted.

"Somerton Avenue" our absentee of Mrs. Langtry's Burgoy, of Albany, O.

A MAIDEN believes in the only mine that makes a social hit.

WONDER treads the heels of wonder. Saxon's Mother Graves is guaranteed to cure nervous disorders.

VAIN as the peacock is, the weathercock is even more vane.

"Put up" at the Gault House.

The business men of Chicago will find first-class accommodations at the low price of $2 and $2.50 per day at the Gault House, Dearborn and Madison streets. This favorite house has been refitted in the early part of 1883, only one block from the Union Depot, Elevator; all appointments first-class.

D. W. HOYT, Proprietor.

PURE Cod Liver Oil, made from selected livers on the sea-shore, by CASWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York. It is direct, very pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in market.

J. P. CAMP, Route agent on the Ft. Wayne branch of the L. S. & M. S. railway, says: Agent at Reading Mich., got me two more bottles of Warner's White Wine of Tar. I never used such a quick or great remedy.

ONLY TWO BOTTLES.—Messrs. Jonquest, Holtoway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with a request to send a good eatarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both of the officers had the article and were entirely cured. They had been cured of catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm. (And a thrifty order.) Price 50 cts.!

Gently Does It.

No violent measures in cases of constipation! Medicines which relax the bowels excessively, weaken them, and by their cumbering them incapable of a continuance of their discharging function, increase rather than remedy their inactivity and derangement. The natural specific for costiveness is Dr. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which invigorates while it relaxes the int stines, expels bilious matter from the blood and stomach, promotes digestion, stimulates appetite, and enlivens the circulation. The use of all organs, which take an active part in the processes of digestion and secretion, is improved by this genial tonic, which, by promoting vigor and regularity in the system, is likewise assured freedom from the most efficient natural safeguard against malaria, for which in all its forms this medicine is the sure remedy. Kidney and bladder ailments, dyspepsia, liver complaint and rheumatism also yield to it.

THE old proverb, "Where there's a will there's a way," has been revised to suit the situation. It now reads, "When there's a bill we're away."

SHOULD you be a sufferer from dyspepsia indigestion, malaria, or weakness, your call be cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

Cheap quarters—the 25-cent pieces hoarded by a miser.

Carbo-lines.

The wind may roar among the trees,
The gravel ships sail the stormy seas,
The bushhead man may rave and swear,
Yet Carboline restores the hair.

W. H. SPARKS, of Worthington, Ind., says: I have sold more White Wine of Tar Syrup than any other Cough Remedy. It is the best I ever sold.

CRAPPIN Hands, Face, Pimples, and rough Skin, cured by using Dr. Swayne's Soap, made by CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

STERLING, irritation, inflammation, all Kidney and Urinary Complaints, cured by "Buchu-Paiba." $1.

"WE always keep Piso's Cure for Consumption in the house."

THAT husband of mine is timer than the man he was before he began using Wells' Health Renewer.

NOTHING better for Asthma than Piso's Cure for Consumption. 25 cents per bottle.

DON'T fail in the house. "Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, roaches, flies, bed-bugs. 15c.

25c buys a pair of Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners. Makes a boot or shoe last twice as long.

WELLS' "HEALTH RENEWER."—$1. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Consumption, Jaundice,

---

HUMORS.

The animal fluids of the body, when poorly nourished, become vitiated and cause eruptions to appear on the skin. They are objectionable from their appearance, and vary in character from a constant, uneasy sensation to a positive distress and severe pain. Hood's Sarsaparilla corrects the deranged state of the fluids, enriches the blood, purifies the blood, and changes the diseased condition to one of health and vigor.

Pimples.

HALFORD-PATENT, of New York, had so many pimples and blotches on his face that he was ashamed to be seen in company. He tried everything, but nothing would remove them. Finally he used Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and in a few weeks his face was entirely free from pimples.

Ringworm.

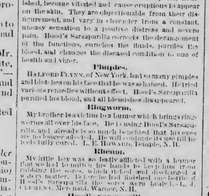
My brother has been troubled in bringing ringworms all over his face. Nothing would relieve him, and already so much benefited that his sores are entirely healed. I feel confident that S. S. S. will cure him entirely.—MRS. M. A. BRYAN, Temple, S. E.

MY little boy was so badly afflicted with a tumor that we feared he would die. Nothing did him any good until we used Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and a few bottles entirely cured him. He is now a healthy boy.—MRS. L. C. CLEMENT, New Iberia, Warner, N. H.

Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free. SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

If you are Interested

In the Inquiry—Which is the best Liniment for Man and Beast?—this is the answer, attested by two generations: the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The reason is simple. It penetrates every sore, wound, or lameness, to the very bone, and drives out all inflammatory and morbid matter. It "goes to the root" of the trouble, and never fails to cure in double quick time.



"You claim too much for SAMARITAN NERVINE," I expostulate. "How can one medicine be a specific for Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Rheumatism, Nervous Weakness and fifty other complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply, because the virtues of all these ailments are found in the blood. In Nervine, Resolvent, Alterative and Laxative properties, as all here enumerated are herein referred to. It's a known world-wide fact.

THE GREAT
NERVE CONQUEROR

Prostrate and restores the pulsating nerves, by the peculiar and specific influence exercised by the potentialized activity to the stomach and bowels, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid forces, which are created by the morbid heat and irritation.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Clerks and all brain workers, our entire complement of nerves prove a reliable, unfailing force. For Insomnia, Sleeplessness, Kidney or Liver complaint or Dyspepsia, specific for all large organs of the human. It is strongly indorsed by 37 leading physicians suggests, drives, shoots and invigorates to a degree unknown to the Northwest. Send for full particulars, or send $1, and get a pair of Pills, a nickel box filled with Purgative Sugar Coated, and Kidney Juice, bottled Jockey Imperial and full explanations.

JOCKEY HORSESHOE PAD CO.,
D. McLEAN, Manager, 18 N. Clark St., Chicago.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. $12 a day at home. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Me.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine.

Dr. LATHAM'S FRENCH MUSTACHE VIGOR causes a heavy mustache or beard to grow in 30 days. Sent by mail for 50 cts. Address, Dr. LATHAM, 1164 Broadway, N. Y. Warranted to start a heavy growth.

THE GREAT
GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Sore Throat, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Bites, AND ALL OTHER BODILY PAINS AND ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to VOGELER, STAHLER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

MOTHERS, Attention, Clean Wool Remnants! Wool Batting, Wool Yarn, Wool Quilts, Sent to Peggie, 50 cts. Address Mrs. E. HAMILTON, Box 1, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

LADIES provided for during confinement at THE TRAVER, M. D., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

FREE. By return mail, Full Description and Illustrations of Young's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting, adapted to all measures.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. Do not waste time. Address with stamp, DAVIS & CO., Chicago, Ill.

Young Men learn Telegraphy here and secure Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

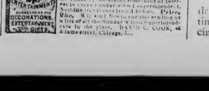
$65 A MONTH AND BOARD for three young men in each county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., Chicago, Ill.

$100 A MONTH "Hard Cash and How to Get It." Agents Wanted. Particulars free. Address, Standard Silverware Co., Boston, Mass.

CHICAGO SCALE CO.
151 North Jefferson St., Chicago, Ill.
2-Ton Wagon Scale, $45; 4-Ton, $60.
Other sizes in proportion. Send for circular.

ORGAN AGENTS
Wanted in every County.
REEDS, TREMOLOS OF MUSIC,
Will Sell Cheap. CHICAGO.

PATENTS PROCURED
and all business in the U. S. Patent Office attended to for MODERATE FEES. Our office is opposite the U. S. Patent Office, and we can obtain patents in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model or drawing. We advise as to patentability free of charge. No fee for making preliminary examination. Our fee not due till patent is secured. Letters strictly confidential. Address, C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.



A. S. CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS.
Suggestions for Recreations, Entertainments and Gifts.
A Method for Every Day in the Year.
Sent free to any address. Send your address on a postal card to-day. Address, A. S. CHRISTMAS, Publisher, 23 Park Row, New York.

ALLEN'S Lung Balsam!

A GOOD FAMILY REMEDY!
—THAT WILL CURE—
COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP,
CONSUMPTION
CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Meredith, Dentist, of Mt. Vernon, Ind., says: "I have used Allen's Lung Balsam in my family for the last two years, and have found it a good remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, and Bronchitis. I have also used it in my practice, and have found it to be a good medicine for Consumption."

James M. Wright, of Marion County, W. Va., says: "I was afflicted with Pulmonary Consumption, and was pronounced incurable by three physicians. I was induced to try Allen's Lung Balsam, and was entirely cured by it. I feel confident that it saved my life, and would advise every one who is afflicted with Consumption to use it."

Wm. A. Graham & Co., Wholesale Druggists, of Memphis, Tenn., say: "We have sold a large quantity of the Lung Balsam during the past year, and have had no complaints. On the contrary, we have received testimonials from those who have used it, and with Remarkable success. The Lung Balsam is the best Cough Medicine we have ever handled."

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM

Is harmless to the most delicate child! It contains no opium in any form!

Recommended by Physicians, Ministers and Nurses. In fact by everybody who has used it. It never fails to Bring Relief.

As an Expectorant it has no Equal.

SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE DEALERS.

BUDD DOBLE SAYS that a large sized bottle of PAR LOCKIE HOOF-BALSAM, for lameness in horses, will cure any case of Spavin, Ringbone, Curb, Splint, Sprain, Swellings, Lameness, Stiffness, Scratches, Mud Fever, Thrush, Quarter Crack, Foot Rot, Scratches, Grease Heel, Cracked Heels, Sore Throat, Distemper, Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Pneumonia, Shoulder Lameness, Sore Mouth, Sore Nipples, Caked Udder, Garget in Cows, Hollow Horn, Shoe Boils, Corns, Quitter, Sand Crack, Interfering, Speedy Cut, Hip Lameness, Weak Back, Sore Throat, Sore Eyes, Shoulder Slip, Sitfast, Poll Evil, Fistula, Wire Cuts, Saddle Galls, Harness Galls, Collar Galls, Sore Shoulders, Sore Neck, Sore Back, Stocking

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Nov. 22, 1883.

HE GAVE IT AWAY.

The Thrilling Story of an Abstruse Boston Gas Meter.

[From the Boston Courier.]

He was trying to sell the stranger his house and lot, and, after the prospective purchaser had wandered through the attic, and nosed around the kitchen, and poked into the closets, and rattled the windows to see if they were tight, and smelled of the cistern water to see how much dead cat it would assay to the gallon, the owner of the property took him down into the cellar, which he had spent all night in whitewashing. The meter, which was stuck up on a shelf in one corner of the cellar, attracted the stranger's attention.

"How much does your gas cost you a year?" asked he.

The householder gave a knowing wink, poked the stranger in the ribs, and said:

"You don't look like a man who would give the thing away, and, seeing as you're going to buy the house anyway, I don't mind telling you. It don't cost me a cent."

"It don't?" said the stranger, with evident surprise.

"No, not a red," said the other, "and it's all owing to a little observation on my part as to the working of the meter there. I'll explain. You see, when I first moved into the house I was doing a good business, and so I had everything fixed up in tony style—chandeliers in every room in the house, kitchen included. But after awhile my business began to run down, and I had to shut down on expenses. My wife suggested that we economize on the gas bill; so I bought a lot of lamps, and we stopped using the gas-burners, except in the parlor when we had company. When the man with the lantern came around to look at the meter, I fairly kicked myself with joy to think how it would astonish him. But it didn't.

"The bill for that month was just as big as it was the month before, and when I squealed there was the meter to back them up. I couldn't get around that. Well, next month I thought I'd experiment. So I put the lamps away in the garret, and used every gas-burner in the house. Kept two chandeliers in the bedrooms going day and night just for luck. Bill for that month just the same. Then I thought I might just as well be getting all the good out of that meter that it would stand, so I told the gas company that I'd like to have a couple of chandeliers put in the stable for the use of the hired man. They came and put them in, and that very same day a man came to fix up the meter. Said some of the meters were wearing out inside, and had to have some of their driving-wheels renewed, or something of that sort. The hired girl said that he took out a cog-wheel and put in a bigger one, and then wound it up like an eight-day clock. At the end of that month the bill was about twice as big as before.

"Well, that month's bill just settled me, you can just bet. I tapped a hole in the pipe leading to the barn, ran another pipe over to our next neighbor, and let him have all the gas he wanted for 10 per cent. off. Inside of two months I was supplying the whole square, and it didn't cost a cent more than it did to supply my house and stable. By this little scheme and by strict economy I have been enabled to amass a handsome sum of money, and as soon as you take this house off my hands I'm going to move into the big brick down on the corner. I'll turn this little monopoly right over into your hands. It's a little dangerous, but if you've got the nerve your gas needn't cost you a cent, as I said at first, and—"

"My gas isn't likely to cost me anything, anyway," said the stranger, interrupting him for the first time.

"Why?"

"Because," said the stranger, solemnly, "I'm the new secretary of the gas company."

Photography.

Question—"I suppose a great advance has been made in the art during the past few years?"

Answer—"We think we have made some advance, but then we thought so ten, fifteen and twenty years ago. I can remember when we thought we had reached the top of the ladder and were doing perfect work, but when we look at that work to-day we are ashamed of it, and we well may be. The photographs which were taken twenty years ago are old and faded, and cannot be compared in any respect with those of to-day. I suppose twenty years hence those of us who are living then will smile as they look at what we now admire in photography. We are constantly making advances in the art, and while they are not perhaps so noticeable as those made in other branches of science, they are none the less advances, which become easily apparent when the work of to-day is contrasted with that of a score of years ago. I anticipate still greater advances in the future, and I believe the time will come when the press will not only chronicle the events of the day all over the world, as it now does, but, by the combined aid of telegraphy and photography, will daily present its readers with views of the most striking events of the day, taken on the spot, and transmitted around the world by telegraph."—Boston Transcript.

How stand the presidential aspirants now? The drawn battle of Tuesday will revive the hopes of republican candidates. Mr. Blaine may come out of his shell and survey the field with better prospects than ever. New York aspirants will be looking up, and doubtless the admirers of President Arthur's tailor, fishing rod and wine cellar, will regard the result in that state as favorable to his hopes. As to the democrats: in New York they seem to lack a man, unless it be Abram Hewitt, who has not been scotched. Cleveland withered very soon after his sudden blooming, and John Kelly has marked him for his prey. No other eastern state offers man or hope. Southward they dare not go. Ohio and Indiana are left. The former offers Thurman and Hoadly—Hoadly just flushed by an extraordinary victory; Thurman sulking and willing, and in elegant shape to trade off the senatorship for the solid support of his state for the presidency. In Indiana there is McDonald, of whom it is said he could carry his state against any living man within its borders—very available and discreet and with a sound record on finance and the tariff: and Holman, the great "Objector," upon whom the the New York Sun depends to sweep the country in a whirlwind of enthusiasm for retrenchment and economy. Hendricks in is the background and likely to stay there. The democrats will hardly dare nominate a man from Ohio. It is too uncertain, too fresh in its democracy. The Pacific slope offers Justice Field, but he has given offense there on the Chinese question since 1880, and he will not be the candidate. It looks as if Indiana was going to furnish the coming man. Will it be McDonald, the suave, or Holman, the treasury watch dog?—Evening News.

Letters to Millionaires.

The name of Mr. W. W. Corcoran is so widely known by his deeds of philanthropy, and is intimately identified with every movement that is calculated to alleviate suffering and improve the condition of the unfortunate, that the appeals which come to him for all sorts of charitable purposes are almost overwhelming.

For instance, a lady, entirely unknown to Mr. Corcoran writes a long letter, in which she states that her husband is worth $50,000, and is doing a large and prosperous business. The writer, however, desires to be independent of her husband, and asks Mr. Corcoran to send her enough money so that she may live on the interest. The letter is well-written, and closes with an urgent invitation to Mr. Corcoran to come and make her visit at her home in New England, to see her garden and enjoy the fruits and flowers. The writer was evidently well-to-do in this world and refined and educated, yet, amid her prosperity, she had one ambition which was not satisfied, and that was to have a bank account of her own. In this particular she is not, perhaps, an isolated example, but the course of reasoning which led her to think that an entire stranger would help her is entirely unique.

"I want a barrel of mess pork, and I want you to send it to me," was the laconic but peremptory letter received from a man in one of the Southern States. Mr. Corcoran, amused by this strange demand, sent the pork as requested. What was the result? He was rewarded by receiving a request for "another barrel."

A young lady asked Mr. Corcoran to send her a pink-silk dress, trimmed to order, to enable her to attend a ball in Virginia. This letter is much in the style of an order to a dressmaker, and there is nothing to indicate that the writer had any doubt but that the request would be granted.

Another lady correspondent, living in Europe, sends sixteen pages of commercial post, closely written, giving a history of her family, which seems to have had a very ancient origin, and requesting that $6,000 be sent to her address, to enable her to take a trip to the southern part of France for the benefit of her health.

It is said that Jay Gould receives scores of begging letters every day.

Mr. C. F. Huntington, President of the Central Pacific road, is probably worth $15,000,000. He is also in receipt of very many begging letters. His letters are from all portions of Europe and the United States, and contain requests based on every imaginable scheme.

Henry Clews, whose wealth is estimated at $10,000,000, receives a large number of letters asking for help. Many of the applicants are unfortunate operators in Wall street, and they often find in Mr. Clews a sympathetic friend.

Russell Sage is not credited with "throwing money away," as he terms it, and brokers generally observe: "A man with $10,000,000, who will wait in his office over half an hour to catch the 5-cent trains on the Elevated road, must be too poor to give money away for sweet charity."

James R. Keene, his friends say, receives scores of begging letters every day, and Cyrus W. Field is the recipient of more than any other man in Wall street circles. He gives away $50 per day for charitable purposes, his intimates assert, and generally answers correspondents who solicit alms if he thinks it is charity worthily bestowed.—Washington Star.

The Detroit Evening News has the following concerning Mr. O. M. Chase, fish commissioner, who was drowned at Petoskey on the 11th: "Capt. Chase came to this state in 1874 or 1875, from Rochester, and has been actively identified with the propagation and distribution of food fishes. Last September he was appointed superintendent of the state hatcheries, and it was in the pursuit of his work of securing white fish eggs that he has lost his life. He was about 43 years old, and his home was in this city at 472 Congress street east, near the fish hatchery. He was one of the most enthusiastic and successful fish culturists in the United States. He leaves a wife and one son."

An Empress' Whims.

The Empress Josephine had 600,000 francs for her personal expenses, but this sum was not sufficient, and her debts increased to an appalling degree. Notwithstanding the position of her husband, she could never submit to either order or etiquette in her private life. She rose at 9 o'clock. Her toilet consumed much time, and she lavished unwearied efforts on the preservation and embellishment of her person. She changed her linen three times a day, and never wore any stockings that were not new. Huge baskets were brought to her containing different dresses, shawls and hats. From these she selected her costume for the day. She possessed between 300 and 400 shawls, and always wore one in the morning, which she draped about her shoulders with unequaled grace. She purchased all that were brought to her, no matter at what price. The evening toilet was as careful as that of the morning; then she appeared with flowers, pearls or precious stones in her hair. The smallest assembly was always an occasion for her to order a new costume, in spite of the hoards of dresses in the various palaces. Bonaparte was irritated by these expenditures; he would fly into a passion, and his wife would weep and promise to be more prudent, after which she would go on in the same way. It is almost incredible that this passion for dress should never have exhausted itself. After the divorce she arrayed herself with the same care, even when she saw no one. She died covered with ribbons and pale rose-colored satin.

Pilfered Paragraphs.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and keep up the system you will find Parmelee's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by C. E. Weed & Co. 860

THERE is a pretty female barber at Haley, Indian Territory, who is earning on an average $30 a day. She charges 50 cents for a shave, and "nex." is always on hand during business hours.

Do You Know?

That the Horse and Cattle Powders prepared by E. M. Parmelee are composed of the very best and purest materials. Licorice, Fenugreek, Blood Root, Pukeweed, Sal Prunella, Cobb, Epimedic, Bird-pepper, &c., Sulphur, Mandrake, Gentian, Salts, Nitre, etc. Nothing to injure the most delicate animal, but everything specially adapted to the cure of Colic, Worms, Hoarse, and all diseases of Horses, Cattle, Hogs, Sheep and Poultry. Any one may try. Full pounds only 25 cents. Sold by C. E. Weed & Co.

IF you devote your time to study, you will avoid all the drowsiness of life; nor will you long for the approach of night, being tired of the day; nor will you be a burden to yourself, nor your society unsupportable to others.—Seneca.

Why Suffer?

with Dyspepsia when Parmelee's Dyspepsia, Diabetic, Kidney and Liver Cure will work wonders, relieving you at once. Do not wait till dropsy has overcome and the liver has taken full possession of your body but remember that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This fine preparation will also tone up the kidneys and liver and cleanse the system of all impurities. Price $1.00 per bottle. Sold by C. E. Weed & Co.

PERHAPS the deepest coal-mine on this continent is one at Pittston, Pa. The shaft is 1,576 feet deep—nearly a third of a mile. Every day during the busy season 200 cars, containing four tons each, are sent from below to the upper world, the time of each trip being a little over a minute.

Thoroughly-Tried.

After many years of experience in my own family and upon my horses and cattle I am constrained to say that Parmelee's Universal Liniment is the most complete remedy for the cure of Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lame Back, Sore Throat, &c., in the human family, and of Bone Spavin, Sweeny, Ringbone, Spavins, Bruises on Horses; Caked Bag, Sore Teats, &c., on Cattle, that I have ever known and take pleasure in recommending it to others. Large bottles 75 cts; common size 25 cents. Sold by C. E. Weed & Co.

A PHILADELPHIA undertaker advertises for bearded men to assist him in his business. Being questioned by a representative of the Press, he said that he found that the public, especially the bereaved public, had more confidence in bearded men, had more respect for them. There was a solemn dignity about them that comported admirably with everything pertaining to funerals.

By Neglect

What is at first but a slight cold, becomes a cough, straining and exhausting the lungs till such an inflamed condition exists that powerful remedies are not always able to stop the disease and the person goes into consumption from mere neglect. Do not be so foolish but use Hamilton's Cough Balsam, which removes the impure matter from the throat and lungs and exerts a healthy influence on the diseased parts. Even those whom the hand of the wreck of their former selves receive no useful help in Croup and Whooping Cough it is invaluable. Prices 25 and 50 cents. Sold by C. E. Weed & Co.

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 1870

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

GEO. W. MILLER,

DEALER IN

Clothing

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels

GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich

CHICAGO WEEKLY HERALD

The Largest, Best, and Most Complete Newspaper ever sent

One Year for $1.00.

EIGHT LARGE PAGES,

Containing the News of the Day, Agricultural and other matter interesting to the farmer and his family, complete Market Reports, Stories, Sketches, etc. Sample copies free. Address

CHICAGO WEEKLY HERALD, Chicago, Ill.

If you want a daily paper try

The Chicago Herald,

An enterprising, fearless, and reliable Chicago daily that has been a great success because of its excellence in every particular. It presents all the news every day on four large pages and at a price that permits its being taken by everybody. For sale by all newsdealers. Send on trial by mail, postage paid, six days each week, for TWO MONTHS FOR ONE DOLLAR. Address

THE CHICAGO HERALD,

120 and 122 Fifth-av., Chicago, Ill.

JAMES W. SCOTT, Publisher. 17

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that direful disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for Consumption, Colds, Coughs, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. WILSON, 194 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

$1 A YEAR. ONE DOLLAR. $1 A YEAR. ONE DOLLAR. $1 A YEAR.

THE WEEKLY Detroit Free Press AND HOUSEHOLD FOR ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Ten Large Pages of News and Reading Matter. The Free Press is Michigan's Representative Newspaper. Its Circulation is Larger than that of any Other Paper Published in the State. Sample Copies Sent Free. FREE PRESS CO., Detroit, Mich.

OLD NEWSPAPERS FOR

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 20. CHARLEVOIX, MICH., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1883. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

Published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, MICH., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Business Directory.

ATTORNEYS.

WHITBECK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich. A. WHITBECK. C. A. GRIER.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Real Estate business promptly attended to. MONEY TO LOAN.

H. A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Bayne-ay, Mich.

H. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

ORTON & KEAT, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Bayne, Mich.

OSCAR F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX. Capital $50,000. Carries deposits. Deposits subject to check. Sells all of government bonds, real estate, and loans money for more than three per cent. Loans to farm on first mortgages. Gives sight drafts on all principal cities. RENSELLE & LOVELL.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school lesson, sunday evening at 2 o'clock. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7:30 the church being open. C. F. VANALSTINE, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7. J. T. HODGSON, pastor.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

A. CHRISTEN, M. D. Office at the Highwash.

LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office at the Lewis house, Charlevoix, Mich.

A. PRESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Physician of the Chippewa, Ottawa and Miami tribes.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

ISRAEL S. HARSHA, Notary Public. Real Estate, Loans, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix, Mich.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. R. Baxter Post No. 178, G. A. R. meets Saturday in every month, at 10 o'clock A. M.

O. K. Charlevoix Lodge No. 307, meets every Friday evening, at 6 o'clock P. M.

O. U. F. Round Lake Lodge No. 307, meets every Wednesday evening in their hall.

C. L. Tau Rho Council No. 1, meets regularly on the first Tuesday in each month, and at such other times as may be necessary.

Grange, Charlevoix Lodge No. 307, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over store.

BOARD by the Day or Week AND MEALS AT ALL HOURS. Also Teams constantly boarded, and by season. Horses reasonable. N. S. JOHNSON, Opp. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House, ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor. Charlevoix, Michigan. This house is centrally located, and its rooms are always ready for the reception of guests. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in the city.

Mountain City House, RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor. Charlevoix, Michigan. Free conveyance for the traveling public to and from the depot. Livery and Sale Stables connected with the house.

United States Hotel, GEO. W. CURLIS, Proprietor. Boyne City, Michigan. This house is thoroughly refitted and refurnished.

A. J. McLEOD Keeps on hand at his Meat Market Everything usually kept in a First-Class Establishment. The highest market prices in cash paid for Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

FOR

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

GO TO

Dr. G. W. CROUTER'S DRUG STORE.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

An Immense Line to Choose From.

NOTICE.—Geo. A. GIDDINGS, The ownership of lots 6 and 7 in block 1 of Giddings' addition to Charlevoix, and of lots 1 and 2 in block 1 of Mason's addition to Charlevoix, and of lots 1 and 2 in block 1 of Cross, Avery and Bond's addition to Charlevoix, were purchased by me at the sale of said premises on the 15th day of November, 1883, and I have received the certificate of such purchase. The owner will please remit his redeeming claims, or said lots will be conveyed to me at the expiration of the time of redemption. Dated Nov. 15, 1883. [1] A. T. CLARK.

DISSOLUTION NOTICE. The co-partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned under the firm name of Bennett & Cooper, is this day dissolved by mutual consent. All persons indebted to said firm are requested to call and settle their accounts at once. Dated Charlevoix, Nov. 15, 1883. [1] A. BENNETT. CHAS. COOPER.

Sewing Machines CHEAP. The best sewing machine for the money ever sold. Call and see it before buying elsewhere. EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED FOR FIVE YEARS. MRS. W. J. BRADLEY Has purchased the Ladies' and Children's Furnishing Goods. Will be found in the store formerly occupied by Mrs. Bradley, where she will be pleased to see her friends and as many more as possible. Call and be convinced.

Grand Rapids Democrat, DAILY AND WEEKLY. Office: 75 Ionia St., Grand Rapids, Mich. TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION: Daily Democrat, by mail, one year in advance, $6.00; six months, $3.00; three months, $1.50. Weekly Democrat, by mail, one year in advance, $1.50; six months, 75 cents. Agents wanted for the Democrat in every town in Western Michigan. Address, GRAND RAPIDS DEMOCRAT, Grand Rapids, Mich.

From the Detroit Evening News.

THAT LITTLE RED BOOK.

The Light of Truth Against "Stink-pot Warfare."

Gov. Begole's Vindication from the Malicious Attacks of Certain Alleged Newspapers Read it Through.

In Justice.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 21. The Flint Evening Journal of to-day will contain the following:

We take pleasure in placing the facts become our readers in regard to the connection of ex-governor Begole with the paper would present his action many changes it might make. George L. Walker, the governor's business partner, has been acquainted with the matter all along, and we have been empowered to set it right.

Mr. Stevenson, the governor's secretary, when told that the governor had said to a reporter in Detroit that he (the secretary) was preparing a bill to be presented to the railroad pass business, replied:

"Reporters never lie, but are sometimes exceedingly mistaken. I think the governor must have misunderstood me. I told the reporter to say that I had prepared no bill." I repeated I would not prepare any statement, and don't propose to do so."

"Well, you are a good talker when you get started," he said; "tell us how you got into the pass business."

"Well, the first I heard of this 'red book' business was at banking last winter. A reporter for one of the Detroit papers told me that a railroad official had offered to furnish him for publication a letter of Gov. Begole to a pass," but telling them not to send to members of the legislature. I knew that the governor stood well and had many friends, and that the company was not seeking favors of the governor, but when that book came out upon his private business he would send for another one. One refused absolutely to publish the letter, a statement that may better or less had been offered for publication.) Then he had said in his house in regard to the matter. I was present at the interview. As just soon be quoted as anything else. I told him that if he could get anything in the way of passes for himself or family he would be glad to have me do it. He said that he would like to get passes for himself and family, and I then told him that I would write to the company and see what I could do. I wrote to the company, and received a reply that they would not issue passes to any one in public life. I then wrote to the governor about it and he said that he would like to get a company pass, but before the inauguration for a 500 mile ticket book in order to finish up his private business. That was the last I heard of the matter. My agreement with the railroad company was to furnish passes for my

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

It is proposed to hold a grand international jubilee upon the completion of the Washington Monument in the spring of 1885, to which all the world, but especially those countries which have contributed blocks of stone to the monument, will be invited to send representatives.

CHASTENED by defeat, Yale has at length decided to go back to the old "Dink Cook" stroke, which proved to be pretty good seven or eight years ago. The Captain of the Yale boat crew and two of his men have been putting in their vacation time under Cook's instruction in Philadelphia, and hope to be able to teach their fellows how the thing should be done. Mr. Cook has dropped boating for journalism, and is business manager of the Philadelphia Press.

PERRY has only 40,000 inhabitants, but there is one respect in which it is the biggest city in the land. There is no other from which the Government receives so large an amount of internal revenue. Thirteen immense distilleries make this the center of whisky manufacture. The tax is 90 cents a gallon. The largest distillery is under contract to send every drop of its product to France, to be used in the native wines of that vine-clad country.

ONE little girl who had lived in London all her life and had never seen a tree was recently taken into the country, together with many others, at the expense of a "fresh air fund." She clung to one of the teachers in dreadful alarm on seeing a tree, and could not understand what such an immense green thing could be. "Why don't it keep still?" she said, in a paroxysm of terror, as the wind swayed its branches; and it was only after some time that she could be induced to go near enough to touch it.

A CHICAGO physician suggests that elopements of medical men with their young lady patients would be avoided by leaving the professional treatment of women to doctors of their own sex. A slanderous Brooklyn paper commenting on the proposed remedy says such a course would diminish the number of female patients at least 50 per cent., and make the practice of medicine an unprofitable one. Are there no able-minded women who will come forward to defend their invalid sisters from such vile expressions?

WHILE Mr. Moody, in Chicago, was remarking that he hoped the time would soon come that poor women with babies would be allowed to bring their babies in church, one in the gallery whose mother had already availed herself of the opportunity set up a wailing. But Moody was not discomfited. If the children cried those who didn't like it could go, he said. Here came another prolonged yell. "If a child cried," he said, screaming at the top of his voice, he "would speak louder." Here the child cried louder than ever. Everybody roared with laughter, in the midst of which the unhappy mother made her escape.

A GEORGIA camp meeting was well under way, having been greatly stirred by the preacher, when Mrs. Nicholls began denouncing every one around her so violently that the preacher stopped and hundreds pressed around the woman for explanation. She pointed to her daughter, clinging to the arm of a well known young gentleman, whose attentions to the daughter were forbidden by the mother. Having in his possession a license, and procuring the service of a friendly preacher, they crowded up to the young lady and mother and a marriage was performed before the old lady realized what was going on.

A CORRESPONDENT in Telluride, Col., is described by a correspondent of the New Orleans Times-Democrat. About 1875 or 1876 from the entrance is a large excavated chamber, about eighty feet in length and forty in diameter. The walls and roof are almost solid galena, and the floor, to the depth of six or eight feet, is composed of soft lead carbonates. These chambers, ranging from seventy to 120 feet in length and averaging about eight feet in diameter, indicate from the manner and size of about the same formation of galena. The floors are bare principally small cubes running out in every direction, and in them the carbonates are of a higher grade, and they run much better in silver. The ore can be easily detached.

GEN. BEAUREGARD says: "In the early spring of 1861 it became evident to her physician and her family that Mrs. Beauregard had not long to live. Our good old friend, Dr. Mercier, again went to Gen. Butler to know if there were any possibility of my seeing once more the tender and loving wife from whom I had been so suddenly and long separated. He immediately turned to his desk, and, with his characteristic promptness, wrote an unconditional pass, which authorized me to enter his lines and to come to New Orleans, where I could remain unmolested as long as circumstances required, my presence there. That was a noble act, for which I shall ever be grateful."

THE London Times, in speaking of the literary decadence of Boston, points out that Edinburgh, too, has been deposed from its literary eminence. As literature has left Boston for New York, so has it abandoned Edinburgh for London. It is the same with other cities. Weimar has sunk to be a petty residence town. Geneva has gone into trade and politics. Florence is no more an intellectual center. Oxford and Cambridge retain no dictatorship in letters. It may seem to be only a transfer of the intellectual headship from one locality to another. The change may be supposed to be nothing but an instance of the common law of the rise and decline of local greatness.

"HELENA is hopeful; more unanimously so than Bozeman," a correspondent of the St. Paul Pioneer Press says, in a letter from Montana. "Helena claims to have added 2,000 within a year or two to the 6,000 to which she grew as a mining town without a railroad. The town is just passing through the transition from a placer mining city to a permanent center of quartz mining and trade. The once rich gulches on the debris of whose mines the city stands have been exhausted by a relatively insignificant product of about $400,000 a year. The permanent mining industry of the place will find its material in the rich quartz veins of the mountains at whose feet it nestles, where one undeveloped mine was lately sold to an English syndicate for $1,000,000.

WHEN Proctor Knott delivered that Congressional speech which brought Duluth into such ridiculous prominence, and which added so largely to his own reputation as a satirist, he did not foresee what now seems to be the almost unrivaled great future of that much abused port. For many years Duluth trembled between small hope and great fear, but when it became evident that the Northern Pacific and Canada Pacific Railways would be completed to the Western coast, she held up her head in the very glory of confidence. Now she is in communication, for, with the completion of these railways and the development of the great Northwest, Duluth's natural advantages must make her a very important city. Situated on a deep water bay, she has a harbor which, for extent, safety and convenience, is excelled by few if any in the United States. Into this bay, and but a short distance from the city, empties the St. Louis river, with it eight miles of "rapids," a water power of inestimable value in a country of coal. Into her back rich iron mine and the greatest timber crops in the world. Here is wool for mills, and her ability to run them, and here, too, is water connection with the Eastern markets. These things suggest a great future for Duluth.

Dash Called Up by a Locomotive Bell.

On one of the Northern trains was an old lady who evidently had never before made a railroad journey. After looking about her some time uneasily, apparently over the heads of every one, she gradually got half changed to one of lively interest when I promised, as I entered the car of Kid and Bing upon the door, to "set Mike agoing for his benefit." Mike was not visible, and while I disposed of my valuise appurtenances Bob surveyed the empty room with disappointment.

"Where is he? Trot him out," he demanded.

"Oh, I keep him locked up in a closet when I am gone out," I replied, stooping to draw out my hand-bell. Then all at her same time like an amused face from the peephole of Bob, who exclaimed, "Ye-e-s-s; you can't do it on me." Thinking the climax of his bewilderment was reached, I proceeded to unlock the door of a black walnut box standing on the floor and drew out and set upon the table a miniature, announcing, as I waved my hand toward it, "Behold my friend, my client, my blessed old Mike!"

Bob's face was a cream in itself. Many expressions struggled for the field, but disgusted disappointment gained the day, and he muttered, as he picked up his hat and started for the door, "Who wants to see your old telescope?"

"Hold on!" I cried—"stay five minutes; then you can go back to the girls and abuse me and my friend if you want to."

So back he shuffled, but slowly, and with a look of determined suspicion at me. I went about my affairs, feeling sure he would change his tune when once Mike had a chance to defend himself. And sure enough, as soon as Mike began to show him and enlarge upon the "catch" of my fishing, which I had brought home in a wide-mouthed bottle of slimy water, Bob was all attention.

By the time Mike had been put back into his box, Bob was ready to acknowledge that my chum was a mighty fine fellow.—West Baltimore, in St. Nicholas.

Sayings of the Little Ones.

"JENNIE, what makes you such a bad girl?" "Well, mamma, God sent you just the best children he could find, and if they don't suit you I can't help it."

"MAMMA, how can God hear me pray when he's far away?" Before the lady could reply a younger one said: "He's got de telephones runnin' to every place."

A LITTLE boy who wouldn't run to the store for his mother until he had had a drink of water, pleaded in excuse that his disobedience that "even a river couldn't run when it was dry?"

MARY has told a lie, "Oh, how naughty it is to tell a lie!" said the mother. "God will be much troubled," to which the child, after some reflection—"I won't tell Him, mamma; I won't say my prayer to-night."

A VISITOR in the country seeing a very old woman dozing at her cottage door asks a little boy of 6 or 7, who happens to be playing near by, how old she is. "I don't say, sir," replies the child politely, "but she must be very old. She has been here ever since I can remember."

A LITTLE girl who had occasion to "just run across the street," doubled up her mother's shawl and drew it around her shoulders. As she ran, she tripped and fell. "Don't cry, sissy," said a sympathetic man.

"Who's going to?" was the sharp reply.

"I guess when a little girl has her mother's shawl on, she's not going to let anybody she's hurt."

WHAT a beautiful thing is the unquestioning faith of childhood. A Western minister tells a story of a child who asked her teacher: "Miss Mary, how old she was he that believeth hath everlasting life, doesn't it?" "Yes," "Then you will have everlasting life?" "I hope so." "Oh, I thought it was a certain thing." The dear, the child is said, went home that day with something to think about.

Jewels for Receptions and Weddings.

"That was an expensive set of jewelry," remarked a reporter to the proprietor of the Washington street store, alluding to a set of diamonds a young lady had just taken away with her.

"It is the most expensive set we have in the store," was the reply, "but she has only hired them."

"Isn't it a common thing in Boston?" asked the newspaper man.

"Most certainly. Many of our best customers hire a set of jewels for an evening, and for a comparatively small price excite the envy and jealousy of their friends. I wonder you never knew of it before. We take our earbobs, rings and rest them to please our customers. We have a rent them. No people whom we know never run any security, but a stranger would, of course, have a deposit. The full value of the jewels. These are of same pattern of Swampscott now, where, I understand, they have been much praised for their beauty. Temporary possessors complimented.

A change thing happened in connection with the branch of our business. There was to be a large German, and a young lady, well known in the city, came to make arrangements about a set of diamonds. I was not in the store at the time and knew nothing of the matter, so when I came in I let out the whole thing to another young lady. In the afternoon No. 1 came in and asked significantly if her diamonds had been delivered. While she was talking, No. 2 put the same question to me. The situation was very awkward, but I explained the matter, and all was finally settled in favor of No. 1, the young ladies plodding each other and me to eternal secrecy.

"I wouldn't have it get out for the world, you know," explained No. 1.

"Another branch of our business is to rent silver services. These were very well paid for. Most of the designs are antique, and consist of those have figured in many Boston houses as highly treasured heir looms. At weddings we frequently furnish large collections of bric-a-brac and other articles to swell the number of "gifts" and make a fine display. We rarely get much for this, as the ostentatious parade is usually limited when there is anything particularly beautiful given as a present, and the advertising compensates us.—Boston Globe.

Hardest manual authority denounces blinkers upon horses as useless, ugly and hurtful to the sight.

CARDINAL virtues—Good culture and

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Our Pet.

We made him a grave 'neath the apple-tree,
Where he lived the summer long,
And we cried to think we should hear no more,
At midnight, his clear trill song.

How merrily hopped he along the path!
Wee Red-bin the gardener's pet,
For he ate all the mischievous flies and slugs—
My heart is breaking yet.

Dust Dea Br. was on my way to school,
And I crossed the dusty path,
For I could not bear to speak to the boy
Who would kill poor, dear, little bird.
—Kate Lawrence, in Pacific Companion.

My Chum Mike.

We were off for our summer vacation, Mike (my chum) and I. Mike took it rather quietly, but that's his way. People have different ways of talking; his was through his eyes, and how much they could tell a fellow! But I'm not the quiet kind, and I wanted to talk to everybody—wanted to ask them if they, too, were going away from the hot, dusty city, to stay three long, restful, delicious weeks.

Finally, as we came near our journey's end, and packed ourselves away in the old stage which was to land us at the lakeside, I felt that I must talk or explode. I tell you, being shut up in a dingy little office in a dingy little street of a dingy big city for eleven months of the year makes one appreciate some thing; so, when I muffled the real communion, and then caught sight of a pond through the trees, I gave Mike a rapturous shake; but he made no reply except to rattle the fishing-tackle in his pockets. This was expressive, but rather dull for steady conversation; so, in desperation, I began to sent my fellow-passengers in hopes of finding somebody else who wanted to talk. There was a tall, good-natured man, his wife, big girl, little girl, poodle and baby, and a jolly-looking boy, who sat exactly like me at one in such a remarkable funny way that I laughed, which laugh seemed to set on him like an inspiration, for he immediately broke the silence by inserting a rapid voice:

"Where you going? We're going to the Lake View house—tip-top place by the lake. Been there before? Fine scenery all around. The book of disdain over Mikes, dependable lack of interest in those fellow-passengers for the hour every one's eyes alighted on the bell line and asked the water boy, who happened to be passing at the time, what it was for.

"That, marm," said the boy with a wicked twinkle in his eyes, "is to ring the bell when you want anything to eat," and passed on. Shortly after the old lady got down the lunch basket and reading, up to the bell line gave it a vigorous pull. Of course the bank's cushions on the debris of whose mines the city stands have been exhausted by a relatively insignificant product of about $400,000 a year. The permanent mining industry of the place will find its material in the rich quartz veins of the mountains at whose feet it nestles, where one undeveloped mine was lately sold to an English syndicate for $1,000,000.

Jewels for Receptions and Weddings.

"That was an expensive set of jewelry," remarked a reporter to the proprietor of the Washington street store, alluding to a set of diamonds a young lady had just taken away with her.

"It is the most expensive set we have in the store," was the reply, "but she has only hired them."

"Isn't it a common thing in Boston?" asked the newspaper man.

"Most certainly. Many of our best customers hire a set of jewels for an evening, and for a comparatively small price excite the envy and jealousy of their friends. I wonder you never knew of it before. We take our earbobs, rings and rest them to please our customers. We have a rent them. No people whom we know never run any security, but a stranger would, of course, have a deposit. The full value of the jewels. These are of same pattern of Swampscott now, where, I understand, they have been much praised for their beauty. Temporary possessors complimented.

A change thing happened in connection with the branch of our business. There was to be a large German, and a young lady, well known in the city, came to make arrangements about a set of diamonds. I was not in the store at the time and knew nothing of the matter, so when I came in I let out the whole thing to another young lady. In the afternoon No. 1 came in and asked significantly if her diamonds had been delivered. While she was talking, No. 2 put the same question to me. The situation was very awkward, but I explained the matter, and all was finally settled in favor of No. 1, the young ladies plodding each other and me to eternal secrecy.

"I wouldn't have it get out for the world, you know," explained No. 1.

"Another branch of our business is to rent silver services. These were very well paid for. Most of the designs are antique, and consist those have figured in many Boston houses as highly treasured heir looms. At weddings we frequently furnish large collections of bric-a-brac and other articles to swell the number of "gifts" and make a fine display. We rarely get much for this, as the ostentatious parade is usually limited when there is anything particularly beautiful given as a present, and the advertising compensates us.—Boston Globe.

Hardest manual authority denounces blinkers upon horses as useless, ugly and hurtful to the sight.

CARDINAL virtues—Good culture and

A JAPANESE RAILROAD.

Some Peculiarities of Management. Peep at the Passengers.

The Tokio-Yokohama railroad, Government affair, as everything is here. Although it cripples individual enterprises, it secures the successful thing to have the Government do it. The railroad and the telegraph systems are very satisfactory, and the postal system is just about perfect.

Trains are run between the stations every hour and a quarter during the day, leaving both stations simultaneously. The whole equipment is English. The cars are divided into three classes. Even the first-class cars are decidedly plain. These are divided into three compartments. The second-class cars would hardly be used on a horse-railroad in Boston. They are plain as plain can be, and look like a horse-car, having two longitudinal seats running the length of the car. The third-class cars have open benches for seats. The cushions of all three classes is the same. In first-class passengers are locked in the car. Everything pertaining to the road is kept in the best condition. The bed is like a dune; the cars are clean, the stations are clean, and all officials uniformed. I never knew one of them to be in any way impolite. For instance, if a passenger has to cross the track except by the bridges overhead, during English custom, trains run at regular intervals. No baggage is allowed to go free, save such as one can take in his hand. You can take no liquors into the train, not even a cancy, without paying an extra price. Posted in the stations is a notice to the effect that the Government does not run railroad for the transportation of liquor, if, dogs must travel, provision has been made for them. No cows or horses are provided with boxes battened in which poodle or mastiff can be transported for a definite sum.

Five minutes before the train starts a warning bell is rung. The ticket office is styled a "booking-office," the notice tells you that you must be "booked" before you can enter the train.

Just before the train starts the door is opened, the guards at each door closed, so there is no possible chance for a belated passenger to get on board. The train does not have to wait for anybody, but moves off at the time. There are no doors either through which you can dodge the official.

Having locked yourself or passed your ticket, you are allowed to go through a very narrow passage-way to your second train, showing ticket as you pass. Although there are no guard or bell or bell-cry anywhere, you are left entirely free to enter the class car for which you have a ticket. If he doesn't do this he is found out there is a penalty to be enforced.

When it is time for the train to start an official on the platform blows a whistle, the engineman blows his whistle, which would be terrific were only powerful enough, and away you go. You see one advantage the average American road there is not the slightest jerk in starting or stopping. The cars are really in motion unless you look at objects outside the window.

The train glides so that just after it has left the city to be sure it were swift probably the days exceeding it. Nothing upsets a traveler more than a monotonous ride. The road follows the Tokaido coast of the bay most of the distance. It is nearly a dead level. On one side are the rice fields, where at time of the year, the farmer may be seen up to their knees in mud out the rice-plants. There is particularly attractive scenery, for a height day you watch the cultivation of that noble mountain, Fuji—the "peerless," as it is called the distance.

Here and there one fellow-passenger in the car. As it is an early train are various officials going to their daily business. Some of these are dressed in foreign cloths many of them understand something of English or German. These are mostly an intelligent looking set of men.

Besides these somewhat foreign natives we have the real, genuine article, with nothing foreign about them unless it is a hat. Hats are generally worn, except it is a rainy day when they are left at home and wearer goes bareheaded.—Tokio Correspondent Boston Transcript.

Moon and Earth.

Prof. Proctor reasons that the moon has grown old six times as fast as the earth, a comparison of the length of the days and years of the two in making it evident that the earth's internal heat was originally six times as great as that of the moon. Applying to this data, under the act of 1855, was 3,000 miles; and for any half-inch satin ribbon of a contrasting color. A row of this should be threaded through the beading four inches from the end of the ribbon through one opening, over one, and pull it through the third to the under side again, spreading out the ribbon on the upper side the full width in the center; weave the ribbon in this way all around the edge, and join the ends by tying with a little bow. On the opposite side of the basket fasten a little square cushion, for pins and fine needles, with a piece of ribbon placed diagonally around it and tied in a bow to the basket edge. Unless the bottom of the basket is very firm and close, fit a pasteboard exactly to it, and cover neatly with silesia of the same shade as the ribbon. Fill the pincushion. These baskets for holding thimble, thread and scissors can be made very ornamental in this way.—Ladies' Floral Cabinet.

Reasons for Marrying.

An intelligent lady of Newark, N. J., writes to the Sunday Call of that city, giving what she deems good reasons for her sex to marry. We make the following extract:

"It does seem that many of the younger women of the present generation are not enough determined in matters pertaining to matrimony, or I should say, in such things as may terminate in matrimony. The girl of the present generation does not seem to be far-sighted enough to look for anything in the way of lasting unions of affliction and affection, but she rather looks more to the bread and butter side of the question. This a great point, but it is not always the best and most trustworthy. Now, for instance, here is a young lady of average ability, good looks, etc., who is well educated, armed, and at night she slept with a brace of pistols under her pillow. It would never occur to a woman like that to look under the bed before retiring. She jumps in, pulls the cover over her head and takes her chances. Pistol is also a terror with the revolver, and it is said that she is always around when there is trouble. I've heard it said that Clara Louise Kellogg practices every night by shooting at cents. I'm told that it would take a live band of Indians to capture her.

"There may be a widow her town than the city of Helena in Montana, but as yet we have not found it. Widow people glory in their shame as they do in Helena there is time for considerable money worth.

FARMERS' Associations are becoming very popular in the South.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

Jeannette and the Cigarel.

Big brother's
"Cigarel,
Maiden saith,
"Nice, you bet!"

Sudden change,
Tal-gumption
Neath spoon
Palm doth get.

Dinner don't Ripple on Or stomach
Of Jeannette.

Pair sinner
Moaning yet,
Such sickness
Never had met.

Doctor comes,
Fixes pet
With morphine—
Say it'll vet.

Next morning,
Sees Jeannette:
"Had enough Cigarel."

What Geraldine Said.

"Does Geraldine ever say anything about me?" asked an enthusiastic Brooklyn lover of his sweetheart's brother.

"Yes, indeed," answered the little man; "she says you are so very kind to bring her so many caramels."

"Anything else?"

"She says that album you gave her on her birthday must have cost $5."

"She is good at guessing. It cost $25, Johnny. But does Geraldine ever say anything about, you know, about—what she thinks of me?"

"Oh, yes, sometimes. She said at the breffesstable this morning that she thought your ears would make good yacht-sails, and that when she got you she would rent your feet to a contractor as pile-drivers."

Unfortunately for Geraldine's little commercial project, he used his feet to carry him away, and the last heard of him was in New York, where he was looking for rooms for a single gentleman.—New York World.

Women in the Water.

Fragile woman, so often considered as a mere plaything for man, has more than once both astonished man and humiliated him by her exploits of endurance in the water. It is the fact, however, that woman can float more easily in the water than a man can, because she has the advantage over him in having smaller bones in proportion to her total weight than a man has, and has also a larger proportionate amount in her body of adipose matter, which is lighter in water than man's bone; but, nevertheless, for a fragile vessel, she has performed feats on the briny waves more marvelous even than those accomplished by her male rival, and has done them far more gracefully. It is an undeniable fact that, although women cannot walk as gracefully as men, she excels him in her grace of movement in the water, and becomes in its embrace as fair a nymph-like form as ever floated in the mythic waters of Greek mythology.

Wicker Work-Baskets.

Wicker work-baskets are prettily trimmed by weaving in the openings

Fifty years of helplessness
Signal disease, Miss Annie
Pope, of Pottsville, Pa., was cured
Hop Bitters. The first her friends knew of it was when they met her down town shopping tour, and, as they had not seen her for years, they were "naturally amazed." They should not have been so. Well, what else can be expected from one who has been laid up for years but that she will take a bee-line for the nearest drug-goods store on recovery? Of course she will. And we may work against the popular anti-fullscure, so far as the non-use is concerned.

Color of the Czar alone in a carriage through the streets of Moscow, so much was said at the time of the coronation, as an evidence of the Russian, turns out to have been quite practiced for public effect. He locked himself into the carriage, would have exposed the ruse by taking up an officer of the Imperial guards, who was "made up" to represent the Czar. We hope these extra-ordinary arrangements of royalties will not be here. The next time it will be disclosed that it was the Prince of Wales, but your goods-understrapper, who has nothing so desperately with Anarchists.

CANNABIS is contrary to one's reasonably selling her own children, and there is something almost beautiful in the story told, on good authority, of an English woman of the better class offering two young children for sale to the passers-by for the sum respectively of 32 and 2 She disposed satisfactorily of the elder child, and the purchaser left her in a cab; but no one could be induced to buy the baby, even at the low price asked. Infants appear to be drugs in the market.

Inaction of the loving mother

Distance was over 330 miles.

is a little new; for, although we are perfectly accustomed to the sale of grown-up daughters, it is generally for a fair equivalent; there is no particularly eager effort to dispose of them at exceptionally cheap rates.

IT is seldom that retribution overtakes a scoffer and sinner as promptly as it did in the case of Butch Shannon, of Lancaster, Ohio. A colored camp meeting was in progress at the fair grounds near the town. Shannon and a band supplies the music, and it got as it used to be forty years ago.

The statistics of marriages, births and divorces in Switzerland which have been published bring out some interesting and suggestive facts. Compared with other countries in Europe the proportion of marriages to the population is very low. The average age of marriage is 31 years for men and 28 years for women. In 1881, the last year for which statistics are furnished, the number of divorces was greater than during any year on record.

Gray in Saco, Me., recently bought a lot of second-hand theological books and 200 manuscript sermons which had belonged to a Baptist minister. A curious feature about the sermons is that they have numerous stage directions, such a few samples are given: "Dwell on this passage in solemn tones;" "Fearful smile after the word 'never;'" "Pause long enough to count twenty-five after this passage;" "close Bible and look silent after this passage;" "Emphatic ceiling in attitude of prayer at this point;" "Sarcastic wave of hand;" "rapid gesture."

A CLERGYMAN in Tennessee is known as a "satisfying preacher." Whenever he begins to grow tired of its regularity the "satisfying preacher" is sent for; and so attractively bad is he after hearing him once or twice the congregation is entirely "as jished" to keep the pastor it has. A new "satisfier" is then opened to preachers. They will act as a sort of compromise to those peripatetic souls whose showy eloquence often vexes a congregation to be dissatisfied with its humdrum pastor.

Colonel Esbermen of the Banks will offer endeavor to go to sea provided with a liberal allowance of oil which to calm troubled waters. It is no doubt about its efficacy. Oil was tried by many vessels of Winchester fleet during the recent gales, and probably saved many men from being badly damaged, if not wrecked by the terrible The effect is almost magical, as oil dripping into the water prevents the sea from breaking, and the vessel is enabled to ride safely on the Fragile woman, so often considered as a mere plaything for man, has more than once both astonished man and humiliated him by her exploits of endurance in the water. It is the fact, however, that woman can float more easily in the water than a man can, because she has the advantage over him in having smaller bones in proportion to her total weight than a man has, and has also a larger proportionate amount in her body of adipose matter, which is lighter in water than man's bone; but, nevertheless, for a fragile vessel, she has performed feats on the briny waves more marvelous even than those accomplished by her male rival, and has done them far more gracefully. It is an undeniable fact that, although women cannot walk as gracefully as men, she excels him in her grace of movement in the water, and becomes in its embrace as fair a nymph-like form as ever floated in the mythic waters of Greek mythology.

Wicker Work-Baskets.

Wicker work-baskets are prettily trimmed by weaving in the openings of the beading four inches from the end of the ribbon through one opening, over one, and pull it through the third to the under side again, spreading out the ribbon on the upper side the full width in the center; weave the ribbon in this way all around the edge, and join the ends by tying with a little bow. On the opposite side of the basket fasten a little square cushion, for pins and fine needles, with a piece of ribbon placed diagonally around it and tied in a bow to the basket edge. Unless the bottom of the basket is very firm and close, fit a pasteboard exactly to it, and cover neatly with silesia of the same shade as the ribbon. Fill the pincushion. These baskets for holding thimble, thread and scissors can be made very ornamental in this way.—Ladies' Floral Cabinet.

Reasons for Marrying.

An intelligent lady of Newark, N. J., writes to the Sunday Call of that city, giving what she deems good reasons for her sex to marry. We make the following extract:

"It does seem that many of the younger women of the present generation are not enough determined in matters pertaining to matrimony, or I should say, in such things as may terminate in matrimony. The girl of the present generation does not seem to be far-sighted enough to look for anything in the way of lasting unions of affliction and affection, but she rather looks more to the bread and butter side of the question. This a great point, but it is not always the best and most trustworthy. Now, for instance, here is a young lady of average ability, good looks, etc., who is well educated, armed, and at night she slept with a brace of pistols under her pillow. It would never occur to a woman like that to look under the bed before retiring. She jumps in, pulls the cover over her head and takes her chances. Pistol is also a terror with the revolver, and it is said that she is always around when there is trouble. I've heard it said that Clara Louise Kellogg practices every night by shooting at cents. I'm told that it would take a live band of Indians to capture her.

"There may be a widow her town than the city of Helena in Montana, but as yet we have not found it. Widow people glory in their shame as they do in Helena there is time for considerable money worth.

FARMERS' Associations are becoming very popular in the South.

WHERE NATURE SMILES.

Beauty and Grandeur of the Yellowstone Scenery.

Near the banks of the Yellowstone is a remarkable group of sulphur and mud springs. On the brow of a hillock, amid the green pines, vapor rises from the scorching jets of several craters and fissures. Passing over this hill we come to a remarkable cavern whence flows a transparent stream. The roof of the cavern tapers back to the water, which is boiling furiously twenty feet from the mouth of a cavern, ejected through it in uniform jets of great force. The sides and entrance are covered with soft green sediment. Few hundred yards from this cave is what is called the Muddy geyser, on the Mud volcano. It is a funnel-shaped orifice, in the midst of a basin 150 feet in diameter, with sloping sides of clay and sand. The crater or orifice at the surface is thirty by fifty feet in diameter. It tapers quite uniformly to the depth of thirty feet, where the water may be seen when the geyser is in repose, presenting a surface of six or seven feet in breadth. The flow of this geyser occurs every six hours; the water rises gradually and commences to boil when about half-way to the surface, and occasionally breaks forth in great violence. When the crater is filled it is expelled from it in a splashing, scattered mass, ten or fifteen feet in thickness, to the height of forty feet. The water of a dark red color, depositing the substance it holds in solution in the form of miniature stalagmites upon the sides and top of the crater. Half a mile distant dull, thundering sounds are heard from the said volcano as often as every five minutes. Each report shakes the ground for 200 yards or more, and the massive jets of vapor accompany them burst forth like the smoke of bursting gunpowder. Another wonder meets the eye on the other side of the river, where in the middle of the Upper Geyser basin is the grandest geyser of the world. Around it are other craters of boiling springs, throwing water to the height at three and four feet, but this grand geyser on the summit of a bank of rock is a well in the strata twenty by twenty-five feet in diameter measurement, when quiet it has a depth of 90 feet. The edge of this basin is bounded by a heavy fringe of rocks and stalagmites in solid layers are deposited by the overflowing waters.

When an eruption is about to occur the basins gradually fill with boiling water to within a few feet of the surface; then suddenly, with heavy concussions, shaking the ground in every direction, immense clouds of steam rise to the height of 500 feet, and the whole great body of water, twenty by twenty-five feet, ascends in one gigantic column to the height of ninety feet, while the steam ascends 1,000 feet or more. From the apex of this column five great jets spring up, radiating slightly from each other, to the imparadise attitude of 250 feet from the ground, and seem to be held at that great height for the space of twenty minutes. The earth trembles under the descending deluge; a thousand hissing sounds are heard in the air, and rainbows encircle the summits of the jets with a halo of celestial glory. The falling water flows in mad bears away the shelly strata, and a seething flood pours down the slope and into the river. Three times in one afternoon has this grand geyser played for twenty minutes, then lowering its waters into the crater out of sight, the stream gradually ceasing to escape, till all is quiet. The sunlight glowing on this tall, saving fountain, with its sparkling jets of deep blue waters rising high in the air, is a spectacle no pen can describe. It is the "grandest, most majestic, most terrible fountain in the world."

Another geyser, not quite so remarkable, but more curious, perhaps, is called "The Fan." From a double orifice discharge five radiating jets to the height of sixty feet. The spray and the falling drops look like feather fans. Its eruptions sometimes last thirty minutes. "First the steam rushes from the upper crater, roaring violently; then suddenly ceasing, a fan-like jet of water rises from the lower crater to the height of over forty feet, playing for two minutes; then, suddenly stopping, the steam rushes forth again; successively the small craters send forth a transverse stream, thus playing into the others for hours, then subsiding in a gentle bubbling." While the geyser is in action you hear loud, sharp reports. Along the river banks craters in every shape are seen, and all around are small geysers playing at intervals. Two hundred yards from the fan are two small geysers, called the Sentinel, one always playing, the waters revolving horizontally without violence.

An Exploded Theory.

"Hi say, Mr. Pomgranate," observed a colored Austin expressman, who was the unfortunate owner of a bulky trunk which some one had unloaded upon him in the melancholy past, "didn't I hawk yo' say a good many times dat dere was reason in all things?"

"Yes, Sam," replied Mr. Pomgranate, "I believe that precept, and have never been afraid to say so."

"Yer wussen't?"

"No."

"Well, den, I jess wish yo'd come out in dealin's an' look at my trunk. He's bin sum sticky dis yer mo' an' hour."—Texas Siftings.

CONTENTMENT is a pearl of great price, and whoever procures it at the expense of 10,000 desires, makes a wise and happy purchase.—Bulwer.

A FEW years ago the population of the whites in Manitoba scarcely numbered 10,000. To-day it reaches 250,000, and is increasing daily.

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

More Murders.

At present there seems to be a mania for murder. The telegraph is burdened, and the daily press is full to overflowing with the horrible details of crime, and the same terrible story comes from every part of the continent. Our own Michigan furnishes her full proportions. In Jackson county last week, in a single night, a family of three persons and a guest at the house were shot while asleep in their beds, and two servants in another part of the house were unmolested. And the murderer is still at liberty, unless, perhaps, a man arrested on suspicion, proves to be the criminal. The whole transaction is wrapped in mistery, and the people in the vicinity are likely to commit another murder by lynching the first man against whom the circumstances seem to point. At Marshall, the same week, a promising young man was found murdered, with a bullet hole in his temple, and not a clue to lead to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrator. At Detroit a man is found insensible and dying, with his skull fractured, and bearing every evidence of having been the victim of a murderous assault. From them all the same mysterious story: "No clue to the murderer." From nearly every state, and every large city comes the same terrible details, day after day, occasionaly varied with burglaries and quarrels wherein one of the parties is caught, or where the offender is allowed to escape, as was done in this county recently. These details are served up by the daily press in a manner to still further excite the people, and in a manner to add fuel to the flame of passion.

Money has been a mover in many of these horrible transactions, while whiskey and an improper intimacy of the sexes have added a full proportion,—these three constituting the cause of a vast majority. But are they the real cause? Can any true cause be assigned? A perverted literature, best known as "nickel" and "dime libraries," wherein the exploits of brigands and cowboys are sensationally depicted, has had a part in educating the youth and young men to deeds of this character. The sensational details of certain daily papers strike deeper, because of their near approach to the actual fact, and are read where the "libraries" would not be recognized. Added to these, the failure of the courts to convict and properly punish the criminals where arrests are made and circumstances point almost positively to the accused; and the almost certainty of a pardon, (even after the expense of trial and conviction), thus robbing courts and prisons of their terrors, in all these can be found a primary cause of a large portion of crime, which, like the cases mentioned, destroys valuable human life. Even church going people must come in for a share of the censure, so far as a perverted public sentiment is concerned. Infidelity, fatalism, and a rejection of the future "hell," have their influence, and tend to rob crime of the terrors of punishment. Whatever the cause, or what ever the remedy, the daily grist grows larger, and the public read, are shocked for a moment, then apparently forgot and move on unconcerned.

The Assaults upon Governor Begole.

No fair minded man can read the plain statement of facts, published elsewhere, with reference to Governor Begole and his milleage ticket hook over the Flint & Pere Marquette railroad, without being convinced that the governor has been outrageously assailed without just cause.

It appears very clearly from the statements that the firm of which Governor Begole is the head, has had and now has very large business dealings with the road in question. As heavy shippers it was agreed that they should receive such mileage ticket books as were necessary for use in their business. Mileage books were given, and renewed as they ran out, and though W. Begole, the head of the firm, received no more or greater consideration than other [illegible] were received as a matter of course, as per agreement; and the firm in this regard was no different from many others throughout the state which, having heavy transactions with railroad companies, are accorded mileage books.

It appears also from the statements that Governor Begole has been scrupulously careful to use his mileage book only when traveling on private business. When he has traveled on public business he has paid full fare, not even taking advantage of the opportunity which is afforded every citizen of buying mileage tickets at a reduced rate.

For conduct in which there is no stain, Governor Begole has been misrepresented and villified by the republican press of this state, and journals in other states have joined in the cry. He has been assailed as a pirate grabber, and it has been insinuated, if not openly charged, that while taking ground against legislative dead headism, he has sought, by begging and importunity, to secure for himself favors at the hands of railroad managers. How devoid of foundation these charges are how gross and wanton the assaults have been—any one can appreciate who has seen the things and jibes and sneers at the governor, and who will read the statements made by the Flint people who are cognizant of the facts.

Journalism which will make a bundle of as innocent a matter as were Mr. Begole's letters to the Flint & Pere Marquette railroad will stoop to anything. It is, however, in reality but a continuation of the indecent warfare made against Mr. Begole in the campaign of 1882, but which, to the credit of the people of Michigan be it said, helped the man it was hoped to hurt.—Free Press.

Serious Riot in Menominee.

At an early hour Wednesday morning Gov. Begole received a dispatch from David Barkley, sheriff of Menominee county, requesting that a company or two of the state troops be sent to his assistance in maintaining order among the 1,500 striking miners of that section, as a serious riot was threatened. The governor left on the morning train for Lansing to consult with the state military authorities in regard to the matter. Before departing he stated to a Journal reporter that he would not order out the troops until all other efforts to preserve order had failed.—Flint Journal.

An Iron Mountain dispatch says: No evidence has yet occurred at the Chapin or Ludington mines of the Menominee company, but the officers have quietly sent for more police. It is said that Gov. Begole has been asked to forward a company of militia as soon as possible.

The strikers have forced all employees to join their ranks and stopped the pumps Tuesday night, which causes the mine to fill with water. The fires are now out and the water is gaining rapidly. Pinkerton's men are guarding the machinery. Several shots were fired Tuesday night by unknown parties, throwing the women into hysterics and causing general alarm. Men to the number of 1,500 have posted notices warning others to keep away from the mines. They have demanded full pay without the deduction of board bills or store accounts, but the company refuses to accede.

Concerning Gov. Begole's action in this matter, the Detroit Evening News says: Gov. Begole is not so precipitate in sending troops to the scene of strikes as some of his predecessors were and his hesitation is wise. Nothing yet appears to show that the miners at Iron Mountain have done anything which demands the interference of the military. They have refused to work under new conditions imposed upon them by their employers, which curtail their week's income by a whole day's wages. Fifteen hundred men are out, and some little disturbances have taken place of course, but the local authorities should be able to keep the peace, and probably are. Threats have been made to destroy property, but it does not appear that they have been carried out. Big iron companies which already enjoy the peculiar privilege of taxing the people to furnish them [illegible] left on the morning train for Lansing to consult with the state military authorities in regard to the matter. Before departing he stated to a Journal reporter that he would not order out the troops until all other efforts to preserve order had failed.—Flint Journal.

An Iron Mountain dispatch says: No evidence has yet occurred at the Chapin or Ludington mines of the Menominee company, but the officers have quietly sent for more police. It is said that Gov. Begole has been asked to forward a company of militia as soon as possible.

The strikers have forced all employees to join their ranks and stopped the pumps Tuesday night, which causes the mine to fill with water. The fires are now out and the water is gaining rapidly. Pinkerton's men are guarding the machinery. Several shots were fired Tuesday night by unknown parties, throwing the women into hysterics and causing general alarm. Men to the number of 1,500 have posted notices warning others to keep away from the mines. They have demanded full pay without the deduction of board bills or store accounts, but the company refuses to accede.

Concerning Gov. Begole's action in this matter, the Detroit Evening News says: Gov. Begole is not so precipitate in sending troops to the scene of strikes as some of his predecessors were and his hesitation is wise. Nothing yet appears to show that the miners at Iron Mountain have done anything which demands the interference of the military. They have refused to work under new conditions imposed upon them by their employers, which curtail their week's income by a whole day's wages. Fifteen hundred men are out, and some little disturbances have taken place of course, but the local authorities should be able to keep the peace, and probably are. Threats have been made to destroy property, but it does not appear that they have been carried out. Big iron companies which already enjoy the peculiar privilege of taxing the people to furnish them [illegible]

Notes and News.

Sergeant Mason, who attempted to shoot Guiteau, has been pardoned by the president.

Sojourner Truth, the famous colored lecturer and reformer, died at Battle Creek on Monday morning, aged 108 years.

The Frankfort Express comes to hand this week with both sides printed at home, and other noticeable improvements. There is evidently a master hand in the management.

"We shall shortly find ourselves living under a monarchy. I would give a million dollars to see Grant back in the white house."—Jay Gould, in N. Y. Tribune.

Another fair sample of the republican party: Adoniram J. Gibbs, a former Michigan legislator, was appointed to a land office in Dakota, and is now under the arrest for fraudulently appropriating lands to his own use, in that territory.

The recent elections have brought Arthur to the front as the republican candidate for president. It is a waste of time for republicans to talk about a candidate for the presidency. Mr Arthur, better withdraw before it is too late, rather than be an unsuccessful candidate.

The propeller Manistee, of the South Shore line, was lost on Lake Superior during the storm of week before last, with all on board. She was loaded with 400 tons of general merchandise. Nineteen persons are known to be lost, and some accounts place the number as high as 50.

Iowa republicans look strong ground in favor of prohibition; but they come so near defeat and are so badly frightened that they do not dare to carry out their pledges and submit a prohibitory constitutional amendment to the people. This is another proof of the utter hipocrisy of the republican party on the temperance question. But one thing is clear, they have fooled the temperance people about as long as they can.

The Old Machine at Work.

Things begin to have an old-time look about Barnum Hall. Reports from the midnight vigils there, carry us away back to the time when the president was collector of New York, chairman of the republican state committee, ipsissimus actualus of Conkling and chief engineer of as perfect a machine as was ever set up in politics. Among the names of the president's advisers who lower about and dart in and out mysteriously. What memories of wire-pullings, combinations, "fixed up" primaries and packed conventions do they awaken! "Clint" Wheeler, "Silk" Dutcher, George Bliss, "Steve" French, "Dick" Crowley, "Ab" Warren, "Barney" Biglin and Governor Cornell—they are all there, close to the president's ear as in days of yore. It would look as if the arena of New York politics had been removed to Washington and that the chief was again at the helm ready to put the machinery in motion.

There could be no better evidence than the presence of these familiar faces at the capitol that the old machine has been run out, cleaned up, freshly oiled and made ready for action. The New York conventions to elect delegates to the national convention will be held in January. That the delegation is to be made solid for Arthur is shown by the presence of the "boys" at the White House. Their duties are all assigned them. Dutcher takes care of the internal revenue element, "Steve" French and Cornell run the state committee, Clint Wheeler keeps an eye on the converted half breed, Robertson who has promised the custom house help and "Dick" Crowley takes care of the "solid" interest and the western counties. The machine seems to be in good working order, and the "schiefs" hand is clearly on the throttle.

Meantime there are rumors that Gresham is to be sent to the west to fix up things, and that Chandler himself is away on a political mission, the success of which is profound, but is believed to have the arranging of a solid delegation from Pennsylvania as its object. And so the game is working. The next move, it is hinted, will be the recall of Minister Hunt from St. Petersburg, the sending of Folger to replace him, and the pinning of somebody in the treasury Chandler, perhaps—who will proceed to use the treasury machinery to organize the delegations from the solid south. The boom is working beautifully, and by the time the New York convention meets and elects a solid Arthur delegation it will be at a white heat. The master hand of the "ex-collector" is seen in it all. Chicago Herald.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect October, 1883.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1.	No. 3.	No. 5.	No. 7.
Cincinnati lv	.....	8 00pm	7 45pm	.....
Richmond	.....	3 05pm	11 00	10 20
Winchester	.....	4 12	12 05am	11 25
Ridgeville	.....	4 39	12 25	11 49
Fort Wayne ..... ar	7 10	7 55	3 50	2 30am
Fort Wayne lv	.....	8 05	3 50	3 00
Kendallville	.....	8 22	4 09	3 17
Sturgis	.....	8 41	4 32	11 05
Vicksburg	.....	8 49	4 41	12 00pm
Kalamazoo ..... ar	.....	9 20	5 30	12 50
Kalamazoo lv	.....	9 30	5 40	2 20
Grand Rapids ..... ar	.....	9 50	6 25	3 25
Grand Rapids lv	7 45am	.....	10 25	5 45
D. G. R. & W. R'y	7 55	.....	10 35	5 55
Howard City	9 17	.....	11 52	6 59
Big Rapids	10 11	.....	12 49pm	7 52
Reed City	10 47	.....	1 20	8 28
Cadillac ..... ar	11 55pm	.....	3 01	9 55
Cadillac lv	.....	.....	3 10	10 15
Traverse City ..... ar	.....	.....	5 55pm	.....
Kalkaska lv	.....	.....	4 45	12 20am
Manesburg	.....	.....	5 25	1 25
Bogue Falls	.....	.....	5 35	2 48
Petoskey ..... ar	.....	.....	6 55	3 42
Harbor Springs	.....	.....	7 50	.....
Mackinaw City	.....	.....	7 00	6 05
St. Ignace	.....	.....	10pm	7 50
Marquette	.....	.....	7 00am	5 50pm
Negaunee	.....	.....	9 17	7 08

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2.	No. 4.	No. 6.	No. 8.
Negaunee lv	.....	.....	5 45pm	7 30am
Marquette	.....	.....	8 00	9 45
St. Ignace	.....	.....	5 45pm	6 15pm
Mackinaw City	.....	.....	6 30	9 45
Harbor Springs	.....	.....	7 30	.....
Petoskey	.....	.....	8 00	12 40pm
Bogue Falls	.....	.....	8 38	12 55
Manesburg	.....	.....	8 56	1 28
Kalkaska	.....	.....	10 05	3 23
Traverse City	.....	.....	9 25	.....
Cadillac ..... ar	.....	.....	11 45	5 50
Cadillac lv	.....	4 00pm	11 55	6 20
Reed City	.....	5 15	1 00pm	7 36
Big Rapids	.....	5 50	1 36	8 19
Howard City	.....	6 47	3 03	9 17
D. G. R. & W. R'y	.....	8 05	4 17	10 35
Grand Rapids ..... ar	.....	8 20	4 32	10 55
Grand Rapids lv	.....	.....	5 00	1 00pm
Kalamazoo ..... ar	9 00	.....	7 00	2 52
Kalamazoo lv	9 10	.....	7 20	3 25
Vicksburg	9 35	.....	7 50	3 58
Sturgis	10 02	.....	8 41	4 50
Kendallville	11 46	.....	10 01	7 59
Fort Wayne ..... ar	1 00pm	.....	11 20	7 10
Fort Wayne lv	1 20	6 00am	12 00am	.....
Ridgeville	2 57	8 24	3 01	.....
Winchester	3 26	8 41	3 23	.....
Richmond ..... ar	4 55	9 45	4 50	.....
Cincinnati	7 30pm	1 30pm	7 45pm	.....

A. B. LEET, Gen. Pass. Agt., Grand Rapids, Mich.

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish.

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and spectacles in Charlevoix county. Agent for the Rockford Watch.

ROCKFORD WATCH

The best time piece ever made. Warranted.

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh supply of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., on hand. Call and see us. Next door to Post office.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN, who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and the effects of youthful indiscretion, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the simple remedy by which he was cured. Those who wish to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

ROBERT GRUEN

Boyne Falls, Mich.

Watch-mak

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired.

CHICAG

WEEKLY

HERAL

The Largest, Best, and Most C

Newspaper ever sed

One Year for $1

EIGHT LARGE PAG

Containing the News of t
Agricultural and other mat ading to the farmer and h complete Market Reports
Sketches, etc. Sample co
Address

CHICAGO WEEKLY HE Chic

If you want a daily pap

The Chicago H

An enterprising, fearless, able Chicago daily that h great success because of its in every particular. It p the news every day on fo pages and at a price that p being taken by everybody by all newsdealers. Send mail, postage paid, six week, for TWO MONT
ONE DOLLAR. Address

THE CHICAGO HE
190 and 192 Fifth Ave., C
JAMES W. SCOTT, Publish

Overcoat

AND

SUITING

Gents' Overcoats.
Youths' Overcoats.
Boys' Overco

Gents' Suits.
Youths' Suits.
Boys' S

I have just received a large assortment of the above goods, at reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing out. Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and satisfy yourself.

E. M. Clar

Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

GEO. W. MILLER

DEALER IN

Clothin

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satch

GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, M

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Nov. 29, 1883.

Local Business Notices.

Those who desire to bring us wood on subscription will confer a favor by bringing it now.

Advertise the town by circulating the JOURNAL. Paper and envelopes on sale at R. B. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and hemlock block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

Buy note paper and envelopes with the name of Charlevoix, at O. B. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

The Charlevoix Rough and Ready fire company meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, and Operetta & Entertainment at Firemen's hall.

H. F. BUSBEE, Secretary.

News Brevities.

Thanksgiving to-day.

Dance at Lewis hall to-night.

H. Lee Iddings returned home last Friday.

E. M. Clark advertises overcoats in another part of this paper.

Jos. Beauvais is building an addition to his boat-building shop.

The steamer Clara Belle is out for repairs at Campbell's ship yard.

The tug J. L. Higgie has closed its season's work, and gone into winter quarters.

The schooner Sea Gem is laid up for the winter, and will receive extensive repairs.

Tom Nowland crushed one of his fingers in the machinery of the Wright mill Saturday.

Leo Hull, of East Jordan, bought a pair of mustangs of J. A. Cameron last Tuesday for $180.

Egbert A. Freeman, living near Bronson, was killed last Friday by a log rolling over him.

"Mine host" Cooper will serve up an excellent supper to-night for the patrons of the firemen's dance.

The iron works are casting a new cupola pattern of boat jack which will doubtless become popular.

The frame of the manufacturing company's building is up, and it is now receiving its iron covering.

On our eighth page will be found a thrilling poem by O. F. Wisner, Goldless suggested by the blizzard of two weeks ago.

The large new safe for the county arrived on the Champlain on Thursday, and was put in its places in the clerk's office on Friday.

The union temperance services at Rev. M. E. church Sunday evening filled the house, and the remarks by Rev. Mr. Morgan were listened to with apparent interest.

The continental vocalists and Swiss Bell Ringers are billed to appear at Lewis house on Thursday evening, Dec. 6. The state press give them many favorable notices.

Reports from the owners of the cottages reported last week as being entered by burglars, seem to indicate that nothing of value was taken, and that the mischief was done by boys.

The propeller Champlain had over 200 tons of freight on last trip. Wright, Kanrey & Co.'s warehouse and dock was full long before all the freight for this place was unloaded.

A letter in the last Sentinel, from W. M. Ashley, Jr., general manager of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad company, would seem to indicate that Charlevoix may secure that road if she will.

During the late term of court, Mr. E. H. Webster declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and made application for naturalization papers, which were granted.

At the M. E. church next Sunday evening the subject of discourse will be, "Future recognition; shall we know each other there?" In the evening a discourse of a practical nature will be given.

The editor of the Charlevoix Journal, has been publishing a very interesting series of articles, in connection with accurate wood engravings, on the resources of Charlevoix and its summer resort attractions."—Evening News.

Geo. F. Beardsley, of Stanton, arrived at Boyne on Tuesday, and, with the engineer of the G. R. & I. R. R. went over the route of the proposed railroad to Boyne. Mr. B. thinks it assured fact that the will be built the coming winter.

Last Monday evening Mr. C. J. Porter was elected by the Congregational society to act as treasurer during the absence of Mr. C. Y. Cook. The annual meeting for the election of officers, etc., will occur on Tuesday evening, Dec. 11th.

The Lansing wagon works are running a force of 85 men. What a boon such an institution would be to Charlevoix; the Lansing works are only about three years old, and started in with less than 20 men where it comes in it

E. M. Clark's new residence is fast approaching completion, and under the finishing touches of Messrs. Wheat, Carr, and Orrell will be a handsome as well as convenient house. Mr. and Mrs. Clark ought to enjoy life in such comfortable quarters.

The Good Templars had an interesting meeting last Friday evening. Over 30 members were out, two candidates initiated, and business of interest and importance transacted. In "good of the order," there were some interesting and profitable literary exercises.

Charles Bennett, a nephew of Benj. Burgess, of Chandler township, was found dead on Tuesday last week, with a gun shot wound in the head. There are some circumstances indicating murder, but on the coroner's inquest it was shown that the muzzle of the gun when discharged was inside the mouth, and a verdict of suicide was returned.

A full house greeted the Continentals last evening, at the Town Hall, and their entertainment was well worth the price of admission. To be sure they presented several old tunes, but who does not love the old songs. Dave Williams in his character sketches brought down the house. This young gentleman will probably make a decided hit one of these days.—Elk Rapids Progress.

It has been stated, and we believe truthfully, that fruit raised in this vicinity, and anywhere in this region from Traverse City north, will keep six months longer and command a much higher price than that raised further south. This is an important matter. While we may not supply the early market, we can supply the best fruit at a time when the prices are going higher, and when but little and that inferior fruit is to be had from any other locality. It pays to raise fruit or produce that will keep.

We have here in Charlevoix a most desirable site for a gristmill, and a disposition among our business men to give generous aid to any man or firm who means business, and will build a first class mill and put it in operation as soon as possible. Further than this, there are at least two gentlemen of some means who desire to unite their fortunes with a thorough practical miller, and build and operate such an institution here. If there is a practical miller with some cash who wants a good opening, we shall be pleased to show him around, and have no doubt arrangements can be made with one or the other of the gentlemen referred to above.

Advertising pays. A recent cartoon in the Detroit Evening News announced that the Boyne Argus was publishing articles descriptive of Charlevoix's advantages and resources. On the day following the arrival of the News came a letter from a young gentleman in the southern part of the state, asking for papers, and for information concerning the possibility of his being successful if he should come here to locate; and if the field here should be well occupied, information as to the most desirable town in this region in which to locate was asked. It so happens that his business is well represented in Charlevoix, but there is a location in the county which offers some inducements, and if they are sufficient, we have no doubt he will locate there within a few months. While we are not at liberty to use his name, we can say he is from a city that has graduated a large number of successful young business men. Again we say: advertising pays. This instance is but one of many that might be mentioned.

Hayes.

Old Boreas is lively now and then.

Several of the citizens on the sick list last week.

Thanksgiving will be observed by some of the Hayesites.

Three teachers of Hayes commence their winter terms of school next Monday.

A movement is on foot to organize a literary society at Fair Grove.

Miss Annie Cooper closed her fall term of school in the Whitford district last week. Miss Medissa Willis has been engaged for the winter term.

Henry Kahler, Jr., of Evangeline township, who has been in Barry county the past two years, is visiting friends in Evangeline and Hayes.

ZEKE.

Shipments.

The following are the clearances from the port of Charlevoix as reported from the custom house for the two weeks ending Tuesday, Nov. 27:

Nov. 17, sche. Rob Roy, 30 cords wood, A. F. Miller to Milwaukee.

22, sche. Harriet Rees, 130,000 hardwood lumber, W. T. Addis to Chicago.

22, sche. Gitea, 120,000 hardwood lumber, A. Bobo to Manistique.

22, sche. Charlotte Ruth, 140,000 hardwood lumber, W. T. Addis to Chicago.

24, sche. Le Loup, 110,000 hardwood lumber, 225 pieces square timber, and 50,000 feet hemlock lumber, W. T. Addis to Chicago.

Notice.

There will be a regular meeting of Charlevoix Encampment No. 103, I. O. O. F. at Odd Fellows' hall, on Monday evening, Dec. 3. Important business to be transacted.

Jos. F. Wing, Scribe.

Historical Society.

The historical society met Tuesday evening with "Mine Host" Richard Cooper at the parlors of the Fountain City house. One would have thought from the number present that "Dick" was giving one of his famous oyster suppers. But the "feast of reason" which was served was fully as well appreciated as would have been the bivalve luxury, and far more easily digested.

The historical topic of the evening was "Concord and Lexington." Mr. Kane, to whom the subject was assigned, instead of an original production, read Bancroft's glowing description of these immortal conflicts.

After the usual intermission, the president announced that the young and unmarried part of the audience were to withdraw to another room, and with the first vice president, Dr. Preston, in the chair, enjoy a part of the program intended especially for them, while the old folks would have a program of their own. The old folks listened very appreciatively to a reading from Charles Lamb by James E. Wood, and a piano solo by Mrs. Loveday. The young folks, if any programs had been prepared for them, seemed oblivious of the fact. Judging from their actions their minds were engrossed with the subject. "How can we shorten the days of single blessedness?"

On the reassembling of the society Miss Esther Barnes read a short biography of Peter Cooper. The article was well written and well read. It gave a clear and concise account of the struggles and triumphs, the good deeds and make up of this noble man, and how he was esteemed by those who knew him.

The music of the evening was well selected and finely rendered. It consisted of a piano duet by Mrs. Ella Smith and Miss Essie Buttars, a vocal duet by Miss Essie Buttars and Mr. Parmelee, and a piano solo by Mrs. Ella Smith.

The society meet next week at the residence of A. B. Upright.

Bay Springs.

The two unfortunate carpenters who fell lately in the new Chapman hotel, are reported convalescent. A wonder indeed. It is fearful to look down whence they fell.

The plastering is nearly done in the three upper stories of the new hotel.

Good sawdust nerds are the order of the day here. A lady need scarcely soil the neatest boot or shoe now in the village.

Mr. J. W. McNeel, a recent addition to our population, has bought of Mr. Chapman a $200 village lot, and a $500 lot back from the village about a mile. He has already built a new barn, and is building a new dwelling house, 18x24 and 14x20. Two stories, on his village lot. Foundation and cellar walls are to be of brick.

Mr. James D. Biggs, the milkman, has sold off all his cows but one, and proposes to replace them with others in the spring. His new house is finished, and "Jimmie" is glad. Messrs. Smith & North did the carpenter work, and it is well done, no better joints on any building in the county. The same men have just put him up an other new barn 26x30. He has also added two more new cisterns to supply his stock with water. He has now four cisterns on his premises, and all is complete for housekeeping; except that he has no one to keep house. "Much his grief or cook his clothes" for him yet. The premises look like a small village of the usuelves.

The Mormons in the Watson neighborhood, two miles from here, on the Charlevoix road, held meetings every Sunday, commencing at half past 11 a. m.

George W. Biggs and wife go off on a visit to their folks in Ohio on the 25th, and James Biggs goes to the same place the day after.

It is reported that on last Sunday, a youth, pistol in hand undertook to shoot a squirrel off the fence in front of Mr. John Willis' house, in the northern part of town. He didn't hit the squirrel, of course, but he did send the bullet through a pane in Mr. Willis' window, knocking the window-pane into fragments about the floor. The thrilling part of the story is, that little Freddie, a bright four year old, was climbing into the window, when the bullet struck it. The house was only about ten rods from the road. It does seem that if boys are authorized by parents and by law to carry fire-arms, they ought at least to be cautioned never to discharge one toward a house within a few rods of them, and to keep the muzzle while carrying, and handling, pointing upward.

Four vessels are now loading lumber at Mr. Addis' dock. Haven't learned their names.

FRANK.

South Arm.

Mrs. Barclay and daughter have gone to the state of New York to spend the winter.

Thanksgiving will be observed by services at the Baptist church, conducted by Rev's F. Blake and H. C. Scudder.

Mrs. H. Olney is very sick with erysipelas in her face, but is slowly recovering.

Mrs. Wilmot Sewell is still seriously ill with inflamatory rheumatism, and her recovery is doubtful.

Scarlet fever is raging in the Nicloy district, and school has closed for two weeks. But one death has occurred (Susie Hill, aged six years). Others are lying very low at last reports.

Lumbering seems to be the main topic of conversation among our farmers. Whether there will be snow enough to get out all the logs now being cut is in the dim, uncertain future. Nearly all are anxious to see the "beautiful."

Miss L. M. Scofield and Mr. F. Ramsey commence their schools next Monday,—one at Bennetts, the other on the peninsula.

F. A. N.

Fire at Boyne.

Last Sunday evening the citizens of Boyne had a little fiery experience, somewhat greater in extent than East Jordan's recent search. The victims were Mills & Carroll, general store and barn; Masonic and Odd Fellows' hall; Lewis' meat market; Dr. Sanderson's office, residence, and barn; A. J. Beardsley, barn; and Frank Littlefield, owner of the store building.

Mills & Carroll lose about $7,000, with $4,100 insurance on stock.

Littlefield's loss on building was $1,200, with $700 insurance.

Lewis' loss on meat market $1,200, with $700 insurance.

Dr. Sanderson, $500 loss with no insurance.

A. J. Beardsley, $300 loss on barn and contents; $200 insurance.

Hall occupied by Masons and Odd Fellows, loss $500; Odd Fellows insured for $200.

The fire originated in the store building from a defective chimney.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Cranmer Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Nov. 27, 1883, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Henry J. Atkinson to Charles R. Wright, n e ¼ sec. 7, 32n, 7w; $200.

Wm. H. Preston to Wm. Franks, n ½ of s w ¼, 23-33-7; $200.

John E. Iswalde to Samuel P. Loyd, n w ¼ of s e ¼, 24-33-7; $200.

Robert K. Crane to Amanda L. Groseperd, lot 30, E. Smith Boyne, $1,000.

Wm. T. Addis to N. J. Dellar, n ½ of lot 2 and lot 3, spring Harbor, $500.

James Hessing to Andrew J. Walker, w ½ of s e ¼, 26-34-7.

Jared A. White to H. F. Ingalls, lot 30, and s e ¼ of s w ¼, 5-33-6; $250.

J. R. Adkinson to H. C. Beaven, n e ¼ of s e ¼, 26-34-7.

W. T. Addis to Lucy E. Bobo, lots 5, 6, 7, and n ½ s. spring Harbor, $200.

H. C. Berrington to Mary H. Berrington, s e ¼ of s w ¼, 23-33-7; $250.

Circuit Court Proceedings.

The People vs. Walter Weller, embezzlement. Verdict, not guilty.

The People vs. Joseph Cumpe, cerliorari. Dismissed.

The People vs. Isaac M. Johns. Nolle pros. entered.

Carl G. Van Platen vs. Geo. Tunnecr; assumpsit. Judgment for plaintiff, $56.68.

Catherine Tincr vs. Wm. T. Addis, assumpsit. Continued on terms.

Frederick Tincr vs. Wm. T. Addis and Alex. Dilworth, trespass. Continued on terms.

David Brown, appellant, vs. Samuel Sweet, appellee; assumpsit. Continued.

C. B. Batchelder, appellee, vs. R. E. Sewalle, appellant; assumpsit. Settled.

Joseph B. Tinner, appellee, vs. Louis Mebolt, appellant; assumpsit. Continued.

Wm. Hemmingway, appellee, vs. Aaron Rice, appellant; assumpsit. Continued.

Edward Jackson, appellee, vs. Alvin Jackson, appellant; assumpsit. Settled.

Geo. W. Clement et al., plaintiffs, vs. H. F. Ingersoll et al., defendants; assumpsit. Judgment for plaintiffs, $732.10 and costs.

Chas. Langdon vs. Geo. Tinner, replevin. Second judgment and costs for plaintiff.

John Cramford vs. Thomas Holdsworth et al., garnishee; assumpsit. Judgment for plaintiff, $45.00 and costs.

Joseph Clark vs. John Dobbs and Joseph M. Clark, motion for retraxit. Costs retaxed.

Thomas J. Thorpe et al. vs. Louise G. Kennedy; motion to open default. Denied.

Sarah J. Fergusson vs. Wm. Fergusson; divorce. Decree granted.

Betsey Bostick vs. A. B. Hasley; divorce.

Minnie E. Bailey vs. W. Bailey; divorce. Decree granted.

L. W. Austin vs. Mary J. McGlashan et al.; bill to remove cloud from title. Defendant allowed to file answer, and 60 days to take proofs.

Eli E. Wheeler, complainant, vs. Charlotte E. Wheeler, defendant; divorce. Decree granted.

Dana vs. Dana; divorce. Decree denied.

Rhoda M. Bird vs. A. S. Bird; divorce. Decree granted.

Wm. B. Taylor vs. John S. Dixon; bill to dissolve partnership, etc. Partnership dissolved and accounting ordered.

H. E. Chapman vs. Jane Morrow; bill for specific performance. Submit on written argument and briefs.

Amanda Adkinson vs. John R. Adkinson; divorce. Decree granted, with permanent alimony.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Fashionable

Milliner and Dressmaker,

Dealer in

Ladies' Furnishing Goods,

Fancy Goods, &c.

HAIR WORK, STAMPING, AND DRESS-MAKING DONE IN THE BEST STYLE.

Mrs. M. DePue, Milliner.

NEW GOODS IN ALL LINES.

Two doors south of postoffice.

Job Printing

AT THE JOURNAL OFFICE

You are the boy so happy
And you the sudden cheer
The truth is I'm a puppy,
And we've got a GARLAND RANGE.

For Sale by L. D. BARTHOLOMEW.

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades,

WAGON TONGUES.

Shingles, Lath, &c.

Lumber Sawed & Bills Filled TO ORDER.

LIVERY

The undersigned has purchased the livery former's consent to him, the undersigned

Geo. Durance, Manager.

There has been added a new stock of

Horses and Carriages

And a cordial invitation is extended to all old friends and patrons to call and see him whenever they need anything in that line.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS.

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery,

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

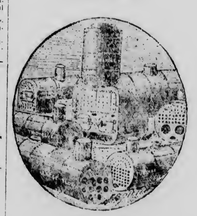
Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. A call will pay you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's new

Opera Block

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.



Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds done to order.

"GIVE ME THE BABY."

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Give me the baby to hold, mother dear,
And to hold and hug, and to love and kiss.
Ah! he is all tenderness, sweet to you
As comes the dew of a flower like this,
As warm to kiss as the lines will show,
Give me the baby to hold, my dear!

Tractfully yield him to my caress—
"Hubby, can you—what?" A father he is?
To fill up my soul with such happiness
As the love of a baby that fondly lies
Rising and falling above my heart can be?
Give me the baby to hold, my dear!

Ah, but I do hold—no—indeed, you see
And would defy my foes and watch my here!
Well, what would pleasure my sweet, I say,
Though he touch and tug at the war inside this?
The worst and thorn and the worry he is—
Give me the baby to hold, my dear!

Give me the baby! oh, won't you so
* * * Soon when, and where the green of the lane
Is mingling leaves, and the sapphire
Is seeing by balanced sublimest—
A little second, with dead boy near * * *
Give me the baby to hold, my dear!

PEER AND PEASANT.

"And you must leave me?" There was ring of pride in the voice of the woman she uttered these words, and she raised her large, mournful, dark eyes appealingly to the face of the handsome young man who stood beside. Gaunt, emaciated and bowed free

"It is more than Victorine, and cannot ever world not leave me like for even in this little cabin, and away from the world like a monk in a cloister?"

You are not well yet," said the said, in a low, hesitating voice

"I am well enough to leave here, where I am only a burden," was the response.

His dark eyes filled with sudden fear.

Victorine ashamed to say that. Have What we have done for you has been done cheerfully."

But now, father in a passion. Victorine. He cannot but feel the support of sustenance was burdensome. And he refuse to accept my help."

Mother—friend!" said Victorine—and she met with payment for the favors he bestowed. And the pleasure of seeing you has been worth much to him. He has often said that but for you he would have been a weary beggar."

What did he do for company before I came?" asked the young man. He has lived ten years in this hut, he said.

Ten very unhappy years. Hugo. The loneliness has wearied him sorely. I never realized the full sense of the word before. Ah, my friend, what a curse is the life of a peer!"

Victorine—too paled visible to

Father," she said hastily, "let Lord come to company's sake, and see the st me. We can be here, more at ease. Victorine, you will remain with us."

What I talked with Hugo he came and left this she noticed. His face was flushed, and his eyes bright. Victorine's words had the power. He loved her more than life—so far good. He could not leave her, and she knew it. Yet he would not see it. Yet he would not speak. I might have seen both his fair father. Oh, what would between Hugo and Victorine rather than face accusation from his earnest gaze.

"Only a single word, Victorine? Can you part with me so coldly after all these weeks we have been together? Ah, I see that you really care little which of us goes or stay. And I—I shall never forget you, Victorine, or the tenderness with which you nursed me back to health again. I remember what a vision of loveliness you seemed to me when I opened my eyes and saw you bending over me. I blessed my good fortune in having been found, after my fall by your father. Surely no other father and daughter could have been so kind. Nowhere else could I have been nursed so tenderly. And after ten weeks of intimate companionship you bid me stand by as you would a stranger at yesterday."

Still she did not move or speak, and the hand he held remained nerveless save to his clasp.

You may never see me again, Victorine," he continued. "Our paths be far apart. Let me hear you say that you do not regret having known me."

Why should I regret it?" she asked, turning suddenly and facing him. "You have been here ten weeks, but in that time you have told no father, nor even to tell your that your name is Hugo Lasvelles. You as we have been kind to you but you have not treated us like ladies. In caring for you I could not leave here and no one knew it. You have learned that I am a peasant and a beggar. Do you think that your absence will trouble me? Do you think that I am to leave here and no one knows it?"

The young man appeared to hesitate, then he said hastily:

You are not well yet," he said, in a low, hesitating voice

"I am well enough to leave here, where I am only a burden," was the response.

His dark eyes filled with sudden fear.

Victorine ashamed to say that. Have What we have done for you has been done cheerfully."

But now, father in a passion. Victorine. He cannot but feel the support of sustenance was burdensome. And he refuse to accept my help."

Mother—friend!" said Victorine—and she met with payment for the favors he bestowed. And the pleasure of seeing you has been worth much to him. He has often said that but for you he would have been a weary beggar."

What did he do for company before I came?" asked the young man. He has lived ten years in this hut, he said.

Ten very unhappy years. Hugo. The loneliness has wearied him sorely. I never realized the full sense of the word before. Ah, my friend, what a curse is the life of a peer!"

Victorine—too paled visible to

Father," she said hastily, "let Lord come to company's sake, and see the st me. We can be here, more at ease. Victorine, you will remain with us."

What I talked with Hugo he came and left this she noticed. His face was flushed, and his eyes bright. Victorine's words had the power. He loved her more than life—so far good. He could not leave her, and she knew it. Yet he would not see it. Yet he would not speak. I might have seen both his fair father. Oh, what would between Hugo and Victorine rather than face accusation from his earnest gaze.

"Only a single word, Victorine? Can you part with me so coldly after all these weeks we have been together? Ah, I see that you really care little which of us goes or stay. And I—I shall never forget you, Victorine, or the tenderness with which you nursed me back to health again. I remember what a vision of loveliness you seemed to me when I opened my eyes and saw you bending over me. I blessed my good fortune in having been found, after my fall by your father. Surely no other father and daughter could have been so kind. Nowhere else could I have been nursed so tenderly. And after ten weeks of intimate companionship you bid me stand by as you would a stranger at yesterday."

Still she did not move or speak, and the hand he held remained nerveless save to his clasp.

You may never see me again, Victorine," he continued. "Our paths be far apart. Let me hear you say that you do not regret having known me."

Why should I regret it?" she asked, turning suddenly and facing him. "You have been here ten weeks, but in that time you have told no father, nor even to tell your that your name is Hugo Lasvelles. You as we have been kind to you but you have not treated us like ladies. In caring for you I could not leave here and no one knew it. You have learned that I am a peasant and a beggar. Do you think that your absence will trouble me? Do you think that I am to leave here and no one knows it?"

The young man appeared to hesitate, then he said hastily:

It is well, perhaps, that you should forget me. Longer me if my acts once her wounded you. I did not attempt any pretension. But it grows late. Farewell, Victorine. When the sun rises tomorrow I shall be far on the road to Paris."

Farewell, she said, coldly.

She heard him turn and walk away. He might—she did—recall him. She stood where he had left her, silent, until he, her head bent forward on her breast. She heard the sound of her cheek resting on her palm sobbed.

It was only when the sound of his footsteps died away that she raised her head and looked about her.

Hugo! Hugo!" she breathed the words as if she could speak them. "Come! Hugo! Hugo!"

She looked so beautiful, so brave, as she stood there, her dark eyes wave a flood of pain, her lips open for the cry. She picked it up and found upon it a few lines from her father.

"I will act as your body guard, my brave girl

Half an hour later the young soldier so much as it saved lay in a comfort able bed in the house of a kind lower ent tenderly guarded and cared for by the darkeyed girl who had dared so much for his sake.

But it was many days before he knew anything of what was passing around him, days in which he lay in the valley between life and death, deaf to the tender words whispered in his ear by the girl who hung over him, and blind to the anguish in the face of his father, whose every waking moment was spent by his bedside.

In the Quarter St. Jacques, on the Rue Sorbonne, the battle had raged for seven long hours, and the dead and dying lay in every direction. The troops had moved on, and a few of the Red Republicans were engaged in removing their wounded to the hospitals, when, making her way slowly through the scene of carnage, came a young girl, alone. Her long, dark hair hung in masses over her shoulders, her dress, that of a peasant, was torn and soiled; her shoes were broken and worn, and she seemed ready to fall with fatigue. But still she went on, her large, lustrous eyes scanning with a look of horror the blood-stained, smoke begrimed faces turned to the leaden sky. She appeared to be searching for some one, and paid no attention to the rude glances cast upon her.

Suddenly she gave a wild, mournful cry, and fell on her knees beside the body of a young man dressed in the uniform of the royalist.

"My dream!" she moaned. "The vision of my dream!"

She tore aside the coat, and pressed her hand to the young officer's heart.

"It beats!" she cried. "Oh, my God! he's alive! Mercy! mercy! some help to beat him to a place of safety."

Help to beat a monarchist?" cried the man in answer. "You ask less much."

Let me put him where he'll need no help," said a rough-looking fellow, pressing forward with a bayonet in his hand. "Vive la République Sociale!"

But before he could strike the blow his murderous heart dictated, the girl had covered the body of the young officer with her own.

"I would!" she cried; "to seek to kill a fallen man!"

There was the sudden sound of a horse's hoofs, and an officer, on a fine beast, glittered the star of the Legion of Honor, drew you before the pair. It was a woman.

What does this mean?" he cried. "Put up your bayonet, man. Would you strike a woman?"

The girl sprang to her feet. "Help me, General!" she cried, passionately. "God will forever bless you, if you save the life of this young officer."

The officer looked at her for a moment, then he said:

Rise, girl! Stand aside! Let my men bear him away. Where is your home?"

Rue Sorbonne, No. 9," she replied. "I will follow you."

She looked so beautiful, so brave, as she stood there, her dark eyes wave a look of such passionate appeal, that the General's heart softened

"I shall be as you desire," he said "I will act as your body guard, my brave girl

Half an hour later the young officer so much as it saved lay in a comfort able bed in the house of a kind lower ent tenderly guarded and cared for by the dark-eyed girl who had dared so much for his sake.

But it was many days before he knew anything of what was passing around him, days in which he lay in the valley between life and death, deaf to the tender words whispered in his ear by the girl who hung over him, and blind to the anguish in the face of his father, whose every waking moment was spent by his bedside.

HUMOR.

(From Texas Siftings.)

As exchange says that Vanderbilt grows gross. His father used to eat cabbages.

A young girl in Missouri, crazed religion, imagines herself an angel. Her case is not quite so bad as that the young Austin dude, who, crazed the girls, imagines himself a devil fellow.

A Texas local reporter describing young lady's costume, worn at evening party, as a "rose-colored dress." The paper appeared the next morning calling it a "nose-colored dress." the young lady's admirers are anxiously inquiring "who's nose?"

"Ya, can you sell me, aw, a locket to match my eyes, you know, aw?" inquired an Austin dude in a gent's furnishing store. "Don't know as I can, exactly," replied the shopkeeper, "but I think I can fit you with a set to match your head." Then the dude withdrew from the store, a crestfallen strawberry line outlining his otherwise features.

"Going to visit Germany this summer, I hear," said Mr. Plimsoll to Old Pettigrew, whose reputation for size was almost sublime. "Aye, thought I would go over in about two weeks," said Pettigrew. "Why would they let me go sooner, you know. Bismarck has declared against the importation of Americ hogs."

(From Puck.)

The contribution box at last comes tiberalism in the churches.

It's suggested that Private Dalyell be put in command of the next Arctic expedition. Well, as he is an old man there is a fair prospect of his getting there. Byall means make old Dalyell. Let no one escape.

The strike that generally results good to all parties concerned is the one in the mothers on the lookout for the boys pants. The boy don't like it any more than wealthy corporations like it does iron used in the coal.

A Kansas journal says: "Lack of unintelligent citizens unnatural result in the free and enlightened Republic of Silver." As the poet says, "Ain't it awful, mamma?" As the poet says, "Ain't it awful, mamma?" As the poet says, "Ain't it awful, mamma?"

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Nov. 29, 1883.

Those "Who Died for Me and You."

With most of us memory goeth not back further than war times, and in the mist of forgetfulness there stands one event permanent in the minds of many —when father went to war. We could not then understand why mother cried as if her heart would break, when father looked so handsome in the then unfamiliar uniform, and we lavishly wanted to go also and fight. Then followed a period of paper plumes and wooden swords, of playing truant to see the soldiers, and of tugging block after block at the heels of recruits marching bravely "down to Washington to fight for Uncle Abe." Laboriously spelling out the inflammatory head-lines above dispatches from the seat of war (which we did not then know were largely written in Washington and padded in the newspaper offices), we puzzled over such names as Beintzelman and Zollicoffer, and wondered why the newspapers didn't mention father. We could hardly understand why mother so timidly and yet so quickly answered the postman's ring, nor why when she got those musty-smelling letters, with pictures upon the envelopes of red-legged soldiers jumping upon snakes, that she kissed us so tenderly and wept as she smiled. And the army boxes—how much cream money and how many holiday allowances went to get some things for "papa to war." How often mother asked us if we didn't wish father would come back—and how many of us remember a day among all days when father did come back, and the whole house was wailing and mourning, or those other terrible days when mother heard the dreadful news that father never would come back! And now, looking back over a score of years, memories of those events so sadly impressed upon our boyish hearts become hallowed, and we young men that go up, down and around town should with all heart do reverence to the day that is set apart for honor to the memories of those "Who died for me and you."

—Boston Globe.

Pilfered Paragraphs.

GREAT BRITAIN cultivates 2,267,059 acres of wheat, 2,980,927 to barley, and 4,306,391 to oats.

NOW is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and lose in the spring you will find Parsons' Condition Powders cure relief. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Wood & Co.

A MAN offered $10,000 for a license to sell liquors at wholesale in Wichita, Kan., for five years, but the authorities refused.

Do You Know?

That the Horse and Cattle Powders prepared by E. M. Bruce's unsurpassed for purity and of best materials. Ginger, Fenugreek, Blood Root, Liquorice, Sal Prunella, Gentian, Sulphur, Mineral Coal, Saltpetre, Antimony, Sulphur, Mineral Coal, Saltpetre, Antimony, Sulphur, Mineral Coal, Saltpetre, Antimony

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

A CHINAMAN was arrested in Reno, Nev., for stealing a bucket of paste from a bill poster. When found the Celestial epicure was smacking his lips over a batch of pancakes made of the paste.

FROM recent disclosures the fact appears that of all the unconscionable sharpers and swindlers in this country the professional pension-agents and claim-agents at Washington, with stool-pigeons in other parts of the country, are the meanest and most thievish. The official authorities having at last become fully cognizant of the operations of these rascals, and how they have been robbing veterans of the late war and others by false pretenses, vigorous measures are being adopted for their suppression.

A RECENT cable dispatch announces that Mr. Lewis Cohen, of London, has been exempted from duty on a Corner's jury because he is a lineal descendant of the High Priest Aaron. The Herald says that this will work a revolution in London legal proceedings; for, according to the orthodox Hebrew law, as interpreted by the old authorities, all Cohens—the word "cohen" meaning priest—are the descendants of the Levites, of whom Aaron was one, who have the right, in certain matters of ceremonial, before all others.

IN 1872 there were less than 600 clergy and 500 parishes in the eighteen Episcopal dioceses of the United States. The communicants numbered not more than 50,000. The report for this year shows forty-eight dioceses, 2,067 parishes, 3,572 clergymen and 372,181 communicants. In the interval the population of the United States has increased 400 per cent. The number of communicants of the Episcopal church, it will be observed, has increased over 1,200 per cent. The question then arises, Are we becoming E. pscopalians?

MR. MIFFLIN E. BELL, of Des Moines, Iowa, the new Supervising Architect of the Treasury, is a native of Chester county, Pa., and is 36 years old. He studied architecture in Pennsylvania, and coming West took a position with A. H. Pigneard, of Chicago, soon rising to a foremanship. He had charge of the construction of the Illinois State house, at Springfield, the plans of that edifice and of the Iowa Capitol having been the work of Pigneard. Upon the death of Pigneard, in 1876, Mr. Bell succeeded to his business. Mr. Bell was the architect of the Southern Illinois penitentiary at Chester, and supervised its construction.

LOUISVILLE Courier-Journal: Said the Prince, on being introduced to Mary Anderson: "I understand your exposition at Louisville is a big thing." "You just ought to see it," said Mary. "I'm just burning to see how these chickens are hatched without any mamma," said the Prince. "Yes, but you'd be scared when you saw the man hold up the little alligator by the tail," said Mary. "You forget how I hunted the tiger in India," said the Prince. "But an alligator is a good deal awfuller than a tiger," said Mary. Here Dr. Griffin, seeing that a dispute might arise, involving the peace of two friendly nations, adroitly put in and directed the talk into another channel.

THE pleasing notion that there is no such thing as slavery in England, remarks the London Truth, is rather rudely shaken by an extraordinary story which was told the other day in the Croydon Police court. A lodging-house keeper applied for a summons against one of the lodgers for systematically ill-treating a little negro boy, whose screams she had often heard through the door. The boy had been purchased in Africa as a servant, and, when the lady remonstrated with her lodger for his cruelty, he replied: "Oh, he is only a colored child; and, besides, he belongs to my brother." The Sandwich's interference seems to have been visited on the little boy, who had his wrists tied together, and was hung up to a hook on the wall in the room.

IN connection with the death of Gen. Steedman, who instituted the order of the Sons of Malta in Lafayette, Ind., the Courier, of that city, gives an incident which it claims terminated the career of that order in the country. George Harding, an employe of the wholesale grocery establishment of Reynolds, Earl & Hatcher, a brave and brawny Scotchman, desired to become a member of the order, and the order was only too glad to "take him in." A night was set apart for his initiation, and, as he was a particularly powerful man, the gathering of the clans was unusually large. The initiation proceeded amid uproarious fun up to the elevated railway and a plunge into the seething waters of the lake. A wet blanket was in the hands of a dozen strong men, in which the aspirant was tossed about until they became exhausted. Harding was an intensely earnest man, and took the initiation to be a serious affair. Being told by the Grand Conductor that from the elevated railway he should be plunged into the lake, he had contracted his muscles and nerved himself for the battle with the waves. When he struck the blanket the shock was too great for his nerves. He was taken to his home a paralytic. He lived a year, suffering intensely, and died in great agony. The order paid out over $2,000 in his behalf. All that medical skill could do was done, but to no purpose. He was a nobleman, and bore his sufferings like a hero or a martyr. He never once complained or spoke harshly of those who caused it all. His sufferings and death were the death-knell to the Sons of Malta, not only in Lafayette, but throughout America.

"ONLY eighteen years ago that the rebellion closed," said an old army officer to a Washington correspondent recently, "but the Generals of the war are fast going out of sight." Then he went on to say: "Meade, Thomas, Hooker, Garfield, Edpatrick, Burnside and Halleck are dead. The next few years will see that list lengthened. Gen. Grant is well on toward 70. He comes to Washington often, and walks quietly about the streets, with his cigar in his mouth, better dressed than when he was President, and looks as if life agreed with him. Sherman is 61, and looks older, but the family is hardy, and he is likely to see 1900. The youngest of all the great leaders is Sheridan, now in command of the army, and he is but 51. Sheridan was a Major General at 30. Fitz John Porter appears here every winter, white-haired and broken in frame—a little old gentleman, who looks back on twenty years of disgrace. His old commander, McClellan, now a retired man, with bending shoulders, has not changed much of late. He is rich, and entertains well in his New York city home, but the activity of his life is over. He likes to tell of his campaigns. Pleasanton, the hero of a hundred cavalry fights, lives quietly here, and can be found any day reading the papers in one of the offices on newspaper row. His hair and mustache are white, and his voice as gentle as a woman's. You can spy the same of Rosecrans, the idol of the Army of the Cumberland. He and his wife live, almost unnoticed, on Capitol hill during the time he spends here performing his duties as a California representative. Custer's reputation is like a youth's, and his hair, with a cultivated curl, white as snow. McDowell is on the retired list; Don Carlos Buell runs an iron furnace in Kentucky; Banks is a United States Marshal; Hancock, Schofield and Pope are still Major Generals, but the last of these is now over three years. In ten years there will not be a General officer of the war in active life."

A Rat Can See with Its Wings.

There is a singular property with which the bat is endowed too remarkable and curious to be passed altogether unnoticed. The wings of these creatures consist of a delicate and nearly naked membrane of great size considering the size of the body; but, besides this, the nose is, in some varieties, furnished with a membraneous foliation, and in others the external membraneous ears are greatly developed. These membraneous tissues have their sensibility so high that something like a new sense is thereby developed, as if in aid of the sense of sight. The modified impressions which the air in quiescence or in motion, however slight, communicates to the treadmills jar of its every contact, temperature, the indescribable conditions of such portions of air as are in contact with different bodies are all apparently appreciated by the bat. If the eyes of a bat be covered up, or if he be entirely deprived of sight, it will pursue its course about a room with thousand obstacles in its way, avoiding them all, neither striking against a wall nor touching the smallest thing, but threading its way with the utmost precision and quickness, and passing adroitly through apertures or interspaces or threads placed purposely across the apartment. This endowment, while almost exceeds belief, has been abundantly demonstrated. — Forest and Stream.

THE cotton plant takes its name from the Arabic Kattan, by which it was known to the Arabic centuries ago.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

The Sweetest Thing in Print.

"The song you quote is fine," said Hobe,
"To his poet friend, Ted Gray,
As 'neath the spreading trees they walked,
After noon summer day.
"But, oh, this scene!—the sun's first rays
Had just begun to glint—
I saw the very sweetest thing
I ever saw in print."

"Was it in verse or prose?" asked Ted;
"I pray you've brought it with you?"
I wish I could have, but that same
I had no right to do.
Taxe [illegible] nearly that
"I would do it in a cart of Hint,"
Hobe sighed. "By far the sweetest thing
I ever saw in print."

"Pray give me some idea of it?"
He (him) begged. "Well, I'll try.
Its hair was gold and its eyes
As blue as yonder sky.
It wore a gown of calico,
And never was a sweeter thing,
I'll wager, even in print."
—Hooper's Issue.

How to Be Beautiful.

Whatever the internal application of hot water may effect, girls desirous of having a good complexion would do well to apply it to their faces. They should either dip their faces into a basin of very hot water or apply the water with a sponge. At first they are like lobsters, but in a few moments this is replaced by a tint of lilies and peaches.

Puritans and Women.

The Puritans of New England had their own way of ventilating how much they thought of the female sex. If a man and a woman were convicted of a capital crime, they hanged the man and burnt the woman. Mr. Bonner's Ledger recalls the last instance of this fine discrimination. It occurred in 1755, at Cambridge, when two servants were executed for poisoning their master. They were drawn on a sled to the place of execution, and Mark, a fellow of about 20, was hanged, and Phyllis, an old creature, was burnt to death.—Philadelphia Press.

Women in Journalism.

The nature of the work to be done is not prolonged by the fact that it's a woman that undertakes it. It may be done better, more delicately, more shrewdly, more honestly, but it is the same work, and requires the same qualities, whether the worker be man or a woman. There are, indeed, some special branches of labor upon a newspaper such as relates to the dress of women, to needle and other work of the kind, with which women are naturally more familiar than men, and women will therefore treat them more satisfactorily and intelligently. But "a woman's Sheridan, now in command of the army, and he is but 51. Sheridan was a Major General at 30. Fitz John Porter appears here every winter, white-haired and broken in frame—a little old gentleman, who looks back on twenty years of disgrace. His old commander, McClellan, now a retired man, with bending shoulders, has not changed much of late. He is rich, and entertains well in his New York city home, but the activity of his life is over. He likes to tell of his campaigns. Pleasanton, the hero of a hundred cavalry fights, lives quietly here, and can be found any day reading the papers in one of the offices on newspaper row. His hair and mustache are white, and his voice as gentle as a woman's. You can spy the same of Rosecrans, the idol of the Army of the Cumberland. He and his wife live, almost unnoticed, on Capitol hill during the time he spends here performing his duties as a California representative. Custer's reputation is like a youth's, and his hair, with a cultivated curl, white as snow. McDowell is on the retired list; Don Carlos Buell runs an iron furnace in Kentucky; Banks is a United States Marshal; Hancock, Schofield and Pope are still Major Generals, but the last of these is now over three years. In ten years there will not be a General officer of the war in active life."

A Rat Can See with Its Wings.

There is a singular property with which the bat is endowed too remarkable and curious to be passed altogether unnoticed. The wings of these creatures consist of a delicate and nearly naked membrane of great size considering the size of the body; but, besides this, the nose is, in some varieties, furnished with a membraneous foliation, and in others the external membraneous ears are greatly developed. These membraneous tissues have their sensibility so high that something like a new sense is thereby developed, as if in aid of the sense of sight. The modified impressions which the air in quiescence or in motion, however slight, communicates to the treadmills jar of its every contact, temperature, the indescribable conditions of such portions of air as are in contact with different bodies are all apparently appreciated by the bat. If the eyes of a bat be covered up, or if he be entirely deprived of sight, it will pursue its course about a room with thousand obstacles in its way, avoiding them all, neither striking against a wall nor touching the smallest thing, but threading its way with the utmost precision and quickness, and passing adroitly through apertures or interspaces or threads placed purposely across the apartment. This endowment, while almost exceeds belief, has been abundantly demonstrated. — Forest and Stream.

THE cotton plant takes its name from the Arabic Kattan, by which it was known to the Arabic centuries ago.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

The Sweetest Thing in Print.

"The song you quote is fine," said Hobe,
"To his poet friend, Ted Gray,
As 'neath the spreading trees they walked,
After noon summer day.
"But, oh, this scene!—the sun's first rays
Had just begun to glint—
I saw the very sweetest thing
I ever saw in print."

"Was it in verse or prose?" asked Ted;
"I pray you've brought it with you?"
I wish I could have, but that same
I had no right to do.
Taxe [illegible] nearly that
"I would do it in a cart of Hint,"
Hobe sighed. "By far the sweetest thing
I ever saw in print."

"Pray give me some idea of it?"
He (him) begged. "Well, I'll try.
Its hair was gold and its eyes
As blue as yonder sky.
It wore a gown of calico,
And never was a sweeter thing,
I'll wager, even in print."
—Hooper's Issue.

How to Be Beautiful.

Whatever the internal application of hot water may effect, girls desirous of having a good complexion would do well to apply it to their faces. They should either dip their faces into a basin of very hot water or apply the water with a sponge. At first they are like lobsters, but in a few moments this is replaced by a tint of lilies and peaches.

Puritans and Women.

The Puritans of New England had their own way of ventilating how much they thought of the female sex. If a man and a woman were convicted of a capital crime, they hanged the man and burnt the woman. Mr. Bonner's Ledger recalls the last instance of this fine discrimination. It occurred in 1755, at Cambridge, when two servants were executed for poisoning their master. They were drawn on a sled to the place of execution, and Mark, a fellow of about 20, was hanged, and Phyllis, an old creature, was burnt to death.—Philadelphia Press.

Women in Journalism.

The nature of the work to be done is not prolonged by the fact that it's a woman that undertakes it. It may be done better, more delicately, more shrewdly, more honestly, but it is the same work, and requires the same qualities, whether the worker be man or a woman. There are, indeed, some special branches of labor upon a newspaper such as relates to the dress of women, to needle and other work of the kind, with which women are naturally more familiar than men, and women will therefore treat them more satisfactorily and intelligently. But "a woman's Sheridan, now in command of the army, and he is but 51. Sheridan was a Major General at 30. Fitz John Porter appears here every winter, white-haired and broken in frame—a little old gentleman, who looks back on twenty years of disgrace. His old commander, McClellan, now a retired man, with bending shoulders, has not changed much of late. He is rich, and entertains well in his New York city home, but the activity of his life is over. He likes to tell of his campaigns. Pleasanton, the hero of a hundred cavalry fights, lives quietly here, and can be found any day reading the papers in one of the offices on newspaper row. His hair and mustache are white, and his voice as gentle as a woman's. You can spy the same of Rosecrans, the idol of the Army of the Cumberland. He and his wife live, almost unnoticed, on Capitol hill during the time he spends here performing his duties as a California representative. Custer's reputation is like a youth's, and his hair, with a cultivated curl, white as snow. McDowell is on the retired list; Don Carlos Buell runs an iron furnace in Kentucky; Banks is a United States Marshal; Hancock, Schofield and Pope are still Major Generals, but the last of these is now over three years. In ten years there will not be a General officer of the war in active life."

A Rat Can See with Its Wings.

There is a singular property with which the bat is endowed too remarkable and curious to be passed altogether unnoticed. The wings of these creatures consist of a delicate and nearly naked membrane of great size considering the size of the body; but, besides this, the nose is, in some varieties, furnished with a membraneous foliation, and in others the external membraneous ears are greatly developed. These membraneous tissues have their sensibility so high that something like a new sense is thereby developed, as if in aid of the sense of sight. The modified impressions which the air in quiescence or in motion, however slight, communicates to the treadmills jar of its every contact, temperature, the indescribable conditions of such portions of air as are in contact with different bodies are all apparently appreciated by the bat. If the eyes of a bat be covered up, or if he be entirely deprived of sight, it will pursue its course about a room with thousand obstacles in its way, avoiding them all, neither striking against a wall nor touching the smallest thing, but threading its way with the utmost precision and quickness, and passing adroitly through apertures or interspaces or threads placed purposely across the apartment. This endowment, while almost exceeds belief, has been abundantly demonstrated. — Forest and Stream.

THE cotton plant takes its name from the Arabic Kattan, by which it was known to the Arabic centuries ago.

originality and enterprise. The complaint is that they have no novelties to offer. They fall back on old models and old designs, particularly in the matter of porcelains, and suffer England to go ahead of them in that exquisite branch of artistic industry. Except in the matter of pictures France is being rapidly distanced in the competition of the nations. In that branch as yet she stands unrivaled. The great French artists are still the greatest painters in the world.—Lucy Hooper's Paris letter.

Burmese Women.

The Burmese women are noted for their well-proportioned, though small, figures. To one accustomed to seeing the regular features so prevalent among the many pretty Indian girls, the Mongol-like features of their Burmese sisters look ugly and repellent, but after a while this impression wears off; the women of the country have many pretty little ways, and they are very cleanly. Their hands and feet are small and well-shaped, arms symmetrical, the head well put on to the neck; their carriage is erect; their hair is most luxuriant, and is taken the greatest care of, tied up in a chignon, with a wreath or garland of flowers entwined; they disfigure their ears, which are naturally small and pretty, by hauling huge holes in the lobes, and wear in them either gold or amber cylindrical-shaped ear-rings; they cover themselves over with necklets, bracelets, rings, etc., and the Burmese gold and silversmiths are nearly as good as those in Cuttack; Trichinopoly or Delhi.

A Burmese girl who wishes to kiss presses her nose up against a face and smells! She is a born coquette, and spends hours in adorning her person. Their dress consists of a tight underjacket to support the bust, and a loose and flowing jacket over for show; a gaudy scarf hangs down over the shoulders; from the waist they wear either a many-colored Indian, which encloses the inside of one leg half-way up the thigh, or a "loongie," a sort of petticoat, fastened round the waist and encloses the rest of the person. All the women smoke and chew betel nut, but never spit, which, even teeth; they can swim, as a rule, and delight in dabbling in water, and invariably bathe once, perhaps oftener, during the day.

The Burmese women have more than one wife, and she reigns supreme in the house and conducts the purchase and sale of all necessaries. A girl's great ambition is to keep a stall in a bazaar; it is her introduction into society, and the equivalent to our girls being brought out. The women can not, as a rule, either read or write, for their priests are not allowed to teach them. As for have been educated by well-meaning missionaries, but whether from coming in contact with native children, or some other reason, these girls too often are not so well conducted as their more ignorant sisters. Every Burmese girl is a born actress, and delights in taking part in a piece, or national drama. There is no stigma attached to women who take part in these performances, as there is to dancing girls in India, and they are invariably well conducted, modest girls. They are somewhat addicted to supplementing such as throwing pots of water over anyone and everyone they meet on their New Year's day, which corresponds, I think, with our 1st of April; what this is typical of I know not, but the custom is universal. Like the men, the women are inveterate gamblers; at a hunt or a pony race the men and women bet together freely, and often a girl, after losing all she possesses, will stake herself against what she considers her value, and if she loses she follows the winner and becomes his slave, or chattel, for the two are nearly synonymous in Burmah.

Any slight provocation a woman will commit suicide, generally by means of opium, which can be purchased without restriction in every bazaar.

American Richest Church.

The annual reports of Trinity affairs contain no explicit information as to its income, further than that about $80,000 is raised by pew rentals and collections. The vestry will not permit the publication of the facts as to the real estate. I asked the rector, Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, if he would personally give them to me.

"If we were to set up that graveyard into building lots," he answered, pointing out of the window at the crumbling old stones of the yard that surround Trinity, "and do the same to St. Paul's burial ground, we might get whether an income somewhere near what people suppose it to be. The prevalent idea is that we subject to taxation. We shall not undertake to correct them."

"But about what is the income?" I insisted. "And what is done with it?"

"Half a million dollars."

We could not maintain seven churches, paying the salaries of eighteen clergymen, seven organists, twelve sextons, and over 100 singers, six free parish schools, with eighteen teachers; two medical dispensaries; a system of charities in each of our parishes and we contribute, besides, to a large number of deserving institutions."

I have no doubt that the revenue of Trinity is expended in religion and charity to a princely and generous degree, and that the amount absorbed in sinecures is much smaller than the bosses, by their superintendents, had carpets to state it.—New York letter.

According to the Bowling Green Gazette, the man who stole a girl from an upper story window with the aid of a ladder belonged to a book and ladder company.

THE GREAT ARMY OF WORK

Different Occupations of Americans, and Number Engaged in Each.

The following list shows the usual occupations in which the American people are engaged. It is compiled from the last census report, and can be accepted as correct:

In Agriculture
Farmers and planters
Agricultural laborers
Dairymen and dairy women
Gardeners, nurserymen and vine-growers
Stock-drovers
Stock-herders
Stock-raisers
Turpentine farmers
All others
Total in agricultural pursuits
In Manufacturing and Mining Blacksmiths
Boat and shipbuilders
Butchers
Cabinetmakers
Carpenters and joiners
Carriage and wagon makers
Cigar-makers
Clothing small operatives
Engineers and firemen
Fishermen and oystermen
Glass-work operatives
Harness and saddle makers
Iron and steel operatives
Leather curriers, tanners, etc
Lumbermen and raft-men
Machinists
Manufacturers
Marble and stone workers
Millers, brick and stone
Mill operatives, not specified Miners
Painters, decorators and frescoers
Paper-mill operatives
Plasterers
Plumbers and gasfitters
Printers, lithographers and stereotypers
Saw and planing-mill operatives
Ship carpenters, caulkers, riggers and sailmakers
Silk mill operatives
Tailors and tailoresses
Tinners and tinware workers
Tobacco factory operatives
Upholsterers
Wooden mill operatives
All others in mines and factories
Total
In Trade and Transportation
Clerks in stores
Draymen, hackmen and teamsters
Employes on railroads, not clerks
Employes on canals and levees
Employes on steamboats
Salesmen and saleswomen
Sailors and other employes of the sea, lakes and rivers
Telegraph operators
Toll-gatherers and bridge-tenders
Traders in clothing
Traders in cotton and wool
Traders in drugs and medicines
Traders in groceries, liquors and tobacco
Traders in groceries
Traders in hardware and cutlery
Traders in lumber and wood
Traders in provisions
Traders in timber
Traders in unenumerated articles
Traders in wool, cotton and woollens
Traders, not specified
Undertakers
All others
Total in trade and transportation
In Professional and Personal Service
Barbers and hairdressers
Clergymen
Dentists
Domestic servants
Employes in hotels and restaurants
Engineers, civil Hotel-keepers
Journalists
Lawyers
Officials of Federal and State governments
Officials of Federal and State governments
Physicians
Soldiers, U. S. army and navy
Teachers and scientific persons
Other professions
Total in professions and trades

The total number of persons in the United States engaged in remunerative occupations in 1880 was 17,392,993, out of a total population of 50,155,783, being 34.68 per cent. of the population of all ages, and 47.33 per cent. of the population over 16 years of age. Of these 14,744,942 were males and 2,647,357 were females. Of males 825,187 were between 10 and 15 years of age, and of the females, 203,169.

A Conscientious Conductor.

"How did I become Superintendent?" answered the railroad official. "Well, it was this way: I was conductor on a Southern passenger express one day, as we were coming down the junction, we struck a supposed accident on into a freight train that was standing on the siding. As we were running about thirty-five miles an hour, of course, it piled things up considerably bad imitation of a foreign custom, which, unlike ours, is lodged about by checks and guards which render it particularly safe."

Game in the Far West.

Wild game is every year becoming scarcer along the lines of the railroads in the far West. Even along the Northern Pacific road, recently opened through a comparatively new region of country, we looked in vain while penetrating the forests for signs of buffalo, deer, bear or other wild beasts. The only wild animal we saw in the long stretch from St. Paul to Puget sound was an occasional antelope or wolf, and we saw only a very few of these. "You must leave the railroad and go back into the country ten or twenty miles, if you want to see any big game," said an old hunter we met at Missoula, in Montana Territory, and he added: "The railroad has scared them off, but even in the distant forests and plains game of all kinds is being slaughtered so murderously by fur-hunters and hide-hunters, it is now hardly worth a man's while to go after it—it's such hard work to get anything." As regards the buffaloes, which were so plenty a few years ago, all accounts agree that they have been virtually exterminated—a fact which exasperates the Indian tribes against the pale-faced sportsmen, who shoot the animals either for the mere fun of the thing or for their hides and a market. The buffalo was the Indian's main dependence for food, and its extinction is to him a serious deprivation.—Gen. Stanton, in Chicago Journal.

CALIFORNIA farmers complain of an overproduction of fruit in that State.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

THE evidence of the productiveness of Dakota soil is found in the person of a Hamlin county man, who has fingers on each hand, the three middle digits growing out of each joint, and each being perfect and in control of the muscles.

THE long catalogue of ills that flesh is heir to, an English doctor has added a new disease which he calls "beer fever," and which he says is decided by the severe strain which boys and girls undergo in competitive examinations. The Social congress, before which the statement was made, has decided to memorialize the Government to stop drinks against its extension.

The September report of the English Commissioners of Inland Revenue shows that in England during the year ending March, the revenue from excise on spirits decreased 682,286, and on beer, 1,730,551. The quantity of wine consumed as a beverage declined in England by 291,270 gallons, in Scotland by 16,255 gallons; but in Ireland there was an increase of 12 gallons; thus the net decrease in the United Kingdom was 95,787 gallons. The Commissioners remark: "We cannot be any doubt that in addition to the spread of temperance principles has already caused a considerable diminution in the consumption of intoxicating liquors, and the tendency is increasing. On the other hand, it is remarkable to find in Ireland, in spite of a decrease of population, an increased consumption of 245,000 gallons."

THE aggregates of the votes upon the several constitutional amendments voted on in the late election in Ohio are:

Amendment—Yes	338,111
Amendment—No	367,306
Amendment—Yes	337,555
Amendment—No	367,862
Repealing Bonus—Yes	334,188
Repealing Bonus—No	367,005
Local Option—Yes	344,167
Local Option—No	367,862
Amendment to tax-sales—Yes	341,167
Amendment to tax-sales—No	367,862
Amendment to tax-sales—Yes	337,555
Amendment to tax-sales—No	367,862

Princess Beatrice, says the Chicago News, is still on the warpath. Her husband, but it begins to look as if she were going to be with that bravery. She is a tremendous woman and chew betel nut, but never spit, which, even teeth; they can swim, as a rule, and delight in dabbling in water, and invariably bathe once, perhaps oftener, during the day.

The Burmese women have more than one wife, and she reigns supreme in the house and conducts the purchase and sale of all necessaries. A girl's great ambition is to keep a stall in a bazaar; it is her introduction into society, and the equivalent to our girls being brought out. The women can not, as a rule, either read or write, for their priests are not allowed to teach them. As for have been educated by well-meaning missionaries, but whether from coming in contact with native children, or some other reason, these girls too often are not so well conducted as their more ignorant sisters. Every Burmese girl is a born actress, and delights in taking part in a piece, or national drama. There is no stigma attached to women who take part in these performances, as there is to dancing girls in India, and they are invariably well conducted, modest girls. They are somewhat addicted to supplementing such as throwing pots of water over anyone and everyone they meet on their New Year's day, which corresponds, I think, with our 1st of April; what this is typical of I know not, but the custom is universal. Like the men, the women are inveterate gamblers; at a hunt or a pony race the men and women bet together freely, and often a girl, after losing all she possesses, will stake herself against what she considers her value, and if she loses she follows the winner and becomes his slave, or chattel, for the two are nearly synonymous in Burmah.

Any slight provocation a woman will commit suicide, generally by means of opium, which can be purchased without restriction in every bazaar.

American Richest Church.

The annual reports of Trinity affairs contain no explicit information as to its income, further than that about $80,000 is raised by pew rentals and collections. The vestry will not permit the publication of the facts as to the real estate. I asked the rector, Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, if he would personally give them to me.

"If we were to set up that graveyard into building lots," he answered, pointing out of the window at the crumbling old stones of the yard that surround Trinity, "and do the same to St. Paul's burial ground, we might get whether an income somewhere near what people suppose it to be. The prevalent idea is that we subject to taxation. We shall not undertake to correct them."

"But about what is the income?" I insisted. "And what is done with it?"

"Half a million dollars."

We could not maintain seven churches, paying the salaries of eighteen clergymen, seven organists, twelve sextons, and over 100 singers, six free parish schools, with eighteen teachers; two medical dispensaries; a system of charities in each of our parishes and we contribute, besides, to a large number of deserving institutions."

I have no doubt that the revenue of Trinity is expended in religion and charity to a princely and generous degree, and that the amount absorbed in sinecures is much smaller than the bosses, by their superintendents, had carpets to state it.—New York letter.

According to the Bowling Green Gazette, the man who stole a girl from an upper story window with the aid of a ladder belonged to a book and ladder company.

THE sufferings of Miss Helen Close, a Chicago school teacher, will appeal to a sympathizing world. A woman's glory is her hair, and Miss Close has no hair. Her head, at the present writing, bears a striking resemblance to a cocoanut; not, mind you, through any fault of her own, or through any neglect of nature, but through the carelessness of a scalp-healer of her own sex, who, seeing the hair, envied it perhaps, and finally compassed its ruin. Miss Close went to this scalp-healer to be shampooed. Her hair was long and luxuriant, and enveloped her like a veil when "let down" and floating over her shoulders. In the shampooing process this wonderful hair became snarled, and in the effort to disentangle it the scalp-healer slyly clipped it here and there, until finally, when the astonished maiden looked up, she found large quantities of the priceless tresses adorning the scalp-healer's table. She tried the scalp-healer's art again, but the final result was that she had to go to a barber and be clipped like a carriage horse, loosing her chief adornment and throwing her into a state of mind which of course, mutilated her for efficient duty in the school-room. The girls titter, and the boys snicker, and when you meet Miss Close's finny head, and her mortification exceeded all bounds. She finally concluded there was but one balm for her shattered feelings and wounded head, and that was a plaster of greenbacks. So she has brought suit against the scalp-healer for $5,000 damages.

THE Chicago Daily News, commenting on the failure of a great commercial house, which had for years, up to the very hour of its collapse, been regarded by the business community as one of the solidest financially in that city, remarks: "The failure is only another instance of the lamentable effects of the present speculative trading which has, since 1873, virtually debauched the former older, more conservative and safer methods of business. The great trouble with the trade during the past few months has been that those to whose hands the credit of the country is entrusted have been far too liberal to a great an extent make to intelligently use it in the direction of legitimate operations. To say nothing of the modern custom of dating notes ahead—which has brought ruin upon so many—the introduction of the rate-breaking system has been accompanied by the most dangerous symptoms of monetary expansion that, perhaps, has ever been experienced in the United States. Notes of every description, from kite-flying paper of the most pronounced character, with no property behind it, to the victims of a vicious system of a subsidiary currency, through no fault of their own. They are simply made

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Forty-Eighth Congress.

The forty-eighth congress met on Monday. The chief interest centered in the organization of the house of representatives, which was completed with the usual ceremonies. The clerk reported 306 members present. Mr. Geddes nominated Mr. Carlisle for speaker, and Mr. Cannon nominated Mr. Keifer. Mr. Carlisle received 121 votes and Mr. Keifer 112. Mr. Carlisle got the votes of 72 southern and southwestern members, 33 northwestern members, and one eastern member. These represent, with the exception of the latter, the great agricultural constituences who are taxed by the tariff to pay indirect subsidies to the monopolists of Pennsylvania and New England, who desire that an effort shall be made to remedy that infamous system of oppression, and who elected their members for that express purpose. Only five republicans voted against Keifer. The clerk declared Mr. Carlisle elected, and the new speaker was sworn in by Mr. Kelley, the oldest member. Upon taking the chair Mr. Carlisle said:

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES: I thank you sincerely for the high honor conferred upon me by the vote just taken. To be elected from the membership of a body like this to preside over its deliberations is a distinction upon which any citizen may properly congratulate himself, and I assure you your kindness is fully appreciated. At the same time I realize the fact that the position which you have assigned me is one of very great labor and responsibility, and, while profoundly grateful for this manifestation of your confidence, I shall enter into the discharge of its duties with a sense of distrust of my capacity to meet in an acceptable manner the requirements of the office. I promise, however, to devote to your service all the zeal and ability with which I am possessed.

Gentlemen, the maintenance of order on the floor is absolutely essential to an intelligent and systematic transaction of the public business, and I earnestly invoke your assistance in the enforcement of the rules adopted to govern our proceedings. The large addition to the membership of the house, resulting from the late apportionment, makes this duty even more difficult than before, and without your cordial co-operation and support I cannot reasonably hope even to discharge the ordinary daily duties of this office. That you will cheerfully co-operate with me in every proper effort to preserve order and facilitate the business of legislation I have no doubt. But, gentlemen, I shall ask something more than mere co-operation in the discharge of my duty. Assuring you of my earnest desire to be at all times just and impartial, still I cannot expect to avoid mistakes, and shall be compelled, therefore, frequently to rely on your friendly forbearance, gentlemen, on both sides of the house.

I am sure, gentlemen, that all matters of legislation presented to this congress will receive from you such careful consideration as the magnitude of their character and the interests involved require, and that your action upon them will be wise, conservative, and patriotic. Sudden and radical changes in the laws and regulations affecting the commercial and industrial interests of the people ought never to be made unless imperatively demanded by some public emergency, and, in my opinion, under the existing circumstances, such changes would not be favorably received by any considerable number of those who have given serious attention to that subject. [Applause.] Many reforms undoubtedly are necessary, and it will be your duty, after a careful examination of the whole subject in all its bearings, to decide how far they should extend, and when and in what manner they should be made. [Applause.] If there be any who fear your action on this or any other subject will actually be injurious to my interest, or even afford reasonable cause for alarm, I am quite sure they will be agreeably disappointed.

Without further business the house adjourned.

The senate was called to order by president pro tem Edmunds, and after administering the oath to the new senators, Messrs. Beck, Bowen, Cullum, Dolph, Ferry, Pike, and Palmer, the senate adjourned.

The president's message was not read until Tuesday, the full text of which we hope to give in a future issue.

The Jackson Patriot, which has for the last year or more done excellent missionary work in the cause of economic freedom, has the following showing how, in the glass industry at least, protection does not protect the glass-workman: "The manufacturers of glass at Pittsburg, Penn., having locked the workmen out of their factories, are importing glass from England to fill orders from their customers. They are doing this, and paying about 50 per cent duty on the imported glass, rather than pay the wages to their workmen which they claimed, only a few months ago, the tariff would enable them to pay. While this is going on some 3,000 workmen in Pittsburg alone are lying idle, and the consumers of glass are paying 50 per cent. more than they would have to pay if there was no tariff. The workmen are out of employment and wages, the consumers are paying an exorbitant price for glass, and the manufacturers are making money by importing and selling foreign goods. What a blessed fraud protection is! How charmingly it protects American industry! Idle workmen, manufacturers selling foreign glass at a profit, and the users of window glass compelled to pay 50 per cent. more than it is worth —that is the way swindling tariff works."

A Prophecy Which Failed.

During the campaign of 1880 workingmen were assured that the then prosperous condition of the country was due to our protective tariff. The workingmen were told that a high tariff insured high wages and constant employment, and thousands of them believed it.

They seemed to forget that the severest and most protracted commercial depression in our history occurred between the years of 1873-1879, although we had an extremely high tariff during all those terrible years, when the country was filled with tramps and paupers.

After a short season of activity, business is again depressed, mills, mines and factories are closing everywhere and throwing thousands of men out of employment, and many of those who are fortunate enough to retain their places have to submit to a reduction of their wages.

With the aid of the workingmen's votes the protectionists elected the president and a majority of the house in 1880, and they still have a majority in the senate. The protectionists still have the control of the legislation of the country, and, instead of the constant employment and high wages that the workingmen were to have as a reward for retaining the protectionists in power, thousands of them have neither work nor wages, and the number of the unemployed is becoming larger every day.

Falsehood can never endure the test of time, and it has taken a very short time to disprove the protectionist falsehood that a protective tariff insures high wages and constant employment to workingmen. Evening News.

Speaker Carlisle.

The canons of democratic members of the house of representatives on Saturday fulfilled the expectations of the country in the selection of John G. Carlisle as its candidate for speaker. The great strength of Mr. Carlisle and of the principles of which he is such an able and conspicuous advocate were shown by the handsome vote by which he was chosen against such a strong candidate as Mr. Randall and as popular a representative as Mr. Cox.

Mr. Carlisle's nomination, which was subsequently made unanimous, is equivalent to an election, and on Monday he will be duly chosen to the important and responsible position of speaker of the house of representatives of the forty-eighth congress—a position which, it is safe to say, he will fill with credit to himself, with honor to the house and country, and to the great satisfaction of the democracy.

Mr. Carlisle is now in his 49th year, having been born in Kentucky, September 5, 1835. He was admitted to the bar in 1858, was a member of the state house of representatives in 1859-61, and a member of the state senate in 1866, and was re-elected in 1869. He was elected lieutenant-governor of Kentucky in 1871, serving until 1875. He was successively elected to the forty-fifth, forty-sixth, forty-seventh, and forty-eighth congresses, and has been recognized as one of the ablest members of the house of representatives. – Free Press.

The Speakership.

The Grand Rapids Democrat congratulates a large majority of the republican party upon the result of the contest for speaker. The politicians of the party will not be pleased, but men who respect honor, official obligations and the national good name, will welcome the contrast between a Keifer and a Carlisle. It presents to honest republicans who have been humiliated by the vicious and corrupt courses of their leaders an assurance that men of real worth and dignity of character are coming to the front, with whom they can ally themselves with self respect and a proper regard for the national honor. The democrats presented three candidates for speaker, and each had a record so clear and honorable that suspicion can find no spot. The speeches of the defeated candidates upon the nomination of Mr. Carlisle are a pledge for harmony of action. They were faultless in taste and excellent in temper. With Carlisle in the chair and such men as Randall, Hohman, Cox, Morrison, and other honest and skilled legislators on the floor, the country may, with just confidence expect from the house at Washington this winter proofs of statesmanship. There will be no mistakes made.

So rare an exhibition may resurrect, in a large number of voters, a moral sense which has for years been buried under the debauchment of Grantism and bossism.

Origin of Names of the Fabrics.

Everything connected with one's business is of importance. Very few dry-goods men know the origin of the names of many of the goods they handle. They may seem trivial points, but they are of interest to the man who seeks to be thoroughly familiar with the merchandise he wishes to deal in. For the information of such we give the derivation of the names of the following goods: Damask is from the city of Damascus; cottas from Zaytown in China, called from Calicut, a town in India, formerly celebrated for its cotton cloth, and where calico was also printed. Muslin is named from Mosul in Asia. Alpaca, from an animal of Peru, of the llama species, from whose wool the fabric is woven. Buckram takes its name from Bochara; fustian comes from Fostat, a city of the middle ages, from which the modern Cairo is descended. Taffeta and tabby from a street in Bagdad. Cambric from Cambrai. Gauze has its name from Gaza; baize from Bajac; dimity from Damietta, and jeans from Jean. Dragget is derived from a city in Ireland, Drogheda. Duck comes from Torque, in Normandy. Blanket is called after Thomas Blanket, a famous clothier connected with the introduction of woolens into England about 1340. Serge derives its name from Xerga, a Spanish name for a peculiar woolen blanket. Diaper is not from D'Ypres, as is sometimes stated, but from the Greek dia-aspros, figured. Velvet is from the Italian velluto, wooly (Latin, vellus—a hide or pelt). Shawl is the Sanscrit sala. Sheetings, which were first used as carpets and tapestry, Bandanna is from an Indian word, meaning to bind or tie, because they are tied in knots before dyeing. Calico comes from the Hindoo word chint. Denim is the French "tot wood."—Trade Journal.

One Life Saved Thirty Times.

"Smoze" has the reputation of being the greatest lifesaver in Harlem. His breast is decorated with innumerable medals. On Sunday Smoze very seldom has money, and so he relied on becoming a life saver took possession of him. He saves very easily; guarantees to perform the work efficiently and well. He takes to the Harlem Bridge with him a street gamin, who waits till the life saver opens, and then, before the horrified crowd can realize it, topples from the bridge into the river.

Smoze is on hand. Quick as a flash the gent is off, and he plunges, amid solemn silence, down into the river. The street Arab who assists him in the business is an expert swimmer, and soon his body floats on the surface. Smoze approaches. He takes strokes—long ones. Smoze, and after half a dozen exciting dives the body is brought to the land and the street gamin is revived. Then another conspirator, somewhat neater dressed than the diver, opens his purse for Smoze and magnanimously hands out with ten dollars. Smoze has made hundreds of dollars at the business and wears thirty-seven medals. He has saved one life thirty times.—N. Y. World.

—An acre of sweet corn for feeding to swine will afford a good return in pork fully equal to money value for any use to which the corn could have been applied. They are very fond of the stalks as well as the ears of corn, and will eat all up clean. If given to hogs fed upon corn principally, it serves to give them a relish for basic other food, improves their healthfulness and increases their flesh. When hogs have been kept at pasture on clover sweet corn may be used to follow the clover, as two will eat enough of it to make a good fattening. N. Y. Herald.

Blow, blow your horns,
We're not the slightest fear
You cannot beat the "Carlisle"
You blow a thousand year

For Sale by L. D. BARTHOL

G. W. JEFFER
Dealer in
Fresh and Cured
Fresh and Salt Fish
AND VEGETAB
Fat Stock and Farm P
Wanted.
West side Bridge Street, Char

MISS L. SPAUL
Fashionable
Milliner and Dressm
Dealer in Ladies' Furnishing Fancy Goods, &
HAIR WORK, STAMPING, AN MAKING DONE IN THE BES
Mrs. M. DePuo, Milline
NEW GOODS IN ALL
Two doors south of pos

LIVER
The undersigned has purchas formerly owned by him, and inside
Geo. Durance, Ma
There has been added a new stoc
Horses and Carr
And a cordial invitation is extend friends and patrons to call and e ever they need anything in that l
GOOD SADDLE HORSES A WITH THIS STABL
J. MILO B

O. B. WEED &
Are headquarters for DRUG
CHEMICALS
Patent Medicines, all Imported and Domestic Perfu
Toilet Artic
AND FANCY GOO
None but Pure Me
Kept in stock.
Prescriptions filled by compet
and with fresh and pure drugs.
We will see you well. Our store i town's new

Opera Blo
Joseph Hyl
CHARLEVOIX, MICH

Boiler Ma
Sheet-Iron Wo
and manufacturer of Hyland's Patent Fi
Dealer in all kinds of
SECOND-HAND MAC
Heavy blacksmithing of all kin
ing of Boilers promptly attended

Hayes.

Sleighing once more, and everybody taking advantage of it.

Some of the farmers are busy getting out logs.

Alex. Ross, Esq., is erecting an addition to his barn, to be used for stabling purposes.

Hayes township has another store. The township board meet next Saturday to settle the township affairs.

Mrs. Walker died last Saturday, of inflammation of the lungs.

E. H. Burgess's mill dam came very near going out, last Thursday morning. He is now repairing it, and will soon have it in working order.

Hayes township is still attractive to John M. Harris of Charlevoix.

The schools of this township are now in operation, except one. We think they will have a lively time as they are each supplied with a Chew. What will be the result?

Mr. A. R. Struthers' brother-in-law, Mr. Snyder, of Canada, who has been here several weeks, expects to locate in this township.

Bear Creek is bound that Hayes shall have some roads anyhow. At the "bee" last Wednesday in the eastern part of the township, there were several men and teams from Bear Creek, and Evangeline. Hayes was represented by Messers. Stauffer and Fish: Mr. Stauffer says, Hayes raised one more man who came to the "bee" but he left disgusted without giving them any assistance. ZEKE.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by GRAHAM BROS., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Dec. 4, 1883, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

A. R. Upright et al. to Hollie F. Meech, lots 66 66, 67, 68, 69, of Upright's add. to Charlevoix, $300.

A. R. Upright et al. to Isabella Wilson, lot 15, of Upright's add. to Charlevoix, $100.

A. R. Upright et al. to Henry Cunningham, lot 222, of Upright's add. to Charlevoix, $100.

A. R. Upright et al. to W. H. Thompson, lot 21, of Upright's add. to Charlevoix, $200.

George Keys to John A. Taylor, s w ¼ of s e ¼, 34-34-6w, $80.

Andrew Nowland to Albert Nowland, lot 31, Boyne, $500.

John C. Leist to John A. Bacon, s e ¼ of s w ¼, 36-34-6, $200.

Fernando J. Belknap to Geo. H. Herald, 80 acres, 36-34-5, $800.

Lewis Green to Frank and Harry Newman, s w ¼ of s w ¼, 6-33-7, $240.

W. F. Emery to Ellen F. Emery, lot 4, blk. A, south Arlyn, $600.

Carries.

Babus seemed to fancy that I, as a zoologist, must take an equal interest in every class of animal life, and therefore, their application to the end and purpose of curry must be an important natural problem. So, if on Monday the secretaire-crab were presented by some delicate fish in my curry, on Tuesday this was replaced by scallops-and shrimps, or by small crabs, as representing the crustacea. On Wednesday cuttle-fish (squin or lolligo vulgaris) appear, the next highly organized of the molluscs; while on Thursday we condescended to some edible and native or to baked oysters. On Friday the worthy race of radiata were represented by starfish or echinodermata, in charge of the scrambling, or the coralline texture of zoolotharia, (trepang.) On Saturday I fully expected to have come down to the zoophytes, and to find medusæ or corals, sponges or actinize in my bowl of curry. My cook, however, clinging to an antiquated system, evidently regarded zoophytes as plants, and supplied their place with some winged creature—bats or birds, as sometimes the fleshy bodies of a horned beetle or moth. On Sundays, of course, he laid himself out to give me some special treat, and my curry was of the best, containing a fowl or a fat iguana, occasionally even a snake, which I at first mistook for an eel. Babus was evidently convinced of the close affinities of birds with reptiles, and thought it made no difference whether he sent the cerebor or the more recent type of sauropsis to table. Happily for my European prejudices, I was gradually initiated into the mongrel mysteries of curry, and cosmopolitan knew nothing of its constituents till after I had swallowed it in blind resignation. Besides, the thick sauce in which they were disguised contained such a mixture of spices, with particles of roots, fruits and leaves, that nothing short of anatomical analysis would have revealed the nature of the first elements, and this I carefully avoided.—A Visit to Ceylon. Haeckel.

THE Chinese are so superstitious in regard to death that they seldom mention the word itself, but substitute "having become immortal," or a similar expression.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the probate court for the county of Charlevoix, holden at the probate office in the village of Charlevoix, on Tuesday, the fourth day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three. Present, Hon. James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of

SHAW-WAW-NE-PE-NAY-SE, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of George W. Crozier and Adelbert E. Fitzright, who claim an interest in certain land described therein as grantees of the heir at law of said deceased. Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the seventh day of January, A. D. 1884, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the said petitioners, as grantees of the heir at law of said deceased as aforesaid, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the probate office in the village of Charlevoix, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioners should not be granted; and it is further ordered, that said petitioners give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county of Charlevoix for three successive weeks.

A true copy. JAMES A. KEAT,
Judge of Probate.

THE JOURNAL

CHARLEVOIX, MICH., DEC. 6, 1883.

Local Business Notices.

A new invoice of shelf hardware at L. D. Bartholomew's.

For Sale Cheap.—Dry maple body wood from 16 inches to four feet in length. Apply to H. S. HARMON.

Everybody in the county must know that Upright, Emrey & Co. are ahead on Rubber goods, Felts, Mackinaw suits, Kerseys, Fur Caps, and everything in the line of winter wear.

Those who desire to bring us wood on subscription will confer a favor by bringing it now.

New skates, snow shovels, and cutters, at L. D. Barthlomew's.

CHRISTMAS! CHRISTMAS! Christmas! Upright, Emrey & Co. are leading the van on Xmas Goods. You full cases to be opened next week. Call early to avoid the rush.

Advertise the town by circulating no long'ears view. Paper and envelopes on sale at O. B. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

Don't forget holiday goods at L. D. Bartholomew's.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

Three hundred tons of ground feed, coarse and fine meal, corn, oats, bran, and middlings, at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s warehouse. In their salesroom you will find crockery, knots, wooden ware, and a complete line of dry goods and groceries.

Buy note paper and envelopes with a view of Charlevoix, at O. B. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

The Charlevoix Rough and Ready Fire Company meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at Upright & Emrey's hall. H. F. BISBEE, Secretary.

News Brevities.

More measles.

Local news on eighth page.

Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew expects to return home on Friday.

Mr. H. W. Beach, of Atwood, made us a short call on Tuesday.

The firemen's dance last Thursday evening was a pleasant affair.

The Nellie Heath is out at Wisner's ship yard for the winter.

The Congregational society are to have a Christmas tree and concert.

Bright warm sunshine on Monday, and rain on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Possibly we may yet call it the "Ann Arbor & Charlevoix Railroad."

The pastor of the M. E. church will begin a series of apocalyptic sermons next Sunday morning, Dec. 16th.

A practical miller with some cash can strike a good thing at Charlevoix. They want a grist mill there.—Evening News.

Master Forest Bartholomew has been very sick with spinal meningitis, but is improving, and will doubtless soon recover.

The school house was crowded last Sunday evening to hear Rev. C. F. VanAnken's discourse on "the unpardonable sin."

Montie Lewis and Charlie See took the Lawrence yesterday, with the intention of attending the normal school at Valparaiso, Ind.

The Lawrences was in yesterday for the last time this season. The Chamberlain is expected once more before she lays up for winter.

W. F. Lance writes us from Elsie that there is no snow there. He also says work is progressing on the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad.

The Northwest Farmer for December is out on time, and as usual contains many good things which we hope to use in the future.

Mr. Benj. Walker, an Indian local preacher of some influence, died at his house in Hayes township last Saturday, and was buried on Tuesday.

The church bells are to be rung by standard time hereafter, about 20 minutes slower than our meridian time. Regulate your clocks accordingly.

The Continental Vocalists advertised for to-night, will not appear for reasons beyond the control of the management, but will no doubt give us a date later on.

The wrecking tug S. S. Coe, from Milwaukee, is here to remove the wreck of the Parsons at the mouth of the channel. On Wednesday she received some slight repairs at Hyland's boiler works.

John Connor & Co. have a fine display of boots and shoes at their store opposite the Bridge street house. Their ladies' fine shoes are from the best manufacturing houses, and can be bought cheap.

The Wright is out for repairs at Washburn's ship yard, for dunnage received while trying to get through the ice up the Arm. She will receive a partial covering of iron, and will thus be enabled to run later in the season than any other. When she finally lays up for winter she will be thoroughly repaired and fitted up for next year's business.

It has been intimated to the JOURNAL that there are numerous whisperings and plannings for the benefit of the children of the M. E. Sunday school. If this be so, the little folks may look out for a grand good time.

The last number of The Veteran contains a 24-page supplement, giving the proceeding of the reunion of the second Michigan infantry at Lansing, Oct. 11th. It contains many matters of interest to old soldier boys.

The subject of discourse at the M. E. church next Sunday morning will be "the heavenly home." In the evening at 6:30 o'clock, "our young men." Text: "Is the young man Absalom safe?" Go and hear for yourself, and then decide.

H. H. Vannorman returned home from his eastern trip a few days ago, and reports a pleasant visit. Among other things he gives a cheering report of New York politics, and predicts a grand democratic victory in that state in '84.

It is said that the manager of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad has promised to give Charlevoix county a personal examination before deciding upon a northern terminus. If he does, we have no doubt that his decision will be in our favor.

Mr. L. G. Evans, of Eastport, has just finished an addition to his house, and now has accommodations for the traveling public which they have not had since the Blakely house burned last winter. This will be a great convenience to those traveling that way, and Mr. E. should be remembered.

Richard P. Nicholls, brother of John Nicholls, of this place, who visited here last summer, and afterward went west for a trip through the Yellowstone park, and other places of interest, returned last week. He will remain here a week or two, and then start for his home in Kingsbridge, Eng.

We wish our subscribers would ask for their JOURNALS when calling for mail. It seems to be the custom in some postoffices not to give out paper mail unless specially called for. Because of this custom some of our patrons have failed to get papers regularly. Ask for your JOURNALS, and if you do not then get them, report to this office.

Detroit's new morning paper, The Times, will endeavor to be "more faithfully and more completely a mirror of the state's every day happenings of the important class, and an exponent of its aims and industries, than no pet exists." Its size on week days will invariably be four pages of seven wide columns each, and on Sundays eight pages, or fifty-six columns, and will be sold for two cents.

An item is going the rounds of the state press that the November storm so filled up with sand the channel at the entrance to our harbor that the propeller City of Grand Rapids got aground. Larger boats than the Grand Rapids have since come through without trouble, and there is little doubt but she would also if she had run in the channel instead of at one side. We think the item in question originated in one of the Harbor Springs papers, and was published in the same spirit of exultation that was felt when the Petoskey dock was carried away. Feeding cows and getting all the good things they want themselves in the way of railroads, etc., they went their spite by trying to injure their neighbors. Such statements may have some temporary effect, but merit wins in the end, and the man or community that seeks to build himself up by pulling down his neighbor will in the end be the sufferer.

Cheap Reading.

To every person who will pay us three dollars in cash in advance for two years' subscription to the JOURNAL, we will present one year's subscription to that peer of all weekly papers, the Detroit Weekly Free Press, which also includes that best of ladies' papers, The Household. In view of the fact that next year occurs another great political struggle, and the desire of every true patriot to be fully informed on the vital issues of the hour, we think no better offer than this can be made. It is equivalent to three papers for the price of one,—or rather, the getting of two papers as interest on one year's subscription in advance. There is no better weekly paper published than the Detroit Free Press, and every subscriber to that paper gets free a copy of The Household, devoted, as its name indicates, to matters pertaining to the home and fireside, and is in every respect a paper for the ladies.

Remember, three dollars pays for the JOURNAL two years, and receives the Free Press and Household one year free. Subscribe now.

Historical Society.

The spacious parlors of Mr. A. R. Upright's residence were crowded to overflowing at the meeting of the historical society on Tuesday evening. The house was brilliantly illuminated presenting a very attractive appearance from the village. Promptly at the hour the society was called to order by the president John Nicholls. The historical paper of the evening was presented by Mrs. O. D. Wood, subject, "The Battle of Bunker Hill." The paper was written in an easy natural style and was well read.

Following this Mr. Parmelee recited "Paul Revere's Ride" which tended to deepen the impression produced by Mrs. Wood's paper. An intermission of ten minutes was so crowded with sociability that the president found some difficulty in restoring order. Miss Ella Barry then favored the society with a recitation of "Bernardo del Carpio" and Mr. Osenr Upright read the "Prisoner of Chillon." The music was a piano solo by Miss Addie Bennett, a piano duet by Miss Bennett and Mrs. Wood and a vocal duet by Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Green. The program was closed by singing America, the whole society taking part. When the business order was reached it was so late that a motion to adjourn was unanimously carried. All were highly pleased with the evening's entertainment. The society meet next week in the parlors of the Bridge street house.

Shipments.

We give below a summary of the shipments from this port, as compiled from our weekly report of clearances. It includes only full cargoes, and not any portion of the thousands of tons carried by coast steamers. It will be seen that in the month of November there is one item of 24 packages of fish. This looks small, but it must be remembered that the propellers Lawrence and Champlain carried fresh and salt fish to Chicago all summer, the shipments averaging, it has been stated, 1,000 pounds daily.

The heaviest shipments of hardwood lumber were during the month of September. This includes all lumber except pine. Another season we shall probably give a more complete classification, if possible. The largest shipment of pine lumber was in June.

An examination of the weekly report would indicate that W. T. Aikin and Sheboygan Mfg. Co., of Boyne, and Stoepel & Co., of East Jordan, take the lead in shipments of hardwood lumber, and F. J. Meech and John Munro a similar place in pine lumber.

The largest shipments of wood was in May and June, and of bark in July and August. Three-fifths of the shipments of bark for the season were in these two months. It was remarked in our hearing not long ago, that the drop in the price of bark during the summer was a loss of not less than $10,000 to the bark-peelers of this county, most of whom are poor farmers, just commencing, and depending on that product for their assistance until they can make sufficient improvements to enable them to live. This amount judiciously distributed over the county would help wonderfully on the "tightness of the times," and grease the wheels of business so that matters would move along much easier.

Shipments of pig iron was greatest in June. This is the product of a single firm, and adds very much to the value of the shipments from this port.

For full details see figures below:

ARTICLES.	May.	June.	July.	August.	September.	October.	November.	Total.
Hard lumber, feet	2,760,000	2,760,000	2,760,000	2,760,000	2,760,000	2,760,000	2,760,000	19,320,000
Pine lumber, feet	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,000,000	7,000,000
Shingles, M	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Lath, M	500	500	500	500	500	500	500	3,500
Pickets, M	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Posts	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Telegraph poles	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar ties	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard ties	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine ties	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar posts	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard posts	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine posts	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar telegraph poles	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard telegraph poles	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine telegraph poles	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar pickets	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard pickets	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine pickets	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar lath	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard lath	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine lath	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar shingles	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard shingles	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine shingles	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar pickets	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard pickets	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine pickets	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Cedar lath	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Hard lath	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000
Pine lath	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	1,000	7,000

Serious Accident at Ironton.

On Tuesday noon, Jens Christian Olsen, a Dane 18 years of age, was standing on a log, while out hunting, with a gun resting against his arm, when by some means the gun slipped and was discharged, the charge of buckshot passing through the arm near the elbow, shattering both bones, and making amputation necessary, which operation was performed by Drs. Carlstein, Preston, and Lewis. He was removed to the Bridge street house yesterday, and is now under the care of Dr. Carlstein, who thinks he will recover.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: HARBOR AND SUMMER RESORTS.

Charlevoix, the county seat of Charlevoix county, is a flourishing village of about 1,800 inhabitants, located on both banks of Pine River, between Round Lake and Lake Michigan. Nearly all branches of business are represented, yet a few others could be profitably added. Any of the various mills for manufacturing hardwood lumber, including handles, wooden bowls, chairs, agricultural implements, and farm wagons, will find an abundance of first-class timber easily accessible. Among the attractions are two summer resorts, which are annually visited by thousands of people. The climatic advantages are unexcelled, and they who have passed one or more summers at these resorts, recuperating their strength and securing a new lease of life, are most enthusiastic in their praise of the place. Sufferers from hay fever and asthmatic difficulties find here a sure relief. The shores of Pine Lake and Lake Michigan afford an excellent bathing place. The privileges for boating and fishing cannot be excelled by any other locality. In their season, lake trout, black bass, pickerel, perch, and herring abound in the waters adjacent to the village, while the gamy speckled trout, the fisherman's delight, make the cold waters of the Jordan and Boyne rivers, as well as those of several smaller tributaries of Pine Lake, their favorite haunts. No rivers in the lower peninsula are as famous for their choice trout as the Jordan and Boyne. The scenery from any point of view on Pine Lake is one of surpassing loveliness. The surrounding country offers great inducements to progressive young farmers who desire to build homes for their families. There is an abundance of maple, elm, beech, basswood, ash, hemlock, and cedar timber, which, with our facilities for manufacturing and shipping, generally more than pays for clearing the land. Unimproved lands are held at from $7 to $15 per acre, while improved farms average from $15 to $60 in the interior, and from $25 to $100 near Charlevoix. The principal crops are winter wheat, oats, corn, hay, clover, potatoes, and root crops. The summer resorts at Charlevoix furnish an excellent market for all sorts of garden vegetables. All fruits do well, excepting grapes and peaches. The hardier kinds of apples are especially successful and the price for the same is generally higher than the same kind of fruit grown further south. Charlevoix county is at the northern extremity of the celebrated Michigan fruit belt.

GEO. W. MILLER,
DEALER IN
Clothing
Gents' Furnishing Goods,
Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels.
GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.
Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,
DEALER IN
Hardware,
FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.
Charlevoix, Mich.

Overcoats!
AND SUITINGS
Gents' Overcoats.
Youths' Overcoats.
Boys' Overcoats.
Gents' Suits.
Youths' Suits.
Boys' Suits.
I have just received a large assortment of the above goods, bought at reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are actually worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing out at $2.00. Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and judge for yourself.
E. M. Clark.
Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

Turn out Comrades.

At the meeting of Baxter Post No. 119, next Monday evening, Dec. 10, 1883, there will be an annual election of its officers, and every comrade is earnestly requested to be present.

Job Printing
AT THE JOURNAL OFFICE.

BETTER THAN GOLD.

BY FATHER RYAN.

Better than grandeur, better than gold,
Than rank and titles a thousand fold,
Is a healthy body and a mind at ease,
And simple pleasures that always please;
A heart that can feel for mother's woe,
With sympathies large enough to enfold
All men as brothers, is better than gold.

Better than gold is a conscience clear,
Though toiling for bread in an humble sphere;
Humbly blessed with content and health,
Untried by the lusts and cares of wealth;
Lowly living and lofty thought
Adorn and ennoble a poor man's cot.
For pride and deceit in patrician plan
Are the gaudiest ills of a gentleman.

Better than gold is the sweet repose
Of the sons of toil when the labors close.
Better than gold is the poor man's sleep,
And the herbs that grow on the clouds to steep
Seeing sleeping draughts on the downy bed,
Where luxury pillows its aching head.
The toiler simple opiate deems
A shorter route to the land of dreams.

Better than gold is a thinking mind,
That in the realm of books can find
A treasure surpassing the Australian ore,
And live with the great and good of yore,
The sages' lore and the poet's lay,
The glories of empires past and gray;
The world's great deeds will thus unfold
And yield a pleasure better than gold.

Better than gold is a peaceful home
Where all the ingle-like charities come,
The shrine of love, the heaven of life,
Hallowed by mother, or sister, or wife.
However humble the home may be,
If ruled with reverence by heaven's decree,
The blessings that never were known but sold
And center there are better than gold.

SAVED, OR LOST?

BY LILY M. CURRY.

Had he cruelled me, I must still have loved him! I said this over and over to myself, that awful night, as I ran on in the darkness and the rain, skimming bog and hollow alike in my race with death. It cannot hurt me to think of it now, or to write it all down as I sit waiting for them to come and take me away to a certain safe retreat, of which they have spoken, where I may, by and by, forget completely the scorching fire of the lurid eye and the thunder dance of the monster, which seemed to shake the world from under my feet forever. Shriek? I thought I was just crying out.

And yet, I ran onward in the dark and the rain, leaping and praying aloud to Heaven to give me strength and speed and bring me there in time—in time to rescue the unwary, in time to snatch his soul from the clutch of the demon, Murder!

I felt, as I ran, the sudden conviction that I had long known him unworthy; that my father had rightly warned me—my patient, slow-judging father.

Still, granting this knowledge, there had been no hour past, there would be no hour future, when I could renounce him.

I had felt tender-mess for him for Claude—from the beginning, when he had come to us, a wanderer, and father had more than willingly accepted his offer to work for a home—just to work a little in the green-house. For this was father's occupation, to keep a nursery and winter-garden just up from the village whence he forwarded all to the city, a five-hour's journey.

Claude was truly handsome. He had a bright glance, and always could think of a merry story, laughing himself in wholesome, boyish fashion, and lading us also to laugh. He said he was anxious to settle down and to tramp the country no longer. If his mother had lived, he said, his own mother, and if his father had not married a young woman who hated her husband's son, it would never have come to this.

When he said this I went away quickly out of the room. My eyes were blind with sympathy, though my father had not taken a second wife.

In this way Claude had come to us—young, perhaps 20 (and I was 17); comely, cheerful when he had rested and supped—cheerful, with snatches of song or whistled tune, and tales of the city, whither we very rarely went. No stranger-like, but as son and brother, who had come home.

I would not have him go for something—anything on earth, I said, as I fell asleep that night. He had brought sunshine an I music to our poor abode. He must remain; he should and would.

Ah! you would not smile if you knew the dull, dead life I led—the stagnant village behind, the barren hills above and about, with little to do but read my few old books or father's weekly paper, and listen hungrily to the shriek and hum of the railroad trains that passed on the farther side of the town—passed and repassed on high trestle-work, or along narrow cuts, with a foot's space between the rail and the edge of the embankment, with gulleys and ravines just below. Night after night, to the West and the East; day after day, to the East and the West—we sent the through express, stopping only on signal at the village station.

It was early in the spring when Claude had come to us, and now the summer had gone. Father had been busy, as usual, freeing immense ice-houses—with ice, purposely stored the winter previous, that the cool, frozen grain for the holiday-time fusions were certain and golden, for which the city dealers paid so we little!

And I! I had been happy! Happy were my wild throbbings of my heart and wakeful hours at night! Not happy on earthly, for there was that which counterbalanced joy. Claude had failed to help with the work, as he had promised, and father was sorely disappointed. Yes, it had come to be the exception when Claude went into the green-house instead of sauntering off to the village and there remaining all day. Inevitably, he spent only the nights at home; still, father was very patient. Perhaps he, too, had grown to love the boy, and felt something of the heartache that I knew at the hour when Claude, on finishing his breakfast, would glance about for his cap.

Were I to live a thousand years I should never forget that slow pang as he rose from the table each morning and went; or the longing, the anxiety for the well-known step at night when ten awaited him. For many days I rose an hour earlier than usual and worked at what father must surely see, and fancy Claude had done. I hoped thus to keep father patient and satisfied.

But the autumn was advancing, and he was extra busy; and one morning, when he remonstrated with Claude, Claude grew very angry (I know this was wrong; he grew so angry that he packed his few things and went away forever. As he opened the door to go, I thought my heart would burst. I followed him down the path to the gate; I think my face must have shown my suffering.

"Claude, Claude!" I cried, "Are you going away? What shall I do, if you go? How can I live?"

Unwomanly? Perhaps it was. My looks would say so, but my heart did not. Besides, why should I pretend? Pretense is lying. He turned and looked half startled; then he smiled.

"I guess I'd better go, John"—he always called me John, though my name was Ellie—Ellie Dix. A moment later he spoke seriously: "John, you've always been my friend, and I hate to be cut off from seeing you; but I can't come here any more. Don't you know any friend's house in the village where we could see each other once in a while?"

That was the way I came to meet him, unknown to my father, day after day, day after day, oftenest at a certain hour toward dusk, by the great tree at the first turn of the road. How little it seemed! I would have gone miles to see his face.

I cannot tell when it was that we first fell into each other's arms, with fervid words and kisses, tender, passionate, eternal kisses, that burn in spirit now upon my brow and lips. Will I ever forget?

As the weeks passed, I lived only for those stolen moments. I went about my work in a feverish way, fearing lest father speak, as he did sweetly, sternly, with regret and disapproval, of Claude. I could not hear my lover condemned or even criticised; it seemed to me I must defend him fiercely at any cost. Yet, father was never unreasonable; he had been stung by an ingratitude for which there was no excuse. This I acknowledged, but, by me, the sins of my lover were not sins.

It was late in October, when I wondered for the first time how Claude would spend the winter, and at what he was working, for I knew he had little, if any, money.

I spoke of it one evening, with my face resting on his shoulder; spoke earnestly, and sought a sober reply. But he bade me not to worry; he had a scheme at hand, which would call him to the city very soon, he hoped—a good scheme, with money in it.

"To the city," I cried sharply; "away from me?"

His kisses hushed the cry. "You will come with me," he said.

He would know shortly, and I must be ready at any moment. I was not certain whether he meant an attempted reconciliation with father, or whether he meant an elopement. Little I cared—crazed with love.

I went home with my head on fire, and father said, half-chidingly, that I was a foolish girl to race about till my face was wind-burnt. I laughed in reply. It makes me happy."

Father had been to the village that morning, and spoke at tea of having seen Claude.

"I am afraid," he said, "that the boy is going steadily downward."

"Why, father?"

My heart was choking me, but I kept my voice controlled.

"He was in bad company to-day; bad-looking at least. Ellie, sugarplum, fellows. Ellie, have you seen him since he left?"

I started, but answered slowly. "Yes," I said, for I could not lie.

"Ellie, I know you thought a good deal of him—and I signing. "But I wouldn't go about with him, if I were you."

Then I knew some one had seen us together, and reported of it.

There were two weeks more to come—weeks of pain and passion—ere the end. But this I could not know.

In the course of those weeks a change had come over my love—a serious change. We met less often, because he was busy. He was worried too, and irritable, even with me. He said, ah Heaven! these Claude and did cards, even-I things. Twice I watched for him at the old place, shivering in the cold, shrieking wind; he did not come. I could hear him more wildly. He spoke, too, so indefinitely about going away.

Still I waited. Ah! I wonder if I can write or that last night? Before, when I have recalled it, my brain has become as a seething whirlpool, and all I have known has been blackness and the rain beating on my bare head, and the distant thunder of the monster with lurid eye and the searching heat-chase upon me—and so, do you wonder—I have ended in shriek and sweep?

It was raining; raining slowly, with a rising wind, when I crept from the house and down the road to the turn, and the great tree, where he was waiting. My heart swelled gratefully that he should have come so far in the rain. But his first words chilled me through and through.

"I can't stay but a moment, John, I'm gone away bought, only for a day or two, before we settle twenty miles off."

If I'm detained longer, I'll write you. I'm glad to have to catch the train."

"But," I stammered, "but the train is not due for three hours."

"Well, I have to see the station-master and put up the signal."

His impatience cut me cruelly; still I was quiet enough.

"Claude," I said, "please—if you have a pencil and scrap of paper—please write me an address at Jonesville. Then, if you can, you are too busy to write, I can do so. It—it will help pass the time." I would not hide the sob that came into my breast. I wanted him to know I loved him fondly and forever—down to eternity.

He drew some loose papers from his pocket and scribbled on one, as well as he could in the darkness, his name—"Claude Carriger"—and the town. I have the card yet; it lies next my heart; it is all I have left.

"Now, good-by," he said, thrusting the other papers carelessly into his big pocket; and, after one long, last kiss, he strode away rapidly, more rapidly than I had ever seen him.

I tried to watch him; but it was almost night, and the rain fell steadily. When at length I, too, turned to leave the place, I caught sight of something he must have dropped from among his papers lying at my very feet. I picked it up and slipped it into my pocket with the address he had written. I would have run after him, but that he walked so fast he was now far beyond call. So I went home, and, entering softly through the wood-shed, prepared the tea.

I was more uneasy and feverish than ever; but tried to listen patiently while father described a new rose he was growing as an experiment. Occasionally I comforted myself with squeezing my pocket to find the precious address safely hidden there.

Presently father took up his weekly paper, and I carried the tea things into the kitchen, where I halted for reflection. It occurred to me that the letter he had dropped might be of importance to Ben while at Jonesville, and if so I must send it to him at once. I took it out to see. It was a queer letter; I could not find the postmark. I did not like the handwriting; but I opened and read it.

I cannot well describe how strange I felt as I read slowly down the first page and turned the sheet to the second. Such feelings are indescribable. As nearly as I remember, it was, at first, a dull stupefied sense of pain, in which my mind so thoroughly that I needed to read the opening sentence a half-dozen times before the words conveyed any meaning. After this came a strong, cold slumber of mortal fear and agony, during which I suffered moments; then a quiet, absolute quiet in which reason and clear regularity, like a calm voice directing and arranging.

Now, I know; some mysterious veil was removed and I saw with acutest vision.

I knew what my lover was involved in, and that he must leave me here or had gone to-night. I knew that my father had judged Claude's companions too severely, that they were vagabonds, villains, who had planned to wreck the night-express at the great curve, before it would have reached the village.

At the great curve! Oh, God! I could picture the scene. The heavy logs laid close across the track, the swift-coming train, the awful crushing crashes pitching and piling into the ravine—the shrieks, perhaps the flame—the awful doom of the innocent and helpless!

And what madness to think that vengeance would not quickly fall upon such as Claude, no matter how much he had made him—Claude—the merest tool, and would manage their own escape by leaping into the dark, leaving him to the hands of village justice. Ours was a quiet town, but what place would not rouse at the sudden, terrible work. Shots, ropes, tree-limbs—and Claude—London, perhaps! "God in Heaven," I moaned, "Aid me, give me strength!"

From that hour I grew. It was long past 7, and the train should reach the village before 9, if on time. I prayed it might be late, for I had miles and miles to go in the night and the storm. I glanced into the sitting-room; father was asleep in his chair—he often dozed thus through the entire evening. I trusted his sleep would last, or he would think I had gone up to my bedroom, if he wakened.

I caught a little jacket from the wall and slipped it on; no hat or bonnet, change. We met less often, because he was busy. He was worried too, and irritable, even with me. He said, ah Heaven! these Claude and did cards, even-I things. Twice I watched for him at the old place, shivering in the cold, shrieking wind; he did not come. I could hear him more wildly. He spoke, too, so indefinitely about going away.

Still I waited. Ah! I wonder if I can write or that last night? Before, when I have recalled it, my brain has become as a seething whirlpool, and all I have known has been blackness and the rain beating on my bare head, and the distant thunder of the monster with lurid eye and the searching heat-chase upon me—and so, do you wonder—I have ended in shriek and sweep?

It was raining; raining slowly, with a rising wind, when I crept from the house and down the road to the turn, and the great tree, where he was waiting. My heart swelled gratefully that he should have come so far in the rain. But his first words chilled me through and through.

"I can't stay but a moment, John, I'm gone away bought, only for a day or two, before we settle twenty miles off."

If I'm detained longer, I'll write you. I'm glad to have to catch the train."

"But," I stammered, "but the train is not due for three hours."

"Well, I have to see the station-master and put up the signal."

His impatience cut me cruelly; still I was quiet enough.

"Claude," I said, "please—if you have a pencil and scrap of paper—please write me an address at Jonesville. Then, if you can, you are too busy to write, I can do so. It—it will help pass the time." I would not hide the sob that came into my breast. I wanted him to know I loved him fondly and forever—down to eternity.

He drew some loose papers from his pocket and scribbled on one, as well as he could in the darkness, his name—"Claude Carriger"—and the town. I have the card yet; it lies next my heart; it is all I have left.

"Now, good-by," he said, thrusting the other papers carelessly into his big pocket; and, after one long, last kiss, he strode away rapidly, more rapidly than I had ever seen him.

I tried to watch him; but it was almost night, and the rain fell steadily. When at length I, too, turned to leave the place, I caught sight of something he must have dropped from among his papers lying at my very feet. I picked it up and slipped it into my pocket with the address he had written. I would have run after him, but that he walked so fast he was now far beyond call. So I went home, and, entering softly through the wood-shed, prepared the tea.

I was more uneasy and feverish than ever; but tried to listen patiently while father described a new rose he was growing as an experiment. Occasionally I comforted myself with squeezing my pocket to find the precious address safely hidden there.

Presently father took up his weekly paper, and I carried the tea things into the kitchen, where I halted for reflection. It occurred to me that the letter he had dropped might be of importance to Ben while at Jonesville, and if so I must send it to him at once. I took it out to see. It was a queer letter; I could not find the postmark. I did not like the handwriting; but I opened and read it.

I cannot well describe how strange I felt as I read slowly down the first page and turned the sheet to the second. Such feelings are indescribable. As nearly as I remember, it was, at first, a dull stupefied sense of pain, in which my mind so thoroughly that I needed to read the opening sentence a half-dozen times before the words conveyed any meaning. After this came a strong, cold slumber of mortal fear and agony, during which I suffered moments; then a quiet, absolute quiet in which reason and clear regularity, like a calm voice directing and arranging.

Now, I know; some mysterious veil was removed and I saw with acutest vision.

I knew what my lover was involved in, and that he must leave me here or had gone to-night. I knew that my father had judged Claude's companions too severely, that they were vagabonds, villains, who had planned to wreck the night-express at the great curve, before it would have reached the village.

At the great curve! Oh, God! I could picture the scene. The heavy logs laid close across the track, the swift-coming train, the awful crushing crashes pitching and piling into the ravine—the shrieks, perhaps the flame—the awful doom of the innocent and helpless!

And what madness to think that vengeance would not quickly fall upon such as Claude, no matter how much he had made him—Claude—the merest tool, and would manage their own escape by leaping into the dark, leaving him to the hands of village justice. Ours was a quiet town, but what place would not rouse at the sudden, terrible work. Shots, ropes, tree-limbs—and Claude—London, perhaps! "God in Heaven," I moaned, "Aid me, give me strength!"

From that hour I grew. It was long past 7, and the train should reach the village before 9, if on time. I prayed it might be late, for I had miles and miles to go in the night and the storm. I glanced into the sitting-room; father was asleep in his chair—he often dozed thus through the entire evening. I trusted his sleep would last, or he would think I had gone up to my bedroom, if he wakened.

I caught a little jacket from the wall and slipped it on; no hat or bonnet, change. We met less often, because he was busy. He was worried too, and irritable, even with me. He said, ah Heaven! these Claude and did cards, even-I things. Twice I watched for him at the old place, shivering in the cold, shrieking wind; he did not come. I could hear him more wildly. He spoke, too, so indefinitely about going away.

Still I waited. Ah! I wonder if I can write or that last night? Before, when I have recalled it, my brain has become as a seething whirlpool, and all I have known has been blackness and the rain beating on my bare head, and the distant thunder of the monster with lurid eye and the searching heat-chase upon me—and so, do you wonder—I have ended in shriek and sweep?

It was raining; raining slowly, with a rising wind, when I crept from the house and down the road to the turn, and the great tree, where he was waiting. My heart swelled gratefully that he should have come so far in the rain. But his first words chilled me through and through.

"I can't stay but a moment, John, I'm gone away bought, only for a day or two, before we settle twenty miles off."

HUMOR.

[From Carl Pretzel's Weekly.]

Head winds—Blowing your nose.

Grass widows are not always clover.

A finished artist mixes his colors with brains.

A cool proceeding—An ice water making its rounds.

To brevity is the soul of wit, and to a good deal of fun in a dude's ball.

"One good turn deserves another," as the ring-boat Captain said to the bridge tender.

"Why are you so distant?" said a lamp to the beafsteak in the restaurant window.

"Man wants but little here below," but every publisher wants his full subscription price.

Any young man who aspires to be somebody in particular should attempt himself in advised to drink sarsaparilla. It is good for the humor.

"What grows up must grow down," said a dear father as he noticed his son-in-law's mustache.

A young lady don't lack manly, asking a gum out of herself when she powders her face, asks her cavalier for a quid and snaps at the dudes.

[From the Norristown Herald.]

Fans have existed for at least 18 years, or representations of these appendages have been discovered on the tombs of Thebes. The friends of the deceased evidently knew in which direction the departed were going, and put on their tombstones pictures of the articles they most needed, in the other world. It is suspected that the fan itself was intervened with the remains.

A Tennessee girl who has grace enough to make them appear blue and lead "by wearing a hat lined with dark velvet and wearing lumps of sugar," which has been dropped a little longer. A Tennessee man who has gray eyes can make them appear blue by simply calling Shakespeare Sullivan a liar and a horse-thief.

The editor wrote "Bonny Kate" on her travels through the country once more," and it came out in the paper "Boney Kate," etc. The editor is paying 10 cents apiece for all the lies of that issue, for the purpose of stroying them, and if the entire edition can be secured he says he will go to Alaska until the affair "blows over."

When a young man becomes a patient waiting half an hour for a girl, who left the room with the remark that she would "be ready in two minutes," he should not manifest impatience, but let his mind revert to the stock of patience exhibited by the physician who counted the pulses of one in the human lungs and discovered that the whole number was 174,000,000.

From the Burlington Hawkeye.]

Young Pastboy says the first girl he ever waltzed with was all the while to him.

The cable announces as important news the fact that "Mr. Slupsky, which Death was recently raised by the Lords, is coming to America to see his sons, who live in the United States."

We have a man in Missouri named Snagsby Chaney whose ambition is to be one of Shugsby's boys."

Nor will please to observe one fact, and that is that the man who growls the most also eats the most, and the fellow who jokes about the indestructible sandwiches, and he is in hard luck if he doesn't get away with half a dozen before the grub is ready.

The pastor of a church in New Milford, Ct., has been compelled to resign, because he stole his sermons. An foolish congregation, to kick when he stole better ones than he could write. We have heard some parents for whom we gladly would have stolen sermons on condition that they never would preach their own.

Free Passes—A Good Story.

This talk about law against railroad free passes, and the probability of such a law being enforced, reminds me of the time when Florida was a "territory" instead of a State. They were discussing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung. A thousand complaints and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that they require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of these disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous foods. The lactic, lithic and uric acids must be driven out of the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gritty crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely to locate in some joint and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart disease. The only way the blood can be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by enabling the person to the blood—the kidneys and liver; and no remedy has ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the cause of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause. The well-known ex-Governor H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed to no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and the orthy with which Warner's Safe Cure has all their remedies to the public, should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. We, however, guarantee more than 95 per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Druggists will supply it at $1.00 per bottle. Pamphlet free. Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Happy Once More,

Loyal Mo.—A Chronicle reporter called on Mr. Alfred J. Paquin, of Old Bed Cross, to congratulate him upon having had the most obstinate case of inflammatory rheumatism, which for months confined him to his bed, and left him a helpless cripple, to be restored to health and strength. Mr. Paquin gave the following statement: "I was taken down with inflammatory rheumatism, and was confined to my bed for months. I was helpless, and could not move hand or foot. I was under the treatment of the best physicians, but they did me no good. I was induced to try Athlophoros, and before I had taken one bottle I felt relief. I continued its use for a few weeks, and was entirely cured. I am happy once more."—Chronicle.

Preserving Flowers.

To preserve flowers in their natural form and color, insert the stems in wax, in which twenty-five grains ammoniacal chloride (sal ammoniac) have been dissolved. Flowers thus treated will keep in this way for from fifteen to twenty days. To preserve them permanently for several months, they should be perfectly limpid gum-water, and then dried in drain. The gum forms a complete coating of the flower petals, and preserves their shape and color long after they have become dry.

Dyspepsia Murders Sleep.

Loss of appetite, renders life miserable. Well digested as a food which ceases freely from its stomachful, the stomach, by certain means may be annihilated with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Weakness of the digestive organs is at the root of dyspepsia. The remedial agent of the food is insufficiently secreted by the stomach to digest it, and the raw material upon which it feeds is a thing of terror in the stomach. Nothing can remedy this deficiency in the digestive organs from which dyspepsia suffers, unless it be removed by the Bitters, which supplies the artificial secretion of the gastric fluid of the stomach. Dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, nervousness and kindred complaints, are also remediably by the Bitters.

[From the Burlington Hawkeye.]

Young Pastboy says the first girl he ever waltzed with was all the while to him.

The cable announces as important news the fact that "Mr. Slupsky, which Death was recently raised by the Lords, is coming to America to see his sons, who live in the United States."

We have a man in Missouri named Snagsby Chaney whose ambition is to be one of Shugsby's boys."

Nor will please to observe one fact, and that is that the man who growls the most also eats the most, and the fellow who jokes about the indestructible sandwiches, and he is in hard luck if he doesn't get away with half a dozen before the grub is ready.

The pastor of a church in New Milford, Ct., has been compelled to resign, because he stole his sermons. An foolish congregation, to kick when he stole better ones than he could write. We have heard some parents for whom we gladly would have stolen sermons on condition that they never would preach their own.

Free Passes—A Good Story.

This talk about law against railroad free passes, and the probability of such a law being enforced, reminds me of the time when Florida was a "territory" instead of a State. They were discussing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung. A thousand complaints and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that they require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of these disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous foods. The lactic, lithic and uric acids must be driven out of the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gritty crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely to locate in some joint and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart disease. The only way the blood can be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by enabling the person to the blood—the kidneys and liver; and no remedy has ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the cause of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause. The well-known ex-Governor H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed to no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and the orthy with which Warner's Safe Cure has all their remedies to the public, should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. We, however, guarantee more than 95 per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Druggists will supply it at $1.00 per bottle. Pamphlet free. Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Happy Once More,

Loyal Mo.—A Chronicle reporter called on Mr. Alfred J. Paquin, of Old Bed Cross, to congratulate him upon having had the most obstinate case of inflammatory rheumatism, which for months confined him to his bed, and left him a helpless cripple, to be restored to health and strength. Mr. Paquin gave the following statement: "I was taken down with inflammatory rheumatism, and was confined to my bed for months. I was helpless, and could not move hand or foot. I was under the treatment of the best physicians, but they did me no good. I was induced to try Athlophoros, and before I had taken one bottle I felt relief. I continued its use for a few weeks, and was entirely cured. I am happy once more."—Chronicle.

Preserving Flowers.

To preserve flowers in their natural form and color, insert the stems in wax, in which twenty-five grains ammoniacal chloride (sal ammoniac) have been dissolved. Flowers thus treated will keep in this way for from fifteen to twenty days. To preserve them permanently for several months, they should be perfectly limpid gum-water, and then dried in drain. The gum forms a complete coating of the flower petals, and preserves their shape and color long after they have become dry.

Dyspepsia Murders Sleep.

Loss of appetite, renders life miserable. Well digested as a food which ceases freely from its stomachful, the stomach, by certain means may be annihilated with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Weakness of the digestive organs is at the root of dyspepsia. The remedial agent of the food is insufficiently secreted by the stomach to digest it, and the raw material upon which it feeds is a thing of terror in the stomach. Nothing can remedy this deficiency in the digestive organs from which dyspepsia suffers, unless it be removed by the Bitters, which supplies the artificial secretion of the gastric fluid of the stomach. Dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, nervousness and kindred complaints, are also remediably by the Bitters.

Sure Cures Fellgrow or Files in 24 hours. Free to poor. Dr. Boyle, 1234 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

BIG PAY free. Tip-Top Box & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $1 free. Address Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine.

LADIES (provided for during confinement) E. THAYER, M.D., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

MOTHERS. Cream. (The Great Worm Destroyer.) Will destroy worms in children or adults. Price 25 cts.

AGENTS Wanted. Smallest Screwdriver on Earth—sells like wildfire—30 to 40 per cent. profit—Sample for postage, 10 cts. Address Novelty Co., Chicago, Ill.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Mrs. Madison Scott, 1 Wiley block, Rochester, N. Y.

Elcelt For Business at the Shortest Notice. Send for Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

Young Men learn Telegraphy and R. R. Accounting here. Situations secured. Address Davis, Dubuque, Ia.

FREE Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. Address Moody, Boston, Mass.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. Sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

WANTED experienced Book and Bible Agents in every county. Liberal salaries Paid. Address, T. DARLING & CO., 61 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE. No capital required. Address with stamp for terms. Address Model Co., Box 1975, Boston, Mass.

$100 A MONTH "Hard Cash and How to Get It." Agents Wanted. Address P. O. Box 1975, Boston, Mass.

ORGAN AGENTS Wanted in every County. Address CHICAGO MUSIC CO., 130 State Street, CHICAGO.

For Two Generations

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers.

FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successor to Vogeler, Gunther & Co.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

Tutt's Pills

A HUMAN FIRE.

The Phenomenon of a Burning Mine Reported to the Physical Society.

A few years ago one of the most important coal mines in Pennsylvania caught fire. It started slowly, but soon obtained such headway that it spread through the greater portion of the entire mine. To flood it with water would extinguish the fire but well nigh ruin the mine; and still the flames continued to increase. At that juncture a young man stepped forward and suggested that all the entrances and vent holes of the mine be covered and sealed, thus shutting off the supply of air. His advice was followed and the flames were finally subdued.

To compare the condition of this mine with many phases of the human system is most interesting and appropriate. "Fire in the blood" is not a mere expression, it is a most serious fact. How it originates it may be impossible to say; but that it burns and rages with an increasing fury, the one who is victim only too painfully knows. The blood is the life. It is designed by nature to purify, strengthen and sustain the system. It is too often made the channel through which poison and death are transported. Poisonous acids coursing through the veins and arteries inflame and cause a fire just as real as the one which existed in the mine. They burn and destroy, causing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung. A thousand complaints and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that they require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of these disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous foods. The lactic, lithic and uric acids must be driven out of the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gritty crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely to locate in some joint and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart disease. The only way the blood can be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by enabling the person to the blood—the kidneys and liver; and no remedy has ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the cause of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause. The well-known ex-Governor H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed to no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and the orthy with which Warner's Safe Cure has all their remedies to the public, should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. We, however, guarantee more than 95 per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Druggists will supply it at $1.00 per bottle. Pamphlet free. Warner Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Insane in the Stomach.

Much of the disease and sickness attributed to dyspepsia and chronic diarrhœa is occasioned by the presence in the stomach of excess, with all the characteristics of these complaints. Such cases are cured by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Nervousness, sleeplessness, biliousness and kidney complaints are also remediably by the Bitters.

Sunday Reading.

Mr. Spurgeon, the London preacher, has a congregation of 5,000 persons. He is a man of great ability, and his sermons are full of good sense and practical wisdom. He is also a man of wit and humor, and his sermons are full of anecdotes and illustrations. Here is one which he told in a recent sermon: "A man who was a great reader of the Bible was asked by a friend to read the Bible through in a year. He replied that he would do so, but he would read it through in a year. He read it through in a year. He read it through in a year. He

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 6, 1883.

News Brevities.

The new Episcopal church at Elk Rapids is to be completed and paid for this winter.

J. A. Bozot was again on our streets last Saturday, the first since his recent severe illness.

Mr. Richard Williams, of Boston, remembered the Journal last week when in town. Come again, when we have more time to sit down and chat.

A. E. Martin arrived from Charlotte one day last week and is now attending business as a member of the firm of Norton, Kent & Martin, attorneys.- Statesman.

"The Journal, of Charlevoix, has in progress several maps and illustrations of that growing town. Going to run an illustrated paper, Strang?" - Elk Rapids Progress. Just wait a little while and see what we can do.

"The Swiss Bell Ringers appeared at Clay's hall Saturday night, and were greeted by a full house. The show was above the average. All had a hearty laugh, and went away feeling benefited for having attended." - Newaygo Tribune.

One of our Canada subscribers writes that he does not get the democratic dinner this once in two or three weeks. There must be "leaks" in the mail service somewhere, and the papers lose on the way, for they are mailed regularly.

We neglected to announce the receipt last week of a handsome card from the office of the Elk Rapids Progress, showing late additions of typographic novelties to that office. The workmanship on that card will compare with the best done anywhere.

Mr. Jake Crothers, of this place, contemplates moving to Charlevoix county, soon. In that event Kalkaska will have a good citizen, and Charlevoix county will gain one, but we wish John abundance of success wherever he may locate. - Kalkaska Leader.

The "Continentals" concert in the M. E. church in this city was really a rare treat, and was worthy of the good patronage it received. The quartette melodies that came forth from throats secured to charm the heaper, and the rendition of the "Mocking Bird," on the violin, was the best we ever heard. Should they ever come this way again they are sure of a full house. - Ingham County Democrat.

"Man are employed to work in the lumber woods at Alpena for $24, $25 and $20 per month, caused by the large number of Canadians who yearly go to that town in search of employment." This from an organ that favors protection to the manufacturers and runs a competition to the laborers, is on a par with protection arguments generally. The continuance of laborers is always the one to foot the bill.

From our old friend Chas. S. Cleveland, formerly of Kewaunee, now of Grand Rapids, Dakota, we have received a handsome card announcing his marriage, the lady being Miss Julia Weinmeyer, of Dexter, Mich. Chas. went west alone and established the Grand Rapids Journal, which has every appearance of being a success as a news-paper. He is therefore well prepared to take a partner to assist in his large and increasing business. May the honeymoon last for ever.

"Trust in providence, and keep your powder dry," was an old revolutionary maxim. Look to your insurance, guard well your heating apparatus, would seem to apply equally well to our citizens. We have no other safe-guard against a disastrous fire that is liable at any hour to wipe out a large portion of our town, and those who neglect their insurance will be the ones to suffer the most when such an emergency occurs. J. Milo Eaton represents several reliable companies, and will be pleased to give any further information desired.

An exchange has the following concerning the proposed new morning paper in Detroit: The Detroit Times will be printed on three four cylinder press of the capacity of 18,000 four page papers an hour. This paper will be about the size of the New York Sun and will be printed every day in the year and its telegraphic and news service will be more complete, it is claimed, than any De troit paper. It will be independent in politics. "Twenty-one presses fired and the rest of the world responded to the Michigan news will be better than any other paper in the metropolis of the state.

The report last week that W. T. Addis had made an assignment was one of a kind of old fogy stories that crop up periodically, but the satisfaction of all when Mr. Addis returned home to Grand Rapids Friday evening and the settlement of the matter. Mr. Addis is enough set to feel in the hundreds of dollars, but he is a good

$1 A YEAR. $1

ONE DOLLAR. ONE DOLLAR.

E PLURIBUS UNUM 1883

$1 A YEAR. $1

THE WEEKLY
Detroit Free Press
FOR THE HOUSEHOLD
ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.
Two Large Pages of News and Reading Matter.
The Greatest of Dollar Weeklies.

$1 A YEAR. $1

ONE DOLLAR. ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR. $1

CHICAGO WEEKLY HERALD

The Largest, Best and Most Complete Newspaper ever sold.

One Year for $1.00.

EIGHT LARGE PAGES.

Containing the News of the Day, Agricultural and other matter interesting to the farmer and his family. Complete Market Reports. Stories, Sketches, etc. Sample copies free. Address

CHICAGO WEEKLY HERALD, Chicago, Ill.

If you want a daily paper try

The Chicago Herald,

An enterprising, fearless, and reliable Chicago daily that has been a great success because of its excellence in every particular. It presents all the news every day in a clear, terse manner and at a price that permits its being taken by everybody. For sale by all newsdealers. Sent on trial by mail, postage paid, six days each week, for TWO MONTHS FOR ONE DOLLAR. Address

THE CHICAGO HERALD, Chicago.

PIMPLES.

To all suffers I will mail (free) the recipe for a simple vegetable remedy that cured me of Pimples, Blotches, Black-heads, Flesh Worms, and Skin Disease, after having suffered for years and expended large sums of money with doctors in vain. It is the only sure cure. Send self-addressed envelope to DR. W. A. NOYES, 149 Fulton St., New York.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

Health in Michigan.

For the week ending Nov. 24, 1883, the reports to the state board of health indicate that erysipelas increased, and that inflammation of the brain, diarrhœa, and remittent fever decreased in area of prevalence.

At the state Capitol the prevailing winds, during the week ending Nov. 24, were southwest; and, compared with the preceding week, the temperature was considerably higher, the absolute, and the relative humidity considerably more and the day and the night scarce, less.

Including reports by regular observers and others diphtheria was reported present during the week ending Nov. 24, and since at 16 places namely, Ann Arbor, Detroit, East Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Holly, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Linden, Monroe, Niles, Newark, Pontiac, Pollston, Saginaw, Thetford, Ypsilantic scarlet fever at 15 places, Clifford, Detroit, East Saginaw, Eagle, Forest, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Lansing, Leowell, Monroe, Manistee, Muskegon, Pierson Salem, Whitehall; measles at 6 places, Adrian, Cedar Springs, Charlevoix, Hillsdale, Monroe, Pontiac.

Pilfered Paragraphs.

It's a lawyer's business to defend the law. There are about a hundred and forty lawyers in America, and crime is greater than before.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and loss put the animals in a well and properly ventilated stable. Don't crowd them, and see that they have plenty of pure water. Salt should be given occasionally.

"If I had but $1,000 to invest in business," says Greeley, "I would not choose the newspaper business, for I would not have to write editorials in this day and age of the world without advertising, as he who "knows of the gospel ought to preach the same." Now all you editorial scratchers down entitled to your opinion gratuitously.

The three reasons which a good woman presented for not giving as a preacher were striking ones. She said that, in the first place, he read his sermons; in the second place he read it well; and in the third place, it was such a comforting.

"If I had but $1,000 to invest in business," says Greeley, "I would not choose the newspaper business, for I would not have to write editorials in this day and age of the world without advertising, as he who "knows of the gospel ought to preach the same." Now all you editorial scratchers down entitled to your opinion gratuitously.

The greatest grain killer yet found for cut worms, white grubs, sow bugs, and root maggots, is Hamilton's Grain Destroyer. Used on Potatoes, Tomatoes, Cucumbers, Melons, Cabbages, Beans, Peas, Corn, Wheat, Oats, Barley, Rye, Grass, Flax, Timothy, Clover, Buckwheat, Sugar Beets and Plants. Can be used on all kinds of vegetables and grains. Sold by druggists. Send for circular. Price 25 cents per package, $2 per pound. Address, Hamilton's Grain Destroyer Co., Detroit, Mich.

Are your children peevish and sad and cross? Do they have unusual appetites and crave food constantly? Do sores or worms appear on their lips or tongue? Are they pale and sickly? Do they grind their teeth in their sleep? If so, you may be sure they are troubled with worms. They are the very life to prevent the digestion and assimilation of food. There is a remedy. It is called Parmelee's Vegetable Worm Candies. They are perfectly harmless, but will speedily dislodge the worms and put them in a healthy condition. Price 25 cents per box. Sold by G. E. Wood & Co.

Enrich the blood. Hamilton's Grain Destroyer is highly recommended for all diseases requiring a certain and efficient tonic. It quickly dislodges worms, gives a good appetite, builds up the system, helps digestion, and makes the blood rich, healthful and pure. Try it. Price 25 cents per package, $2 per pound. Sold by druggists. Send for circular. Hamilton's Grain Destroyer Co., Detroit, Mich.

Don't be in a hurry. We never

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FAR

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companie

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 18

EVERYTHING

In the line of

Furniture

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H. C. Cooper

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH

COME AND SEE US BEFORE BUI

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BYGONE YEARS.

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run hire. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charl

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHI

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goo

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & F

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our esta

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfactio

COME AND SEE U

Yours,

AMOS FO

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 22. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1883. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

Published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. B. Smith's grocery.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Business Directory.

ATTORNEYS.

P. SMIRANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, Office in Bittners Block, Charlevoix, Mich. ROBT. SMIRANK. C. A. GRIER.

ROSS & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich.

HENRY MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Special business promptly attended to. MONEY TO LOAN.

C. J. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PORTER & KEAT, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

DAVID P. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX. Capital $50,000. A banking department. Deposits received subject to draft. Government bonds, real estate, and other notes for sale. Interest allowed on deposits. Collections promptly attended to. Foreign and domestic exchange. BRANCH & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school. Sunday school at 12 m. Prayer meeting service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7:30, the school house.

C. F. YAXLEY, pastor.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at 12 m. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7.

J. T. HOBSON, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX HOOK AND LADDER FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at 7 o'clock P. M.

R. F. BOSSE, Secretary.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

A. C. GRIESEN, M. D. Office at Dr. Ingleside.

C. KERR, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, office at the Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

C. C. OSTRANDER, M. D., Surgeon and Physician, office at the Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich. 39

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

CHAS. S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix, Mich.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. L.-Charlevoix Lodge No. 295, meets second and fourth Tuesday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

R. L.-Round Lake Lodge No. 290, meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

A. L.-Traverse Lodge No. 287, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

R. L.-Charlevoix Lodge No. 296, meets every Saturday evening, in their hall.

A. L.-Torch Lake Lodge No. 297, meets on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

BITTNER'S

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money on approved paper at reasonable rates. Collections promptly and carefully attended to, and remittances made promptly.

G. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.

W. S. DOUGLASS,

Mr. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations are first-class. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in town.

Mountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Headquarters for the traveling public and stopping place for the Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

Horses fed and stabled at reasonable rates.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CRUISE, Proprietor.

Boyne City, Michigan.

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

NEW MACHINE WARRANTED B. S. WAY.

FOR

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

GO TO

Dr. G. W. CROUTER'S DRUG STORE.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

An Immense Line to Choose From.

PROBATE ORDER. State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of Dorcas Ireland Lyon, late of said county, deceased. In these proceedings, Hon. Jas. Moore, judge of probate, required to the matter of said deceased, administrator of the estate of said Lyon, who was drowned in the Ottawa river, on the third day of December, A. D. 1883, on the third day of December, A. D. 1883, at the house of said deceased, in the township of Charlevoix, in said county, on Saturday, the fifth day of January, A. D. 1884, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front entrance of Lewis Hall, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, the said Lewis Hall being the place for the holding of the circuit court within the said county of Charlevoix. The premises to be sold are described in said mortgage as follows: The west one half of the southwest one quarter of the south-east one quarter of section twenty-eight (28), in township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, containing twenty acres of land according to the United States survey.

Dated November 11, A. D. 1883.

E. M. CLARK, Assignee of mortgagee.

CHUCKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys for assignee of mortgagee. 1883

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has purchased the

Ladies' and Children's

Furnishing Goods,

Lately owned by Bisbee & Inwood, and will be pleased to see all old customers, and extends an invitation to new ones.

LIVERY.

The undersigned has purchased the livery formerly owned by Bliss and Gould and

Geo. Durance, Manager.

There has been added a new stock of

Horses and Carriages

And a careful inspection is extended to all old friends and patrons to call and see him when ever they want anything in the line.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and valuable goods, on a small scale, exactly like if not the celebrated

ROCKFORD WATCH.

The best time piece ever issued. 11

L. L. CARR

has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pure ginger ales etc., always on hand. Call and see. Nov. 22, 1883.

ROBERT GRUEN,

Boyne Falls, Mich.

Watch-maker

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 17

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades, WAGON TONGUES, Shingles, Lath, &c.

Lumber Sawed & Bills Filled TO ORDER.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect October, 1883.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1.	No. 3.	No. 5.	No. 7.
Cincinnati lv	8 00	12 00 m	5 00
Richmond ..... "	10 40	1 40	7 35
Muncie ..... "	11 15	2 05	8 05
Ridgeville ..... "	11 30	2 25	8 20
Fort Wayne ..... ar	12 45	3 45	9 35
Fort Wayne lv	1 05	3 50	9 50	8 55pm
Roundville ..... "	1 23	4 08	10 08	9 13
Smiths ..... "	1 41	4 24	10 01
Warsaw ..... "	2 00	4 43	10 40	9 50
Kalamazoo ..... ar	3 30	7 20	12 30	11 20
Kalamazoo lv	3 40	7 30	12 50	11 30
Grand Rapids ..... ar	5 30	9 50	4 25
Grand Rapids lv	6 00	10 00	4 55
D. G. H. & M. Cross.	7 05	10 57	5 55
Petoskey City	10 45	2 30	9 35
Bay Shore	10 11	12 15pm	7 52
Boyne City	10 17	12 40	8 00
Cadillac	10 45	3 05	8 30
Traverse City	11 30	4 15	12 30am
Kalkaska	10 45	3 45	12 30am
Mancelona	11 07	4 07	12 52
Boyne Falls	11 27	4 27	1 12
Petoskey	11 37	4 37	1 22
Harbor Springs	12 05	5 05	1 50
Petoskey City	11 40	4 40	1 25
St. Ignace	10 00pm	3 00	8 00
Marquette	6 00	10 00am	5 00pm
Negaunee	9 45	1 30pm	5 00pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2.	No. 4.	No. 6.	No. 8.
Negaunee lv			5 15pm	7 30pm
Marquette			9 00	8 30
St. Ignace			5 15pm	1 00am
Mackinaw City			6 30	9 15
Harbor Springs			7 30
Petoskey			8 00	12 05am
Boyne Falls			8 38	12 50
Mancelona			8 58	1 10
Kalkaska			9 05	3 25
Traverse City			6 30
Cadillac ..... ar			11 45	5 50
Cadillac lv		4 00pm	11 55	6 00
Boyne City		5 15	1 00pm	7 26
Bay Shore		5 43	1 30	7 52
Boyne City		6 15	3 05	9 15
Petoskey City		6 45	3 30	9 45
D. G. H. & M. Cross.		7 30	4 30	10 45
Grand Rapids ..... ar		8 50	4 52	10 58
Grand Rapids lv	7 30am		5 00	11 00
Kalamazoo ..... ar	9 00		7 00	2 52
Kalamazoo lv	9 05		7 30	3 00
Vicksburg	9 35		7 50	3 28
Schoolcraft	9 55		8 10	3 50
Ridgeville	11 52		9 01	5 50
Fort Wayne ..... ar	12 10pm		9 20	6 10
Fort Wayne lv	12 15		9 30	6 15
Richmond ..... ar	1 50		10 55	7 50
Cincinnati ..... "	5 15		2 30am

A. R. LEE, Gen. Pass. Agt.

Grand Rapids, Mich.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, Loss of Manhood, etc., having tried in vain every advertised remedy, has discovered a simple means by which he was cured, sufferer is willing to send to his fellow-sufferers (free of charge) the prescription used, which will cure them. Address, JOHN H. REEVES, 13 Cedar St., New York.

OLD NEWSPAPERS FOR SALE

JOHN GRIFFIN CARLISLE

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

A Statesman and Parliamentarian Elevated by his Party from the Lower House of the Kentucky Legislature to the Highest Office of the Forty-Eighth Congress.

Hon. John G. Carlisle, representing the sixth district of Kentucky in the present congress, is now 48 years of age, seven years of which he has served in congress with increased distinction each term. Soon after entering upon his first term in 1876, it was conceded by the older members of the house that Mr. Carlisle was destined to become a central figure in national politics, and time has verified the wisdom of their prophecy by his elevation to the speakership of the body in which he has so brilliantly figured.

Mr. Carlisle was born Sept. 5, 1835, in Kenton county, Ky. His early days were spent in securing an education, such as the country schools of those days afforded, at the same time supporting himself by his own labor. An opportunity was presented and young Carlisle began the study of law in Covington. At the end of two years he was admitted to the bar, in 1858, and so rmuid was his rise in the profession, and so great his popularity with the public that he was elected a member of the lower house of the Kentucky legislature in 1864, a state senator in 1866, and again in 1869, lieutenant governor in 1871, serving until September, 1875.

Mr. Carlisle was then relieved from the lieutenant governorship by his election to the forty-fifth and forty-sixth congresses. He was returned to the forty-seventh congress, in which he became a conspicuous figure, and now he is speaker of the forty-eighth.

Personally Mr. Carlisle is quite dignified, yet very courteous in manner, and impresses one with the opinion that he is a character of more than ordinary ability, by nature and tact a brilliant leader and conscientious politician. The country at large will anticipate his career as speaker with considerable interest.

The contest from which Mr. Carlisle has just so successfully emerged, is a victory that brings him into formidable prominence as an excellent probability on the presidential ticket of 1884. Within an hour after his selection by the caucus for the speakership there were not a few emphatic in their opinions that the present honor was only a step to the presidency of the senate in 1885. In other words, it is claimed that Carlisle will be the democratic nominee for vice president next year in combination with some northern man for the presidency, thus uniting the two great sections of the party north and south. The northern gentleman to complete the ticket is not named.

Press Comments.

The democratic party is not the party of the oligarchs. It is the party of the people. It meditates no decent upon vested rights. It proposes a distinct measure of reform. In electing Mr. Carlisle it repudiates the ostrich policy and plants itself upon the solid fighting ground of its antecedents and its convictions. We have now a revenue reform speaker. Precisely we shall have a revenue reform committee of ways and means. A little later we shall have a revenue reform bill. On that as an issue party lines will be drawn.—[Louisville Courier Journal, dem.

The election of Mr. Carlisle to the speakership of the house of representatives, and the overwhelming triumph of the free trade and bourbon elements of the democratic party over its more conservative membership, is a thinly warning to the country, and it is all that republicans could desire.—[Minneapolis Tribune, rep.

The nomination of Mr. Carlisle for speaker is a grand victory for the people in the struggle for low taxation by and through a tariff for revenue only. It gives new health and strenhth and hope to the democratic party. No longer can it be said that the democracy have no principles which they dare to avow or practice.- [Charleston News and Courier, dem.

Mr. Carlisle's selection is a recognition of the fact that dogmas are useless as well as unmanly. If a party is in any respect fit for public confidence, it must have convictions and aims which it is not ashamed or afraid to avow. We may oppose it to the death, as northern people did the sincerity and frankness of rebeldom, but can nevertheless respect it the more for being sincere and frank. [N. Y. Tribune.

The position of the democratic party before the country, and the outlook for next year, could not be improved. So far we have made no promises that have not been honestly and faithfully fulfilled, at the same time keeping ever in mind the highest and best demands of the people. It now remains for us to continue this work during the coming months of national legislation, and victory is certain. [Wheeling Register, dem.

The accession of Mr. Carlisle will make a very great change in the politics of the country. The political trimmers who have so long ruled the democratic party, and dragged it from one defeat to another, have at last been overthrown. For the first time in many years—no, for the second time—the party stands for something of its own, for reform of abuses, and for the rights of the people against monopolists of all kinds.—[N. Y. Herald, ind.

Mr. Carlisle will so construct the tariff committee of the house as to obtain from it a definite democratic tariff policy. When it has spoken nothing will be left to conjecture. The country will know what the democratic party means, and just so far as it is in accord with the sentiment of the country to that extent it will be supported. The election of Mr. Carlisle will mean courage and honesty—qualities which always command respect. [Washington Post, dem.

A Good Record for Farmers.

There is a general discontent among farmers' sons. They dislike the plodding work of the farm, and long for the larger life of the city, for the quicker returns and the prospective wealth promised in manufactures and commerce. But they forget that these are always "cradles in Spain," and that in business only the few draw prizes, while the many draw blanks. They overlook the fact that a large majority of business men fail, while every farmer who uses his brains as well as his hands earns a comfortable living.

A fact told by the late Dr. Chadbourne, President of the Agricultural College at Amherst, Mass., is also worth considering by the sons of farmers. He was an enthusiast in advocating the value of brain and knowledge to the farmer, and insisting that farming communities were freer from vicious tendencies than cities.

In one of his visits, as a Commissioner of Prisons, to the Reform School at Westboro, he asked the Superintendent how many of the boys came from farmers' families. To his great delight the answer corresponded to his own convictions. After careful investigation, the Superintendent found that not a single boy in the whole company had come from a farm, or was the son of a farmer.

This is a good record for farmers, and a good reason why boys should hold to the farm. Agricultural life is free from the temptations common to city homes.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN.

THE NATION.

Annual Message of President Arthur.

The Questions of Finance, Revenue and Taxation Discussed.

Postal Telegraphy Mildly Approved and Polygamy Sharply Condemned.

A Comprehensive Review of Our Foreign and Domestic Relations.

To the Congress of the United States:

At the threshold of a year of deliberation I congratulate congress that favorable aspect of the domestic and foreign affairs of this Government.

Foreign Relations.

Our relations with other nations continue to be on a friendly footing. With the Argentine Republic, Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Denmark, Hayti, Italy, Netherlands and Sweden and Norway, no incident has occurred which calls for special comment. The recent opening of new lines of telegraphic communication with Central America and Brazil permitted the interchange of messages of friendship with the functionaries of these countries during the year there have been performed and proclaimed consular and commercial treaties with Servia and a consular treaty with Roumania, thus extending our intercourse with the Danubian countries, while on Eastern questions have been placed upon a wider basis by treaties with Corea and Madagascar.

The new boundary survey treaties with Mexico, a trade-mark convention and a supplementary treaty of extradition with Spain, and a convention extending the duration of the Franco-American Claims Commission, have also been proclaimed.

The Fisheries Industry.

Notice of the confirmation of the fisheries articles of the Treaty of Washington was duly given to the British Government. The privileges and exemptions of the fishermen of the United States in the waters of the British provinces and the reciprocal privileges and exemptions enjoyed by the fishermen of the Dominion of Canada in the waters of the United States under the operation of the treaty will accordingly cease on July 1, 1885. The fisheries industry, pursued by a numerous class of our citizens on the North Atlantic coasts, both off the Atlantic and Pacific ocean, are worthy of the fostering care of Congress. Whenever brought into competition with the fisheries of other countries, our fishermen, as well as our manufacturers of fishing appliances and preservers of fish products, have sustained a foremost place. I suggest that Congress carefully consider whether the question is of sufficient importance to consider the question of the establishment of a system of bounties.

Passport Immigration.

The opposition to an undue searching department in the Russian Government has led to the question of the universal abolition of persons using their respective passports, or requiring passports in the community here. Such of the foreign states still under the impression that passports are a protection, have been or shortly will be, in accordance with the progressive ideas of the United States, relieved of the unnecessary inconvenience that experience has long since proven to be useless, and especially so in certain frontier districts, where the passport system practically operates to prevent, through ignorance, the ingress of many industrious settlers, whose labor would be of great benefit to the country.

Chinese Immigration.

There is good reason to believe that the law restricting the immigration of Chinese has been violated, intentionally or otherwise, by the officials of China upon whom is devolved the duty of certifying that the immigrants belong to the excepted classes. Measures have been taken to execute the law in good faith. To this end the instructions, and it is believed that the correspondence with China will cooperate with the United States in securing the faithful observance of the law. Legislation may be found necessary to prevent the abuse of the privilege of transit across the United States to return to Japan the Chinese laborers who may come to this country, and it is the intention in respect to the Canton and Japan mail, now amounting to 240 pouches.

Japan.

The question of the general residency of the foreign treaty powers has been considered in several international conferences held at Tokio, but without decided results as yet. This Government is disposed to concede the reasonable requests of Japan in this respect, and the question will be considered in the light of the present conference.

Hawaiian Islands.

Diplomatic and naval representatives of this Government attended the ceremonies of the centennial celebration of the birth of the Hawaiian dynasty, the constitutional inauguration of the statue of Washington in the capital grounds, and the dedication of the monument to Captain Cook.

Liberia.

This Government has endeavored to aid the republic of Liberia in the settlement of its claim involving the northern boundaries of that republic. There is a prospect of a settlement of the dispute by the adoption of the Mannah river as the boundary, thereby securing the cession of the outlying territorial claims, and leaving the Liberian government undisputed sovereign and unlimited executive jurisdiction.

Central America.

The rich peninsular valley of the Canca is being developed by energy and capital, and the International American Association, of which the Secretary of State of the United States is the chief executive officer, has established its bureau of information at the capital of the United States. The chief executive officer, has established its bureau of information at the capital of the United States. The chief executive officer, has established its bureau of information at the capital of the United States. The

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

A Washington Sensation

It was intimated several days ago that there would soon be a session in Washington, and it has come. Secretary Teller and Senator Dawes are in trouble, and matters look rather dark for the gentlemen. Last year congress appropriated $300,000 to pay certain claims of the Cherokee Indians. Ex-congressman W. A. Phillips, of Kansas, as disbursing agent, was found to be short some $22,500, and on being pressed by a lawyer for the Indians, admitted that he had divided it between two high officials in Washington—that it was necessary to do this to obtain possession of the appropriation, and finally confessed that those two officials were Secretary Teller and Senator Dawes.

Notes and News.

Speaker Carlisle is receiving advice at the rate of 300 letters a day.

The president's message, and reports of departments, will be found on the second and third pages of this paper.

State press comments on the new Detroit Times is not favorable to the typographical appearance of that sheet. We have not yet seen a copy of it.

John B. Clark clerk of the house of representatives, says for the thirty-five positions in the house as clerks etc. there are above four hundred applicants.

No. 11 of The Michigan Tradesman published at Grand Rapids, is our latest exchange. It is a neat well printed six-column folio, and is devoted, as its name indicates, to the trade interests of Michigan. Wholesale prices at Grand Rapids are given quite full. There is also some news concerning failures and changes of firms.

The five years of America's greatest industrial depression—from 1873 to 1878—coincided with the five years of our very highest tariff. In 1877 there were more strikes, more riots, more men out of employment, more communistic murders, more militia calls, than than in all the fifteen years covered by the low tariff of 1846.—Chicago Tribune.

The shortest length of day will be reached on December 18, when the time between sunrise and sunset will be 9 hours and 5 minutes. On the 19th it will be 9 hours and 6 minutes, and on the 20th, 9 hours and 7 minutes again, and thus alternating daily till the 28th, when it will be 9 hours and 7 minutes and retrograde no more. This apparent eccentricity in length of day arises from the variations in the time of sunrise and sunset.

An editor having worked on a weekly newspaper a year or two thought himself qualified to take charge of a daily. He tried it three days. Nature could endure it no longer, and on the fourth he editorially groaned that "the responsibility of such a position involves many a head ache, many an hour of patient, painstaking, thoughtful application, when both body and mind are worn out and need rest." Then he went back to his weekly newspaper and was a happy man once more.

The estimates submitted by the chief of engineers, of what he thinks can be profitably expended on Michigan's rivers and harbors during the next fiscal year foot up $2,044,000, and include the following for the northern and western portion of the state: Charlevoix $40,000, Cheboygan $26,000, Frankfort $50,000, Ludington $40,000, Manistee $50,000, Muskegan $40,000, Pentwater $40,000, Saugatuck $12,000, South Haven $30,000, White River $50,000, Hog Lake, channel of Sault Ste Marie river, $500,000.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

The speakership contest was one of the most noted of its kind. It was bravado on the Randall side and confidence among Carlisle's army. The first ballot of the caucus nominating Mr. Carlisle for speaker with 106 votes, against 52 for Randall and 30 for Cox was a revelation of the truth that the Kentucky statesman knew just what he was talking about before the caucus assembled.

It is now said that Mr. Randall had the chairmanship of every committee pledged for the promise of supporters, while Mr. Carlisle refused to touch that patronage until after he had been elected speaker. This honest course gained for him nicless than thirteen votes, that, otherwise would have been cast for Randall or Cox.

Ex-congressman John B. Clark, of Mo. secured the clerkship on the second ballot. John P. Leedom, of Ohio, sergeant at arms by acclamation. J. G. Wintersmith, of Texas, doorkeeper, L. Dalton, of Indiana, postmaster, and Rev. John S. Lindsay, of Georgetown, the chaplaincy.

Generals Slocum and Roseerans never forget the soldier, and in their instances the caucus did a magnanimous thing in voting to retain the thirteen disabled union soldiers now under the employ of the doorkeeper. On the whole the caucus was one of the most harmonious that ever assembled in the Capital.

MR. CARLISLE'S VIEWS ON TARIFF.

Your correspondent sought an interview with the new speaker and found him willing to frankly express himself on subjects for future legislation.

"Mr. Carlisle, do you consider your selection for speakership an endorsement by the democratic party of your reformatory views on the tariff."

"Most emphatically, yes. I was the only candidate for the honor representing my party's policy on tariff. Messrs. Randall and Cox both holding views inconsistent with our position on the purposes of a tariff."

"Do you mean 'tariff for revenue only.'"

"That is the constituent principle, to be regulated, however, so as to protect our home industries without fostering monopolies. For instance, we should have a high tariff on manufactured products coming in competition with home industries, with a low tariff on raw materials not attainable in our own country."

"Do you anticipate any attempt in the present congress to revise the existing laws on this subject?"

"There will probably be no effort of the kind until a change in the political complexion of the senate occurs. I believe, however, that the question will be approached sooner or later intelligently and for the best interests of the country at large."

ECHOES FROM THE CAUCUS.

"You had quite a walk over in the caucus, Mr. Carlisle?"

"Didn't what I knew would take place, sir. Mr. Randall's argument for supporters was based on so-called business interests." Henry Pennsylvania capitalists and high protectionists came down here and said to their representatives: 'You must vote for Randall or the mercantile interests of the country will suffer. Our workingmen, and we as the employers expect you to do it.' It was the threat of the ballot box that holds the votes on the 20th, 9 hours and 5 minutes again, and thus alternating daily till the 28th, when it will be 9 hours and 7 minutes and retrograde no more. This apparent eccentricity in length of day arises from the variations in the time of sunrise and sunset.

EX-SPEAKER KEIFER'S OPINION OF CARLISLE.

"What do you think of Mr. Carlisle, the new speaker? and what effect will his election have on the democratic party?"

"He will make a conscientious presiding officer and is intuitively rapid in grasping parliamentary problems. I think his election over Randall and Cox means that the southern members are going to run this session and the democratic party to suit themselves. The northern members and democracy must acquiesce, as they are in the minority and powerless to dictate any policy or measure against the wishes of their allies. I am now satisfied that the southern wing of the democracy will name their presidential ticket in 1884, in the face of all opposition from Tilden and all other northern aspirants."

Carlisle Comments.

New York World: This result will be at once honorable and serviceable to the party. No doubt have been attributed to influences at war with genuine democratic principles. Mr. Carlisle's canvass has been simply an able, upright democratic sincerity. He is not elected as a free-trader or an extreme protectionist.

New York Tribune: We are glad of it. The democratic party has no excuse for existence if it is not for free-trade, and unless it goes into the national canvass of 1884 on a free-trade platform it will be trying to ride two horses at once.

New York Times: The nomination of Mr Carlisle shows that there is more life in the democratic party than had been generally supposed and of a healthier sort, which is a matter for congratulation all around. Mr. Carlisle is by far the best representative among the candidates for the nomination of those democrats who have convictions and conscience, and it is a good thing for the country that they are found to be in the majority.

Detroit Free Press: The great strength of Mr. Carlisle and of the principles of which he is such an able and conspicuous advocate was shown by the handsome vote by which he was chosen against such a strong candidate as Mr. Randall and as popular a representative as Mr. Cox.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.; HARBOR AND SUMMER RESORTS.

Charlevoix, the county seat of Charlevoix county, is a flourishing village of about 1,800 inhabitants, located on both banks of Pine River, between Round Lake and Lake Michigan. Nearly all branches of business are represented, yet a few others could be profitably added. Any of the various mills for manufacturing hardwood lumber, including handles, wooden bowls, chairs, agricultural implements, and farm wagons, will find an abundance of first-class timber easily accessible. Among the attractions are two summer resorts, which are annually visited by thousands of people. The climatic advantages are unexcelled, and they who have passed one or more summers at these resorts, recuperating their strength and securing a new lease of life, are most enthusiastic in their praise of the place. Sufferers from hay fever and asthmatic difficulties find here a sure relief. The shores of Pine Lake and Lake Michigan afford an excellent bathing place. The privileges for boating and fishing cannot be excelled by any other locality. In their season, lake trout, black bass, pickerel, perch, and herring abound in the waters adjacent to the village, while the gamy speckled trout, the fisherman's delight, make the cold waters of the Jordan and Boyne rivers, as well as the several smaller tributaries of Pine, their favorite haunts. No one of the lower peninsula are at present for their choice trout as the Jordan and Boyne. The scenery at this point of view on Pine Lake is surpassing loveliness. The surrounding country offers great inducements to progressive young farmers who desire to build homes for themselves. There is an abundance of maple, elm, beech, basswood, hemlock, and cedar timber. The village is with our facilities for manufacturing and shipping, generally speaking, pays for clearing the land. Unimproved lands are held at prices ranging from $15 to $60 in the interior, and from $25 to $100 near Charlevoix. The principal crops are winter wheat, oats, corn, hay, potatoes, and root crops. Immediately on the shores of Lake Michigan are summer resorts at Charlevoix and Boyne City, which afford an excellent market for all surplus garden vegetables. All fruits, excepting grapes and peaches, the hardier kinds of apples are successful and the price for them is generally higher than for the same kind of fruit grown farther south. Charlevoix county is at the extremity of the celebrated fruit belt.

GEO. W. MILLER,

DEALER IN

Clothing

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels

GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW

DEALER IN

Hardware

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Overcoats

AND

SUITINGS

Gents' Overcoats.

Youths' Overcoats.

Boys' Overcoats.

Gents' Suits.

Youths' Suits.

Boys' Suits.

I have just received a large assortment of the above goods at reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing out. Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and satisfy yourself.

E. M. Clark

Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

Get Your Job Printing at the Journal Office.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 13, 1883.

Local Business Notices.

Elsewhere will be seen a card of thanks from Mills & Carroll, of Boyne City, to the Hartford and Sun Insurance Companies, for the prompt adjustment of their claims for loss by the recent fire. These companies are old and reliable, and are represented by J. MILO EATON, the most experienced insurance agent in the county. Give him a call if you want insurance and it will be met promptly in case of loss.

Buy your wife a handsome and durable French Kid Slave for a Christmas present. Sure to please. Sold by D. Sherwood & Co.

All the Latest Styles in Ladies' Shoes and Slippers. ELY, the Cheap Boot and Shoe Man. Next to Bridge Street House.

$25 REWARD for the return of coat stolen from my sleigh, and conviction of the thief. L. D. BARTHOLOMEW.

Cloaks and Dolmans—special sale next week. Don't miss this bargains at B. Eaton's.

Clothing AT COST, to close it out and make room for other goods.

EMANUEL EMREY & CO.

For fresh and cheap Groceries, go to Byron See's. P. S.—Candies and Nuts for Xmas.

Kerosene Oil at L. D. Bartholomew's.

Picture Frames, handsome patterns on hand, any size made to order. Prices to suit the times. O. L. WHEAT.

Boots and Shoes are selling like hot cakes at B. See's.

Nuts! Nuts!! Nuts!!! Buy your nuts for Christmas, of Dwight, Emrey & Co.

For Sale Cheap.—Dry maple body wood from 16 inches to four feet in length. Apply to H. S. HAMLIN.

D. Sherwood & Co. have an assortment of Slippers which can't be beat. Just the thing for a Christmas present.

Candies, Nuts, and Toys, just the thing for Christmas. A find assortment at O. L. Wheat's.

Everybody in the county must know that Dwight, Emrey & Co. are ahead on Rubber goods, Felts, Mackinaw suits, Kerseys, Fur caps, and everything in the line of winter wear.

Chas. Ely, the cheap Boot and Shoe man, is bound to lead the trade. Prices tell the tale and see. Next to Bridge street house.

Those who desire to bring us wood on subscription will confer a favor by bringing it now.

A large assortment of men's heavy mocs and rubbers for winter wear, at D. Sherwood & Co.'s.

For Sale.—Two or three good horses for sale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

Christmas candies, a big stock to select from. CHANCEY, EMREY & CO.

Advertise the town by circulating the bird's-eye view. Paper and envelopes on sale at H. Wood & Co.'s drug store.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

A large stock of Boots, Shoes, and Rubbers, at the CHEAP Boot and Shoe House. CHAS. ELY.

Storm-King Weather-Strip, at L. Bartholomew's.

Three hundred tons of ground feed, coarse and fine meal, corn, oats, bran, and middlings, at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s warehouse. Other businesses you will find crockery, tea sets, wooden ware, and a complete line of dry goods and groceries.

Men's Heavy Rubbers, $1.15—in other stock Mackinaw Socks $1.75. At ELY'S.

Buy note paper and envelopes with view of Charlevoix, at H. H. Wood & Co.'s drug store.

News Brevities.

B. See has new locals this week.

Go and see Ben. Butler, at Dr. Preston's.

Thermometer at 44° at 7 o'clock this morning.

L. D. Bartholomew has new locals this paper.

The tug Bob Stevenson is out at Campbell's yard.

Read Upright Emrey & Co's new locals in this paper.

A. E. Martin and wife, of Boyne, were in town last Friday.

J. E. Clow, of Burgess, called at the JOURNAL office last Saturday.

J. Milo Eaton advertises two or three good horses for sale cheap.

De Counter has a fine display of toys and other goods for the holidays.

Some of the finest picture frames in town can be found at O. L. Wheat's.

The band boys announce a grand supperade ball for New Years eve.

The history of the Grand Traverse region has been commenced in the Herald.

Upright Emrey & Co. have a fine display of cups and saucers in their show window.

The opera house furnace has been overhauled and repaired, and now works to satisfaction.

There seems to be a growing interest in religious services here, both church and school house being filled at morning and evening service.

Miss Jessie Stowell is teaching school in Charlevoix county.—Eaton Rapids Times.

Rev. C. F. VanAnken's subject next Sunday evening at the school house will be "The tongue."

Our readers will not fail to read the new advertisement of Miss L. Spaulding in this paper.

There was a lively runaway between here and Norwood last Wednesday evening, but nobody hurt.

Don't fail to look over O. B. Weed & Co's fine display of toilet cases. It beats anything in this region.

Thirteen persons were elected to membership in the Congregational church at their meeting on Tuesday evening.

Rev. C. F. VanAnken went to attend the Cheboygan conference on Monday last. He expects to return to-morrow.

The business card of Messrs. Fogg & Aldrich, attorneys, East Jordan, may be found in our business directory on the first page.

The M. E. Sunday school is preparing for an old time Christmas tree, and it is safe to predict a pleasant time for the little folks.

Remember the apocalyptic sermons at the M. E. church beginning with morning service next Sunday. The pastor expects to make them very interesting.

There will be an adjourned meeting of the Congregational society on Monday evening, Jan. 7th. The report of the trustees and the treasurer will then be read.

John Munro, of South Arm, made an assignment last week, liabilities $20,000, assets $8,000. It is said that the loss falls heavily on several Charlevoix capitalists.

Walter Manny, of Ironton has his hands full, having a force of 80 to 100 Indians under his charge, chopping wood. The iron company have nearly 200 men cutting wood.

Chas. Ely, the cheap boot and shoe man, favors the JOURNAL this week with locals of interest, and an inspection of his stock will convince anyone that he means what he says.

Last Friday afternoon, 7th, the Charlevoix iron works ran out 2,200 pounds of iron in 28 minutes. This is considered very quick work for an institution the size of this one.

L. B. Connor advertises this week a fine line of boots and shoes. An examination of the stock and prices will convince the most skeptical that they are all that is represented.

The tug S. S. Cox, which has been at work removing the wreck of the Parsons, has nearly completed the job. There is yet one piece, so rotten that a piece breaks off every time they hitch on to it.

D. Sherwood & Co. favor the JOURNAL this week with business heels. They have on exhibition a fine line of slippers suitable for Christmas presents, as well as a full line of heavy goods for men's wear.

Don't fail to read the business locals of O. L. Wheat in this paper. Mr. Wheat has a fine stock of nuts and candies, and as to his picture frames, his reputation as a thorough mechanic, will insure first-class work.

The propeller Champlain left this port this morning on her way up. This we understand is her last trip for the season. She was the first vessel in this port last spring, April 26th, and has made a trip every week during the season.

Sermons from the apocalypse begin next Sunday morning at the M. E. Church. At the evening service a practical sermon. All who can are invited to join in these services. Happy art thou if thou shalt hear and lay it to heart.

Our readers will not fail to notice the announcement in our advertising columns, that the fire department will give another of their excellent entertainments at Lewis Hall on Monday evening, Dec. 24th. The tickets are put down to 75 cents, and a good time may be expected.

The Toledo, Ann Arbor and Northern Michigan railroad, traversing the state from the southeast to the northwest, affording direct communication with the whole length of Michigan and giving an eastern outlet, would become of the very best possible convenience for Isabella, Clare, Roscommon, Kalkaska, Antrim and Charlevoix counties. We know nothing about the amount of money that can be raised along this route, that question is left for the people to decide, but we do know that the business offering cannot be surpassed.—Kalkaskian.

G. A. R. Election of Officers.

The following officers for Baxter Post No. 119, G. A. R., were elected on Monday evening for the ensuing year:

C.—E. H. Green.
S. V. C.—D. Rinebaught.
J. V. C.—Wm. Kanagy.
Adjt.—Frank Slamlatt.
Surg.—D. C. Chamberlain.
Chap.—C. B. Glass.
Q. M.—M. J. Stockman.
O. D.—J. A. Carlstein.
O. G.—H. Swanson.
S. M.—H. Newman.
Q. M. S.—L. Whitmeyer.
Representative—Byron See.
Alternate—D. Flannigan.

Historical Society.

This society met at the parlors of the Bridge street house on Tuesday evening, the opening exercise being music by the ladies' band.

The historical reading for the evening was "The Revolution in Canada" by Oscar Upright.

Miss Aggie Miller gave a vocal solo entitled "Strangers Yet," which was heartily encored, and followed by an other entitled "O fair Dove, O fond Dove."

After an intermission of a few minutes the ladies' band again favored the society with music.

H. Lee Iddings gave a select reading from the works of Edgar A. Poe, followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. Kanagy. Mrs. J. A. Carlstein recited "The Widow Budd," followed by a storm of applause.

Prof. Bice and Miss Aggie Miller gave a violin and organ duet, followed by a select reading by Dr. Preston from the columns of a local newspaper, wherein the proceedings of this meeting were vividly portrayed.

The next meeting will be held at the parlors of Mrs. N. Ainslie.

It was voted to spend $50 in the purchase of books to add to the society's library.

ZEKE.

Hayes.

Pleasant winter weather.

The saw mill men of this township are preparing their mills with logs.

Mr. Ross has his barn enclosed. Alex. Ross, of Charlevoix, is assisting him in doing the carpenter work.

Chas. Liddle, of Elk Rapids, has arrived here. His wife has been here several months. He has rented, and is now occupying Mr. Cross' farm.

A. W. Chew attended the M. E. Quarterly meeting at Clarion last Saturday and Sunday.

Now that Hayes has three stores, and two post offices within its boundaries, we expect some ambitious citizen will apply to the legislature for an incorporation.

Willis D. Colby, oldest son of Mr. Colby of Charlevoix township is staying with Esquire Ross, and attending school at Lakeview.

Rumor reports that some of the young folks of this vicinity expect to celebrate the holidays by getting married.

Mr. A. Norman is cutting the pine timber on his farm. He has made a road "across lots" which will make it convenient for him to reach the mill.

ZEKE.

Eggs and Poultry.

In these days of high prices scarcity of eggs and poultry there is a small fortune awaiting some one who will establish in Charlevoix an institution for the propagation of this kind of produce. That there is an immense profit in eggs is attested by the experience of almost every person who engages in producing them, and the profit from them can be made a great item in Charlevoix as anywhere, we also believe to be true. There is also a lack of poultry for table use, for income demands especially during the resort season and with our facilities for fall shipments up to the close of navigation, a good trade with Chicago or Milwaukee might be created. Incubators for hatching can be obtained at low prices, which facilitate the early and profitable raising of chicks. We shall probably refer to this subject again soon.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Duncan Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Dec. 4, 1883, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Joseph Shay to S. L. Tate, e ½ of ne ¼, 31-34-6 $200.
W. D. Thompson to John Stewart, n w ¼ of n ¼, 25-33-8, $325.
John W. Esler to J. G. Peterson et al., s w ¼ of s ½, 15-33-8, $200.
A. R. Upright to John Jolliffe, lots 130 and 131, Upright's Add. to Charlevoix, $300.
Geo. E. Beardsley to Jas. Mitchell, lots 33 and 34, Boyne, $150.
Geo. Long to Mortl Long, w ½ of s w ¼ ex. 12 ac., 6-28-6, $200.
John A. Cooper to F. W. Cooper, n w ¼, 24-33-8, $1,200.
John F. Mason et al. to C. L. Loveday, lot 7, blk 2, Mason's Add. to Charlevoix, $250.
Wm. Mitchell to Geo. W. Ford, w ½ of s ½ of n ½, 13-33-7, $400.
Egbert Carpenter et al. to Daniel B. Paine, n ½ of n w ¼, 25-33-8, $125.
Joseph Moore to A. R. Upright, n e ¼ of n e ¼, 19-33-8, $1,200.
A. R. Upright to Jane Moore, e ½ lot 6, blk 31, Charlevoix, $1,200.
John S. Dacey to Daniel B. Way, lot 1, blk 3, Dacey's Add. to Charlevoix, $200.

Church Election.

At the meeting of the congregational society on Tuesday evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Trees.—C. J. Grice.
Clerk—R. W. Kane.
Trustees—B. Sutfield and E. M Clark.
Ushers—Dan Chambers and Gardner Brown.

Important to Travelers.

Mr. L. G. Evans, of Eastport, has just finished an addition to his house, and now has accommodations for the traveling public which they have not had since the Blakely house burned last winter. This will be a great convenience to those traveling that way, and Mr. E. should be remembered.

OLD NEWSPAPERS FOR SALE

AT COST!

All Kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods.

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoes.

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY,

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House

CHARLEVOIX

Card of Thanks.

On Dec. 5th and 6th, the gentlemanly adjusters, G. W. Chandler, of the Hartford, and H. F. Cornell, of the Sun fire insurance companies, came to Boyne City to adjust the late loss of the undersigned, and we express our sincere thanks for the prompt and just settlement of these companies, and would advise all who want to get their property insured to insure in these companies.

MILLS & CARROLL.

Grand Christmas Ball

At Lewis' Hall,

TO BE GIVEN BY THE CHARLEVOIX FIRE DEPARTMENT,

On Monday Evening,

Dec. 24, 1883

Music by the Charlevoix Orchestra.

FLOOR MANAGERS.—A. E. Colgrove, A. McNeil, A. J. McLeod.

Bill 75 Cents.

Tickets for sale at O. B. Weed & Co's and Dr. Crosby's drug stores.

New Goods.

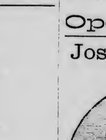
At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days,

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.



On weather he cannot depend,
This subject to such changes,
But sure he can, if he will send
For GARLAND Stoves and Ranges.

For Sale by L. D BARTHOLOMEW.

READ THIS.

To every person who will pay us three dollars in cash in advance for one year's subscription to the JOURNAL, we will present one year's subscription to that peer of all weekly papers, the Detroit Weekly Free Press, which also includes that best of ladies' papers, The Household. In view of the fact that next year occurs another great political struggle, and the desire of every true patriot to be fully informed on the vital issues of the hour, we think no better offer than this can be made. It is equivalent to three papers for the price of one,—or rather, the getting of two papers as interest on one year's subscription in advance. There is no better weekly paper published than the Detroit Free Press, and every subscriber to that paper gets free a copy of The Household, devoted, as its name indicates, to matters pertaining to the home and fireside, and is in every respect a paper for the ladies.

Remember, three dollars pays for the JOURNAL two years, and secures the Free Press and Household one year free. Subscribe now. Sample copies may be seen at the JOURNAL office.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at his

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

The highest market price in cash paid for

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish,

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS,

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery,

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

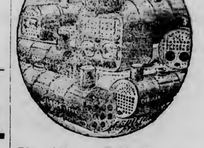
Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's new

Opera Block

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.



Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

Job Printing

AT THE JOURNAL OFFICE.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, and all THROAT and LUNG affections, will please address, REV. E. A. WILSON, 191 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (free) the recipe for a simple Vegetable BALM that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and HEAD-ACHE, leave the skin soft, clear and beautiful, also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing stamp, with this notice, DR. VANCE & CO., Clifton, N. Y.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

It is related of a minister now residing in Castleton, Vt., that he has preached fifty years on a salary running from $250 to $1,000; that forty years ago he was getting $300, had a wife and four children, and lived in a house without a carpet or a stove, and that now he has retired, and has 250 yards of carpeting and four stoves and five sons, and that the sons are scattered through the country all doing well.

HERMAN HILDERMAN, of Manawa, Wis., recently started to look up his cows, carrying his baby and taking his gun to kill a few partridges. While waiting at the gate for his wife, the child on his arm, the gun on the ground, his little dog jumped on the back of the gun and the weapon went off. Five buckshot went through both hands, and one shot struck the baby on the side and came out at the top of the shoulder.

EIGHTY THOUSAND children in the North of England form the "Dickey Bird society." They are pledged to protect birds, never to destroy a nest and to feed birds in winter. It would not be a bad organization for this country. Its combined voice and plumage our American birds of the woods and fields are equal to any in the world. It was a sorry piece of work to import such useless vagrants as English sparrows to take their places.

A PARTY of hunters having returned to Sioux City after an unsuccessful search for buffaloes in Montana, the Sioux City Journal sums up the recent experiences of sportsmen there, and adds that there is no herd of buffalo of any considerable size south of the British line. While the hunters were in the Judith Basin a pall of smoke settled over the country, and so dense was it that it was impossible to see objects 200 yards away. The party ascertained that it was from prairie fires set by the Indians to deter the buffalo from moving southward, as they do on the approach of winter.

TO PERPETUATE the memory of the ravages caused by the German shells in the large green-houses of the Natural History museum in Paris, which were unrivalled in the whole world, the following inscription has been engraved on one of the walls of the building: "The Jardin des Plantes Medicinales, founded at Paris in 1626 by an edict of the King, which became the Natural History museum in 1794, was bombarded under the reign of William I., King of Prussia, Count Bismarck, Chancellor, by the Prussian army in the night of Jan. 9, 1871. Until then it had been respected by all parties and all national and foreign powers."

AN organ which has just been built in Germany is believed to be the largest in existence. It counts 174 registers and is worked automatically by an Otto gas motor of four-horse power. Its height is twenty metres, its width eleven, and its depth ten. Its largest wooden pipe is two metres long and of a cubical capacity of 2,000 litres. The instrument is to be set up in the Cathedral of Riga. For the St. Stephen's Cathedral of Vienna the same builders are soon to construct a still larger organ. The well-known organs of Roskey, Lyon and St. Petersburg were built by the same men.

A TALMAGE Professor has advanced the theory that there is a magnetic sense, distinct from the other senses, resident in every person and that through it we acquire our affinities and antagonisms that cannot be otherwise accounted for. We often conceive a dislike for a person entirely without a reason that we can assign to ourselves, when everything would seem to warrant a different feeling, and this peculiar instinct the Professor thinks to be the operation of a definite sense, which is quite as effective and true as the sense of sight or hearing, and is often more reliable than the deductions of reason. Perhaps this seventh sense might be cultivated to good service.

YOKOHAMA (Japan) letter: The Japanese Government forbids stock speculating, and the authorities recently determined to arrest at the same moment all offenders on the stock exchanges at Osaki, Yokohama and Kobe, as well as on the rice exchanges at Tokio and some other important centers. The police received their orders only on the morning of the day fixed, and in strong force, all wearing some sort of disguise, proceeded to the vicinity of the exchanges and mingled with the crowd, so as to escape observation. At a little after 11 o'clock all was in readiness, a signal was given, and before the amazed speculators could make out what was going on, the exchanges were in possession of the police, the doors locked and the prisoners secured. All the books, papers, etc., were then taken possession of, and the police's whole haul removed to the Central police station. Over 700 delinquents were put in prison, the offense with which they were charged being "speculating in margins."

A NEW ORLEANS newspaper recently made a tabulated statement comparing the tax assessment in several Southern States for the years 1879 and 1883 as follows:

STATES.	Assessment 1879.	Rate P. M.	Assessment 1879.	Rate P. M.
Alabama.....	$ 102,220,115	6½	$ 111,016,581	7
Arkansas.....	145,000,000	7	87,382,941	6
Florida.....	36,000,000	5	29,171,097	7
Georgia.....	300,000,000	5	175,000,000	5
Louisiana.....	240,000,000	6	209,861,402	6
Mississippi.....	150,000,000	5½	125,000,000	7
Tennessee.....	252,289,853	7	221,311,345	1
Texas.....	300,000,000	5	314,475,736	5
Totals.....	$1,710,509,968	6½	$1,215,869,102	5

It appears from this that the value of taxable property in eight Southern States has increased nearly $500,000,000 within four years. In the same States the railroad mileage has increased from 11,934 to 17,891 miles within the same period, and the value of the agricultural products has grown from $780,000,000 in 1870 to $767,000,000 in 1883, an increase of $169,000,000.

THROUGHOUT England and Wales there are 744 banks, which, at the close of November, 1882, had 1,172,307 accounts remaining open. There was then owing to the depositors nearly £35,000,000. Scotland has fifty-three banks, which had 305,291 accounts open in November, with upward of £7,000,000 owing to depositors. The number of accounts and the amount deposited, when compared with the number of banks, were considerably larger than in the southern part of the kingdom. In Ireland the accounts and money are still smaller, in proportion, for, while there are twenty-one banks, they had only 52,161 accounts, with £2,082,433 due to depositors. For last year alone, however, the average amount of receipt from depositors was largest in Ireland, reaching £6 18s. 1d. In England and Wales the average was £4 8s., in Scotland £3 4s. 10d., in England and Wales the average amount of payments to depositors £8 1s 6d. in Scotland it was £5 18s 7d, and in Ireland £7 8s 7d. The rate of interest paid to depositors averaged in England £2 11s 6d, in Scotland, £2 11s 1d, and in Ireland £2 13s 2d.

"THE Twentieth Century, an organ for the development of natural views on the world and life," is the title of a periodical which is to be shortly published in Vienna. The prospectus promises "to make the new paper a supplement and counteracter of the daily press, to establish vegetarianism as the practical religion, and to make it of cosmopolitan importance." Revolutionary ideas, which can hardly be believed to have sprung up under the wooden pipe in the centre of cauliflowers and radishes, are energetically expressed in the prospectus, in which appears the following passage: "We have succeeded in gaining a footing in non-vegetarian circles. At the same time we have made many bitter enemies, and this is just what we are proud of. It is our endeavor to shake all parties out of their sleepiness and scornful indifference. They must learn that vegetarians are neither sentimentalists nor bloodheads. They must perceive that vegetarianism is an almighty, all-thought life acquire of affinities and antagonisms that cannot be otherwise accounted for. We often conceive a dislike for a person entirely without a reason that we can assign to ourselves, when everything would seem to warrant a different feeling, and this peculiar instinct the Professor thinks to be the operation of a definite sense, which is quite as effective and true as the sense of sight or hearing, and is often more reliable than the deductions of reason. Perhaps this seventh sense might be cultivated to good service.

AN English clergyman writes that there are 4,000 unemployed clergymen in the Church of England, many of whom are both able and willing to work, but who cannot find anything to do.

TOM BAKER considered early gray hair no sign of physical decay.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Perseverance.

Dear Polly, these are joyful days:
Your feet can choose their own sweet ways;
You have no care of anything,
Free as a swallow on the wing.
You hunt the live-field over
To find a four-leaved clover.

But this I tell you, Polly dear,
One thing in life you need not bear;
Bad luck, I'm certain, never haunts
A child who works for what she wants.
And hunts a day-field over
To find a four-Laved clover!

The little-heat is not so wise
As I: may easily be decided;
But then, dear Polly, don't you see,
Since to a are willing carefully
To hunt the hay-field over,
You bound your nose to find a four-leaved clover?

Your pathway may have long to wait,
Whether in little things or great,
But all good luck, you soon will learn,
Must come to those who earn.
Who hunt the hay-field over
Will find the four-leaved clover.
Nanch Byrd Turner, in St. Nicholas.

Dolly's Broken Nose.

Such a doll as little Pinky Fairweather had given to her on her birthday, hardly anybody ever saw! It was a baby doll, and wore long clothes. She aunt made it a lace cap, with ensuing little blue satin ribbons ran through it. It had a white merino blanket all bound around with lace, to match, and ever so many things. Then it had a bassinet to sleep in, instead of a common cradle. When she laid it down it would shut its large blue eyes, just like the sleepiest baby in the world.

Every day when Pinky went out to walk she carried Dolly. Sometimes she drew her in a tiny carriage. The carriage blanket was blue, with white stars on it. Pinky's aunt said it was the prettiest doll's blanket ever seen. But Pinky liked best to carry Dolly in her arms. She thought her long white robes all trimmed with lace looked almost like a real baby, and she herself like a real little mother. Sometimes she would overhear another little girl say in the street:

"Oh, mamma, see what a beautiful dolly!"

Then Pinky was very proud indeed. She always walked an extra block after that. Sometimes it got tiresome again. Perhaps Pinky was too proud. Perhaps she forgot about the hundreds of poor little girls who have no dolls at all, not even a rag-baby. I don't know. But this is what happened. The doll fell down and broke its nose, and broke its nose. Pinky shed copfuls of tears, and ran off to her aunt for comfort.

"Never mind," said aunty; and she sent for some strong cement. Then she put dolly's nose in the oven, and heated it very hot. After this the cement was rubbed in, and the nose pressed closely on to Dolly's face again. By this time Pinky had stopped crying, and she laid Dolly away in the sun to dry.

"Don't you move the leastest bit," said Pinky to her. "If you do, your nose will never grow in for the world."

Dolly seemed to understand, and kept quite still, although the hot sun streamed full down on her face again. After a long time aunty took her up and pointed over the crack, but it already looked like a scar. Then Pinky sometimes heard another little girl say: "What a pity that beautiful doll got its nose broke." But it served Pinky Fairweather right, she was too proud."—Our Little Ones.

Trouble.

It began just where all trouble does, down in the bottom of a wicked heart. Then weak people, and thoughtless people, and cruel people helped it along. Col. Burr was the man who began the trouble. What he wanted was the presidency of the United States. He tried hard and received the same number of votes that Jefferson did. But Congress decided in favor of Jefferson, and made Col. Burr Vice President. A disappointed man was Col. Burr. And instead of trying to recover from it, he tried to make others sorry, and make it grow stronger. Of course he succeeded.

Gen. Hamilton was a man who had a great deal of influence; he did not believe that Col. Burr would make a good President, and said so. Then Col. Burr called him his enemy. I'll tell you what sort of an enemy he had been. One morning the Colonel came to him in great trouble. He loved Hamilton; and unless he could raise the money he must go to prison. Before the date that the money was to be paid Gen. Hamilton had it ready for him. But Col. Burr had forgotten all that. Finding that he must give up the idea of being President, he thought the next best thing was to be Governor of New York. So he worried hard for that.

One day there was a dinner party of gentlemen, among whom was Gen. Hamilton. The talk was about Col. Burr. Gen. Hamilton was asked what he thought of the Colonel. "Why," said he, "I don't think he is the one to vote for Governor. In other words, I am afraid he is a dangerous man."

Don't you know some boys and girls who are always heedlessly repeating what people say, without stopping to think whether it will make trouble? There are a few such men, or need to be, and one of the guests at that dinner party went home and wrote to a friend just what Gen. Hamilton had said. What do you suppose the friend did? Published the letter in a newspaper. He could not have been simply thoughtless; he must have known that it would make trouble; and he must have known that it was a mean thing to do. Oh, what an angry man was Col. Burr! He said Gen. Hamilton must take back what he had said. But how was a man to take back an opinion that another would not make a good Governor when he still thought so? However he offered an apology which the angry man would not accept, and proceeded to prove that he was not fit to be Governor, by showing that he could not govern himself.

In those days duels were very common affairs. If two men became angry, what did they do but shoot pistols at one another, each trying to kill the other. Col. Burr sent a challenge to Gen. Hamilton. That is, an invitation, or an order, to meet him in a duel. There is a spot on the Hudson river called Weehawken, and on that spot one morning at sunrise these two men met. Both were to fire together when the word of command was given. But it is said that Gen. Hamilton did not fire at all.

As they bore him wounded and dying from the place, he said: "I had no ill will toward Burr; I did not intend to fire."

I don't know that there was ever greater excitement in New York than when the news of the duel spread among the people. Col. Burr seemed to be the only calm man in the city; he went home to breakfast as though nothing had happened. But he did not stay calm very long. He expected to be praised as a brave man; instead, he awoke to find himself called a murderer. All over the North the people were ablaze with indignation. He was obliged to escape in the night, and run for his life. However, this is one of the many stories which prove that God can make good come out of evil.

From that time duels ceased to be the fashion. A few angry men still fought them, but they knew that they would be disgraced in the eyes of all upright and respectable people by doing so. Ministers preached against dueling as a sin; editors wrote against it; people everywhere talked against it; and at last it took more courage than even angry men could get up to settle their quarrels in this way. It was in June, 1801, when Gen. Hamilton was killed. Not quite eighty years ago.

If any insane couple should undertake to fight a duel in these days, what would be thought of them?—The Pansy.

Healthy Women.

A writer, in urging the necessity for more attention to physical culture, notes as a favorable sign the fact that "the pale interesting" type of beauty is fast losing its popularity, and that men of position and influence are declaring for the healthy standard of womanly beauty, such as was ever recognized by Greece and Rome. This is certainly an important and happy change in public taste, and shows that the efforts of it are to be detected in an improved condition of feminine health; for we will hardly be deceived that on an average the women of to-day are physically superior to what they were a few years ago, when tight lacing and similar destroying customs prevailed.

Young women take more exercise than they formerly did. They ride and walk more and more in the open air. They have not the insane dread of the sun's rays which they once had. But there is much room for improvement yet. Many homes are still presided over by invalid wives and mothers, who furnish a constant spectacle of sadness and misery to their family and friends, and are a subject of unlimited expense to their husbands. In such homes the greatest of all blessings can not be enjoyed for would be the health of the mistress restored; but too often it is the one blessing that never comes.

American homes, more than any other perhaps in the world, have been saddened by sickly women. And the remedy is simple. American men are as strong and healthy as those of other nations; there is no reason why American women should not be. All that is needed is proper attention to dress and exercise. Let women dress for use, not show, so that their bodies will not be squeezed and pressed together, but have free room for motion, and let them take the place of the useless wife in the kingdom of Mechanitalia. Instead of dancing as a sin; editors wrote against it; people everywhere talked against it; and at last it took more courage than even angry men could get up to settle their quarrels in this way. It was in June, 1801, when Gen. Hamilton was killed. Not quite eighty years ago.

If any insane couple should undertake to fight a duel in these days, what would be thought of them?—The Pansy.

Mechanical Power of Roots.

W. E. Stone tells us in the American Agriculturist of some of the striking results of the mechanical force exerted by growing roots. Their force, he says, been uncertified from compact, gravelly soil, where the struggle for room had been so fierce that they became distorted out of all natural shape. It is not unusual to find trees growing in the clefts of ledges, showing unmistakably that the expansion of the roots has forced the rock apart. A case is cited, on good authority, of a root of the sugar maple that had pushed its way under a rock weighing nearly two tons, and by its enlargement lifted it entirely from its bed. Trees have been observed growing on the bare rock, resting upon their roots which run out into the soil on either side, and yet these roots, supporting the enormous weight of the tree, formed each year new growth on their underside, and lifted the tree by the space of its thickness until seven inches of wood had been formed under the severe pressure.

CURIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC.

THE oldest midwife in Paris has been in practice since 1815, and during the eight years she has assisted in the bringing of about 6,800 children into the world.

ACCORDING to a writer in a foreign paper, animal oils are unsafe to use in air compressors, as they take fire spontaneously in compressed air, or, in other words, they create an explosive gas.

THE following gives a permanent white-wash: To one barrel of lime add a bushel or more of cement; slake with fresh lime and have it well slaked immediately, and do not mix up too much at once.

LARD should never be used on wagon wheel, for it will penetrate the hub and work its way out around the tenons of the spokes, thus spoiling the wheel. Tallow is the best lubricant for wooden axletrees.

WHEN cattle are intended to be deliberately destroyed in India they are pierced with a thorn of the most precatorius. Death ensues on the second day. Strange to say, the poisoned seeds, taken internally, have little action.

A FRENCH inventor has utilized the power of a mountain stream 20 miles distant to supply electricity sufficient for 100 Edison lamps at incandescence. The current is conducted with gray stones, dwarf trees and flower vases. From the artificial rocks the mossy little rocks to which lumps of every conceivable shape

Such spots require too much and attention to admit of wide extent, and so they generally occupy a comparatively small space in front of the mansion. High, primed hedges like these green boulders, where mosses have been coaxed and coiled as conscious culture and the usage of "good form" demand. Without those lies larger part of the garden, where ge is left more to herself. Japan-ardens look most beautiful toward ing of autumn, when the foliage of maple assumes a bright, purple line. the azalea and wax trees are ed in dark purple tints. About time, too, the winter chrysanthemum is in bloom; it is the favorite flower the Japanese, who possesses countless ties of it. The size and splendor marble flowers are often incredi-Beeching, in Gardener's Magazine.

Sensation in Plants.

Figuier believes that a plant has sensation of pleasure and of pain, for instance, he says, affects it by ...ht. We see it contract, or, as to ..., fall asleep, under the influence ...ession or temperature. An ab-...e elevation of temperature evi-...ases it to sensibility, for it ...ishes, when the heat is excessive, ...ves droop on the stalk, fold ...ir edges inward, and either when ...ed of the evening comes, or ...e sunlight, and the plant re-...ntirely and substantially appear-...lmost inanimate. Similar causes ...e evident influence on plants, for when they are watered ...e plunged through their slow ...e satisfaction. The sensitive ...ched by the finger, or only ...ly a current of smokeless air, ...e folds, and contracts itself. ...amist, Desfontaines, saw one, ...e was conveying in a carriage, ...e leaves while the vehicle was in ...and expand them when it ...ped. It must be that it was the motion ...ed it. Sensation in plants ...e same kind as in animals. Sen-...ility kills and irritates them as it ...ills. Plants may also be put ...ly washing them in opium dis-...n water and hydrocyanic acid ...their vitality as quickly as it does ...animals.—Scribner's Monthly.

The Little Model Republic.

ROMERO, Pindl., Senor Ricardo ...ing Guatemalan merchant of ...after having exhausted all other ...s, has turned his energies to ...ing by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, ...pain-banisher. He makes this ...

Mary Horse-Back Riding.

...t that the girls in the country, ...ther, for that matter, do ...ough horse-back riding. It is ...ption in my "neck of the woods" ...alth of either sex riding a ...ig carriage or to do village er-...The universal buggy, in the lo-...ality, has taken the place of the ...ot, and the center. I be-...with Dr. Holmes, that "the outside ...s good for the inside of a ...ed with the boys and girls, and ...ng men and women, would take ...ness those dull of a generation ...ds may be considered a ...ty by comparison." "Pinky" told Derby replied that he never put ...a book without knowing who was ...and that he must decline the ...script on such terms. Mr. Weeks ...offered to publish it at his ex-...pense if Mr. Derby would put in ...print as it. This he declined also. So a meeting was arranged. Mr. Derby met Miss Miriam's The question of the day was: "Who came distorted out of all natural shape. It is not unusual to find trees growing in the clefts of ledges, showing unmistakably that the expansion of the roots has forced the rock apart. A case is cited, on good authority, of a root of the sugar maple that had pushed its way under a rock weighing nearly two tons, and by its enlargement lifted it entirely from its bed. Trees have been observed growing on the bare rock, resting upon their roots which run out into the soil on either side, and yet these roots, supporting the enormous weight of the tree, formed each year new growth on their underside, and lifted the tree by the space of its thickness until seven inches of wood had been formed under the severe pressure.

THE best paid State office in Ohio is said to be the Private Secretaryship of the Governor. The salary is $800, but the fees make it worth $8,000.

Japanese Gardens.

...he love of flowers, shrubs and trees ...idely spread in Japan; even in the ...e commercial quarters of the large ...s almost every house has its gar-...ost with its tiny dwarf shrubs, ...e dwarf shrubs and trees probably ...their origin to the narrow limits of ...s and their production is carried ...h such a ridiculous degree that a ...h merchant was shown a box trees ...s deep, and with a square inch of ...ce, in which a bamboo, a fir and a ...e tree, the latter in full bloom, ...ressing and thriving. The price ...d for this botanical curiosity was ...f $90. The method of dwarfing ...e checking the circulation of the ...cramping the extension of the ...hes, chilling the roots in flat, ...pots, which are kept constantly ...and wet. Many dwarf plants have ...ful or variegated leaves, and the ...ction of such varieties, both ...ed and in the natural size, is a ...hobby with Japanese gardeners. ...e portions of the garden imme-...y surrounding the house, no tree ...ub is allowed to retain its natural ...t within one sees fans, ships in ...ail, round tables, candelabra, large ...ants and still, rectangular walls, ...ed, velvet-like turf covers the ...nd, and the clean gravel paths are ...ed with gay stones, dwarf trees ...flower vases. From the artificial ...ds the mossy little rocks to which ...lumps of every conceivable shape

Such spots require too much ...and attention to admit of wide ex-...n, and so they generally occupy ...a comparatively small space in front ...e mansion. High, primed hedges ...se these green boulders, where na-...s have been coaxed and coiled as con-...ve culture and the usage of "good ...e" demand. Without those lies ...e larger part of the garden, where ...ge is left more to herself. Japan-...e-dens look most beautiful toward ...e spring of autumn, when the foliage of ...aple assumes a bright, purple line, ...d the azalea and wax trees are ...ed in dark purple tints. About ...time, too, the winter chrysanthe-...um is in bloom; it is the favorite flower ...the Japanese, who possess countless ...eties of it. The size and splendor ...marble flowers are often incredi-...Beeching, in Gardener's Magazine.

Sensation in Plants.

Figuier believes that a plant has ...ssion of pleasure and of pain, ...for instance, he says, affects it ...by ...ht. We see it contract, or, as to ...ak, fall asleep, under the influence ...pression or temperature. An ab-...e elevation of temperature evi-...ases it to sensibility, for it ...ishes, when the heat is excessive, ...aves droop on the stalk, fold ...ir edges inward, and either when ...ed of the evening comes, or ...e sunlight, and the plant re-...entirely and substantially appear-...lmost inanimate. Similar causes ...e evident influence on plants, for when they are watered ...e plunged through their slow ...e satisfaction. The sensitive ...ched by the finger, or only ...ly a current of smokeless air, ...e folds, and contracts itself. ...amist, Desfontaines, saw one, ...e was conveying in a carriage, ...e leaves while the vehicle was in ...and expand them when it ...ped. It must be that it was the motion ...ed it. Sensation in plants ...e same kind as in animals. Sen-...ility kills and irritates them as it ...ills. Plants may also be put ...ly washing them in opium dis-...n water and hydrocyanic acid ...their vitality as quickly as it does ...animals.—Scribner's Monthly.

The Little Model Republic.

ROMERO, Pindl., Senor Ricardo ...ing Guatemalan merchant of ...after having exhausted all other ...s, has turned his energies to ...ing by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, ...pain-banisher. He makes this ...

Mary Horse-Back Riding.

...t that the girls in the country, ...ther, for that matter, do ...ough horse-back riding. It is ...ption in my "neck of the woods" ...alth of either sex riding a ...ig carriage or to do village er-...The universal buggy, in the lo-...ality, has taken the place of the ...ot, and the center. I be-...with Dr. Holmes, that "the outside ...s good for the inside of a ...ed with the boys and girls, and ...ng men and women, would take ...ness those dull of a generation ...ds may be considered a ...ty by comparison." "Pinky" told Derby replied that he never put ...a book without knowing who was ...and that he must decline the ...script on such terms. Mr. Weeks ...offered to publish it at his ex-...pense if Mr. Derby would put in ...print as it. This he declined also. So a meeting was arranged. Mr. Derby met Miss Miriam's The question of the day was: "Who

A Happy Exemption.

Or relief from sour and all the disagreeable symptoms which proceed from disorder at the liver is experienced by those who use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as an auxiliary of health or a remedy for disease. Constipation, yellowness of the skin, nausea, headache and pains through the right side and shoulder blade are thereforth unknown to the hitherto patient who resorts to it and against those malarial ailments, of which derangement of the liver is an invariable attendant, and which it fortifies and fosters, life-sustained medicine is a most efficient as well as pleasant safeguard. Regularity of the bowels—a condition which follows of permanent attainment by the use of averages—the antibilious—invariably results from its use, and composure of the nerves and sound rhythmic sleep are also amongst the beneficent consequences of a course of the genial, refreshing tonic. It also relieves rheumatism and lucidity of the kidneys and bladder.

A CONTEMPORARY mentions a case beyond the ordinary result. It is that of a young lady who, instead of a pupil, has a cyclone student in her eye.

AS illustration of stinginess is cited by a writer, who knows a man who hides through his nose in order to save the wear and tear of his false teeth.

It's hard to believe Miss Whittier was cured of rose cold by Ely's Cream Balm.

AN old editor is reward no $5 for the best ... on "How to make old-hoss life attractive to the possum."

"WHEN we say that Salvation Nervine cures rheumatism, we mean it."—Press-Journal.

THE Best Doctor of Divinity is said to have been "D. Vine, D. D."

DR. R. F. LAUGHLIN, Clyde, Knox., writes: "Samaritan Nervine cures Dr."

DO NOT waste time and money studying fashion-plates. Go to church.

Last Faith in Physicians.

There are innumerable instances where cures have been effected by Scovill's Sarsaparilla, or Blood and Liver Syrup, for all diseases of the blood, when the patient had been given up by physicians. It is one of the best remedies ever offered to the public, as it is prepared with the greatest care, as a specific for certain diseases, it is no wonder that it should to some extent supersede the many old-fashioned, ready-prepared proprietaries. Take Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Liver Syrup for all blood troubles, and you will find it a most valuable remedy. Sold by druggists.

"Put up" at the Gault House.

The business man or tourist will find first-class accommodations at the low price of $2 and $2.50 per day at the Gault House, Fifth ave., corner Clinton and Madison streets. This fine old hotel is located in the center of the city, only one block from the Union Depot, Elevator, all appointments first-class.

H. W. HOYT, Proprietor.

MY son, aged 9 years, was afflicted with Catarrh; the use of Ely's Cream Balm relieved a complex case.—C. E. HAYMAN, Dong-ed, Easton, Pa. Get one, a package, 60c.

J. P. ROGER, Route agent on the Ft. Wayne branch of the L. S. & M. S. railway, says: "I have used St. Jacobs Oil, get less sick headaches, which the heat is excessive, leaves droop on the stalk, fold ...ir edges inward, and either when ...ed of the evening comes, or ...e sunlight, and the plant re-...entirely and substantially appear-...lmost inanimate. Similar causes ...e evident influence on plants, for when they are watered ...e plunged through their slow ...e satisfaction. The sensitive ...ched by the finger, or only ...ly a current of smokeless air, ...e folds, and contracts itself. ...amist, Desfontaines, saw one, ...e was conveying in a carriage, ...e leaves while the vehicle was in ...and expand them when it ...ped. It must be that it was the motion ...ed it. Sensation in plants ...e same kind as in animals. Sen-...ility kills and irritates them as it ...ills. Plants may also be put ...ly washing them in opium dis-...n water and hydrocyanic acid ...their vitality as quickly as it does ...animals.—Scribner's Monthly.

The Little Model Republic.

ROMERO, Pindl., Senor Ricardo ...ing Guatemalan merchant of ...after having exhausted all other ...s, has turned his energies to ...ing by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, ...pain-banisher. He makes this ...

Mary Horse-Back Riding.

...t that the girls in the country, ...ther, for that matter, do ...ough horse-back riding. It is ...ption in my "neck of the woods" ...alth of either sex riding a ...ig carriage or to do village er-...The universal buggy, in the lo-...ality, has taken the place of the ...ot, and the center. I be-...with Dr. Holmes, that "the outside ...s good for the inside of a ...ed with the boys and girls, and ...ng men and women, would take ...ness those dull of a generation ...ds may be considered a ...ty by comparison." "Pinky" told Derby replied that he never put ...a book without knowing who was ...and that he must decline the ...script on such terms. Mr. Weeks ...offered to publish it at his ex-...pense if Mr. Derby would put in ...print as it. This he declined also. So a meeting was arranged. Mr. Derby met Miss Miriam's The question of the day was: "Who

Foot and Ankle.

The EDSON ELECTRIC GARTER develops the FOOT and ANKLE into perfect form, supports and strengthens the limbs, adds marvellous grace and elasticity to the step.

Edsons' Electric Garter.

It is original in principle and neat in effect. It is radiating, resting or thrusting, entirely unlike all other garters in existence. It is indispensable to ease or dress grace. Everyone wears it with all the comfort that best known corsets, and actually looks better for wearing it.

PRICE, in Finest Silk Webbing (usual colors), Steel and Buckle Clasp, 12, 13, 15 inch, $1.50; 17 inch, $2.00 per pair. Mailed to any address on receipt of money. Send for circular.

LONDON ELECTRIC FABRIC CO., 61 Bowman Street, New York.

GAIN Health and Happiness.

How? DO AS OTHERS HAVE DONE.

Are your Kidneys disordered? "Kidney-Wort brought me from my grave, after I had been given up by the best doctors."—M. W. DeCamp, Rochester, Ionia, Mich.

Are your nerves weak? "Kidney-Wort cured my nervousness, after all other remedies had failed."—Rev. G. W. Goodwin, Ed. Christian Monitor, Cleveland, O.

Have you Bright's Disease? "Kidney-Wort cured me when my water was just like chalk and then like blood."—Judge Nelson, Peabody, Kans.

Suffering from Diabetes? "Kidney-Wort has cured me of diabetes, from which I suffered for years, and which no other medicine ever did."—Hon. Ellery Bullock, Boston, Mass.

Have you Liver Complaint? "Kidney-Wort cured me of Chronic Liver Disease after I had been given up."—Mrs. Mary Noble, Lake City, Minn.

Is your Back lame and aching? "Kidney-Wort has cured me when I was so lame I could not get out of bed."—S. M. Talmage, Milwaukee, Wis.

Have you Kidney Disease? "Kidney-Wort made me a new man. I was helped from the first day I took it, and its praises will be sung by me wherever I go."—Silas J. Hodges, Williamstown, West Va.

Are you Constipated? "Kidney-Wort regulated my bowels and cured me after I had suffered for years."—Mrs. Jennie Scofield, Ft. Atkinson, Wis.

Have you Malaria? "Kidney-Wort cured me of Malaria, after I had been given up by other doctors."—Mrs. E. K. Hall, South Berwick, Me.

Are you Bilious? "Kidney-Wort is the best medicine I ever used for Biliousness."—Mrs. R. A. Gallaher, Elk Run, Oregon.

Are you tormented with Piles? "Kidney-Wort cured me after suffering from Piles 20 years."—Hon. H. B. Hamilton, Statesboro, Ga.

Are you Rheumatism ridden? "Kidney-Wort has cured me of Rheumatism, from which I became ruined, and I am now a well man. I know it abolishes all those painful diseases peculiar to females, and I regard it as the best remedy ever offered for Constipation."—H. W. Hoyt, Proprietor.

Ladies, are you suffering? "Kidney-Wort is the great remedy for all the ills peculiar to our sex. It has done wonders for me."—Mrs. Chas. Bowman, Rutland, Vt.

If you would Banish Disease and gain Health, Take KIDNEY-WORT THE BLOOD CLEANSER.

125 The most Catchy Set Samples Free. Mention paper. J. M. BESSEE, Bethlehem Star, Pa.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. STINSON & CO., Portland, Maine.

Sure Cure for Pillow-y Fitted Suspenders. Prest. over. Sells at sight. Ex. Kits, $1. Send stamp. Ill. Lister, Mo.

TEXAS—Cattle pasturage to suit purchaser; 10,000 acres; $1 per acre. Address, Box 1, Austin, Texas.

MOTHERS. Cocoa, the Great Wave Restorer. Will make hair grow. Tablet Free. A'dy, Cleveland, O.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly Outfit and terms free. Address TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine.

MUSICIANS, etc., giving instruments secure bargains. Circulars free. Address, LYON & HEALY, Chicago.

AGENTS Wanted. Squares covering, or Karpets for cash. Cost 1¢ a Square. Pub. Co., Chicago.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Mrs. M. BINGHAM, 74 Sole street, Lockport, N. Y.

$250 MONTH to Agents. Wanted. 500 local workers at once. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

WANTED experienced Head and Side Accounts in Wire Goods. Liberal Salary Paid. Address, stating experience, etc., CHICAGO WIRE CO., Chicago.

Young Men learn Telegraphy and R. R. Accounting and secure a position. Address, VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

FREE Dr. Tomlin's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. Rupert & Co., Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED to sell our new Chromo, Lift & Pull. Address LITTLEFIELD VIEW PUBLISHING CO., Augusta, Maine.

$100 A MONTH "Hard Cash and How to Get It." Pamphlet sent free. Address with stamp, Box 1000, Augusta, Maine.

SPIRITUALISM EXPOSED! Startling facts! 1884 Edition, enlarged. "HOT COIN PACKET," 10 cts. Agents wanted. Address JOHN W. RUSSELL, Stratford, N.Y.

ORGAN AGENTS

Wanted in every County. Reliable Piano and Organ Music. 110 State Street, Chicago.

HOP PLASTER

The most popular remedy for Pain ever made. Use it and you will be convinced. Sold by druggists, 25 cents; five for $1; or mailed free on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Co., Boston, Mass.

PATENTS PROCURED Without Model. PATENTS BOUGHT or SOLD. Information and Handbook free. E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Attorney, and Solicitor in Patent Cases, Washington, D. C.

NEVER BEFORE SEEN IN THIS OR ANY OTHER COUNTRY. A SMALL BUT INTERESTING London Colored Christmas and New Year's Cards.

Sent on receipt of 10 cents. Address: THE LITTLE PUBLISHING CO., 149 and 151 Sixth Ave., New York.

LAME BACK

Edsons' Electric Garter.

*The only known specific for Epileptic Fits. Also for Spasms and Falling Sickness. Nervous Weakness in infants, children and men. Unequaled for invigorating the blood and quickening the circulation. Neuralgia, Headache and Sciatica. Cures the worst cases of Chronic Diseases and Disorders of the Digestive Organs. Regulates the Bowels. Purifies the Blood. Cures Dyspepsia and Indigestion. Cures Female Complaints. Cures Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Headache, Nervous Prostration or Exhaustion caused by the excesses or indiscretions of youth. Cures Nervous Debility, Lack of Energy, Hopelessness, Lassitude, Want of Confidence, Loss of Memory, Impotency, Premature Old Age, Barrenness, Loss of Power in either sex, caused by Indiscretion, Over-Indulgence or Self-Abuse. Cures Impediments to Marriage. Cures Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder. Cures Wasting Diseases. Cures Blood Poisons. Cures Rheumatism. Cures Piles. Cures Constipation. Cures Dizziness. Cures Nervous Headache. Cures Neuralgia. Cures Sciatica. Cures Nervous Chills. Cures Hysteria. Cures Trembling. Cures Dyspepsia. Cures Impure Blood. Cures Female Weakness. Cures Sexual Debility. Cures Nervousness. Cures Sleeplessness. Cures Melancholy. Cures Headache. Cures Nervous Prostration. Cures Exhaustion. Cures Lack of Energy. Cures Hopelessness. Cures Lassitude. Cures Want of Confidence. Cures Loss of Memory. Cures Impotency. Cures Premature Old Age. Cures Barrenness. Cures Loss of Power

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 13, 1883.

PITH AND POINT.

—Texas is a great State for ants. Sullivan ought to go there. Doesn't the scripture say, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard?"—Exchange.

—Somebody out West is trying to find out how many mules there are in the country. We give it up. It's a question of mule-plication.—Boston Star.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and lose not a system now will find Pain-Killer and Diarrhœa Cholera prevented. Full pound 25 cents. 85d1 to O. B. Weed & Co.

—Brown, being invited to assist at his friend Robinson's wedding, said he couldn't give the bride away, but he could give the groom dead away if occasion required.—Chicago Times.

—Those who have lost their money in Chicago lard can foolishly say that their fortune has grown "small by degrees and beautifully less."—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

—"Yes," says Mrs. Parvenu, "we have taken a shanty at Newport on Maria's account; she's twenty-six, you know, and we will entertain in as hospital style as any of the others."—N. Y. Graphic.

The greatest pain killer yet found for Cramps, colic, stitch in side or back, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, &c., is Hunt's Lightning Ginger Tonic and Pain Cure. Based on with but not clothes, it never fails to cure. For Dyspepsia, Indigestion, sick headache, Malaria, diarrhœa, flooding, heartburn, sour stomach, &c., it is unequalled. Warranted to cure relief. Use both internally and externally. Warrant at home. Try it. Price 25 and 50 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Harper's Bazar is authority for the dictum that a widow should be married in a bonnet. In our opinion that is a mistake. By the time the widow has selected the style of bonnet in which she wishes to appear at the ceremony the groom will have lost patience and gone elsewhere for a wife. The time for waiting for a widow to be married in is a hurry. Unless she has money. Then she can take her time.—Rochester (N. Y.) Post-Express.

Millions of persons die annually who might be saved if attention was given to the ills of life. Coughs, colds, sore throat, &c., are easily cured by using Hunt's Cough Syrup, which removes the tickling in the throat and lightness across the inflamed membranes. Immediate relief will be found in deep seated coughs, Whooping Cough, &c., and even in consumptive cases and last stage of consumption great relief is received. For incipient consumption it works like a charm. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

—Mrs. Love-flowers (from her window, as new man-of-all-work, who is at work in the garden): "What are you doing to the petunia bed, Nicodemus?" "Clearin' 'em out, ma'am." "Clearing them out! Why, I have it all wed in a mound, now." "Are you sure that you know the weeds from the young plants?" "Faith, I can, ma'am. They don't look like the same weeds I pulls it up, ma'am."—Harper's Bazar.

Are your children peevish and sick? Don't they have abnormal appetites and crave food constantly? Beware of worms. Very few children escape their ravages. A child cannot be happy or well while suffering with worms. They sap the very life in preventing the digestion and assimilation of food. Dr. Low's Worm Candies are perfectly harmless, but very quickly destroy the worms and pass them off through the bowels. Buy no other. Three cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

A Philadelphia undertaker advertises for bearded men to assist him in his business. Being questioned by a representative of the Press, he said that he found that the public, especially the bereaved public, had more confidence in bearded men, had more respect for them. There was a solemn dignity about them that comported admirably with everything pertaining to funerals.

Enrich the blood. Hamilton's Curative Bitters are highly recommended for all diseases resulting from poor and impure blood. Especially Indigestion, Dyspepsia, want of appetite, loss of strength, lack of energy, &c. They impart life and strength to the muscles, and give new life to the nerves. They act like a charm in all diseases of the kidneys and bladder, and whenever the constitution is weak or debilitated from any cause. Ask your druggist for them and send your neighbor a circular. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Johnny had come home from school several times with a month with various bruises on his face and body received in fights with his schoolmates, and on the last occasion his mother threatened him with severe punishment if he ever engaged in a fight again. Only a few days after the small child appeared with a black eye, and, scared by the stern maternal greeting, "Well, sir?" he departed from his usual truthful ways, and stammered: "I fell down and hit my head on a stone." "And which got the worst of it?" asked the big brother. "Oh, the other fellow, ma'am," answered Johnny bravely. "They come home with two black eyes."—Harper's Bazar.

Cheap Reading.

To every person who will pay in three dollars in cash in advance for two years' subscription to the DAILY NEWS, we will present one year's self-sustaining to that paper of all weekly papers, the Detroit Weekly Free Press, which nine methods that best of ladies' papers, The Household. In view of the fact that next year occurs another great political struggle, and the desire of every true patriot to be fully informed on the vital issues of the hour, we think we better offer this dilicasm be made. It is equivalent to three papers for the price of one, or rather, the getting of two papers as offered on one year's subscription in advance. There is no better weekly paper published than the Detroit Free Press, and every subscriber to that paper gets free a copy of The Household, devoted, as its name indicates, to matters pertaining to the home and fireside, and is in every respect a paper for the ladies.

Remember, three dollars pays for the JOURNAL two years, and secures the Free Press and Household one year free. Subscribe now.

IN YE OLDEN TIME.

The New England Meeting-House of the Forefathers, and Its Influence on Generations.

An Eastern publication not long ago printed a most delightful article from the pen of President Porter, on "The New England Meeting-House," which the nation considers to be the symbol of much that is characteristic of New England life, as it has been the rallying point for nearly everything distinctive in the New England communities. Out of the church grew the town, or, rather, the town was evolved or developed along with the church. The church was the germ and the meetinghouse the center of the self-governed commonwealth. The name "meeting-house" is significant. The edifice was used for religious and civic transactions, and, to the early New Englander both were equally solemn and sacred. There was no warrant in scripture for calling an edifice a church.

President Porter gives an extremely interesting account of the way in which the original structures were built, and of the gradual variations of the original types as years went on. The erection of the Old South Church in 1729-30 was the most important advance in the evolution of the New England meeting-house, and became the typical model of all such places of worship for nearly a century. Among the best of the edifices of this type which survive are the sanctuaries in Farmington and Westfield. (The latter does just now lost many of its quaint features by "restoration.")

With the present century and its advance in wealth and culture, the meeting-house began to assume a form more like that of London church architecture, and of this some of the very best admirable specimens in Park Street Church, Boston, the Center and North churches in New Haven, and those in Guilford, Springfield, and elsewhere.

The first steeple in Connecticut was erected in Guilford in 1726.

The interior of the meeting-houses was bare and unattractive. Pews were of slow growth. There were no means of lighting them until singing schools made it necessary to introduce candles and rude chandeliers. Night meetings in these sanctuaries were not approved. There were no stoves for a long time, and at first no foot-stoves. The New England meeting-house was well and early warmed until from 1810 to 1820. President Porter remembers such scenes as he says, "makes us shiver as we think of them." On a cold winter morning the breath of the worshipers not infrequently would seem like smoke from an humble furnaces as it came in contact with the frosty atmosphere. These severities were mitigated by the free hospitality of the fires near the meeting-house. Enormous kitchen fires were kept blazing, around which scores of people gathered to thaw themselves out and eat their luncheons. At summer noons the farmers would gather in knots here and there, and their wives in knots together in other groups, and they had a very cozy and gossipy time of it.

In some families there was a Sabbath-day house erected near the sanctuary, with ample fireplaces for the comfort of worshipers.

The meeting-house usually was the central building in the village, as being the most important. It stood within or fronting the "green." Roads radiated from it. It was not until a later date that the sanctuary was placed upon the high hill, where it could be seen afar, and say that several of these meeting-houses were within range of vision, guarding, like sentinels, the hill country. President Porter gives a faithful and charming description of the spirit and churches that had their homes in these plain meeting-houses. They at first, had no written creed, though their views of truth lacked neither definiteness nor positiveness. Their pastors were settled for life, and when meeting-house was built and pastor settled, "a golden candlestick was set up" in that place.

The meeting house must needs be "seated"—places assigned to each member of the community. In New Haven's first meeting-house the sexes were separated, and the seating was according to rank and dignity. The doctrine of equality in place, station and honor in church and State was no part of the Puritan creed. In the first generation attendance on worship was enforced. There was then compulsory public worship as now we have compulsory education of children. Until the year 1818, in Connecticut, and till some years later in Massachusetts, every citizen was compelled to support some religious organization by a tax on his estate. This was formed the excellent habit of regular attendance at the sanctuary on the Lord's day. A graphic picture is given of the gathering of a country congregation from a widespread township on a pleasant Sunday morning. What a variety of vehicles, of horses, of dress, of pace, of demeanor! Then the meetings, with various gossip, with secret "swappings," with care of expecting horses, with stealthy glances and flirtations of young folks, and no end of news exchange.

Grand Rapids Democrat,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

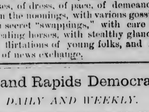
Daily Democrat, by mail, $5.00 per year in advance; postage paid.

Weekly Democrat, $1.50 per year; 75 cents for six months; 40 cents for three months. Invariably in advance. Address

THE DEMOCRAT,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

$1 A YEAR. $1

ONE DOLLAR. ONE DOLLAR.



$1 A YEAR. $1

THE WEEKLY
Detroit Free Press
ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.
THE HOUSEHOLD
Two large Pages of News and Reading Matter.
Free Press Co., Detroit, Mich.

$1 A YEAR. $1

ONE DOLLAR. ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR. $1

CHICAGO WEEKLY HERALD

The Largest, Best, and Most Complete Newspaper ever send

One Year for $1.00.

EIGHT LARGE PAGES,

Containing the News of the Day, Agricultural and other matter interesting to the farmers and his family. Complete Market Reports, Stories, Sketches, etc. Sample copies free. Address

CHICAGO WEEKLY HERALD, Chicago, Ill.

If you want a daily paper try

The Chicago Herald,

An enterprising, fearless, and reliable Chicago daily that has been a great success because of its excellence in every particular. It presents all the news every day on four large pages and at a price that permits its being taken by everybody. For sale by all newsdealers. Send on trial by mail, postage paid, six days each week, for TWO MONTHS FOR ONE DOLLAR. Address

THE CHICAGO HERALD.

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FA

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Company

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN

EVERYTHING

In the line of

Furniture

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H. C. Cooper

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH

COME AND SEE US BEFORE BUY

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS.

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charl

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHI

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goo

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & F

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time l and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our est

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfac

COME AND SEE U

Yours,

AMOS FO

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 23. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1883. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Business Directory.

ATTORNEYS.

LICKSMANN & GRIEE, Attorneys at Law, Office in Rutters' Block, Charlevoix, Mich. H. KRUCKSMANN. C. J. GRIEE.

SQ. & ALDERICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich. 22

ED W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Collections and Conveyancing and Real Estate business promptly attended to. MONEY TO LOAN.

C. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

ATON & KEAT, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne, Mich.

AC F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

NK OF CHARLEVOIX. Capital $50,000. Exchange department. Deposits received by check or guaranteed. Interest paid on time deposits. Loans made for more than ninety days and notes bought and sold. Collections on first mortgages. Drafts issued and exchange. DAVIS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

ST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Free seated house. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7:30. The seated house.

C. F. VANALSTYN, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7.

A. T. BOOMER, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX ROPE AND READY FIRE COMPANY meets the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall.

E. F. PRINCE, Secretary.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

J. CHRISTEN, M. D. Office at the Eagle Hotel.

LEWIS M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in the Lewis block, Charlevoix, Mich.

M. PRESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Homœopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

GRACE S. HARSHA, Notary Public. Real Estate, Loans, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. E. Bayley Post No. 19, G. A. R. second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

W. R. C. Charlevoix Lodge No. 295, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows Hall.

A. O. U. W. Round Lake Lodge No. 221 meets every Wednesday evening, in Hotz hall.

C. L.—True Blues No. 17, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows hall.

MASON—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, meets Saturday on or before full moon. Hall over A. B. BETTIS, Postmaster.

A. B. THURSBY, Cashier.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

General Banking business transacted. Money loaned and bought. Interest allowed on time deposits. Collections given careful attention and remittances made promptly.

W. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

FARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and cigars.

W. S. JOHNSON,
Opp. Depot, St. Rose, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

BEMENT MILLER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

The house is centrally located, and its rooms are well furnished. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Free conveyance for the traveling public. Headquarters for the Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CURTIS, Proprietor.

Boyne City, Michigan.

Newly furnished throughout and refurnished.

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

Dealer in second-hand machines for sale at bottom prices. Also agent for the

NEW DAVIS VERY MACHINE, WARRANTED FOR 5 YEARS.

FOR

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

GO TO

Dr. G. W. CROUTER'S DRUG STORE.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

An Immense Line to Choose From.

PROBATE ORDER. State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the estate of Levi Sloan, deceased. Notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of an order granted by the hon. Edward Bechtold, judge of the estate of said Levi Sloan, deceased, notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of an order granted by the said probate, administrator of the estate of said Levi Sloan, deceased, by the Hon. Judge of Probate for the county of Charlevoix, on the third day of September, A. D. 1883, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the front door of Lewis' hall, in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on Monday, the twenty-second day of December, A. D. 1883, at one o'clock in the afternoon of that day (subject to all encumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of the death of said deceased, or at the time of sale, and also subject to the right of dower and the homestead rights of the widow of said deceased) the following described real estate, to wit: The south half of the northeast quarter of section twenty-one (21), in township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, containing eighty acres of land. Dated November 14, A. D. 1883.

M. CLARK, Assignee of mortgage.

CHOLSKAMS & GRIEE, Attorneys for assignee of mortgage. 19-24

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has just opened the

Ladies' and Children's

Furnishing Goods.

Lately owned by Fisher & Atwood, and will be pleased to receive all the old customers, and also as many more as possible, call and see my stock.

LIVERY.

The undersigned has purchased the livery formerly owned by him, and has fitted

Horses and Carriages

And is confident no citizen is entitled to all old friends and patrons to call and see him when in need of a livery without fear.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated

ROCKFORD WATCH

The best $5 in the world. 11

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pure ginger ale, &c., always on hand. Call and see me. West side Bridge St.

ROBERT GRUEN,

Boyne Falls, Mich.

Watch-maker

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 17

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect October, 1883.

STATIONS.	No. 1. Mail.	No. 3. Express.	No. 7. Express.	No. 9. Express.
	GOING NORTH.
Mackinaw lv	8 00am	2 00pm	6 00pm
Petoskey	8 30	2 30	6 30
Bay View	8 40	2 40	6 40
Harbor Springs	8 50	2 50	6 50
Conway	9 05	3 05	7 05
Cross Village	9 20	3 20	7 20
Good Hart	9 30	3 30	7 30
Wequetonsing	8 45	2 45	6 45
Harbor Springs	8 50	2 50	6 50
Bay View	8 55	2 55	6 55
Petoskey	9 05	3 05	7 05
Bear Creek	9 20	3 20	7 20
Boyne Falls	9 30	3 30	7 30
Alba	9 40	3 40	7 40
Kalkaska	9 55	3 55	7 55
Grass Lake	10 05	4 05	8 05
Cadillac ..... ar	11 45	5 50	9 50
" lv	12 00m	6 00	10 00
Reed City	1 15	7 30	11 30
Big Rapids	1 30	7 45	11 45
Howard City	1 45	8 00	12 00n
Edmore	1 55	8 10	12 10
Greenville	2 05	8 20	12 20
Grand Rapids ..... ar	3 30	9 45	1 45
Kalamazoo	5 30	11 45	3 45
Battle Creek	6 05	12 20	4 20
Jackson	7 05	1 20	5 20
Ypsilanti	8 05	2 20	6 20
Detroit ..... ar	8 45	3 00	7 00
Toledo	12 30	6 45	10 45
Cincinnati	5 45pm	12 00n	5 00am
Chicago	5 00	11 30	4 30

STATIONS.	No. 2. Mail.	No. 6. Express.	No. 8. Express.
	GOING SOUTH.
Mackinaw lv		7 45am	2 00pm
Petoskey		8 30	2 45
Bay View		8 40	2 55
Harbor Springs		8 50	3 05
Conway		9 05	3 20
Cross Village		9 20	3 35
Good Hart		9 30	3 45
Wequetonsing		8 45	2 55
Harbor Springs		8 50	3 05
Bay View		8 55	3 10
Petoskey		9 05	3 20
Bear Creek		9 20	3 35
Boyne Falls		9 30	3 45
Alba		9 40	3 55
Kalkaska		9 55	4 10
Grass Lake		10 05	4 20
Cadillac ..... ar		11 45	5 50
" lv		12 00m	6 00
Reed City		1 15	7 30
Big Rapids		1 30	7 45
Howard City		1 45	8 00
Edmore		1 55	8 10
Greenville		2 05	8 20
Grand Rapids ..... ar		3 30	9 45
Kalamazoo		5 30	11 45
Battle Creek		6 05	12 20
Jackson		7 05	1 20
Ypsilanti		8 05	2 20
Detroit ..... ar		8 45	3 00
Toledo		12 30	6 45
Cincinnati		5 45pm	12 00n
Chicago		5 00	11 30

A. B. LEET, Gen. Pass. Agt. Grand Rapids, Mich.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from nervous debility, premature decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

HALL'S Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE OF FAILS TO CURE.

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount when in a single instance, it fails to cure.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it acts upon the blood internally, acting upon the cause of the disease, not palliating for the time, and we do not hesitate to say that if you will use it according to directions, and will not accept NO IMITATION OR SUBSTITUTE. If be has not got it, send to us and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Dr. Croutter, Agt., Charlevoix. 23

SENATOR ANTHONY

OF RHODE ISLAND.

THE PROBABLE SUCCESSOR OF SENATOR EDMUNDS AS PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

Upon the accession of vice president Arthur to the presidency in September, 1881, the senate at its next session elected as its president pro tem. David Davis, of Illinois, whose term of office as senator expired on the 3d of March, 1883. Just before the expiration of his term Mr. Davis resigned the presidency of the senate, and Geo. F. Edmunds, senator from Vermont, was elected as his successor. Mr. Edmunds' senatorial term not expiring until 1887. This procedure was necessary in order that the presidency of the senate should not be vacant during the interim between the forty-seventh and forty-eighth congresses. Had Mr. Davis not resigned the expiration of his senatorial term would have left the country without a legal successor to President Arthur in case the latter had died before the senate of the forty-eighth congress had elected a presiding officer pro tem. Mr. Edmunds therefore was practically made vice president of the United States, and will remain such in all the present senate elects a successor.

It is now well known in official circles that Senator Edmunds does not wish to continue in his present position as presiding officer of the senate, it being his desire to accompany his family to the Bermudas for the benefit of his wife. The republican majority have to be considered a disposition to choose the subject of our illustration, as Mr. Edmund's successor, and this event seemed only to await the recovery of Senator Anthony from his late illness and his appearance upon the floor of the senate.

SENATOR ANTHONY'S RECORD.

Henry B. Anthony, of Providence, Rhode Island, was born in Coventry, that state, April 1st, 1815, of Quaker ancestry. He graduated at Brown university in 1833, and in 1838 he assumed the editorial charge of the Providence Journal, which he retained until called to a seat in the United States senate. He was elected governor of his native state in 1849, he was re-elected in 1850, and there after declined to accept the candidacy for another term.

He was elected to the United States senate on a union republican, to succeed Philip Allen, democrat, and took his seat in 1850, his term expiring in 1857. During this term he served as chairman of the committee on printing. Mr. Anthony has been returned as his own successor each expiring term ever since, his present term end ing March 3, 1889. He was elected president of the senate pro tem March 23, 1882, and was re-elected March 16, 1883.

Senator Anthony was a member of the national committee, appointed to accompany the remains of president Lincoln to Illinois, and was one of the senators designated by the senate to attend the funeral of General Scott, in 1866, and was also a delegate to the Philadelphia loyalists convention held in that year. He is one of the most popular members of the senate, and his elevation to the presidency a third time is at present strongly indicated.

Protection From Poverty.

Iron mills and manufacturing establishments of various kinds are shutting down in different sections of the country, and large numbers of men are thrown out of employment. There are various estimates as to the number, some of which place it as high as fifteen thousand in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. With each announcement of the suspension of a mill there comes a wail from the manufacturers and their organs for more "protection." Accompanying this wail is a denunciation of those who ask for a revision of the blighting tariff laws. There is no doubt that certain branches of the iron industry are depressed, and as little doubt that the huge establishments engaged in the manufacture of steel rails could do business at a fair profit should they choose to do so.

The cause of depression is overproduction. The markets are glutted and business of all kinds is dull. Manufacturing has been pushed to extremes by the stimulus of high duties on imports, which, in many cases, have been prohibitory. The brief argument made by David A. Wells on this point at the free trade meeting in New York not long ago was so clear and plain as to be convincing to most men, at least who will examine it fairly. We have a limited market, because our manufactured articles do not go beyond our own borders. The restrictions imposed upon trade operate to shut us out of foreign markets. The president in his message made a complaint it might be called a whine about barriers to trade in Germany, France, Australia, and Brazil. If we close our ports against their commerce, what can we naturally expect from them but retaliation?

It may be said that we could not export in any event because we can not compete. It is time we cannot compete under the present tariff code, because of the resultant great increase to cost of production. Besides, we cannot sell because we refuse to buy. True, we have a continent and fifty-six millions of people for a market, but the proof of over-production is shown by the stagnation in business. There is no stringency in the money market to cause this.

The manufacturers, with all of the alleged advantages offered by the alleged tariff laws, shut down their mills and turn their men adrift. Where is the protection to the laboring man? He will not be interested in the discussion of abstract questions of political economy while his family are without fire and without food in mid-winter. The professions of benevolence so frequently made on his account by his tariff baron employers will fall on unheeding ears, or fall only to awaken bitter sneers.

Will the outlook of the unemployed operative be made more cheerful by the thought that there are about two thousand articles in our tariff schedules, and that whatever he may require from among these to shelter or clothe or feed him, or in any way add to the meager comforts of himself and family, must cost him from 30 to 100 per cent more because they are "protected" by a monstrous tariff tax? It is a dreary look ahead for him. With out work, without money, and the rigors of winter at hand, he sees only the destitution which robs life of its worth, and makes of it an exhausting struggle for a wretched existence. This is the dark outlook to day of thousands on thousands of workmen in iron, steel, and other yet "protected" industries. And yet it is pretended by the tariff monopolists that "protection" benefits the workingman!—Grand Rapids Democrat.

The tariff on salt is not a very heavy one but it is just heavy enough to secure the monopoly of the great salt combination. It is 8 cents per 100 pounds in bulk, and 12 cents in packages. Mr. Horr gets into a snarl of mild insanity when any one suggests a reduction of it, but there is really not the slightest occasion for his excitement. Michigan salt could easily get along without help, and the farmers and meat packers would save just so much in their business. Meat packing in Detroit is no important an industry as salt making in Saginaw. Why should the meat packers become peffed to pay a tax of 8 cents on a cask, or a mill, for the support of Mr. Horr's constituents? The fishermen of New England get a rebate for salt used in preserving fish. Why should not our packers and farmers get a rebate for salt used in preserving meat, and why should not every citizen get a rebate for salt used in preserving his own flesh and blood? In a word why should any one pay a penny of tax to those monopolists.—Evening News.

Buy note paper and envelopes with your address printed on it. W

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

A FIRM in London, England, advertise that they want American honey in large lots, and will pay an advance of 5c per pound over the New York market for prime fancy comb honey.

ENGLAND has this year 2,950,000 acres under wheat, while America has nearly 40,000,000 devoted to the same cereal. Great Britain has 6,300,000 head of cattle, America has 20,000,000.

PROF. KEDZIE, of the Michigan Agricultural college, is making a series of experiments to show that growing plants in a close room are not injurious to human life. He says the notion that it is unhealthy to sleep in a room containing plants is sheer nonsense. The plants may not injure one, but it would occur to some, perhaps, that a close room is not conducive to the health of either animal or plant life.

A NOBLE herd of high degree is the English Mandeville, but he went down to a prize-fight at Flushing and acted in the capacity of impromptu bottle-holder to one of the knockers, and had his pocket picked of an expensive hair, soon watch for his pains. A paper of his country says: "Lord Mandeville should be ashamed of himself, and his loss should teach him to choose better associates." Let him ask Boston if there is a better associate than a pugilist.

DANIEL SHAW, of Troy, N. Y., was a most unfortunate man. When a boy he had his skull cracked by a kick of a mule. Subsequently he had a frightful experience with a circular saw. He was struck by three trains, and had an eye knocked out. Three well caved in on him. He had fits, and during an attack fell on a red-hot stove. Many times he was bitten by mad dogs. A coal wagon ran over him and crushed his legs. He had a fit on a railway track, and an incoming train finished him.

IT is so unusual to gamblers to leave any considerable sum of money to the ir families who at they die that an exception is remarkable. Henry Behm, familiar to the fraternity of Syracuse, N. Y., as "Dutch Hank," he. been a gambler for thirty years, and when he died the other day he left a fortune that his fortune amounted to nearly $20,000. He left the entire property to his wife. If any young man can such encouragement from this morsel he had better hasten to buy a roppenal test the elastic properties of his neck.

THE cotton crop of the South last year amounted to 7,000,000 bales, enough to supply the demands of the chief portions of the civilized world. In addition there were produced 2,500,000 tons of surplus cotton seed, which might have been transformed into 100,000,000 gallons of oil, 1,500,000 tons of cake, and 500,000 tons of paper. To what enormous extent this crop may ultimately be increased can scarcely be foreseen. Cotton is no longer king, but it remains, nevertheless, one of the chief commercial pillars of the country.

A RABBIT in De Soto, Ill., has a pet coon which was caught before its eyes were yet open to the light of day. An old cat took charge of and cared for it as if the animal were one of its own little ones. Not the coon takes care of itself, although the cat continues to feed it with mouse and rat dainties. So children in the house have taught the coon any number of little tricks, such as begging for a biscuit, and putting its paw about one's neck. Her coonship might sit on the dining room lounge, and she shares that with the dog, who allows neither bed nor soapsuds nor anuoy her, and is known as fond of her as the cat.

A LIVERY scene occurred in a dentist's office at Westfield, Mass. A young man who had taken either to have teeth extracted, after the operation was over became temporarily crazed from the effects of the drug, and, under the impression that he was a Yankee, made a lot attack on the dentist and plug-ugly in attendance. One he jammed up into a corner and shook him until his teeth rattled, and the other he dragged around the floor in his effort to throw him out of the window. Other occupants of the building rushed in, but were quickly put to flight by the enraged man, and one of them was chased around the halls and into his own quarters. The patient was finally secured by the dentist, and knew nothing of what had occurred when the effect of the ether passed off a few minutes later.

A CATTLE-OWNER of Montana was in Winnipeg, Manitoba, a short time ago. He engaged a room at a hotel and went out for the evening. During his absence an English nobleman came to the hotel, and, no room being vacant, the clerk gave him that of the Montana man, who, being only a "common person," could not be supposed to object to such a proceeding. But that was just what he did. When he heard of it, and before five minutes had passed, the poor Englishman was running wildly out of the room, crying "Murder!" There was no murder, however, but the English man had to take a cot in the hall, the Montana man got his room, and the clerk was very careful afterward not to try experiments with "common persons" from Montana.

WASHINGTON letter: The spiders had become so bad under the eaves of the White House that it became necessary to bring out a fire-engine to wash them down. The deluge of water caused a veritable shower of spiders to the stone floor below, and very soon at least 1,000,000 of them were crawling about in every direction—small, middling and large, of every shape and line known to the species. About 3 o'clock the thoroughly-chilled insects began crawling up the large pillars toward the roof in such numbers that the pillars looked as though they had been painted black. The predominating variety, which has been christened the "Presidential spider," because it has inhabited the old portico ever since its erection in large numbers, has a round, plump body, six legs, two formidable feelers, and is of a mixed gray and yellow hue. Thousands of wasps visit the locality during wasp season and carry off large numbers of the Presidential spiders and store them away for winter rations.

MR. LELAND, of the Leland house, Chicago, doesn't believe what he sees in the papers about the effect of the recent Supreme court decision on the rights of the colored man under the Fourteenth amendment. He had occasion to eject Samuel Hovey from his hotel, the other day, and had him arrested for a breach of the peace for disorderly conduct. Hovey had a colored brother as his attorney, who proceeded to cross-examine Leland. "Did you tell this boy to come down and get his pay and don leave him arrested when he came down stairs?" he asked. "He ordered me," said Mr. Leland. "Are there not several numbers to my questions?" said the attorney. "No you will please confine yourself remarks to answering what I ask you, sah." The bold prejudice turned to the Justice. "You will have to answer the gentleman's questions," said the Justice. Mr. Leland was then subjected to a severe cross-examination. At each attempt to evade a question he was whipped into line by the despised colored man. After which Samuel Hovey was fined $1 and costs.

ON a recent morning, in Cincinnati, a band of colored persons marched to the water's edge on the Ohio, just below the New port and Cincinnati railway bridge and directly opposite Saltsage row, where the vilest negro in Southern Ohio lived, and proceeded to take part in the ceremony of baptizing by immersion a newly-converted sister. The weather was very cool, and the early morning, when few people were stirring, was chosen to escape interruption. After a song and a prayer, the converted minister and the candidate—a red-blood, stout young girl—waded slowly into the chilling water. The girl shivered at first; but, exhorted by the minister, she followed him until he halted where the water was about deep enough. She made two leaps toward the shore echo these words: "Lord a-mussy, I can't stan' dis; lemme go." "But remember the minister's command, dear sister, and don't turn back to the wicked world," said the minister. "But I mus' go; it'll kill me. I know it will," the girl replied. She made a desperate effort to escape, but the person held on, saying, as he scrambled with his obstinate convert: "Ye' heal me's go under." In the effort to duck the girl's head both went under beyond their depth. They soon rose to the surface and floated down stream, shouting for help. Boats were at hand and the two were rescued in the usual way. Now the colored theologians are discussing whether or not this was a Christian baptism.

FARM NOTES.

VEMPKINS are a valuable as well as cheap food for milch cows.

HARDINESS is a very desirable quality in fruit-trees in this country of long and severe winters.

ALBERT SCOTT, a Vermont farmer, has a cow that has made nearly 600 pounds of butter in a year.

ONE of the best methods of destroying the cutworm is by fall plowing. This turns up the sluggish worms from their winter quarters and either kills them by exposure or furnishes food for the chickens or other birds.

BEEKEEPERS all over the country are coming to recognize the value of the forage plant as pasturage for their bees. Mr. A. R. Kohnke, an Ohio beekeeper, says that bees will leave everything else if they have that. The honey is as light as white clover honey, and has a decidedly better taste and flavor.

MULCHING fruit-trees has come to be regarded by many fruit-growers as indispensable to the successful production of fruit. It prevents to a great degree the cracking of fruit, and causes those varieties which are frequently spotted and defaced to become clear and covered with a rich, attractive bloom.

PARMENTIER, the French scientist, declares that the best way of storing white Beans that it became necessary to bring out a fire-engine to wash them down. The deluge of water caused a veritable shower of spiders to the stone floor below, and very soon at least 1,000,000 of them were crawling about in every direction—small, middling and large, of every shape and line known to the species. About 3 o'clock the thoroughly-chilled insects began crawling up the large pillars toward the roof in such numbers that the pillars looked as though they had been painted black. The predominating variety, which has been christened the "Presidential spider," because it has inhabited the old portico ever since its erection in large numbers, has a round, plump body, six legs, two formidable feelers, and is of a mixed gray and yellow hue. Thousands of wasps visit the locality during wasp season and carry off large numbers of the Presidential spiders and store them away for winter rations.

AN extraordinary yield of butter was obtained from an Englishbred Jersey cow owned by a farmer in Hamilton county, Ontario. A carefully conducted test of ninety-three days' duration resulted in a yield of 2265 pounds 10½ ounces of unsalted butter, which, when ready for market, weighed 2542 pounds 12 ounces. Grass and five quarts of ground oats constituted her daily feed during the trial.

GRAPES may be preserved for winter use by packing them in boxes with alternate layers of paper. Another method is to pack them in clean, dry earthen jars in layers a inch deep, with dry straw paper placed between. When the jar is filled, a double sheet is placed over the top layer and the lid put on. Strong, unbleached muslin is then placed over the lid to exclude the air, when the covering has dried and hardened, the jars are buried on a dry knoll deep enough to preserve from frost.

PROF. STUBTEVANT, of the New York Experiment station, giving advice to farmers about corn, says: "It is a mistake to suppose that it pays to plant different varieties are placed on adjoining fields, or when together, and thereby provide an excuse for neglecting improvement of their varieties by this method." As corn of the same type may be increased to the highest degree of excellence, it is apparent that a mixture of dent and flint corns would result in no improvement in the variety, but, if anything, in an improvement on the mixed varieties with their own family; the same would also be true of the flint or sweet families.

PROF. PARSONS says the black knot which so infests our American plums trees and some kinds of cherries, particularly the wild choke cherry, is due to a fungus, and says that it has been introduced into Europe. European plums, when grafted on wild cherry trees for supplying the material for their cherry rum, had better be very careful that no black knot should be found on their trees. Cutting and burning is the only remedy known for the black knot in the trees. The work should be very thorough, not only with the diseased trees, but all wild ones in the vicinity as well.

THE question of safely transporting potatoes in cars during the winter has long been a serious one to many of the Northern railroads. The custom has been to close up the stove in the car and trust to the chances of the fire being maintained during the journey. Many cars have been burned in this attempted to heat for the purpose which is learned by means of an electric device in the center of the car with an oil reservoir just above, by which the fire is fed. An ingenious system of pipes, leading through the car, and by a patented kind of valve, but air is kept continually circulating around the side and roof. The potato dealers everywhere will be glad to learn that the car will materially decrease the price of potatoes.—Chicago Tribune.

AN Ohio farmer says he never had any success growing Hubbard squash until he took to planting them late and among his potatoes. His method is as follows: In early spring he manures a strip of ground about ten feet wide in garden, in which he plants his earliest potatoes. About the middle of June he makes a row through the middle center of this strip and plants his squashes. The potatoes are dug and out of the way of the vines before they run a great deal, and are no hindrance to the proper cultivation of the squash. He does not pretend to know whether the potato vines are distasteful to the striped bugs or not, but he has found that for some reason his Hubbard squashes are not injured by these pests when planted in the manner already described. The 20th day of June last he planted a single row of squashes, and they in time covered a strip on which grew eight rows of potatoes. He has a fine crop of squashes, fully matured, while the potatoes were just as large and as many in a hill as though no squashes had been planted within rods of them.

THE peach, says Mr. J. L. Lovett, requires a warm, dry soil that is but moderately rich in fertility, but, as it is a great feeder and draws heavily upon the soil, especially of potash, nutriment should be furnished in the form of potash and bonedust. The trees may be planted fifteen or twenty feet apart each way, according to the character of the soil—the usual distance being sixteen or eighteen feet. The best way to mark out the ground for planting is to furrow it with a one-horse plow both ways at the desired distance. In planting, be careful and cut off all bruised or broken roots smoothly and trim back all side branches to within a few inches of the main stem—small ones to a whip—and cut back the main stem at least one-third its length. The first two years after planting beets, mangels, sweet potatoes, or other hoed crops may be grown among the trees, after which time they should be given the full use of the soil; whether the space between the trees be devoted to hoed crops or not, the soil then and in after years should be kept as mellow and as free of weeds throughout as a field of corn, being careful never to disturb or injure the roots while plowing or cultivating. A peach orchard should never be planted to grass or grain crops, as such are exceeding detrimental to the trees. They are usually more easily neglected than other fruit, and yet there is none that more liberally pays for the necessary labor and expense, both in the superior yield of the fruit and by maintaining vigor and fruitfulness. The trees should be examined carefully early in the spring of each year for borers and grubs, which may be found in their trunks, just at or immediately beneath the surface of the ground. As a preventive of the borer, place at the butt of each tree a shovelful of slacked lime or several of coal ashes.

DOMESTIC RECIPES.

HICKORY-NUT Cake.—Two teacups of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of thin cream, three and one-half cups of flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder sifted through flour, six eggs beaten separately, and one pint of chopped hickory nuts.

"SCRAPPLE."—Scrapple.—Cut into long strips like macaroni, expect that the sides are square, not round. Throw into boiling lard and cook until light brown. Sprinkle with salt as soon as done, and serve as a vegetable alone or as a garnish around meat.

CREAMED POTATOES.—A generous pint of cold boiled potatoes. Slice or cut into dice. Put into a saucepan two tablespoonfuls butter, the same quantity of flour, stir to smooth paste, pour in a cupful of milk, or cream if you have it, and let boil up. Stir briskly until it boils. Then put in the potatoes. Season to taste. Let cooked salmon into dice. Heat about a pint of the dice into half a pint of cream. Season to taste with cayenne pepper and salt. Fill the shells and serve. Cold cooked fish of any kind may be made into patties in this way. Use any sauce you choose—all are equally good.

HOCUS CROCUTUS.—To a cupful of boiled hominy add a tablespoonful of boiling water, stir well; add a little at a time, and gradually a cupful of table, stirring and mashing the hominy until it becomes soft, smooth paste. The whole should be of the consistency of mashed potatoes. Season with salt and pepper, and turn into a well-buttered pudding-dish, and bake in a quick oven. Serve hot.

CRUSTED POTATOES.—Cut the neck or breast of mutton nicely, and season with a seasoning of sweet herbs, grated nutmeg, pepper and salt; fry them brown in butter, lay the fat sides and edges of the dish with puff paste, lay in the steaks, and add half a pint of strong gravy made with the trimmings of the venison, and the juice of a large lemon, or a teaspoonful of vinegar; cover the dish with puff paste and bake in nearly two hours; some nicely cut potatoes may be pressed into the pie before serving it.

BOILED SCRAPPLE.—Stir large, smooth potatoes, half a cupful of boiling milk, one tablespoonful of butter, the whites of four eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Mash the potatoes fine, being careful not to break the skin. Bake forty-five minutes. Take the potatoes from the oven, and with a sharp knife cut them in two, lengthwise. Scrape out the inside with a spoon and put in a hot bowl. Mash light and fine. Add the seasoning, butter, milk and half the whites of the eggs. Fill the skins carefully in the mixture, glaze with the remaining whites of the eggs and set back to brown in the oven.

PLUMB PUDDING.—Boil a beef tongue the day before it is used, and a like quantity of lean veal. Chop very fine. Season the tongue with pepper, powdered sweet herbs, a teaspoonful of mustard, a little nutmeg and cloves, a pinch of each. Season the veal in like manner, with the addition of salt. Pack in alternate spoonfuls as irregularly as possible in cups, bowls or jars, which have been well buttered. Press very hard as you go on, smooth the top and cover with melted butter. When this cools close the cans and keep in a cool, dry place. Turn out whole, or cut in slices for tea. It is a pretty and savory relish, garnished with parsley or the blanched tops of celery.

TRANSPARENT PUDDING.—Butter a pudding-dish and line it with slices of stale sponge cake an inch thick. Put down a layer of any kind of jam or preserves in the bottom of the dish upon the cake. Beat to a cream the yolks of eight eggs, quarter of a pound of sugar and a pound of butter. Flavor to the grated nutmeg and stir in half a stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs; mix the mixture over the fruit to half an hour. Beat the whites of eggs to a stiff froth and add to a spoonfuls of sugar; spread on pudding after it is baked and put to the oven for a few minutes to To be eaten cold, with ice cream.

Advice to the German-Americans.

"And here allow me, as an American and in the interests of this American republic, to utter one word of advice to our German fellow-citizens. * * * Be good Americans, but cannot be a citizen of two countries, and when you make the oath of allegiance here your first care, duties here your first care, do not to cherish the literature, the and the art of the old country, nor up your children, indeed, to be German patriots, to be inflamed with the literature of English-speaking countries, but do not cut them off from the German language, from the treasures of art, science and literature. Goethe and Schiller are a priceless legacy, and, while easy to keep up a knowledge of German tongue in your family, have no right to allow this knowledge of the German language, which key to so precious a literature, to perish. Nothing is more neglected than other fruit, and yet there is none that more liberally pays for the necessary labor and expense, both in the superior yield of the fruit and by maintaining vigor and fruitfulness. The trees should be examined carefully early in the spring of each year for borers and grubs, which may be found in their trunks, just at or immediately beneath the surface of the ground. As a preventive of the borer, place at the butt of each tree a shovelful of slacked lime or several of coal ashes.

Parisian Plaster-Wipers.

"Plaster-wipers," are people have discovered the art of keeping Paris plaster-of-Paris. The Italians saying: "When I build a house I first put after its completion I let the second year; I unsell temporary. The first year I house has been built the damp dryness of the walls make it the tenant; a twelve-months' the house all winter, open with summer, greatly lessens its dan twenty-four months all peril be granted of fact. Some consulted opinion. People who care or to afford to care for their health six months before they take possession. Only those cannot choose—all are equally good.

Weeds That Flower.

of all dangerous devices in the dress, the most celebrated and fatal are the widow's weeds. A sunder crape should make a woman more mirthfully engaging than she is without it, but unless her face is severely anchored in the grave she cannot tell; but unless her face be severely anchored in the grave she cannot tell; but unless her face be severely anchored in the grave she cannot tell; but unless her face be

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Chairman Sabin's Convict Laborers

In the call for the republican national convention "all voters who are in favor of elevating and dignifying American labor" are invited to send delegates from each state. The committee which promulgated this call then elected one Sabin, of Minnesota, its chairman, the highest merely party office within the gift of the organization. As such chairman Mr. Sabin will next year, during the campaign, be the head and front of the republican party. His will be the directing hand in all matters of party policy. He will levy assessments and disburse them, send speakers here and there, issue proclamations and in a general way map out the policy of the organization. Having been selected for so conspicuous a place, it is legitimate to inquire into Mr. Sabin's antecedents. Who is he, and what is he?

The mechanics and toilers, who are invited to unite under his leadership for the purpose of "elevating and dignifying American labor," will be glad to know that he is a state prison contractor, who has grown enormously wealthy on convict labor. His millions have been amassed at the expense of the free and honest laboring men of the United States, whom he now wishes to "elevate and dignify," and but for the fact that he had these millions he would not have been selected for his present position. By putting his convict labor in competition with honest labor, he has decreased the demand for the latter, reduced the wages paid for it, and put millions in his own purse. Is it not possible that the republican committeemen have made a very large sized blunder by selecting him for this place? They may have occasion to regret the choice they have made.

Notes and News.

The two servants of the family of Jacob Crouch, of Jackson, have been arrested for the murder, and the day of trial set for Jan. 8.

Vanderbilt has combined with several other capitalists to control the coke product of the country for the purpose of manufacturing steel. He is about to engage in an "infant industry" and demands protection. The effrontery of the scheme ought to bring the blush to even the cheek of a Pennsylvania tariff man.

It was announced in Pittsburg last Thursday evening that all coal miners on the Monongahela river will suspend operations this week for an indefinite time, owing to unseasonable weather, overstocked markets and low prices. The suspension will throw out of work over 6,000 men, who are much depressed at the prospect. Great suffering will result.

The contest for 1884 will be on the tariff question. The election of Carlisle practically commits the democracy, and the call of the national republican committee is unmistakably for protection. This will split the parties as they never have been, for there are protection democrats as well as free trade republicans, and no party whip can drive them all into line at the polls in the same order as in the past. There are more doubtful states than have been counted. It will be a contest between the manufactures who wants protection and higher prices and the consumer who wants the lowest prices. It will divide the continent diagonally, and array the east and north against the west and south, and may engender more bitter warfare than any political contest ever experienced in this country.

The talk of secretary Folger's retirement from the treasury portfolio is again revived. This time it comes with all the assurance of a settled fact. Mr. Folger has little of the politician in his makeup, and does not understand how to use the patronage of his department to serve political ends and ambitions. He has been a dead weight on the administration in so far as this is concerned, and it is freely admitted by Mr. Arthur's friends that the president desires a change; he wishes to secure someone who can aid him in casting a political horoscope. Representative Skinner, of New York, states that he thinks that Richard Crowley, a politician after the president's own heart, will be appointed Judge Folger's successor before the first of January. Crowley is at present a member of the kitchen cabinet, and frequently goes with the president on fishing excursions.

The republican national committee met in Washington this week and and elected Senator Sabin, of Minnesota, chairman and ex senator Clayton of Arkansas, secretary vice Dorsey, resigned. Clayton is a carpet-bagger, and fully as unscrupulous as the great star route thief. Quite a contest occurred over the selection of the place for holding the next national convention. Delegations were present from Chicago, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Saratoga, and earnestly urged the claims of their respective cities. Mr. Nelson of New York said, should the convention be located at Saratoga, not only the empire state would be carried, but would "furnish means to carry all the doubtful states." Ex Senator Platt of that state also declared that if Saratoga was selected it "would go a good way towards helping the party to raise money for carrying on the campaign in 1884." Thus it will be seen that "soup" is still regarded by the stalwart bosses as the principal agency to be used in winning republican victories. After several ballots Chicago was finally selected as the place for holding the convention, and June 3 was fixed for the date. The outcome of the contest in the committee is regarded as a triumph for the Logan and Blaine factions and a sore defeat for Arthur's friends.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

Senators Mahone and Riddleberger's attitude toward the republican majority of the senate has caused a deal, in the reorganization of the upper house of congress that promises to assume a knotty dead lock between these two Virginian senators and the thirty-eight republicans. Riddleberger will act with Mahone in what ever course the latter will take, which practically gives them the balance of power." Mahone is determined that Gorham, the administration's candidate for secretary of the senate, shall be elected to that position, and if the republican caucus will not eventually select Mr. Gorham, then the nominee of the democratic minority will receive the Virginia senator's votes, and a sufficient number of the republicans, to elect him.

Gorham is very unpopular, as I discovered by interviews with the republican senators, fourteen of the thirty-eight declaring it their preference to have the position of secretary filled by almost anyone other than Gorham. Still the President and his cabinet are espousing the cause of the latter, and it remains to be seen what weight this official influence will have upon the votes of the fourteen kicking senators. The contest will not be precipitated probably mail after the first of January, when the exciting caucus will no doubt occur. The democratic side are viewing the situation complacently and express themselves confident of securing the secretary ship at least, in the reorganization.

THE PRESIDENCY OF THE SENATE.

I called on Senator Sherman and asked him who he thought would succeed Mr. Edmunds as President pro tem.

"There is a unanimous feeling among the senate to place Mr. Anthony in the chair when Mr. Edmunds shall resign, as he now declares his intention of doing."

Your name has been mentioned, Mr. Sherman, in connection with the house. Would you accept it if tendered?"

"I would much prefer to remain on the floor. While the presidency of the senate is an honor of which I should certainly feel proud, yet one in that position loses all opportunity in creating legislation or serving the interest of his constituents. If Senator Anthony's health will permit of his assuming the duties of the presidency, there is no question of his election."

SOME BAD LUCK JOHN LOGUEN

is in for city looking after his long sought for relief. Senator Sewell of New Jersey introduced a bill in the senate during the week, providing for General Logue's restoration to the army and immediate retirement with out back pay. The same bill will be carried in the house by Gen. Sherman of New York, and the pro rata feeling prevailing sentiment among the members investing it early passage.

I met the General, Tuesday, in the lobby of the senate and in answer to an inquiry as to what he thought of his prospects he said:

"I believe congress will do its duty to me sooner or later. But for personal antagonism to the numerous bills that have been introduced in my behalf I would long ago have been executed and restored to the army. General Logan has been my hardest enemy, in time. I think, will work out his propitiee. General Grant will soon be in Washington to urge my cause personally, and I am now in great hopes that my happiest hour will be soon realized."

COLUMBIA SUFFERAGE.

For thirteen years the permanent citizens of the District of Columbia have not had a vote. The constitution declares that every citizen of the United States shall have the right of suffrage, but over 250,000 eligible voters of this district have been practically disfranchised for over a decade under the present system of our district government. An effort will be made and is now in progress to have the present congress restore to us a local government. A district committee has been organized to petition the legislature to pass a law to that end, and if public clamor will have any of feet we shall soon have the additional excitement of "ward politics" in our midst.

RUMORS OF DUDLEY'S RETIREMENT

have been floating around the past week. A strong effort has been made by the disgruntled pension attorneys and their friends to induce Secretary Teller to remove Mr. Dudley as commissioner of pensions, but Teller says "and while I am here as secretary of the interior," Mr. Dudley says he will not resign, so the pension attorneys will have to be satisfied with his company.

SOUTHERN WAR CLAIMS.

I learned during the week that there are sixty Maryland and Missouri war claims ready to be introduced at the first opportunity. These bills claim damages to the aggregate of $75,000,000.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Dr. Crosier.

$1 A YEAR. $1

ONE DOLLAR. ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR. $1

Detroit Free Press

THE WEEKLY

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

THE HOUSEHOLD

Two Papers for the Price of One.

$1 A YEAR. $1

ONE DOLLAR.  ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR. $1

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE FOR CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, and all throat and lung affections. The only object of the advertiser in sending the prescription is to benefit the afflicted, and spread information which he believes to be invaluable. Parties wishing the prescription will please address REV. EDWARD A. WILSON, 162 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

PIMPLES.

I will send Free the recipe for a simple vegetable remedy that will clear the face of PIMPLES, FRECKLES and COMPLEXION BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful. Address, with stamp, naming this paper, JOHN H. REYNOLDS, Station D, New York City.

OLD NEWSPAPERS FOR SALE

AT COST

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber G

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladi

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated R

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PRO

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge S

CHARLEVO

GEO. W. MILLER

DEALER IN

Clothin

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satc

GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix,

L. D. BARTHOLOME

DEALER IN

Hardwar

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Overcoat

AND

SUITING

Gents' Overcoats.

Youths' Overcoats

Boys' Overc

Gents' Suits.

Youths' Suits.

Boys' S

I have just received a large assortment of the above goods purchased since I am selling these goods for less than they c were at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods a yourself.

E. M. Clar

Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at his

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

The highest market price in cash paid for

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy black smithing of all kinds, and repairing of boilers promptly attended to.

G. W. JEFFE

Dealer in

Fresh and Cur

Fresh and Salt F

AND VEGETA

Fat Stock and Farm

Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, C

O. B. WEED

Are headquarters for

DRU

CHEMICA

Patent Medicines, E

Imported and Domestic

Toilet Artic

AND FANCY GO

None but Pure M

Kept in stock

Prescriptions Filled by and with fresh and pure drugs

We will use you well, and men's now

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 20, 1883.

Local Business Notices.

TAX RECEIPTS at this office.

HOUSE TO RENT.—On the ter ge near O. D. Weed's. Inquire at the store. W. J. BRADLEY.

Cutters at cost at L. D. Bartholo w's.

FOR SALE.—A second hand por ble saw mill, with engine and boiler complete, ay sale cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

Buy your wife a handsome and rable French Kid Shoe for a Christmas pres t. Sure to please. Sold by D. Sherwood & Co.

All the Latest Styles in Ladies' ses and Slippers. ELY, the Cheap Boot and oe Man. Next to Bridge Street House.

Cloaks and Dolmans—special sale December. Don't miss the bargains at G. ey's.

Clothing AT COST, to close it out d make room for other goods. URIAH EMERY & CO.

For fresh and cheap Groceries, go Byron See's. P. S.—Candies and Nuts for ma.

Picture Frames, handsome patterns h hand, any size made to order. Prices to suit e times. O. L. WHEAT.

Boots and Shoes are selling like hot ers at B. See's.

Nuts! Nuts!! Nuts!!! Buy your uts for Christmas, of Upright, Emery & Co.

For Sale Cheap. Dry maple body ood from 16 inches to four feet in length. Ap ly to H. S. HAVENS.

D. Sherwood & Co. have an assort ent of Slippers which can't be beat. Just the ing for a Christmas present.

Candies, Nuts, and Toys, just the ing for Christmas. A find assortment at O. L. eat's.

Everybody in the county must know t Upright, Emery & Co. are also for Rubber ods, Belts, Muckinaw suits, Rubber Overcoats, d everything in the line of winter wear.

Chas. Ely, the cheap Boot and Shoe an, is bound to lead the trade. Prices fell mmensely. Next to Bridge street House.

A large assortment of men's heavy ocks and rubbers for winter wear, at D. Sher ood & Co.'s.

For Sale. Two or three good orses for sale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

Christmas candies, a big assortment to select from. URIAH EMERY & CO.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and ple block wood for sale. Cash in advance guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

A large stock of Boots, Shoes, and ubbers, at the CHEAP Boot and Shoe House.

Three hundred tons of ground feed, ourse and fine meal, corn, oats, peas, and mill ings, at Upright, Emery & Co.'s. warehouse. Also a large assortment of flour, feed, meal, wooden ware, and a complete line of dry oods and groceries.

Men's Heavy Rubbers, $2.15 a pair-Sock. Muckinaw Socks $1.75. At EAN'S.

News Brevities.

Local news on eighth page.

The man who supports his home paper is a good citizen.

Patronize home industry. That is the way to build up a town.

Ed. Parmelee of the Sentinel, has gone home to spend the holidays.

Several of our subscribers have promised to bring us wood. We need it now.

The G. R. & I. railroad company is soliciting a route for the branch which will run to Boyne City.

Manufacturing enterprizes build up a town; the more of them we have the greater will be the growth.

The M. E. Sunday School will have an old-time Christmas tree and good time on Christmas eve, Dec. 24th.

The Good Templars are to hold an anniversary entertainment at the opera house Jan. 3rd. Programme to be announced hereafter.

Will Rogers, of East Jordan, gave the JOURNAL a call on Tuesday. He reports the Arm entirely frozen over, down as far as Ironton.

"I can tell a live town in a minute," said a man the other day, "whenever you show me its newspapers well patronized by its business men."

The fire department will hereafter meet at Dan Way's old stand, which we understand is to be occupied as a Town Hall until next September.

Editor Sprague and some of the northern papers are bound that our railroad shall go to Charlevoix or some other town than Frankfort. Express.

Some people grumble lustily at some item in the paper; when at the same time they know it has for a week been the subject of general gossip all over town.

There isn't much said about the saw-log service, but its work entitles it to the highest praise and admiration. During the last fiscal year it stormed over 43,000 logs impelled in its course and on the sea coasts and lakes, including nineteen persons who were beyond reach of ordinary human aid; and the property saved by its efforts during the same period amounts to more than $5,000,000. Ex.

At a fire in Rockford Sunday morning, E. B. Lapham, our former popular landlord, lost a hotel building valued at $8,000, with no insurance.

Old fruit growers, on general principles, predict that the fruit crop of next year will be enormous. They say it has been short for the three years past and it is bound to average itself up.

The meeting of the historical society at Mr. Ainslie's was well attended considering the storm. An extended report is omitted for lack of time. The next meeting will be held on Jan. 8th, place to be announced hereafter.

The Herald says that the change of the chair cars from Petoskey to Traverse City is proving to be a profitable change for the company. The coaches are well filled every day, on both outgoing and incoming trains.

Stevens post No. 66, G. A. R., of East Jordan, is to give a ball at the Hulbert house on New Year's night, and promise a good time. Because of the misfortune to the Enterprise office, the JOURNAL printed the cards of invitation this week. The announcement will also be found in our advertising columns. We wish the boys success.

If newspaper talk would build railroads the Toledo and Ann Arbor road would long ago have been completed to at least half a dozen different outlets on Lake Michigan from Manistee north to Charlevoix. Traverse City newspapers have made no effort to secure this road, but it is not unlikely the company will be glad to compromise the matter by making this place the northern terminus. G. T. Herald.

Newspaper Notes.

At this season there seems to be a great strife among certain papers to get out extra large editions with supplements filled with holiday announcements, and how received this week show to what extent northern Michigan can go. The Petoskey Democrat issued a double sheet, containing 27 columns of advertising, and the Grand Traverse Herald 24 pages, containing 97 columns of advertisements and 43 of reading matter. One whole page was devoted to a review of the display of goods in Traverse City, and nearly a full page to a list of leading operations similar to that in the Journal some weeks since. The aggregate cost of building operations, including $40,000 on the new asylum, foots up nearly $250,000. The Herald is a live paper, and evidently has a very complete printing office.

The Inland Printer, "an operative journal conducted by workingmen," is devoted to the interests of the craft, and the December number just to hand is a model of excellence in editorial quality and mechanical finish. It deals with every day matters in a practical manner, and deserves a support from the printers of the west and north west which will guarantee its position in the front rank of typographical publications in the country. The price, $1.00 per year, places it within the reach of every poor and apprentice in the land.

The Detroit Evening Journal has commenced the crowding process by cutting down all large display heads, and otherwise adding to the quantity of reading matter. It claims a bona fide circulation of 15,000 copies daily.

More About Eggs.

Eggs always bring a good price during the cold weather. But lack of pure and fresh water greatly interferes with the production of eggs. Eggs contain a large amount of water and unless there is a constant supply of it fowls will not lay. Many poultry keepers are very neglectful in the matter of providing water for fowls when in confinement and especially during the winter. As a consequence they obtain but few eggs.

The poultry breeders of Hanunton, N. J., have endeavored to settle the vexed question as to which breed of poultry is the best for general purposes. The Brahmas, Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Leghorns, Langshans and Houdans were experimented with, not only for egg production but for market purposes. The Houdans and Wyandottes were too late in the trial, but the verdict of the majority of the breeders is in favor of the Langshans, which grow to a large size, lay very early and quite late in the season, rarely sit, and stand the climate well. The chicks of that breed grow very fast, are compact and realize the highest number prices.

O. B. Weed & Co.

Our readers will not fail to observe the large holiday announcement on this page. These gentlemen have a large and well selected stock of the best goods, tastefully arranged on both sides of their sales-room. On the left near the entrance is the finest display of toilet cases, albums, fancy frames, etc., in town. These goods are rich in finish and are selling well. They opened a large stock of fancy some dolls, and they too are fast disappearing. On the new counter may be found standard work in literature suitable for holiday presents. Here is an endless variety of goods suitable for children and young people which must be seen to be appreciated.

1883 1883

CHRISTMAS NOTICE.

Here we are Again.

O. B. Weed & Co.

PREVIOUS EFFORTS ECLIPSED.

Holiday Goods

Without Limit.

EVERYTHING!

EVERYTHING.

Our Mammoth Stock of Holiday Goods marks a New Era in the History of Charlevoix County.

Presents and Prices to Suit Everybody.

COME EARLY and Make your Selection.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Conant Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Dec. 18, 1883, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Edward Cooper to Mary Ann Cooper, e ½ of lot 1, blk 7, Charlevoix, $1,000.

Melvin H. Higinbotham to E. S. Johnson, n ½ of n w ¼ 32-32-8, $1,000.

W. T. Dickerson to the W. B. Jenkin, lot 3 and n ½ of s w ¼ 31-33-8, $800.

Conrad Bodmer to Leroy Babcock, 2 acres, 1-33-8, $100.

Albert E. Mason to chas. Langeraan, lot 28, blk 6, Mason's add. Charlevoix, $200.

John Hanley to F. W. Shaw, e ½ s w ¼, 30-34-5, $1,200.

E. Magee to M. Magee, s ½ s e ¼ s w ¼, 8-33-5, $200.

M. Magee to Logan Magee, s ½ s e ¼ s w ¼, 8-33-5, $200.

Wm. Wallace to James Pearson, s ½ of s e ¼ 26-34-7, $600.

Isaac L. Lyon to John A. Newville, n w ¼ of s w ¼, 10-32-6, $500.

Daniel Steele to Reynolds & Brown, e ½ of s w ¼, 2-32-7, $600.

Hayes.

Old Boreas on the rampage.

Every body anticipating a merry Christmas.

Snow once more, and the small boy with his sled rejoiceth.

A number of our citizens on the sick list, some very sick.

A boy arrived at John Raymond's last week. John is happy.

Mr. Barratt died last Friday. He had been sick nearly a year with consumption. Funeral last Monday.

One of John Newstead's little children died of diphtheria last Sunday.

Joseph Steckman, a former Hayes ite but now of Bellaire, Antrim county, made Hayes a flying visit last week. He reports things lively in his section.

Mr. Truman Case has taken up his fishing nets, and quit the business for this season. He has had good success. J. ZEKE.

South Arm.

Weather pleasant and mild.

Lumbermen are looking sober.

Mr. Robbs, of Marion, has been through this township buying cattle for beef.

Willie Bland is reported to be better. His disease is rapidly leaving him.

Mr. D. Parlee contemplates building a store near Davis' mill in the near future, if circumstances will permit.

Monroe's sloop has been up to Boyne since the recent assignment.

D. Monroe has sold his farm for $1,500. He is now driving piles for H. E. Chapman at Boyne City.

Mr. J. Doe has moved to South Arm. He has rented the farm to Mr. Carson.

E. L. Church is teaching the Inter mediate school. Spelling school every Tuesday evening and everything seems to be in a flourishing condition.

Mr. Geo. Allen's school is quite small on account of sickness in the neighborhood.

Excuse our error in last issue. Mrs. Julia Coles is teaching the Bennett school instead of Miss Southland.

Mr. Geo. W. Jones, of Boyne Valley, is canvassing this section of the country for a new book entitled "The Western Empire."

Monroe's logging camp has cut 4,000,000 ft. of logs which are now on skids.

Measles broke out in the camp recently. Nearly all the men had them.

Mr. Lyon, of East Jordan, and Mrs. Melvin A. Baker, of South Arm, were married at Mr. H. B. Stoltzman's on Dec. 5th. Mr. and Mrs. Lyon are living on Mrs. LS farm in this township where they expect to spend the winter. P. A. S.

Christmas Tree.

The Congregational society and Sunday school will have a Christmas tree at the opera house on Monday evening, 24th. In connection with the tree there will be a concert and praise service. All interested are invited to be present and assist in making this a successful as well as enjoyable occasion.

Important to Travelers.

Mr. L. G. Evans, of Eastport, has just finished an addition to his house, and now has accommodations for the traveling public which they have not had since the Blakely house burned last winter. This will be a great convenience to those traveling that way, and Mr. E. E. should be remembered.

Christmas Sermon.

At the M. E. church next Sunday morning, this holiday will be observed in a manner that will be pleasing and profitable to all, young and old. At the evening services the interest will be continued in the sermon expected on the occasion. Can you, will you come?

Christmas Services.

At the school house Sunday morning Rev. C. F. Van Aitken will give a Christmas sermon, and in the evening a talk on Christmas customs to which the young people are invited. Additional seats are to be provided.

Christmas Music.

If you want to see a fine display of music go to A. J. McLeod's market on Christmas eve. He expects to make the best show ever in Charlevoix.

Thermometers are being raised at CATALPHON'S corner with the expectation that the recent cold weather will subside and the mercury be allowed to rise.

Grand New-Year Ball

AT THE

HULBERT HOUSE, EAST JORDAN,

ON

NEW YEAR'S NIGHT

FOR THE

BENEFIT OF STEVENS POST NO. 66, G. A. R.

ALL ARE RESPECTFULLY INVITED TO COME.

FLOOR MANAGERS

JAMES SHEAR. ROBERT WILKIE.

Good Music in Attendance

BILL TO DANCE 50 CENTS; WITH SUPPER, $1 50

Grand Christmas Ball

At Lewis' Hall,

TO BE GIVEN BY THE CHARLEVOIX FIRE DEPARTMENT

On Monday Evening

Dec. 24, 1883

Music by the Charlevoix Orchestra.

Floor Managers: A. E. Colgrove, A. McNeil, A. J. McLeod.

Bill 75 Cents

Tickets for sale at O. B. Weed & Co.'s and Dr. Cropper's drug stores.

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Car Blades, WAGON TONGUES, Shingles, Lath, &c.

Lumber Sawed & Bills Filled TO ORDER.

New Goods.

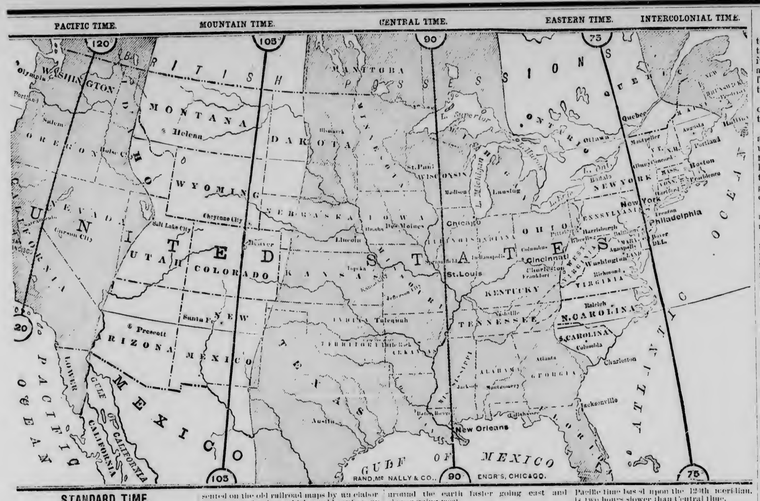
At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.



STANDARD TIME.

Hitherto There Have Been Fifty-three Kinds of Time; Now There Will Be but Five—How the American Continent Is Arranged in Divisions.

[From the Chicago Tribune.]

We present herewith a map explaining the standard time which was adopted at noon Nov. 18 by the railroads of the North American continent, and in connection therewith are published tables showing the difference between the new time and the local or solar time of the leading cities of the country. A change somewhat similar to that which is now effected in America was brought about in England as long ago as Jan. 11, 1848, and a reform very like that now inaugurated in this country owing to the complications arising under the old dispensation. It may not be generally known that the railroads of this country have been conducted of late years under fifty-three different kinds of time, the difference between the times being very slight in some instances, but enough to make people miss trains repeatedly, besides causing other inconvenience.

FIVE GRAND DIVISIONS.

The fifty-three kinds of time were represented on the old railroad maps by an equal number of systems of lines, which would confuse an ordinary observer. Under the new system there are five divisions of time on the North American continent. Intercolonial, embracing Nova Scotia and New Brunswick; Eastern, taking in the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania, and the States south of Pennsylvania; Central, including Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, and the States north and south of them; Mountain, comprising the lands west of the Missouri river in the mountains; and Pacific, taking in the lines on the Pacific coast.

THE FIVE COLORS.

The five colors cannot be given in the map herewith presented, but the divisions are separated on the old railroad maps by the following colors: Intercolonial, orange; Eastern, green; Central, blue; Mountain, brown; Pacific, yellow. The lines in which the different divisions are located are shown in the map herewith presented, but the divisions are also separated by the following figures: Intercolonial, 60; Eastern, 75; Central, 90; Mountain, 105; Pacific, 120. The figures are placed on the map at the points where the time changes, and the lines between the figures are the lines of demarkation between the different divisions of time.

THE DIVISIONS.

The Intercolonial division takes in the territory included in the different divisions. The irregularity in the boundaries is caused by the various roads wishing to adopt as their standard the time of the meridian nearest which the greater number of their lines are situated.

The country is subdivided to two cities of New York for the original suggestions leading up to this important innovation. The idea occurred to Prof. Cleveland Abbe, of the Signal Bureau at Washington, and his plans were elaborated by Dr. F. A. P. Barnard, of Columbia college. Prof. Abbe proposed his Pacific time based upon the 120th meridian, to two hours slower than Central time.

The several meridians are indicated upon the map, as well as the territory included in the different divisions. The irregularity in the boundaries is caused by the various roads wishing to adopt as their standard the time of the meridian nearest which the greater number of their lines are situated.

The country is subdivided to two cities of New York for the original suggestions leading up to this important innovation. The idea occurred to Prof. Cleveland Abbe, of the Signal Bureau at Washington, and his plans were elaborated by Dr. F. A. P. Barnard, of Columbia college. Prof. Abbe proposed his Pacific time based upon the 120th meridian, to two hours slower than Central time.

The several meridians are indicated upon the map, as well as the territory included in the different divisions. The irregularity in the boundaries is caused by the various roads wishing to adopt as their standard the time of the meridian nearest which the greater number of their lines are situated.

MERIDIANS.

The 60th meridian, on which central time is fast, is nine minutes slower than Chicago solar time. Eastern time, which gives seven hours, is one hour faster than central time, or four minutes slower than New York city solar time. Mountain time, which being based upon the 105th meridian, is two hours slower than Central time. Pacific time, based upon the 120th meridian, is two hours slower than Central time.

The several meridians are indicated upon the map, as well as the territory included in the different divisions. The irregularity in the boundaries is caused by the various roads wishing to adopt as their standard the time of the meridian nearest which the greater number of their lines are situated.

The country is subdivided to two cities of New York for the original suggestions leading up to this important innovation. The idea occurred to Prof. Cleveland Abbe, of the Signal Bureau at Washington, and his plans were elaborated by Dr. F. A. P. Barnard, of Columbia college. Prof. Abbe proposed his Pacific time based upon the 120th meridian, to

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 20, 1883.

News Brevities.

"We suppose it will only be a short time before Elk Rapids and Charlevoix will have communication with the outside world."—Progress.

The Elk Rapids Progress says that the land through which the Chicago & West Michigan railroad will run, when coming to this place, is being all bought up by capitalists.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and keep up the system you will find Pierce's Celebrated Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co. 8tf

It need not take long to decide what to buy your friends for a Christmas present this year. Just send them a receipt for a year's subscription to the JOURNAL. We will guarantee nothing could be bought for the same money that will please them more.

Mr W. H. Hurlbut gave the JOURNAL pleasant call last Friday. He has since returned to his home in South Haven but will come to Charlevoix again next spring. He is enthusiastic in his praise of the place, and has great faith in our future prosperity.

"Mrs. Catherine Frinkle died suddenly while watering her stock." What a warning this should be to certain soulless corporations who are becoming rich by "watering stock." Perhaps if some of them should die suddenly the rest of us would be happier.

The firemen are making preparations for their dance Christmas eve. It is the intention to give a first class party, and the object is a deserving one. We hope the party may call out a large crowd. Help support home enterprises should be a motto with all good citizens.

The greatest pain-killer yet found for Cramps, Colic, Stitch in side or back, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, &c., is Hamlin's Jamaica Ginger Tonic and Pain Cure. Rub on with hot wet cloths. It never fails to cure. For Dyspepsia, Indigestion, sick headache, Biliousness, diarrhea, dysentery, heartburn, sour stomach, &c., it is unequalled. Warranted to give relief. Use both internally and externally. Warranted to cure. Try it. Price 25 and 50 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

The following from the Harbor Springs Independent would seem to indicate that the question of a Michigan Central terminus on Lake Michigan is still unsettled, and that if the inducements were made sufficient, Charlevoix stands as good a chance as any place: "It can be announced with authority that the Michigan Central company has not yet considered any proposition for the construction of a branch road to Harbor Springs, Petoskey, Charlevoix or any other place on the shore. Some of the leading officials have said that the time would come when such a branch would be desirable, but there is no prospect of it at present."

Millions of persons die annually who might be saved if attention was given to little ills of life. Coughs, colds, sore throat, &c., are easily cured by using Hamlin's Cough Balsam, which removes the itching in the throat and lightness across the inflamed membranes, immediate relief will be found in croup, bronchitis, Whooping cough, &c., and even in chronic cases and last stage of consumption great relief is realized. For incipient consumption it works like a charm. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

"William Kitts of Marion township, Livingston county, mysteriously disappeared and his friends settled down to the belief that he had been foully dealt with, or fell through the ice in Pine lake. All hope of ever hearing of him was long since abandoned. He now turns up in British Columbia."—Lansing State Capital. Substituting the word Charlevoix for Livingston would make this refer to an affair familiar to our citizens, which is probably the one meant, but as there is a Marion township in Livingston county, and a Pine lake near Lansing, the item reads straight and makes another affair similar to our own.

Are your children peevish and sad-eyed? Do they have abnormal appetites and crave food constantly? Beware of worms. Very few children escape their ravages. Nevertheless be happy or well while suffering with worms. There are the very life by preventing the digestion and assimilation of food. There is a sure remedy. It is called Parmelee's Vegetable Worm Confections. They are perfectly harmless, but will quickly dissolve the worms and pass them off through the bowels. Buy no other. Price 25 cts per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

The ball has opened in Washington on the tariff question and members will soon be called upon to take their partners for the dance. Mr. Yaple of Michigan yesterday astonished his colleagues, particularly surprised Mr. Mayburry, and greatly shocked Mr. Morr by introducing a bill placing salt on the free list. Mr. Maybury had a bill of the same purport in his desk, but with characteristic deliberation postponed its presentation, until he gave Mr. Yaple the opportunity to fire the first shot in the war on monopoly. On the side of the tariff, Mr. Converse of Ohio, a democrat, introduced a bill to restore wool tariffs, which were reduced in the last session. Mr. Durel, of the same state, is going to antagonize Mr. Converse's bill by one of his own placing wool on the free list and also reducing considerably the tariff on woolen goods. Thus we have democrats on both sides of the question already, and we shall probably have republicans on both sides before the session closes. The future party of free trade is gradually crystalizing.—Evening News.

Enrich the blood. Hamlin's German Bitters are highly recommended for all diseases requiring a certain and efficient tonic. Especially indigestion. Dyspepsia, want of appetite, loss of strength, lack of energy, &c. They enrich the blood, strengthen the muscles, and give new life to the nerves. They act like a charm in the digestive organs, remove all disagreeable symptoms, and whenever the stomach is weak or there is a general loss of physical vigor, these bitters are just what you need. Only 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

"A Charlevoix correspondent writes that the farmers thereabouts are plowing, that there is no ice in the harbor or lake and that 26 degrees above zero is the lowest the mercury has sunk, and that the Chicago and Milwaukee boots are still running."—Evening News. On several occasions we have found items in the News of great value in advertising our resources and advantages, and our citizens cannot do better than give as good a patronage as they can afford to the paper which is doing so much for us. These items create an interest in our place, and the JOURNAL is frequently in receipt of letters of inquiry concerning one or another business opening, thus proving that the News is a valuable medium through which to reach the outside world.

If Charlevoix is ever to become the common center and take the lead as a summer resort, our citizens will soon have to face the question of a large, first class summer hotel. While our hotels are large enough and good enough for hotels open all the year, the time is not distant when they will be inadequate to the large and rapidly increasing summer business. If we had a hotel larger and better in all respects than the hotels in Petoskey, there is a large list of wealthy resorters who would make their headquarters here who now go there. Accommodations may be made here just as good and just as cheap in many respects as at those at the island, and with many tourists it is simply a question of a first-class place to make their headquarters while they are fishing or sailing. Such a house should be built for next summer's business. Who will start it?

The Detroit News has the following: Talk about machine shops! Elk Rapids probably has one of the finest in Michigan. The Elk Rapids Iron Co. having 26 steam engines to keep in repair, besides a great deal of other iron work, decided last spring to build a shop and do their own work. The shop is now completed at a cost of more than $40,000. The building is of brick, 37x142 feet, well built and well lighted in a 15 horse power engine runs over $4,000 worth of machinery, consisting of one planer, one bolt machine, one pipe machine, two drill presses, and a double cutter wheel, &c. On the average 14 men are employed in the shop. The company have put the shop and its work into the hands of Joseph Parks, one of the most competent machinists in the state. He turns out a class of work of which any company would be proud.

The glass business just now is a fine illustration of the "protected" industrial infant. For twenty years the glass factories have had a tariff on glass of from 40 to 60 per cent, about 50 per cent average on all kinds, and 75 per cent on window glass. And yet the Pittsburgh glass factories are closed, the workmen having struck against an attempt to still further reduce wages, and the manufacturers are importing foreign glass and paying the heavy duties in order to fill their orders. A Winona dealer lately ordered a car load of glass from one of the principal Pittsburgh factories, and was informed in reply that there was no American glass in the market, that it would be necessary to fill his order with French glass; that seven-eighths of all the glass factories in the country were idle and there was no telling when there would be a resumption of work, probably not before spring as the employes did not seem to care to work at the reduced wages. In 1880 three quarters of a million dollars' worth of glass had any "protective" tariff to help or hinder it—American manufactured $1,000,000 worth of domestic glass and only imported $54,000 worth. This country has an exhaustible supply of all the raw materials for glass making, and yet with a tariff of 40 to 75 per cent, her factories are closed because they cannot pay living wages and the market is supplied from abroad in about double cost to the consumer. It is about time to wean the glass infant.—Grand Rapids Democrat.

December Crop Report.

Correspondents uniformly report wheat in poor condition to withstand unfavorable weather. In some localities it is reported as still improving, but it cannot make as large growth as usual.

Clover seed is yielding no better than was anticipated immediately after the frosts of September 8 and 9. Very little of the smell or dune clover will pay for hulling. The mammoth variety is yielding fairly well.

Reports have been received of the quantity of wheat marketed by farmers during the month of November at 264 elevators and mills. Of these 249 are in the southern four tiers of counties, which is forty-four per cent of the whole number of elevators and mills. The total number of bushels reported marketed is 1,131,938, of which 282,567 bushels were marketed in the first or southern tier of counties; 483,272 bushels in the second tier; 146,392 bushels in the third tier; 153,451 bushels in the fourth tier, and 66,536 bushels in the counties north of the southern four tiers. At 25 elevators and mills or ten per cent of the whole number from which reports have been received, there was no wheat marketed during the month.

The total number of bushels reported in August, September, October and November, is 5,048,826.

Health in Michigan.

For the week ending Dec. 8, 1883, the reports indicate that intermittent fever, rheumatism, and influenza increased, and that bronchitis, erysipelas, and diphtheria decreased, in area of prevalence.

At the state capitol the prevailing winds during the week ending Dec. 8, were southwest; and compared with the preceding week the temperature was slightly lower the absolute and the relative humidity, and the night ozone slightly more, and the day ozone the same.

Preceding reports by regular observers and others, diphtheria was reported present during the week ending Dec. 8, and since at 15 places, scarlet fever at 23 places, measles at 9 places.

Eggs at this Season.

Eggs bring the highest prices now, and it will pay well to feed for eggs. The cost of the feed, no matter how high, is easily over-balanced at this season, and the feed must be varied and of the best quality. One reason why eggs are high is because hens are not laying, and the subject should be to take advantage of the opportunity. It should be borne in mind that the chief mistake made with laying fowls is in starving them for meat. We often receive letters asking why the hens do not lay, especially when they are well and liberally fed. We can say that as a rule the manner of feeding as on the quantity allowed. Corn, corn meal or oily substances of any kind conduces to fat. Nor will fowls lay well when fed on a single article of diet, for the demands of the system are such that no one kind of food will sustain the wastes, wear and productions of the body for but a short time, or until a deficiency occurs.

When any certain food fails to satisfy the animal cravings of the appetite, which is the index to the want, the food begins to decline in it, and is greedily eat of something else should it be furnished, as it finds in a change the desired addition necessary for the purpose intended, or at the same time the body may be over supplied with substances not found in the new variety though abundant in the other. It is a well known fact, and one to be borne in mind, but to depend on one or even two kinds of food, but to give as many changes as possible. Given only a small proportion of corn to fowls in confinement, and that only at night. Give no more than the quantity they will eat up clean at a single meal per day.

Early in the morning and as late in the evening as it can be conveniently given. The morning meal should be of soft food such as ship stuff and corn meal mixed, the proportion of meal being about one third. Put a little salt in it, a small quantity of pepper, and a little ground meat if it can be procured. Or, if clover is chopped fine and then steeped and thickened with the above, feed warm, it will be better. At night give oats, the next night wheat, then buckwheat and then corn. Chopped cabbage, refuse vegetables cooked or raw, and plenty of pure water, are the necessaries. Keep the coops warm and dry, and give the fowls plenty of dust for a dust bath. Always sift the sand and feed them so as to give them all they require without getting them too fat.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FA

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN

EVERYTHING

In the line of

Furniture

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H. C. Cooper

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH

COME AND SEE US BEFORE BU

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY GONE YEARS.

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them

The Old Reliable Establishment in Char

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHI

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goo

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & F

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfacti

COME AND SEE U

Yours,

AMOS FO

READ THIS

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 24. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1883. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

OFFICE AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

ENTERED AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Business Directory.

ATTORNEYS.

BUCKHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, Rooms in Bettner Block, Charlevoix, Mich.
C. J. GRIER.

ROSS & ALBRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich. 22

EDWARD D. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor, Real Estate business promptly attended to. OFFICE: Up Town.

JOHN J. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

CHARLES E. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILTON EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

EATON & KEAT, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite C. S. Hurd's, Boyne, Mich.

ISAAC F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U.S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX.—Capital $50,000. Savings department. Depositors secured by deposit of government bonds, real estate, and approved notes for more than above amount. Loans made on first mortgages. Foreign and domestic exchange.
REYNOLDS & BROWN'S.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 A. M. and 7 P. M. Sunday school, Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday at 7, in the school house.
C. F. VANALKEN, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 A. M. and 7 P. M. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7.
J. T. HODGES, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX ROUGH AND READY FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall.
B. F. BISBEE, Secretary.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

C. CHRISTENSEN, M. D.
Office at the Ingleside.

J. C. BOYNE, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in the Lewis block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. H. WESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Homœopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich. 6tf

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

ISAAC S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agent, Charlevoix, Mich.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

C. C.—Beaver Bay No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

C. C.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 325, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

C. C.—Round Lake Lodge No. 281, meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

C. C.—Day Blues No. 187, meets Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. P.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 295, meets every on or before full moon. Hall over OFFICERS.

A. H. LYNCOTT, President.
Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money loaned on approved paper at reasonable rates. Collections given careful attention. Drafts and exchange on Chicago, Detroit, and New York always for sale.

H. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.

Reasonable.
W. S. JOHNSON,
Up Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its rooms are excellent. The table supplied with the market affords. Only sample room in town.

Mountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Free conveyances for the traveling public. Headquarters for the Pensoney and Elk stages.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CHILDS, Proprietor,

Boyne City, Michigan.

Has thoroughly refitted and refurnished.

Sewing Machines

AT CHEAP.

The easiest machines for sale at ten dollars less than any other machine in the market. Every machine warranted for ten years. Call and see them at the old stand, Bridge St.

MACHINE WARRANTED
D. S. MAY.

FOR CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

GO TO

Dr. G. W. CROUTER'S DRUG STORE.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

An Immense Line to Choose From.

PROBATE ORDER.—State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss.—At a session of the probate court for the county of Charlevoix, holden at the probate office in the village of Charlevoix, on Tuesday, the fourth day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty three. Present, Hon. James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of SHAWAWACKPENAISE, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of George W. Crouter and Adelbert H. Crich, who claim an interest in certain land described therein as grantees of the heirs at law of said deceased. Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the seventh day of January, A. D. 1884, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the said petitioners, as grantees of the heir at law of said deceased as aforesaid, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the probate office in the village of Charlevoix, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioners should not be granted; and it is further ordered, That said petitioners give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof on the day above stated, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county of Charlevoix, for three successive weeks.

A true copy.) JAMES A. KEAT,
23-25 Judge of Probate.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by Peter Sidlebottom, Jr., and Mary his wife, joining to her dower, of the first part, to Thomas Bennett, Jr. Bartlemy Barnes, mortgagee, of the second part, bearing date the 15th day of January, A. D. 1883, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix, on the twelfth day of January, A. D. 1883, in liber "M" of mortgages, on page 189, which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of fifty-one dollars and forty cents ($51.40), principal and interest, and an attorney fee of twenty-five dollars ($25) provided for in said mortgage, being he had to foreclose the same. And no proceedings at law or in equity having been had to recover the sum secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale herein contained, I will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, on Saturday, the ninth day of February, A. D. 1884, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front door of the Lewis Hall, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, that said Lewis Hall being the place for the holding of the circuit court within the said county of Charlevoix. The premises to be sold are described in said mortgage as follows, to wit: The south half of the southwest one quarter (½ of the southwest one quarter (¼) of section twenty-three (23), in township thirty four (34) north, range seven (7) west, containing twenty acres of land according to the United States survey.

Dated November 14, A. D. 1883.

E. M. CLARK,
Assignee of mortgagee.

CROUCHBANK & GRIER,
Attorneys for assignee of mortgagee. 18-25

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has leased the

Ladies' and Children's

Furnishing Goods,

Lately carried by Fisher & Inwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and gain as many more as possible. call and see my stock

LIVERY.

The undersigned has purchased the livery formerly owned by him, and installed

Geo. Durance, Manager.

There has been added a new stock of

Horses and Carriages

And a cordial invitation is extended to all old friends and patrons to call and see him when ever they need anything in that line.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. WILSON, 194 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

PIMPLES.

I will mail, FREE the recipe for a simple Vegetable Balm that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the Skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing 3c. stamp, PROF. WARREN & Co., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Cutlery Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated

ROCKFORD WATCH.

The best time piece ever made. 11

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

At his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and see me. West side bridge. 8tf

ROBERT GRUEN,

Boyne Falls, Mich.

Watch-maker

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 17

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card to take effect October, 1882.

GOING NORTH.	No. 1.	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7.
STATIONS.	Mail.	Express.	Express.	Express.
Cincinnati, "	lv	7 30 pm	12 00 m	10 30 pm
Richmond, "	"	10 10 "	3 00 "
Winchester, "	"	10 40 "	3 30 "
Ridgeville, "	"	11 25 "	4 15 "
Fort Wayne, "	ar	1 25 am	6 00 am	5 30 am
Fort Wayne, "	lv	3 35 "	6 10 "	5 30 pm
Warsaw, "		5 05 "	7 40 "	7 00 "
Silver Lake, "		5 40 "	8 15 "	7 35 "
Wyckliffe, "		6 05 "	8 40 "	8 00 "
Kalamazoo, "	ar	7 30 "	10 00 "	9 30 "
Kalamazoo, "	lv	7 40 "	10 10 "	9 40 "
Grand Rapids, "	ar	9 30 "	12 00 m	11 30 "
Grand Rapids, "	lv	10 00 "	12 30 pm	12 00 m
G. R. & I. R. R. Junction, "		10 05 "	12 35 "	12 05 pm
G. R. & I. R. R. cross, "		10 15 "	12 45 "	12 15 "
Howard City, "		11 17 "	1 47 "	1 17 "
Big Rapids, "		12 10 pm	2 37 "	2 07 "
Reed City, "		12 40 "	3 07 "	2 37 "
Cadillac, "	arr	1 50 "	4 20 "	3 50 "
Cadillac, "	arr	3 00 "	5 50 "
Traverse City, "	ar	5 50 "
Manistee, "	ar	6 45 "	12 30 am
Manistee, "	lv	7 00 "	12 45 "
Harbor Springs, "	ar	6 25 "	5 42
Petoskey, "	ar	6 50 "
Boyne City, "	ar	6 00 "	5 00
St. Ignace, "	ar	10 10 pm	8 50 pm
Marquette, "	ar	7 45 am	5 50 pm
Negaunee, "	ar	9 10 "	7 20 "

GOING SOUTH.	No. 2.	No. 4.	No. 6.	No. 8.
STATIONS.	Express.	Mail.	Express.	Express.
Negaunee, "	lv		5 45 pm	7 30 am
Marquette, "			9 00 "	8 30 "
St. Ignace, "			5 45 pm	6 10 pm
Mackinaw City, "			6 30 "	9 45 "
Harbor Springs, "			7 20
Petoskey, "			8 00	12 05 am
Boyne Falls, "			8 28	12 55 "
Manistee, "			3 26	6 30 "
Kalkaska, "			10 05	3 25
Traverse City, "			9 25	2 45
Cadillac, "	ar		11 06	5 05
Cadillac, "	lv		11 20	5 30
Reed City, "			1 03 pm	7 07 "
Big Rapids, "			1 40 "	8 10 "
Howard City, "			2 33 "	9 07 "
Wyckliffe & Mertes, "			3 47 "	10 27 "
Grand Rapids, ar			4 55 "	11 55 "
Grand Rapids, lv			5 00 "	12 00 m
Kalamazoo, "	ar		6 30 "	1 30 pm
Kalamazoo, "	lv		6 40 "	1 40 "
Vicksburg, "			7 04 "	2 04 "
Sturgis, "			7 30 "	2 30 "
Kendallville, "			8 40 "	3 40 "
Fort Wayne, "	ar		10 30 "	5 30 "
Fort Wayne, "	lv		11 20 "	7 30 "
Ridgeville, "			12 05 am
Winchester, "			12 50 "
Richmond, "	ar		1 45 "
Cincinnati, "			7 35 am

A. B. LEETE, Gen. Pass. Agt.,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from nervous debility, premature decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

HALL'S

Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE WE CANNOT CURE!

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. Its action upon the system is wonderful. Send for circulars and testimonials. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Dr. CROUTER, Agt., Charlevoix. 23

Things that do not Look Right.

"Dhar um sebral things dat dhar look 'zactly right to me," said Brother Gardner as he rubbed his bald head with one hand and opened the meeting with the other.

"It dhar look 'zactly right to see one man with ten millyon dollars an' anoder with only ten cents (applause by Samuel Shinn), but yit if I was de ten millyon dollar man I wouldn't keer wheder it looked right or not, (sudden end to the applause).

"It dhar look 'zactly right for one man to own a great foundry while anoder man am obleeged to work for him fur $2 a day "cheap, hear," from Judge Cadaverd, but if I was de $2 a day man I wouldn't run myself out of a job to spite de owner or to please a shinnegogue. (The Judge subsides.)

"It dhar look 'zactly right to see one man hold offis all de time, while anoder man has to shove a jackplane fur a libin' (great ruckus in Pickle Smith's corner), but he who shoves de jack-plane has de respeck ob de community an' keeps outer jail. (Razzle dies away.)

"It dhar look 'zactly right to see forty lawyers rush to defend a criminal who has stolen money in his pack ages, while de offender who am money less am left to dig his way frew a ten-foot wall wid an ole knife blade (grins on a dozen faces); but if I was a lawyer I should am my money any odder way except by sawin' wood. De public dhar look fur any perticular display of conscience on de part of lawyers, an' dirfore suffer no disappointments. (Grins no longer discernible.)

"It dhar look 'zactly right fur one man to have a big brick house an' anoder man a rough bo'd shanty, but long 'bout tax time de man in de shanty kin sit on de fence an' chuckle over de fack dat he hain't rich.

"It dhar look 'zactly right to see one man go pushin', an' 'swettin, an' crowdin' everybody else off de sidewalk to let de public know dat he am a king-bee, but such men have to carry de sobriquet of bein' in debt to de tailor, an' of dodgin' de grocer, an' of subscribin' $25 to build a church without a hope of bein' able to pay 10 cents on de dollar.

"In fack, my friends, dis' am heavy on us' mind' look 'zactly right to us at fust glance, but when ye come to figger it up an' divide an' subtract we've all got a leetle to be thankful for an' to encourage us to git up airly in de mawnin'. A man kin lance his legs an' lay back like a nuble, an' kick away at de bull world an' hide everybody an' be hated in return, or he kin pick up sartin crumbs o' consolashun, crowd under a bush in de back sand of de wagin, an' take a leetle o' comfort, knowin dat somebody is wuss off dan himself. Let us accumulate to bizness."

"Did I understan' de chair to make use of de word accumulate?" inquired Elder Penstock, as he suddenly rose up.

"You did, sah!"

"Yes—ah—jess so—jess so. De chair understands, I presume as—"

"Hyndsley Penstock, it am in my power to fine you $7,000 for disturbin' de meetin'."

"Yes, sah, but—"

"An' I shall perceed to do so unless you set down wid concurrent energy. If dis chair makes use of words and phrases dat you can't understan', de proper way for you am to wait till you git home an' den consult de geography or arithmetic for explanations. Set down, sah—set down, or by you am financially wrecked and mentally engendered."

The elder turned the color of a gray goose as he stood for a moment with his mouth open, and then a sudden weakness struck his knees and he fell back on the bench in a way to jar everybody in the room.—Free Press.

What do the Boys Read?

Books had by us have been causing serious trouble, at least such is an opinion frequently expressed in connection with a recent escapade in Milwaukee of several boys of respectable parentage. For about a month past the people of Milwaukee have been harassed by a number of incendiary fires. No clue could be found as to the fire bugs, and their motives were equally a mystery. The whole city became nervous over the matter, a sharp watch was kept up, and finally it was discovered that the mischief was the work of a gang of four young boys, whose motive was the perpetration of deviltry for its own sake.

The influence which had caused these boys, averaging about fourteen years in age, boys with homes and friends who ought to have found sufficient pleasure in life within the bounds of reason and decency to seek enjoyment in doing the bold and daring outlaw act is undoubtedly attributable to the insane reading matter with which they had drugged themselves.

This is but one of the unwounted number of similar cases. The series of cheap books and story papers with which all news stands are flooded are poisoning the minds of the rising generation, more particularly in the cities, but to a certain extent in the country as well.

This class of literature, while not often avowedly immoral, is perhaps the worse on that account. But they narrate acts of wantonness, mischief, impudence, and even crime, regarding them as smart and heroic. Pitiable stuff truly, to the mature mind, but capable of miserably warping and perverting youthful judgement.

The Milwaukee case is one more repetition of the lesson to parents to closely watch the literary tastes of their sons. The pernicious influences of the trashy stories should be fought in every way, and the most natural and practical method is to help the boys to cultivate an appreciation of good, healthy, sensible reading matter, not dry history or sermons necessarily, but books and papers written with care and regard for considerations of common sense and morality.—Banner.

The Supremacy of the West.

The political nutriment that is being dealt out the east just now, it must be confessed, is thin and greatly. The result of the speaker-ship contest was a severe blow to eastern pride, and a sharp reminder that any sentiment of the great west, when the cause is asserted, is complete and overshadowing. The choice of Chicago as the place to hold the next republican convention, and the choice of Senator Sabin as chairman of the national committee, is proof that the ruling party in politics realizes the importance of recognizing western influence and catering to western supremacy. The old eastern states are badly left. They have seemed nothing in the preliminary skirmishes of 1884 from either party, and it begins to look as if they need not expect the candidate. That the east has a right to the republican candidate this time, seeing that it has never had one since the party was organized, and so, too, the west will claim the democratic choice for the first time, but it begins to look as if the great west would demand and receive both.

Pennsylvania is almost heartbroken at those rejected wants. Alas! McClure almost went mad over the election of Carlisle, and now he has nothing but mocking sneers at the result of the national committee's work. He ridicules Sabin and sneers at Chicago. New York seems to accept the result in good faith, and so does the western press generally; but yet one can detect in their utterances a kind of plaintive wail at this fresh illustration of western political supremacy.—Chicago Herald.

Profit on a Small Flock of Hens.

There has been so much said on this subject, "hen's poultry pay," that it seems almost superfluous to write a word about it, still my experience with a small capital may be some benefit to others similarly situated. I commenced last year with five hens. They were of the partridge Cochin breed. The collected weighed eleven pounds, the hens seven, and were here worth only twenty-five cents apiece, but disposed of two of them in April. In January the product was sixty-five eggs, worth $1.40; in February seventy eight eggs, worth $1.90. In March commenced setting as fast as they would set; by April had eighty chicks, which I gave to three of the hens to rear keeping the mothers in the coops and getting the little ones the use of the whole yard. I lost only two, and those by the result of an accident.

In July the hens commenced hatching again, and by the middle of August they had seventy five chickens. The chickens were worth twenty cents apiece at four months old. Late in the fall I set two hens, which raised twenty three chickens, which were raised on the scraps from the table, otherwise wasted. In summing up we find $24.40 for eggs, two flocks of chickens worth $16 and $15, making $81, to which add the $2.40, equals $83.40, from which take $10 for feed, leaves $23.40; and my winter chicks came in very nicely about February. For a farm the American breed is the best as they are better foragers. The Asiatics bear confinement better, being of large habits, and are not as good layers as the Americans; but in small flocks the profit consists in raising chickens, not eggs.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

Ypsilanti Sentinel: "Josiah Begole reminds us of Joseph Kitner, of Pennsylvania. He had the same kind of malignant barking at his heels and he was the most popular governor the state ever had. Somehow when the people elect a man from themselves, and he gets abused for being like them, they seem to stick to him even if he don't so smart."

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN.

Of Mexico's debt of $117,000,000, Englishmen hold about $85,000,000. The rest is held in New York. The republic's annual revenue is about $32,000,000, mainly from the stamp tax and tariff duties.

Mr. Blaine's little grandson has been christened James Gillespie Blaine Coppinger, and the rich old grand-dad will be expected to come to the front with the conventional silver mug and tearful blessing.

The Marquis of Lorne, in his article on Canadian home rule, says: "Canada could not stand alone, but would be annexed to the United States on the first pretext were there not behind her the majestic form of a united empire."

In Namaqua Land, South Africa, no rain has fallen since Aug. 15, 1881, and plants, and animals and men are dying of drought and starvation. Wheat and seeds have been sent by the Cape Colony, and a relief committee has been formed.

An old boot is missing from Berryville, the capital of Carroll county, Ark. The County Treasurer, having been summoned to Fort Smith, put $7,000 of the county's money in an old boot, which he hid in his carret. On his return the boot was not to be found.

Gen. Sherman has received horses and other presents worth $20,000, since he became General of the Army, exclusive of the $40,000 worth of diamonds given by the Khedive to Mrs. Fitch, and since divided among the General's daughters. For the past fifteen years he has been paid $17,500 a year, and he will draw this salary until his death.

Frank Harper, who inherited two of the greatest racehorses this country ever saw, said the other day: "Longfellow is now 16 years old and Ten Broeck 12. I always keep a good eye on them both night and day. I have been offered $50,000 for Longfellow, but I wouldn't sell him for $100,000, nor would I sell Ten Broeck for the same money. I will keep them as long as they live, or until I die."

The back gate of the Jenkins family had a habit, which the cook resented each night. One morning about 2 o'clock Mr. Jenkins returned home in an enfeebled condition. Refraining from trying to find the front door, on account of Mrs. Jenkins and the baby, he tried the alley gate. It was locked. With great difficulty he climbed the wall, with its cap of broken bottles, and, dropping into the yard, unlocked the gate. He then, to the surprise of a sleepless neighbor who watched the scene from afar, crept back over the the wall to the street, and entered by the gate in good order.

The Tiberius statisticians of past days calculated that the vocabulary of Milton comprised about 8,000 words, and that about 15,000 were included in the language of Shakespeare, admirer of Carlyle, fresh from the perusal of "Sartor Resartus," has, by be making a catalogue of the A and B words which it contains, arrived at the conclusion that not less than 7,500 distinct words are used in that work alone. The only word in the list which could strike an ordinary Englishman as an invention of the author is that of "anywhen," which even now is a hopeless hold word in the mouths of the peasantry of Southern England.

Prof. Willard Fiske, formerly of Cornell university, who has attempted to break into the property of his late wife and who actually carried some of it away to Europe, has raised a storm of which perhaps he little dreamed. Finding that the bequests and wishes of Mrs. Fiske were to have no weight even with the husband whom she had so liberally endowed, her relatives from far and near the clans of Mc-Grew, of Southworth, of Sears, all related to the deceased woman—are gathering and demanding their share, provided the university is not allowed to hold its bequests. Should Fiske, therefore, triumph in his suit, he will have to defend his wealth against a score or two of his wife's relatives, who declare that if Mrs. Fiske's good intentions are to be defeated by the greed of her husband, they and not he are entitled to the estate. The public will sympathize with them and sincerely hope that in the event of Fiske's cheating the university out of its property a stronger hand may wrench it from him.

David Dudley Field is indignant about the growing disregard of smokers for the rights of their non-smoking fellow beings. He has nothing to say against the use of tobacco as such, but confines himself to the assertion that abstainers have rights which every smoker who pretends to be moderately considerate of others ought to respect. In the Continent he asks how the smoker and the non-smoker can reconcile their respective pretensions. Nothing is easier, he thinks. Let the smoker smoke into himself, but let one who does not smoke or take tobacco into his mouth or blow it out of his nostrils be free from the annoyance. The non-smokers have their remedy in their own hands. Let them resist every encroachment on their rights. Let them refuse to frequent places of amusement or take passage in conveyance where they are not protected against tobacco.

The Dio Lewis' Monthly contains an article by Dora Darmore suggesting "A New Remedy for Polygamy." The writer is a lady who for a time lived in the Territory of Utah, and has known many Mormon women. The remedy which she proposes is of a very practical character. We quote: "There is in the Mormon church a large community of young girls who will be the future wives of Mormondom. The seed is already sown in the minds and hearts of most of them by their unhappy and discontented mothers of a dislike to plural marriages. Send out to Utah not an army of 'school-marms' or milliners, but an army of moral, industrious, intelligent young men to marry these bright Mormon girls, and you have solved the problem of polygamy. Give these girls a chance to marry monogamists and see how quickly they will throw off the fetters of the Mormon church. It is the young women of Utah and not its men to whom you must look for the solution of the Mormon question. Another generation, with it settled in this way, will see polygamy wiped out of the land."

The arrangements for the International Forestry exhibition which is to be held in Edinburgh next year have been settled. The classification of the exhibits ranges over a wide and interesting field. Practical forestry will be illustrated by implements, models of huts, appliances for floating and transporting timber, and wood-working machinery of every description. The Department of Forest produce will include a collection of the chief uses to which the gum and the numerous other material of the woods may be applied—from gunpowder to gun carriages, baskets, wood oils, cooperage, woodengraving, tanning and so forth. The class of scientific forestry will deal with the botany of the forests, forest encyclopedia, preservative processes applied to the timber, fossil plants, parasites, and numerous other subjects. Growing specimens of rare and ornamental trees and shrubs, rustic work in arbors, bridges, gates and seats, and dried specimens of ornamental objects in wood will complete the nursery ornamental forestry. The remaining departments will include pictorial illustrations of the trees, foliage, and scenery of all countries, and the effects of blight, accident, parasitic growth, and abnormal conditions, together with the literature of forestry, working plans of plantations, and examples of the economic condition of foresters and wood men. The entries for the exhibition will close on the 4th of October, 1884.

Wrestling Camels.

Wrestling matches between camels is an amusement in which the Turks take great delight, although they sometimes get a fine animal maimed in the sport. The camels are trained to wrestle when quite young, and take much pleasure in fray. A correspondent writes: We had a young one on board, only a month old, and as he was born under the flag he was christened "Uncle Sam." One of the Turks amused himself on the voyage making a "jellicum" of him, and when he was six weeks old he was more than a match for his master, using his legs, neck and mouth with such dexterity, and displaying such wonderful strength in so young a thing, that he became a very rough playmate, and often hurt the men by throwing them down. Well-trained animals seldom injure each other, being taught to throw their antagonist by getting his neck under their fore leg; the right one—and then throwing their whole weight of their body on him and bringing him to the ground.

The first street railway in America was laid in New York City in 1852.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

Epitaph for Tired Woman.

Here lies a poor woman who always was tired;
Who lived in a house where help was not hired;
Her last words on earth were, 'Dear friends, I am going
Where washing don't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing.
But every thing there is exact to my wishes,
For where there don't nothing don't there's no washing of dishes.
I'll be where no trials nor troubles will always be ringing,
Where loving no velvet, I'll get clear of the singing.
Don't mourn for me now—don't mourn for me never—
I'm going to do nothing for ever an I ever."
—Boston Transcript.

A Poetic Wasp.

Ella Wheeler, whose love poems have been severely censured on the ground of their supposed immorality, in the course of a spicy reply to her critic, says: "My friends have advised me to wait and not have my poems appear in book form until I am; to use their words, 'married or dead.' But so long as I believe the poems properly publish at all, I do not feel the need of a husband or a tombstone to shelter me from further criticism."—Exchange.

Taking Comfort.

Old Mrs. Makemup to young Mrs. Lucky, who is the fortunate possessor of a wealth of brown tresses, and who has never lost even one of her beautiful teeth:—"Oh, dear me, yes, my dear, I quite agree with you in all you say about the welcome rest of the Sabbath. And then, too, we are free from fashionable callers on that day, at least, and after we've been to church we can go about in an old gown, without our false hair and teeth, and be so comfortable."

Several Kinds of Girls.

A good girl to have—Sal Vation.
A disagreeable girl to have—Annie Mosity.
A dashing girl—Hittie Magina.
Not a Christian girl—Hettie Rodoxy.
A sweet girl—Carrie Mel.
A very pleasant girl—Jennie Rooty.
A "summer girl"—Helen Blazes.
A sick girl—Sallie Vate.
A smooth girl—Amelia Ration.
A seedy girl—Cora Ander.
One of the best girls—Ella Gant.
A clear case of girl—L. Ency Bote.
A geometrical girl—Bella Dendron.
A musical girl—Sarah Nade.
A profound girl—Mettie Physics.
A star girl—Meta Orie.
A winning girl—Jessie Mine.
A nervous girl—Hester Ical.
A muscular girl—Callie Sthenics.
A lively girl—Amanda Mite.
An uncertain girl—Eva Nescent.
A sad girl—Ella G.
A serene girl—Mollie Fy.
A great big girl—Ellie Phant.
A war-like girl—Millie Tary.
The best girl of all—Your own.

Look Before You Leap.

Beatrix, in a long article in the Michigan Farmer, tells a sad story of desertion and woe brought to a young girl who married a man who was almost unknown to her at the time the union took place, and closes the article with this piece of wholesome advice to girls: The young farmers may not be such dashing gallants, nor be as versed at ease in company, but they don't owe the tailor for the suits they wear, nor make the rounds of the "specials" at the hotel. The young man you have known from childhood, whose character you have had the opportunity of knowing, whose possessions, though modest, are honestly his, is the safest husband. It is a dangerous thing to marry a man who comes as the Rotarian and pedestal life, tossed here and there by circumstances, who (there broke and may be some bonnyrow). Teach this "genteel population" that a pleasing address is not a passport to your favor, but if you must marry a wandering Adonis, make him produce his credentials, lest the story told in my first paragraph comes to be told of you.

A Blue-Grass Belle.

Our Kentucky belle is handsome and, attired in a modest but quite stylish costume, no unpretentious attractions. She is accompanied by a companion, whom she is heard to address by the Christian name of mother and who is only slightly older and slightly less attractive than her self, but who is more conspicuous in the general brilliant make-up of her face and personal paraphernalia. She hands her money to a mongrel type of mountain nature, the keeping of a combined dude and jockey, who is soon in the whirling current of the quarter-stretch and drifting straight to the pool selection. While he is talking stock for her in the fast layers of the turf she has opened her attention to another market, where speculation is equally intoxicating and hazardous. She has allowed a gold bond to perceive her languishing dark eyes resting fondly upon him. Her gaze has been purposely fastened upon him, until he, by a clickanom physical and psychological law, turns as naturally toward her as the sunflower to the sun or the willow to the water; her soft, velvety lids drop as unconsciously conscious as if the fascinating artifice had not been practiced hundreds of times and has been brought to the present state of artificial perfection through courses of carefully attended gestation. Accustomed to success in the adroit movement, she continues to repeat it until she is satisfied it is effective. She rises, and, with a swift glance toward him, she ascends tier by tier of the grand stand until she has reached the topmost call, over which she leans, looking down on the great dusty entrance park to the course. If the gentleman does not follow immediately there are evidences of impatience in her frequent nervous backward glances. He approaches her locality, and, assuming a similar attitude, is also deeply interested in the arid, dusty stretch beneath. Several covert and fleeting looks are exchanged as he draws nearer and nearer, and, without alteration of position, they fall into conversation and talk about—the weather, the inadvisability of sowing marketable crops where only tares will grow, and topics of equal interest. She returns to her seat in time to receive her winning from her speculating envoy, and soon the wooing satyr is at her side with the bold and confidential bearing of a life-long counselor.—Cor. Philadelphia Times.

About Girls.

When I mentally enumerate the young women, married and single, of my acquaintance, I find them all gifted to a degree with self-consciousness. They succeed socially. To undervalue their own good looks, to be aware of their own good points, would be a social error. The taste of society is so vile that it prefers the flaunting sunflower or the self-assertive daffodils, to the rose veiled in moss, to the fragrant, lowly mignonette, or to the quiet, pinktipped daisy. I differ from society, and it calls me eccentric. Let me introduce you to the women I know and then daily use excuse if you can.

There is Nessa, whose hair is of that lovely tint between brown and gold, and so plentiful that when she makes it loose it falls in glorious rippling masses to my knees. Nessa is always ruling at the fashion of false hair. "People who have abundance of their own get no credit for it," she says. She loves private theatricals, and would willingly take up questionable acquaintances rather than lose a chance of playing in a charade or posing in tableau evening in a "back-hair" part. Everyone else's hair is said to be of a beautiful color. Nessa is ill-mannered for the rest of the day, but hates the bonnet of the period because it covers the head so closely, and detests the hat of the day, because it hides the hair. She likes going to the play. Her maid arranges her lovely locks in a great flat coil of plait, which goes twice round her pretty head. People in the next private boxes look down at her in her stall and say, "What a beautiful head." She never wears a flower or diamond in those shining folds; she thinks, and rightly, that they need no "bush." Nessa is self-conscious.

Then there is my Lady Jane Hardware. Her figure is magnificent. Sir Simon fell in love with her at a dance. You never saw such shoulders—so white, so smooth, so perfect in shape. Perhaps, like Mr. Merville, Sir Simon thought that such a bust was made for the display of diamonds. Lady Jane is young, and might be rather shy if she were it not for her figure. It precocupies her. She is jealous of every other well-shaped woman. Of Mrs. X. she says: "How can people admire her? Look at her shoulders—up in her ears almost." When told that Mrs. W. is much liked in society, Lady Jane says: "What; with that wooden waist?" She cannot understand that a woman may be charming without a good figure, and is equally far from comprehending that one who possesses a perfect shape needs not necessarily conquer all hearts.

Helen is beautiful. You cannot name a fault in her lovely face. But, then, Helen knows how fair she is. She the conquering air with which she walks, the languid complacency of her expression as she drives, the careless negligence of her manner when she speaks! These defects all arise from one common source. She says, as plainly as though she were to speak the words: "I am a beautiful woman. I need not, therefore, take the trouble to be agreeable. To be beautiful is enough."

Mrs. Dash is as beautiful as Helen, and she knows it, but hides the knowledge better. Her complexion air and grooves sit well on her. They suit her original style, and fit her lovely face. Every one says she is charming, "and so extremely stylish." So she is. And those who think so would probably have scarcely admired her as she was seven years ago—a lovely girl who nearly always wore white, who blushed prettily when she talked with strangers, and even when teased by her father, whom she adored. She was a country girl of 18, with no "style" beyond being a thoroughly gentlewoman, in whom coquetry was still dormant. Society prefers the woman of 26, who is as practiced in her smiles as any actress on the stage, and, as her admirers say of her, is "quite sure" of herself. She is so amusing, says every one, and to be "amusing" is to be a social success. Sometimes she looks back at her girlish self, and thinks, with a little smiling sigh: "What an innocent goose of a girl I was. How different I am now!"—London Truth.

Baggage and Luggage.

That which Americans call baggage Englishmen call "luggage." Ours is the better word. Luggage will do well enough when speaking of the lug and lugging, but baggage is a rare proper term when applied to the bagged or boxed valuables that are being lugged for you by others. "I want to get my baggage before taking a bath," remarked an Englishman to a new check-boy in the baggage-room of a hotel. The boy, supposing he meant something to eat, politely led him to the cooking-room. But we are beginning to meet American stripplings occasionally who, delighting to spec everything British, speak of "the luggage." An American dude on his travels is the most amusing of all creatures that sneak or stalk on two legs.—Chicago Journal.

CURIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC.

It is said that the oil of white bark, dissolved in alcohol, will fabrics water-proof and fireproof without injury to the material.

It is said that about 15,000 of colors are employed by the of mosaic in Rome, and from shades of each of these vast the deepest to the palest, fording 750,000 tints, which distinguish with the facility.

The cotton-growing States ing over the invention of picking machine which discriminates between the green bolls and blossoms, at the rate of 200 hour, and promises to take hand-picking.

The difficulty of dealing with leprosy in India is extraordinary, and it was not until that a national system of was adopted with the best results. Now the isolation which has lieved with this terrible disease of Moses and prophet may in a generation abate it.

Francis Galton says that curred to twins who separated and subjected educational training, that been known not only to have badly ailments at the same also to experience simultaneous sensation, mental and bodily, to think upon the same subject same time, using almost the to express their ideas.

A work containing Pitman printed in Venice about two different century, and of which copy does not exist in this sold in London not long Less than $8,750, the highest for a single volume within a decade. Of course, it was the black and not the which gave it its merit.

M. Mermet recommends nickel crucibles instead of chemical examples even slightly attacked, it is impossible, but silver itself is cut to this action. The much less than silver, and they have the great advantage happen, in fact, that the chemists melt their crucibles them over a gas-lamp; one is not to be feared with the market.

For cementing rubber percha Mr. Moritz Gerdes years back for 1883, gives the recipe: Pulverized shellac in ten times its weight of ammonia. In three days the shellac is dissolved and excessive ammonia penetrates the rubber dissolves the shellac to take out, as if all evaporated, rubber is innavovably fastened metal, and neither gas or water can penetrate it.

Paper gas pipes are made an endless strip of heavy width of which equals the tube, through a bath of rosin and then rolling it tightly on a core to give the required When the number of layers is sufficient to afford the pressure the tube is strongly the outside is sprinkled with the whole cooled in water. The core is drawn out and covered with a water proof composition. In addition to being tight and smooth, and not than iron, these pipes are strength; for when the heavily the cylinders of paper will withstand a pressure of fifteen atmospheres, under ground they will not by settlement nor when exposed to frost. The cost of conductor of heat, the pipes readily freeze.

The National Drink of the

The stranger in Mexico is the prevalence on the tables of milky-looking fluid, resembling buttermilk. It is called pulque, the national drink of Mexico what lager beer is and the United States. It is usually begins by expressing disgust at the drink, at by becoming very fond course of two or three weeks acquired a liking for pulque, beer or Lundborg. Pulque is also amusing says every one, and to be "amusing" is to be a social success. Sometimes she looks back at her girlish self, and thinks, with a little smiling sigh: "What an innocent goose of a girl I was. How different I am now!"—London Truth.

Baggage and Luggage.

That which Americans call baggage Englishmen call "luggage." Ours is the better word. Luggage will do well enough when speaking of the lug and lugging, but baggage is a rare proper term when applied to the bagged or boxed valuables that are being lugged for you by others. "I want to get my baggage before taking a bath," remarked an Englishman to a new check-boy in the baggage-room of a hotel. The boy, supposing he meant something to eat, politely led him to the cooking-room. But we are beginning to meet American stripplings occasionally who, delighting to spec everything British, speak of "the luggage." An American dude on his travels is the most amusing of all creatures that sneak or stalk on two legs.—Chicago Journal.

URVEYS are in progress in Ohio her palmetto leaves into paper print. It was the material Bank of England notes with ey for years.

most important and valuable llection in the world belongs of the Duchess of Galliera. t is yet incomplete, the stamps re cost $300,000.

PENNSYLVANIA street-car company has eleven conductors, who have ked for one year, $100 each as for faithful and efficient servcerance with a contract made ham and the company.

secretary of a London bank reat away with $110,000 of the the institution, and the Diha a circular to the shareholdThe Board can only regret at the chose of what would have been a prosperous year ent should so badly prejudice ."

England alone last year there persons killed by railroad 535 wounded. There were portant battles during the late which the casualities were less. dical causes of such a large of accidents are single lines of ng at grade and track-walkeless people.

old a prominent Wall street hat in his office he is found at his case on a silken couch, in a dreamy way to an enterasing article being read to his lady amanuensis, while a ly clerk rocks softly to and willow chair by the window, ld sunlight casts fitful shadthe richly-decorated walls."

S DE LA TORRE was recently in a London court for maina nuisance, which, it was is injurious to health and of ly." The nuisance in question Pulverized shellac in ten times its weight of monia. In three days the shellac is dissolved and excessive ammonia penetrates the rubber dissolves the shellac to take out, as if all evaporated, rubber is innavovably fastened metal, and neither gas or water can penetrate it.

Paper gas pipes are made an endless strip of heavy width of which equals the tube, through a bath of rosin and then rolling it tightly on a core to give the required When the number of layers is sufficient to afford the pressure the tube is strongly the outside is sprinkled with the whole cooled in water. The core is drawn out and covered with a water proof composition. In addition to being tight and smooth, and not than iron, these pipes are strength; for when the heavily the cylinders of paper will withstand a pressure of fifteen atmospheres, under ground they will not by settlement nor when exposed to frost. The cost of conductor of heat, the pipes readily freeze.

The National Drink of the

The stranger in Mexico is the prevalence on the tables of milky-looking fluid, resembling buttermilk. It is called pulque, the national drink of Mexico what lager beer is and the United States. It is usually begins by expressing disgust at the drink, at by becoming very fond course of two or three weeks acquired a liking for pulque, beer or Lundborg. Pulque is also amusing says every one, and to be "amusing" is to be a social success. Sometimes she looks back at her girlish self, and thinks, with a little smiling sigh: "What an innocent goose of a girl I was. How different I am now!"—London Truth.

Baggage and Luggage.

That which Americans call baggage Englishmen call "luggage." Ours is the better word. Luggage will do well enough when speaking of the lug and lugging, but baggage is a rare proper term when applied to the bagged or boxed valuables that are being lugged for you by others. "I want to get my baggage before taking a bath," remarked an Englishman to a new check-boy in the baggage-room of a hotel. The boy, supposing he meant something to eat, politely led him to the cooking-room. But we are beginning to meet American stripplings occasionally who, delighting to spec everything British, speak of "the luggage." An American dude on his travels is the most amusing of all creatures that sneak or stalk on two legs.—Chicago Journal.

Lord Coleridge talked in an easy but sympathetic and serious way to the students of Haverford college, near Philadelphia, upon the authors they should read. Putting Milton next to Shakspeare, he told them that John Bright said that he had built himself up on Milton. He then named Wordsworth, and said: "If I have any fault to find with America, it is that I fear you do not do Wordsworth quite the honor which he deserves." Gray, Shelley and Keats followed in the order named. Coming to American poets, he said: "You may be surprised at the name I shall select from your American poets, when I tell you to learn Bryant. I do not say Longfellow, because, although he is a sweet and noble and delightful poet, he is not American—I mean that his poetry might just as well have been written in England, or Italy, or Germany, or France, as in America—but Mr. Bryant's poetry is full of the characteristics of his own country, as well as noble, natural and invigorating." Among prose writers he named Lord Bolingbroke "as a writer of the most perfect English," next, "the greatest advocate since Cicero—and I say this, even remembering your own Webster—Lord Erskine;" then Burke, Hooker—not to be read as a whole, "except by the theological students"—Lord Bacon and Cardinal Newman. Among American orators he named Daniel Webster, and "your greatest writer, the master of an exquisite and absolutely perfect style—Nathaniel Hawthorne." The appreciation which the little talk manifested of the aspirations of youth, and the vital importance of the formative period of life, made it a delightful and winning address.

French and American Flats.

"Are French flats healthy?"
"Yes, very."
"Are the people in them healthy?"
"No."
"Why?"
"They have to starve and go half naked to pay the rent."
"Why are these flats called French flats?"
"To distinguish them from American flats."
"What are American flats?"
"The people who live in French flats."—Life.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Pussy's Complaint.

I'm just as unhappy, unhappy,
As ever a kitten can be!
If you'll let me, I'll tell you about it,
And then perhaps you will pity me.
I'm in a great mistake in you thinking
That kits have no feelings at all.
Not a thought beyond having a feaste,
Or the chasing after a ball.

Now, how could I know (please tell me
If you could help me to see)
That the cold roast veal in the pantry
Was meant there for me
They left the door temptingly open,
So I helped myself to that,
But they threw me out with their scrapes sick,
And I called me "that's not, bit-ting cat!"

Then those pans of milk in the dairy,
With cream like the yellowest gold,
I thought I should like to taste it,
For it's very delicious, I'm told;
So I climbed in after the pieces,
And was just setting nicely to dine,
When they found me—and such a commotion,
I ran to the barn in fast haste.

Don't they think cats ever get hungry
Between one's meals, I'd like to know?
And that cats and mice cannot always be found?
I have not for an hour or so.
Besides some mice looking remarkably,
And I'd even a mouse-pie in view;
And I found, after waiting and waiting,
They had moved (or left) before knew.

I heard the fowls talking this morning
About kit, and a bag, and the pond.
I all to quite understand,
For a water I'm not over fond,
I don't think I'll go near the barn,
For fear they've got kittens by that;
Oh, dear! and to all I've endured—
It's a very hard world—for a cat.
—Youth's Companion.

Lindy.

"Oh, Daddy!" called a clear, girlish voice.

"Yes, Lindy; what's wanted?"

"Ma wants to know how long it'll be 'fore you're ready."

"Oh, tell her I'll be at the door by the time she gets her things on. Be sure you have the butter and eggs ready to put in the wagon. We're makin' too large a start to town."

Butter and eggs, indeed! As if Lindy needed a reminder other than the new dress for which they were to be exchanged.

"Elmer and I can go to town next time, can we not, ma?" she asked, entering the house.

"Yes, Lindy; I hope so," was the reply. "But don't bother me now; your pa is coming already, and I haven't my shawl on yet. Yes, Wilbur; I'm here. Just put this butter in, Lindy; I'll carry the eggs in my lap. Now, Lindy, don't let Elmer play with the fire or run away."

And in a moment more the heavy lumber wagon rattled away from the door, and the children stood gazing after it, for awhile, in a half-forlorn manner. Then Lindy went in to do her work. Elmer resumed his play, and soon everything was moving along as cheerfully as ever.

After dinner, Elmer went to sleep, and Lindy, feeling rather lonely again, went out of doors for a change. It was a warm autumnal day, almost the perfect counterpart of a dozen or more which had preceded it. The sun shone brightly, and the last winds that swept through the tall grass made that and all else it touched so dry that the prairie seemed like a vast tinder-box. Though her parents had but recently moved to this place, Lindy was accustomed to the prairies. She had been born on them, and was familiar with the air with nothing else; yet, as she stood to-day, with that brown, unbroken expanse rolling away before her until it reached the pale blush-gray of the sky, the indescribable feeling of awe and terrible solitude which such a scene often inspires in one not familiar with it stole gradually over her. But Lindy was far too practical to remain long under such an influence. The chickens were "peeping" loudly, and she remembered that they were still without their dinner.

As she passed around the corner of the house with a dish of corn in her hands, the wind almost blew her off of the ground. It was certainly blowing with greater violence than during the morning.

Great tumble-weeds went flying by, turning over and over with almost lightning-like rapidity; then, passing for an instant's rest, were caught by another gust and carried along, now after mile, till some fence or other obstacle was reached, where they could pile up in great drifts, and wait till a brisk wind from an opposite direction should send them rolling and tumbling all the way back. But Lindy did not notice the tumble-weeds. The dish of corn had been in her hands, and she stood looking straight ahead with wide open, terrified eyes.

What was the sight that so frightened her?

Only a line of fire below the horizon. Only a line of fire, with forked flames darting high into the air and a cloud of smoke drifting away from them. A beautiful relief, this bright, changing spectacle, from the brown monotony of the prairie.

But the scene was without beauty for Lindy. Her heart had given one great bound when she first saw the red line, and then it seemed to cease beating. She had seen many prairie fires and had seen her father and other men fight them, and she knew at once the danger her home was in. What could she, a little girl, do to save it, and perhaps herself and her little brother, from the destroyer which the south wind was bringing straight toward them?

Only for a moment Lindy stood, white and motionless, then with a bound she was at the well. Her course was decided upon. If only time and strength were given her! Drawing two pails of water, she laid a bag in each, and then, getting some matches, hurried out beyond the stable. She must fight fire with fire. That was her only hope; but a strong, experienced man would have shrunk from starting a back-fire in such a wind.

She fully realized the danger, but it was possible escape from otherwise inevitable destruction, and she hesitated not an instant to attempt it. Cautiously starting a blaze, she stood with a wet bag ready to smother the first unruly flame.

The great fire to the southward was rapidly approaching. Prairie chickens and other birds, driven from their nests, were flying over, uttering distressed cries. The air was full of smoke and burnt grass, and the crackling of the flames could plainly be heard. It was a trying moment. The increased roar of the advancing fire warned Lindy that she had but very little time in which to complete the circle around house and barn; still, if she hurried too much, she would lose control of the fire she had started, and with it all hope of safety.

The heat was intense, the smoke suffocating, the rapid swinging of the heavy bag most exhausting, but she was unconscious of these things. The extremity of the danger inspired her with wonderful strength and endurance. Instead of losing courage, she increased her almost superhuman exertions, and in another brief interval the task was completed. None too soon either, for the swiftly advancing column had nearly reached the wavering, struggling, slow-moving line Lindy had sent out to meet it.

It was a wild, fascinating, half-terrible, half beautiful scene. The tongues of flame, leaping above each other with airy, fantastic grace, seemed, cat-like, to be with their victims before devouring them.

A sudden, violent gust of wind, and then with a great crackling roar the two fires met, the flames shooting high into the air as they rushed together.

For one brief, glorious moment they remained there, lapping the air with their fiery, hot tongues; then, suddenly dropping, they died quickly out; and where an instant before had been a wall of fire was nothing now but a cloud of blue smoke rising from the blackened ground, and here and there a sickly flame finishing an obstinate tuft of grass.

The fire on each side, meeting no obstacle, swept quickly by, and Lindy stood gazing spellbound, after it as it darted and flashed in terrible zigzag lines farther and farther away.

"Oh, Lindy!" called a small little voice from the house. Elmer had just awakened.

"Yes, I'm coming," Lindy answered, turning. But how very queer she felt! There was a roaring in her ears louder than the fire had made; everything whirled before her eyes, and the sun seemed so lonely to have ceased shining, all was so dark. Reaching the house by a great effort, she sank, faint, dizzy and fainting, upon the bed by her brother's side.

Elmer, frightened and hardly awake, began to cry, and, as he neared did anything in a half-way manner, the result was quite wonderful. His frantic shrieks and tearful entreaties roused his half-fainting sister as effectually as if he had poured a glass of brandy between her lips. She soon sat up, and the deadly color began to return to her white face and strength to the exhausted body. Her practical nature and strong will again asserted themselves, and instead of yielding to a feeling of weakness and prostration, she rose from the bed, hurried to and reached the pale blush-gray of the sky, the indescribable feeling of awe and terrible solitude which such a scene often inspires in one not familiar with it stole gradually over her. But Lindy was far too practical to remain long under such an influence. The chickens were "peeping" loudly, and she remembered that they were still without their dinner.

As she passed around the corner of the house with a dish of corn in her hands, the wind almost blew her off of the ground. It was certainly blowing with greater violence than during the morning.

Great tumble-weeds went flying by, turning over and over with almost lightning-like rapidity; then, passing for an instant's rest, were caught by another gust and carried along, mile after mile, till some fence or other obstacle was reached, where they could pile up in great drifts, and wait till a brisk wind from an opposite direction should send them rolling and tumbling all the way back. But Lindy did not notice the tumble-weeds. The dish of corn had been in her hands, and she stood looking straight ahead with wide open, terrified eyes.

What was the sight that so frightened her?

Only a line of fire below the horizon. Only a line of fire, with forked flames darting high into the air and a cloud of smoke drifting away from them. A beautiful relief, this bright, changing spectacle, from the brown monotony of the prairie.

But the scene was without beauty for Lindy. Her heart had given one great bound when she first saw the red line, and then it seemed to cease beating. She had seen many prairie fires and had seen her father and other men fight them, and she knew at once the danger her home was in. What could she, a little girl, do to save it, and perhaps herself and her little brother, from the destroyer which the south wind was bringing straight toward them?

Only for a moment Lindy stood, white and motionless, then with a bound she was at the well. Her course was decided upon. If only time and strength were given her! Drawing two pails of water, she laid a bag in each, and then, getting some matches, hurried out beyond the stable. She must fight fire with fire. That was her only hope; but a strong, experienced man would have shrunk from starting a back-fire in such a wind.

She fully realized the danger, but it

FORTUNES IN DIAMONDS.

Millions of Dollars' Worth of Gems on the Cafe Castles of New York City.

"This," said a well-known Broadway dealer in diamonds, "is one of the greatest diamond cities in the world. I was present at the opera opening of the Metropolitan, and at the very lowest estimate I saw at least $1,000,000 worth of diamonds in the audience. There was one lady alone who had nearly $40,000 worth on her person. She wore a black velvet corsage cut low and along it upper edge had as many as thirty-five pieces of jewelry. There were hee-pins, breast-pins, brooches and many pieces of fantastic design, but there for the mere purpose of display and making the woman look richer does notwithstanding the vast wealth represented in the collection, for many of the pieces held costly sapphires, and all the brilliants were very large and very clear in their colors. Mrs. Vanderbilt wore on the occasion a hee-pin nearly six inches long, set with huge diamonds and large sapphires. It must have been worth at least $20,000. Other ladies I might name were adorned with equal lavishness."

"The ladies of New York seem to be well supplied with diamonds?"

"There are probably 200 of them who have $15,000 worth of personal jewelry. I can name ten like Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Gould whose personal property in diamonds, sapphires, rubies and emeralds exceeds $200,000. More than forty New York ladies can each lay claim to $50,000 worth of jewelry, and plenty of them have $25,000 invested. You can see how readily a woman of great wealth can accumulate gems when I tell you that Vanderbilt's Christmas bill at Tiffany's last year was $42,000. I saw the check for that amount drawn by the millionaire in favor of the jeweler."

"What pieces are most frequently asked for?"

"Hair and neck ornaments. Ten and twelve carat earrings, ranging in price from $500 to $4,000 per pair, are common purchases. I have seen hair ornaments worth that were worth fully $6,000. Diamond necklaces are always in demand, and are never too costly for purchasers. Finger-rings are not cared for much, because fashion insists on the wearing of gloves, and these hide the jewels. A woman, you know, wants to show everything. Bracelets are worn not in one or two pairs, but sometimes there are as many as six, one above the other, on one arm. Sometimes a lady who has enough gems to fit out a first-class store, will come in and invest from $300 to $1,000 in an ornament for a special occasion. All who can afford it not only want new dresses, but new jewelry for such an event as the Patriarchs."

"Are there many diamonds among the middle class?"

"Not many. The average professional man in New York can hardly get along on his income and has little money to invest in jewelry for himself or wife. A $250 pair of earrings, a small lace pin or a nice solitaire ring is all he can afford. A professional man can hope to possess, and very few of them get that."

"How about theatrical people?"

"They do not buy much in New York. They take to diamonds only when they have plenty of money, which they generally make in the West. Their diamond investments are made with the dealers there."

"And hotel clerks and negro minstrels?"

"They are satisfied with a single big diamond for the shirt front, and they do not care about color or perfection in a stone, when they once have a yellow pebble with a perceptible flaw in it they patronize the dealer no more, and are forever happy." —New York World.

The Mosquito.

The mosquito is to be commended—it attends strictly to its own buzziness.

It is like a plumber—it has a long bill.

It is like a nightingale—it sings after nightfall.

It is like the "first families" because it goes around a good deal on blood.

It is like a burglar—it comes like a thief in the night.

It is like a very religious person—it prays much.

It is like a citizen of Illinois—it is a skeeter.

It is like guests at dinner—it assembles around the board.

It is like a stream—it is frequently damned.

It is like the follies of fashion—it probes a a swell.

It is like a feed-hunter—it is often at the meet.

It is like our first parents—it retires after the fall.

It is like a conductor—it frequently goes down on the fair.

It is like a well-digger—it gets its living beneath the upper crust.

It is like a flirtation—it generally ends in a mash.—American Counting Room.

A Metropolitan Picture.

A woman flits by in a low phaeton lined with dark blue cloth. Her coachman and footman on the box wear dark blue coats, white knee-breeches and yellow-top boots. The carriage-robe that covers her black-silk skirt, is of dark blue cloth and stitched around the edges with lines of yellow silk. A little yellow skye-terrier, with a red collar and gold bell, sits on the seat beside the lady. Its carriage coat is blue, braided on the edge with gold. The yellow shade of the undressed kid gloves worn by the little dog's mistress, matches precisely the color of her little pet's silky hair. The horses are brown bays with black, banged tails. The harness is black leather, stitched with yellow, and brass mounted.

Fizzled Out.

Teacher: "What was the Trojan War?" Bright boy: "It was a war between the Greeks and Trojans for the possession of Helen, the wife of Menelaus, who had eloped with Paris, the son of Priam." Teacher: "How long did the war last?" Bright boy: "Twenty years." Teacher: "How did it end?" Bright boy: "I forget. Guess it just fizzled out." Teacher: "And why, pray, do you think it just fizzled out?" Bright boy: "Oh, because, I guess by that time the women got so old that nobody wanted her." —Philadelphia Call.

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

Free trade papers which occasionally suggest the value of patronizing home industries and supporting home manufactures are at once accused of insincerity. Did it ever occur to the mind of the accusers that inducing a man to any particular act and compelling him to the same were altogether different? One is his own free act and deed, the other is an abridgement of his liberty.

The supreme court has affirmed (Justice Sherwood dissenting) the verdict of $20,000 in favor of Dr. Macleau, of the university, in the famous libel suit against the Detroit Evening News. While the News has many times gone beyond right and reason in disclosing to the public the nastiness of numerous scandalous operations, in this particular case we failed to find any malice proven and published. Perhaps some restraint to the course of the News was necessary, but a clearer case than this should have been chosen. A paper that has done as much as the News to advance the interests of journalism in Michigan, should not be destroyed in the moment of victory by those it has benefited. It will require however, more than one $20,000 to destroy the News, and if any of those justices ever come up for re-election, they will probably find that paper a mighty lively corpse.

The Detroit Evening News.

The Detroit Evening News has just put in a second of the famous Scott presses, with a capacity of 24,000 copies per hour. When both presses are running, which is from about 4.30 to 5:15 o'clock each afternoon, papers are turned out at the rate of 48,000 per hour or 800 per minute, and in case of necessity even this number can be increased to 1,000 per minute. The News is the first and only paper in Michigan to require anything like such rapid facilities. Notwithstanding the competition of two new cheap papers in Detroit, the circulation of The News shows no appreciable decline.

The Echo is the weekly edition of the Detroit Evening News. It has just entered upon its sixth year, and both in popularity and circulation has been a decided success. It is of the same size as The News, contains little or no advertising, and is filled from the first column to the last with the very choicest matter that can be procured. All the best items, paragraphs and articles are culled from the daily; a synopsis of each week's news is carefully prepared for it; its market reports, while brief, are very complete and reliable, and nearly a whole page of each issue is devoted to choice original or selected stories —something superior, on the average, to the ordinary newspaper tales. Altogether it is a little gem of a paper, and at the price is without question the cheapest of its kind in the country. Single copies, 75 cents; 3 copies for $2; 5 for $3.

One of the most readable and popular of the books of travel that have recently been published in this country has been "Five Months Abroad," by Mr. James E. Scripps, of The Evening News. It forms a volume of 458 pages, and is liberally illustrated with original engravings. It is as entertaining as a story throughout, and at the same time is replete with valuable information. The book is sold by the publishers at $1.75 per copy, but it is for a short time being given away to every person who shall get up a club of six subscribers to The Echo, at the low club rate of 60 cents per copy.

Col. O. T. Beard, late of the Detroit Post and Tribune, has engaged to write a serial story for the Detroit Echo, in which he will expose some phases of the rascality in high quarters by which the public are plundered, and by which immense fortunes are amassed at the expense of the common people. Col. Beard has already achieved a high repute as a story writers, and the forthcoming serial will undoubtedly be very interesting.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every day with this wonderful Cure. Head the testimonials given around and call on the Druggist. See advertisement.

GEORGE A. POST,

THE YOUNGEST MEMBER OF THE FORTY-EIGHTH CONGRESS AND THE YOUNGEST MAN EVER ELECTED TO THE NATIONAL LEGISLATURE.

Geo. A. Post, of Susquehanna, Pennsylvania, enjoys this distinguished honor, representing the fifteenth district of Pennsylvania, comprising the counties of Bradford, Susquehanna, Wayne and Wyoming. Mr. Post is only twenty-nine years of age, of fine physical proportions, a smooth face strongly marked with more than ordinary character for one of his years, and is one of the most popular and promising young men of his state.

Mr. Post was born in Cuba, N. Y., September 1, 1854, removing at the age of seven years to Owego, in that state, where he resided until 1873, receiving his education in the Owego academy, and the Oswego normal school. He then removed to Susquehanna, Pa., shortly after entering the service of the Erie railway, in which he was soon promoted to a position of responsibility. He was elected mayor of Susquehanna when only twenty-two years of age, which position he filled with distinguished ability.

Mr. Post, while in the railway service, and during his mayorship, improved his evening hours by reading law, and so naturally apt was he in mastering the intricacies of Blackstone, that in a few years he was admitted to the bar. The politicians of northern Pennsylvania began to see that Mr. Post had won a standing on the tidal wave of public popularity that would elect him to congress as a democrat in the fifteenth district, which in the previous congressional election had given a republican majority of 4,621. Consequently he was placed in nomination last fall by the democrats, and elected by a plurality of 2,454 votes over the Hon. C. C. Judwin (ind. rep.), whose term expired with the forty-seventh congress. This great victory by a young man of only twenty-nine years of age over a gentleman who had served acceptably in congress, and who in age is many years his senior, is the greatest encomium that an appreciative constituency could bestow on the character and ability of Mr. Post.

OTHER HONORS.

Mr. Post is prominent in other than political honors. He is a leading member of the Knights of Honor, having been grand director (executive head) of the grand lodge of Pennsylvania for three years, and the representative from his state to the supreme lodge of the United States for four years, and in 1880 was one of the presidential electors from Pennsylvania. He is one of the owners and editors of the Montrose Democrat, the organ of the democracy of his district, and has been an active campaign orator almost from boyhood up.

Mr. Post is married, and has already become one of the most popular members of congress now in Washington. He is very unassuming, and impresses the student of human nature as a "coming man" in our national affairs.

Taking Care of Her Husband.

Two Austin ladies were conversing about one thing and another, after the manner of women.

"Mrs. Sampleby has not been to see me in a long time," remarked one of the ladies.

"She hasn't got time to make calls. She has to take care of and be with her husband all the time."

"Why, is he laid up with sickness?"

"Oh, no; on the contrary, he is in the enjoyment of the best of health; if he was sick she would not have to watch him."—Texas Siftings.

George and Rosalie.

"The doughnuts are gone!"

A look of ghastly horror, that made the pretty, dimpled cheeks of Rosalie McCloskey take on an ashen hue of blank despair, passed quickly over the girl's face as her sister, who stood with one voluptuous foot swinging in a dreamy, sensuous fashion over the front yard, while the other rested on the door, spoke the fateful sentence with which this chapter opens. Up from the meadows where the chestnut mare, with a splint as her only foreleg, that Lord Dacres had traded for last spring, was nibbling the tender blades of grass, came the scent of the violets and daisies that were just peeping from the ground, and away to the westward were floating great masses of fleecy-white clouds, whose edges were made radiant by great shafts of golden light that streamed up from below the horizon as if in benediction upon the dying day. The crickets, those faithful harbingers of night, were beginning to crick a little in spots, and the lowing kine were lying down on the sidewalk, so that people who wished to fall over them would have no unnecessary trouble in doing so. And while the swallows that were flying in little circles around the eaves of Buerton Villa twitt-red away in a sheepy fashion, there came floating out on the twilight air the deep, solemn tone of the village church-bell, telling to the little world of souls within the precincts of its voice that the semi-monthly meeting of the Ferkinsville Home Missionary Society was about to begin.

And then, as Rosalie's eyes were becoming dim with tears of longing and sorrow, she saw approaching her the form of the man she loved so well, and in an instant she was by his side, her pure, young face radiant with smiles and her Sunday buckle on.

"Oh, Reggy!" she exclaimed, in her fond love, "I could have gone away-ramels give-me-some-marshmallow-drops way, "I was so afraid you would not come!"

"And were you anxious to see me, my darling?" he asks, seating himself upon a rustic bench and coyly posing one knee so that the heiress may perch upon it.

"You know I was, sweetheart," replies the girl, looking down coyly and noticing how the sun glints fell with a hectic flush on his rosseu pants. "You know that when you are not with me, when I cannot feel the pressure of your cheek upon mine, and quaff the nectar of your two drinks for a quarter breath, every hour of my life goes by with leaden feet, every moment seems an age"—and placing her arms about his neck she draws him to her in a passionately collar-breaking fashion.

"I am going away to-morrow, my precious one," George W. S. Simpson says presently.

"Shall you be gone long?" the girl asks in hoarse, agonized tones.

"About a week," he replies, and then, seeing that Rosalie has fallen almost fainting into his arms, he kisses her tenderly back of the left ear, and says hurriedly, "but I have left orders at the candy store that you are to have whatever you want during my absence."

There are no tears on Rosalie's cheeks now, but her face is as pale as the moonlight that is stealing through the leafy bower above them, and on it a new, deep meaning that George had never seen there before—a gentle light, as kind as death, as cold as holy love.

Alarmed by the expression of her features, he bends over her. "Tell me, darling," he says, "is there anything I can do for you?"

"Yes," she answers.

"What is it?"

"You can give me a promise—a promise that you will not break."

"Tell me what it is," he says, in anxious, haggard tones, "that I may prove to you my love."

"When does your train leave?"

"At 9 o'clock."

"Promise me," she says, looking into his eyes with a wild passionate yearning, "that you will not get left."—Chicago Tribune.

Grand New-Year Ball

AT THE

HILBERT HOUSE, EAST JORDAN,

ON

NEW YEAR'S NIGHT

FOR THE

BENEFIT OF STEVENS POST NO. 68, G. A. R.

ALL ARE RESPECTFULLY INVITED TO COME.

MANAGERS:

FLOOR MANAGERS:

JAMES SHEAR. HOWARD WRIGHT.

Good Music in Attendance.

DOLL TO DANCE 50 CENTS; WIVES SUFFER. $1.50.

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades, WAGON TONGUES, Shingles, Lath, &c.

Lumber Sawed & Bills Filled TO ORDER

Buy note paper and envelopes with a view of Charlevoix, at D. Wood & Co.'s drug store.

Overcoats AND SUITINGS

Gents' Overcoats. Youths' Overcoats. Boys' Overcoats.

Gents' Suits. Youths' Suits. Boys' Suits.

I have just received a large assortment of the above goods, bought at reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing out cheap. Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and satisfy yourself.

E. M. Clark

Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS,

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery,

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

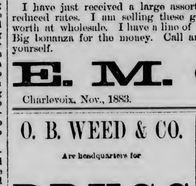
Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Hartholomew's new

Opera Block

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,



Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at his

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

The highest market price in cash paid for

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

AT THE JOURNAL

G. W. JEFFERS

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured

Fresh and Salt Fish

AND VEGETABLES

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

$1 A YEAR

ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR

Detroit Free Press AND THE HOUSEHOLD.

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Ten Full Pages of Reading Matter.

The Free Press, a Michigan Republican Newspaper, its able editorials, full telegraphic reports, and reliable market reports, and THE HOUSEHOLD, a Paper Devoted to Home Interests, Fashions, Fancy Work, Stories, Etc., Etc., Etc., Detroit, Mich.

$1 A YEAR

ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR

Job Prin

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 27, 1883.

Local Business Notices.

TAX RECEIPTS at this office.

NEW YEAR SERMON at the M. E. Church Sunday evening. Fill the house. It will pay you well to come.

Ely means COST when he says cost. Come and see.

H. C. Cooper will offer his TOYS, Holiday Goods, etc., AT COST this week, to close them out.

All grades of Shingles at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

HOUSE TO RENT.—On the terms near O. B. Weed's. Inquire at the store. W. J. BRADLEY.

FOR SALE.—A second-hand portable saw mill, with engine and boiler complete, for sale cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

Highest CASH price paid for cedar Ties and Posts. UPRIGHT, EMREY & CO.

Buy your wife a handsome and durable French Kid Shoe for a Christmas present. Sure to please. Sold by D. Sherwood & Co.

Cloaks and Dolmans—special sale for December. Don't miss the bargains at B. Rose's.

Farm Produce of every description taken to exchange at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

Come down to ELY'S and find out what COST is on Boots and Shoes. 2

For fresh and cheap Groceries, go to Byron See's. P. S.—Candies and Nuts for Xmas.

Picture Frames, handsome patterns on hand, any size made to order. Prices to suit the times. O. L. WHEAT.

Boots and Shoes are selling like hot critters at R. See's.

ELY is selling all leather goods in Men's Boots and Women's Shoes and Slippers AT COST.

D. Sherwood & Co. have an assortment of Slippers which can't be beat. Just the thing for a Christmas present.

Now is the time to buy a CHEAP SUIT of Clothes. Upright, Emrey & Co. have about fifty suits left.

Candies, Nuts, and Toys, just the thing for Christmas. A fine assortment at O. L. Wheat's.

A large assortment of men's heavy boots and rubbers for winter wear, at D. Sherwood & Co.'s.

The only store in town who make a specialty of Gents' Fine Hats, is Upright, Emrey & Co.

For Sale.—Two or three good horses for sale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

APPLES and Onions by the barrel and bushel at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good in size guaranteed. Call at the office of J. MILO EATON.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the Thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day, for the week ending yesterday:

	7 AM	2 PM
Thursday	17	30
Friday	20	29
Saturday	10	14
Sunday	14	18
Monday	26	32
Tuesday	28	—
Wednesday	30	24

News Brevities.

E. Carpenter and family started for Florida on Tuesday.

A good time may be expected at the masquerade at the opera house next Monday evening.

L. D. Bartholomew and John Burns expect to start for Florida early next week, to be gone most of the winter. Others expect to go soon.

Several young gentlemen have announced their intention of making New Year calls. No doubt the ladies will all be prepared for them.

At the M. E. church next Sunday morning the discourse and exercises will be historical. In the evening at 6:30 a New Year sermon will be delivered.

If Chapman's hotel at Bay Springs has a popular landlord, it may draw a summer patronage such as the JOURNAL mentioned last week in connection with a new summer hotel in Charlevoix.

"Happy New Year."

The following gentlemen will receive callers on New Year's day, at the places named:

W. A. Brown and Gardner Brown assisted by Dan Chambers will receive at the residence of W. P. Brown.

Allie Washburne assisted by Dr. Preston and H. W. Kinne, will receive at the residence of Byron See.

CHRISTMAS.

How the Day was Observed in Charlevoix.

Christmas festivities really began on Monday, for most people who could gave up the day to preparations. It was a fine, warm day, and the streets were lively with people. Among the ladies there was great activity in preparing the Christmas trees in the opera house and the M. E. church. There were two trees in each place, and long before dark they were well filled with articles for the pleasure of the little folks, as well as a good assortment of presents for older people in attendance.

During the afternoon many of our citizens indulged in sleigh-riding, which added to the life of the street.

But little was done in the way of decorations except in the opera house and church, although Geo. Miller's windows are worthy of notice. The words "A Merry Christmas" and "A Happy New Year," in outline letters, were so arranged as to add much to the beauty of the display and not interfere with the light of the room.

A. J. McLeod celebrated the day with a very fine display of meat, and in the evening the market was brilliantly illuminated. Mr. McLeod has been quietly preparing for this occasion, and his efforts were crowned with success.

The various merchants handling holiday goods made no effort at display or decorations beyond an effective showing of goods, and in most cases these were well sold off before night on Monday.

To effectively decorate the opera house required a great amount of patience and skill as well as labor, but the work was well done. The opening exercises were music and responsive readings, after which the good things were distributed. The house was crowded, and all were apparently happy. The gifts were mainly for the children of the Sunday school and many were remembered who are not regular attendants at the school. Altogether the occasion was one long to be remembered by the participants.

At the M. E. church, the walls were appropriately decorated with mottos, emblems, and other devices made of evergreens, and two large trees were well filled with articles for the children of the Sunday school, though many others were given. After usual opening exercises, and remarks by the pastor, Santa Claus came in and announced that he put the presents on the tree, and if the children were all "good children" for the coming year, he would come again next Christmas. His presence at this time and place so conclusive to the minds of many of those present that there is a bona fide living Santa Claus. A commendable feature of the occasion was the giving of presents to children whose parents or friends were too poor to provide for them. By this means their regard for the Sunday school will be strengthened, and the teachers will be better able to keep them in regular attendance. The church was well filled, many coming and going at all times during the exercises and distribution.

After the exercises at the trees were concluded, those of the older young people (and some married couples, too) who find pleasure in the ballroom, went to Lewis hall, where the fire department had provided music and other necessaries for a good old-fashioned dance. When the reporter put in an appearance he found as jolly and good-natured a party as ever congregated in a ball-room, and Lewis hall fairly shook with the energy of the dancers. The boys are to be congratulated on the popularity and success of their parties.

Christmas day was not so bright and warm as the day previous; how ever, it could be called a fine winter day. Many of the business places opened a few hours in the morning, but most of them closed during the afternoon and evening, and the time was devoted to pleasure, and good dinners. [Fortunate for the printer, he was invited out to dinner, and has a recollection of numerous good things.]

One generous act (we hope not the only one of the kind) was the visit of a number of ladies, on Christmas morning, to a family of motherless children out of the village a short distance. They were provided with provisions, and small packages of toys, candy, etc., which must surely have made the young hearts glad.

During the afternoon there was a rattle at Frank Wood's barber shop, at which a $15 cutter and a $5 lamp were disposed of. Carl Dorsey held the lucky ticket for the cutter, and Geo. Miller for the lamp.

The Christmas trade this year has been very good, all things considered. Dealers report a pretty thorough cleaning out of stocks, with cash receipts little below the average of previous years. A few dealers report sales light—below their expectations —but it was noticible that the most liberal advertisers gave the best report, while those who made little or no special effort "got left" with stocks on hand.

Bay Springs.

H. B. Chapman has caused to be made and circulated two photographs, 5x8 inches, one showing his new mammoth hotel, and the other a distant view of the hotel, its surroundings, and the principal business portion of Bay Springs, with its harbor and railroad. These pictures are evidently designed for advertising purposes, and in connection with the circular printed on the back will doubtless prove very valuable.

Among the reasons given for investing so much in hotel property in such a place, are: That the location and scenery are beautiful; it is within five eighths of a mile of the geographical center of the county; well situated for a city; has plenty of pure water; two mineral springs near the hotel; unsurpassed shipping facilities; an excellent place for the manufacture of all articles in wood, iron, leather, and cotton; more trout streams than any other place; even temperature; and good soil and climate for fruit-growing.

Bay Springs is connected with the G. R. & I. railroad by a narrow gauge railroad built for lumbering purposes, but which can, and possibly will, be fitted will coaches for passenger traffic. An extension eastward 13 miles would intersect the Michigan Central, and add largely to both freight and passenger traffic.

There is considerable timbered land for sale, the product of which, when cleared, must pass through Bay Springs, and there is little doubt that Mr. Chapman's money and energy will make that village an important factor in our county business. The old gentleman has great faith, and a tenacity of purpose to be commended. Pity his energies are not expended in behalf of Charlevoix.

There is little doubt that Bay Springs property will rise rapidly in value within the next year or two, and especially so if a vote of the people should locate the county seat there, as Mr. Chapman seems confident will be done, if it should ever be moved from Charlevoix.

Mason—Nicholls.

Mr. John F. Mason and Miss Bessie Nicholls, well-known young people of Charlevoix, were married by Rev. C. F. Van Anken, at 8 o'clock last evening, at the residence of the bride's parents. After the ceremony refreshments were served, and at 10 o'clock the happy couple departed to their own home, which had been prepared for them, with everything ready for housekeeping. Their many friends will unite in wishing them long life and prosperity. No cards issued.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the JOURNAL by Tuomey Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Dec. 25, 1883, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Frederick Collins to Franklin Kibler, 2 lots in s ½ s. 23-32-7, $800.

J. R. Dixon to F. S. Dixon, lot 1, 15-34-7, $800.

J. R. Dixon to F. S. Dixon, s ½ s ½ of s ½ and lot 4, 25-34-8, $1,000.

E. C. Bailie to H. G. White, n w ¼ of s w ¼, 5-33-6, $800.

M. J. Stackman to Aaron Rice, n w ¼ of s e ¼, 16-33-7, $525.

1883 1883

CHRISTMAS NOTICE.

Here we are Again.

O. B. Weed & Co.

PREVIOUS EFFORTS ECLIPSED.

Holiday Goods

Without Limit.

EVERYTHING!

EVERYTHING.

Our Mammoth Stock of Holiday Goods marks a New Era in the History of Charlevoix County.

Presents and Prices to Suit Everybody.

COME EARLY and Make your Selection.

South Arm.

Winter has at last arrived, and nearly everyone is blessing the "beautiful snow."

Mr. E. Reed met with a serious accident on Monday last. While sledding logs a hub-bit his nose cutting it badly.

It is rumored that Philip Lunway, of this place was recently married in Governeur, N. Y., to a lady of that place. Phil. and his bride are expected home soon.

Echo school has a vacation next week.

Dr. Lewis of Charlevoix was seen on our streets recently.

The East Jordan people did not respond very liberally in making up the fees for the Presiding Elder last Sunday.

F. L. Church, of Antrim county, was here surveying for Messrs. Murphy, McArthur, and Vance, last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hull, of Central Lake, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Vance on Saturday. Isaac Vance is home for the holidays.

Mr. J. N. Thompson, of San Antonio, Texas, and Miss Laura M. Scofield, of Echo, Mich., were married in Echo on Dec. 20, 1883, Rev. H. C. Scofield, father of the bride, officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson leave for the "Lone Star State" next week, where they expect to reside. The romantic part of this match was that the happy pair had never met until a few days previous to their marriage, although corresponding for five years.

We close by wishing the JOURNAL a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. F. A. N.

Married.

MASON—NICHOLLS, on Dec. 26, 1883, at the residence of the bride's parents in Charlevoix, by Rev. C. F. Van Anken, Mr. John F. Mason and Miss Bessie Nicholls, both of Charlevoix.

Grand Rapids Democrat,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Daily Democrat, By mail, $6.00 per year in advance, postage paid.

Weekly Democrat, $1.50 per year; 75 cents for six months; 40 cents for three months invariably in advance. Address,

THE DEMOCRAT,

Grand Rapids, Mich.

A MERE OUTLINE.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

Ah, help me! but her lace and brow
Were lovelier than lilies are
Beneath the light of moon and star
That outlines they are smiling now—
White lilies in a pallid sweet
Of sweetest white beneath the moon;
White lilies in a pool of night,
Their loveliness of liquid light
Then overflows some night of June,
When all the acres overhead
Blooms like a dazzling dairy-fest,
So marvelous her face and breast,
Their beauty blinds my fancy now.

And there—the oval chin below,
Carved like a sampling cameo,
Wh'n one exquisite dimple, swirled
With swimming light and shade and whirled
The faintest violet you'll know
The sweetest whirlpool ever lured
By Cupid's finger-tip—and so
The deadliest masstream in the world.

And oh!—bewilderment gone and Mind restored—what eyes she had!
Zo's any low-drop soak the fine
Off any violet through and through,
And then be colorless and dull
Compared with eyes so beautiful?
I tell you that her eyes were bright
As evening and as dark as night—
As bright as star the burnished bars
Of rainbows see in sunny skies,
And yet as deep and dark—her eyes—
And buttons black as blown out stars.

A "BUSINESS ARRANGEMENT."

BY M. C. FALLEY.

She was tall and strong and resolute looking, with a hatchsome dark face that somehow impressed the beholder with the feeling that the owner was a person of very high courage, and of more than average strength of mind. She stood leaning lightly against one of the big stone pillars of the veranda, carelessly pulling off the tops of the long grasses that grew about her, the clinging cloth dress revealing the fine outlines of a figure that was almost statuesque in its elegance. She was singing in a tranquil tone to her small audience, consisting of one person only, as she scattered the heads of grass in heaps about her trim feet, that she hated lovers, and that marriage was only another form of slavery scarcely less obnoxious than that annulled by the Emancipation proclamation.

"All of which I grant you, but which still doesn't change the present circumstances," placidly remarked her interested auditor, as he calmly lit a fresh cigar and changed his position on the garden bench. "Though I must confess Miss Renfrew that to my mind there is a distinction with a difference."

The young lady frowned.

"In this case it is a most evil difference," said a moneyed distinction Capt. Hazard," said she, pointedly. "You are a great flirt, and I have heard you declare a hundred times that matrimony was a fetter you would never be guilty of."

"To be sure," assented the Captain, gaily blowing the blue rings of smoke upon the air. "But you know that circumstances alter cases, particularly in the present instance."

"But I do not wish to marry you."

"Oh! of course not—most certainly not," retorted the Captain, with a chivalrous smile, that evinced his fine appreciation more than words could have done. "But you know the terms of the will as well as I. It is unfortunate that, while our mutual friend adored us both, and endowed us equally with her worldly goods in her last will and testament, we find it so hard to comply with the obligations it imposes upon us. However, you can renounce your share at the fortune, Miss Renfrew, by refusing to become my wife. That alternative is always left you."

She shut her teeth tightly together, and looked defiantly at her companion.

She saw a tall, slightly-stooped figure, clad in the undress uniform of a Captain of the Guards. The sun that threw down his slanting beams through the foliage of the old elm tree shone on a face that had seen a hundred battles, and that was, every whit, as proud and solid and resolute as her own.

"I am too poor to throw away my inheritance," said she, haughtily, pulling at the grass again. "And you know that I am poor; too."

"Fie! that matter so much," said he.

"And you are taking advantage of my poverty."

"Indeed, no," disclaimed the Captain, hastily; "you can always refuse to comply with the obligations laid down in the will, Miss Renfrew."

"But I won't refuse," cried she, angrily. "I won't refuse. Mark that down, Cool Hazard."

A black cod spot burned in the Captain's pale cheeks for an instant, and he smiled deeply. But whether the sigh was cause by a feeling of relief or disappointment was impossible to determine.

"Then you will be my wife?"

"I will marry you to secure my share in the estate of the late Mrs. Ford, and for that reason only," said she, slowly and scornfully. "You are not to suppose that I love you, for I do not."

"Thank you; I never supposed anything, Miss Renfrew."

"It is to be purely a business arrangement," she continued, with an angry flash.

"Oh, certainly! A business arrangement only. I understand you," accented he, politely. "Owning a certain degree in the light of a business relation will enable us to manage the whole affair with a unanimity and precision that might not be a thing were we prompted by other than mercenary motives.

"I shall continue on flirting after we are married. I shall do exactly as I please after. She clenched and hesitated.

"After we are married," said the Captain, quietly, finishing the sentence for her. "That is to be expected, and, one odd word, I think I will be exceedingly thankful for the privilege of seeing other people and doing as I please, as each other. No, Miss Renfrew, we'll each have a hundred strings to our bow—if we can get 'em, and we will manage to spend our late friend's money in decent though good style and have a pleasant time while it lasts. We will look upon this marriage from now on in the light of a business affair—a sort of partnership, as it were, which does not limit either one of us to any certain and circumscribed round of duties. By the terms of the will, we shall have to keep the house on the avenue open a certain portion of each year, and do some entertaining. But that is easily managed. You can have your great friend and adorer, Jackey Littlefield, at the house as often as you like, and I hope you won't forget to invite a few of the young ladies whom you know I have a preference for. I'm certain that we'll get along famously in this way."

Miss Renfrew stared hard at the Captain. Was there the faintest, almost imperceptible, ring of sarcasm in his words and tone? But no, that could not be. Capt. Hazard had been a flirt and lady-killer from his youth up, and the sentiments he now expressed were, of course, his real ones. Both the Captain and Miss Renfrew were the proteges of one who, though now removed by death, seemed to reach out to them her protecting arms from the grave.

Both had been very distantly related to the late Mrs. Ford, though there was in no wise connected by ties of blood to each other. They were the only relatives Mrs. Ford had left in the world, and as a consequence were her natural heirs. It had been her favorite plan in life to see these two obdurate people marry each other, and thus keep her fortune united in the family. But, as they disappointed her in this, and each one seemed to strike out in an opposite direction as if anxious to conquer worlds for themselves, Mrs. Ford had given up in despair, and on the eve of chagrin made her last will and testament after a fashion peculiarly her own. Her fortune, which in stocks and bonds, besides the elegant residence on the avenue, ran up into round numbers. All this she left unreservedly to the Captain and Miss Renfrew, providing they married each other in a given length of time. Failing to do this, the entire property was to go to the State, with the exception of a few hundreds.

It had been difficult to conjecture what the Captain's thoughts were as he listened to that singular will. As for Miss Renfrew, if she was very high and mighty before she found out what was in the will was, she became twice as high and mighty afterward, and it did seem for some time as if the State would actually be the beneficiary after all.

Neither the Captain nor Miss Renfrew were in the first flush of youth. The Captain was 38 years old, if a day. He had endured the hardships of war, and had come home while yet a very young man, a sort of battle-scarred hero, with a halting step that seemed the very perfection of grace to the women, who immediately set him up on a god of war, and worshiped at his shrine accordingly.

It's of no use to deny but that the Captain took kindly to this sort of treatment—men invariably do. But it spoiled him all the same, and he developed to a degree interesting if not refined some genuine and skillful "coquettes" that ever graced or disgraced the male persuasion.

Miss Renfrew stared hard at the Captain. Was there the faintest, almost imperceptible, ring of sarcasm in his words and tone? But no, that could not be. Capt. Hazard had been a flirt and lady-killer from his youth up, and the sentiments he now expressed were, of course, his real ones. Both the Captain and Miss Renfrew were the proteges of one who, though now removed by death, seemed to reach out to them her protecting arms from the grave.

Both had been very distantly related to the late Mrs. Ford, though there was in no wise connected by ties of blood to each other. They were the only relatives Mrs. Ford had left in the world, and as a consequence were her natural heirs. It had been her favorite plan in life to see these two obdurate people marry each other, and thus keep her fortune united in the family. But, as they disappointed her in this, and each one seemed to strike out in an opposite direction as if anxious to conquer worlds for themselves, Mrs. Ford had given up in despair, and on the eve of chagrin made her last will and testament after a fashion peculiarly her own. Her fortune, which in stocks and bonds, besides the elegant residence on the avenue, ran up into round numbers. All this she left unreservedly to the Captain and Miss Renfrew, providing they married each other in a given length of time. Failing to do this, the entire property was to go to the State, with the exception of a few hundreds.

It had been difficult to conjecture what the Captain's thoughts were as he listened to that singular will. As for Miss Renfrew, if she was very high and mighty before she found out what was in the will was, she became twice as high and mighty afterward, and it did seem for some time as if the State would actually be the beneficiary after all.

Neither the Captain nor Miss Renfrew were in the first flush of youth. The Captain was 38 years old, if a day. He had endured the hardships of war, and had come home while yet a very young man, a sort of battle-scarred hero, with a halting step that seemed the very perfection of grace to the women, who immediately set him up on a god of war, and worshiped at his shrine accordingly.

It's of no use to deny but that the Captain took kindly to this sort of treatment—men invariably do. But it spoiled him all the same, and he developed to a degree interesting if not refined some genuine and skillful "coquettes" that ever graced or disgraced the male persuasion.

Miss Renfrew was a beauty of the Semiramis and Cleopatra order, and looked like him all the better for this, and he went on his way conquering all before him.

There was one exception, however, and that exception was Miss Renfrew. When the Captain came home from the front, he had found a beautiful, domiciled under the roof-tree at Miss Ford's, a thin, angular girl of 16, too painfully shy and plain to be fought, for long, and a waste way of his ammunition in that direction. So he had boldly carried on his manifold flirtations under her keen and critical eyes, and boasted of his conquests, and laughed under his breath at the readiness with which women fell in love with him, and was insufferably and tormentedly conceited, until the chrysalis gradually emerged from her husk of reserve and diffidence, and developed, to the gallant Captain's unbounded amazement, into a full-blown butterfly, cajoling the Captain by picking up his captain's own weapons and turning them full upon himself. It had been said that Hazard was the greatest flirt in the city, but Miss Renfrew soon wrested this doubtful honor from him, and people now declared solemnly that, in the light of her performances in that line, the Captain's efforts paled into insignificance.

The angular girl of 16, with her deep, dark eyes, and a mouth, as Hazard ungallantly assured her, as big as her hat, and that covered an acre—was plumped down brusquely style and he listed it—bloomed into a magnificent woman at 25.

And perhaps nobody was more surprised than the Captain was himself one day, to discover a certain partyof his own exact pattern at that—violently endeavoring Miss Renfrew in the back garden, and making certain wild and somewhat incoherent offers of a heart, hand and pocket-book to that young lady. He had a dim remembrance that these offers of himself and his possessions had been received with scorn and contumely, and that he had been then and there so awfully "sat upon, metaphorically speaking, that for the time no presence seemed a howling wilderness for some time afterward.

But this was a long time ago. The Captain apparently did not take his disappointment very much to heart, though he refrained from offering the remains of his affections to anybody else, and Miss Renfrew waxed fatter and handsomer and wickeder, and counted her conquests as the Captain had done his as the years rolled on. Until now there came a crisis in their lives in the shape of Mrs. Ford's will that neither one could avoid.

Without this money they were both poor as church mice. The Captain had a beggarly pension and expensive habits, and Miss Renfrew had the expensive habits without the beggarly pension, and neither of them had ever earned a cent of money or did a day's work in their lives. This simplified matters, and brought the elaborate couple to a focus.

Not long after a wedding ceremony was celebrated with great eclat in the most fashionable church in the city, and the Captain and his wife entered at once into the full enjoyment of what Mrs. Hazard was pleased to call a "business arrangement."

Six months passed. In this short length of time, and while in the full possession of his old-time liberty, the Captain had become moody and morose, and Mrs. Hazard developed a tendency toward hysterics that even her best friends had never suspected her of before her marriage.

She had everything she wanted, even to the presence of Jacob Littlefield, who danced attendance upon her whims, even more patiently and attentively than had the captain's handsome face and intellect. he made love to Mrs. Hazard in such a brazen and confident manner, that the captain's blood boiled for him. Indeed, he made love to Mrs. Hazard in such a brazen and confident manner, that the captain's blood boiled for him. Indeed, he made love to Mrs. Hazard in such a brazen and confident manner, that the captain's blood boiled for him. Mr. Littlefield by the nap of the neck and the slack of the pants and pitch him headlong and heels out of the house.

But this he dared not do. He remembered, with a feeling of burning rage, that Mr. Littlefield was a part of that "business arrangement" which we had so blindly entered into. A thousand times he cursed his mad folly in making such a bargain. A blind fool, he thought, would have known better than to do as he had done.

Miserably jealous, and unhappy in the bargain, the Captain gradually withdrew from his own flirtations in order that he might have more time to watch Mr. Littlefield.

Matters went on in this way from bad to worse until one evening he discovered Mrs. Hazard and Littlefield in the conservatory, and surprised the quondam lover making a very frenzied declaration, and urging an elopement.

"I will excuse you that trouble," said the Captain turning upon his heel.

Mrs. Hazard gave a little frightened scream, as she saw her husband's determined face.

"Perhaps that last was a trifle too much," said Jacob Littlefield, as Mrs. Hazard left the room in pursuit of the Captain. "By jove! he looked as if he meant murder."

Impelled by some undefinable fear Mrs. Hazard hurried to her private sitting-room. A folded paper lay on the table. Upon it she opened it. He had endured the hardships of war, and had come home while yet a very young man, a sort of battle-scarred hero, with a halting step that seemed the very perfection of grace to the women, who immediately set him up on a god of war, and worshiped at his shrine accordingly.

It's of no use to deny but that the Captain took kindly to this sort of treatment—men invariably do. But it spoiled him all the same, and he developed to a degree interesting if not refined some genuine and skillful "coquettes" that ever graced or disgraced the male persuasion.

Miss Renfrew was a beauty of the Semiramis and Cleopatra order, and looked like him all the better for this, and he went on his way conquering all before him.

There was one exception, however, and that exception was Miss Renfrew. When the Captain came home from the front, he had found a beautiful, domiciled under the roof-tree at Miss Ford's, a thin, angular girl of 16, too painfully shy and plain to be fought, for long, and a waste way of his ammunition in that direction. So he had boldly carried on his manifold flirtations under her keen and critical eyes, and boasted of his conquests, and laughed under his breath at the readiness with which women fell in love with him, and was insufferably and tormentedly conceited, until the chrysalis gradually emerged from her husk of reserve and diffidence, and developed, to the gallant Captain's unbounded amazement, into a full-blown butterfly, cajoling the Captain by picking up his captain's own weapons and turning them full upon himself. It had been said that Hazard was the greatest flirt in the city, but Miss Renfrew soon wrested this doubtful honor from him, and people now declared solemnly that, in the light of her performances in that line, the Captain's efforts paled into insignificance.

The angular girl of 16, with her deep, dark eyes, and a mouth, as Hazard ungallantly assured her, as big as her hat, and that covered an acre—was plumped down brusquely style and he listed it—bloomed into a magnificent woman at 25.

And perhaps nobody was more surprised than the Captain was himself one day, to discover a certain party—his own exact pattern at that—violently endeavoring Miss Renfrew in the back garden, and making certain wild and somewhat incoherent offers of a heart, hand and pocket-book to that young lady. He had a dim remembrance that these offers of himself and his possessions had been received with scorn and contumely, and that he had been then and there so awfully "sat upon, metaphorically speaking, that for the time no presence seemed a howling wilderness for some time afterward.

But this was a long time ago. The Captain apparently did not take his disappointment very much to heart, though he refrained from offering the remains of his affections to anybody else, and Miss Renfrew waxed fatter and handsomer and wickeder, and counted her conquests as the Captain had done his as the years rolled on. Until now there came a crisis in their lives in the shape of Mrs. Ford's will that neither one could avoid.

Without this money they were both poor as church mice. The Captain had a beggarly pension and expensive habits, and Miss Renfrew had the expensive habits without the beggarly pension, and neither of them had ever earned a cent of money or did a day's work in their lives. This simplified matters, and brought the elaborate couple to a focus.

Not long after a wedding ceremony was celebrated with great eclat in the most fashionable church in the city, and the Captain and his wife entered at once into the full enjoyment of what Mrs. Hazard was pleased to call a "business arrangement."

Six months passed. In this short length of time, and while in the full possession of his old-time liberty, the Captain had become moody and morose, and Mrs. Hazard developed a tendency toward hysterics that even her best friends had never suspected her of before her marriage.

She had everything she wanted, even to the presence of Jacob Littlefield, who danced attendance upon her whims, even more patiently and attentively than had the captain's handsome face and intellect.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Dec. 27, 1883.

Notes and News.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

Labor Commissioner McGrath's statistics will show the condition of Michigan laboring men to be far ahead of those of the eastern states.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and tone up the system you will find Parmelee's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co. 8-60

Joseph Grousel, the well known journalist and correspondent, will spend the winter in Washington, as correspondent of the Detroit Free Press.

The greatest pain-killer yet found for Cramps, Colic, Stitch in side or back, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, &c., is Hamilton's Jamaica Ginger Tonic and Pain Cure. Bound on with hot wet cloths, it never fails to cure. For Dyspepsia, Indigestion, sick headache, flatulence, diarrhea, dysentery, heartburn, sour stomach, &c., it is unequalled. Warranted to give relief. Use both internally and externally. Warranted to cure. Try it. Price 25 and 50 cents Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Before President Arthur gets his scheme of a new navy under way, would'nt it be well for him to explain what has become of the $384,000,000 the country has squandered upon its navy during the twenty years his party have had absolute control of it? There is nothing to show for all this expenditure but 3,000 idle officers and a handful of rotten ships that cannot go to sea.

Millions of persons die annually who might be saved if attention was given to the little ills of life. Coughs, Colds, sore Throat, &c., are easily cured by using Hamilton's Cough Balsam, which removes the tickling in the throat and lightness across the inflamed membranes. Immediate relief will be found in Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, &c., and even in chronic cases and last stage of consumption great relief is received. For incipient consumption it works like a charm. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Chicago Tribune on Carlisle's election as speaker to the house: "The victory of the better element of the democratic party is a matter for the congratulation of the republicans, for it redounds to the benefit of all good citizens. The people of the country are getting tired to death of the spectacle of political questions being confined to the low level of partisan boxing matches and intrigues of "business interests" for grabs out of the public treasury. The breakdown in the speakership contest of the candidate who stood distinctly for the syndicate theory of government by corporations will, we hope, do much to lift American politics into the higher regions where parties can divide on issues of broad interest and public policy."

Are your children peevish and sad-eyed? Do they have abnormal appetites and crave food constantly? Beware of worms. Very few children escape their ravages. No child can be happy or well while suffering with worms. They sap the very life by preventing the digestion and assimilation of food. There is a sure remedy. It is called Parmelee's Sensible Worm Candies. They are perfectly harmless, but will quickly dissolve the worms and pass them off through the bowels. Buy no other. Price 25 cts per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

According to the New York Sun things look a little squally for Mr. Arthur in New York. First of all, Senator Miller is against him, and says Arthur cannot get the New York delegation in the national convention nor any considerable part of it. Senator Miller is for Blaine. Frank Hiscock says Arthur will not get any delegates from his district. Abram X. Parker says St. Lawrence county will support Blaine. The same is said of Mr. Ketchum's district. The western part of the state is also against him. Mr. Cornell and Mr. Wadsworth are both against him. All this, if authentic, has an ominous look. It would seem as if Mr. Arthur can by no means count on taking his own state into the convention, and if he cannot do that he had better not be a candidate.

Enrich the blood. Hamilton's German Bitters are highly recommended for all diseases requiring a certain and efficient tonic. Especially Indigestion, Dyspepsia, want of appetite, loss of strength, lack of energy, &c. They enrich the blood, strengthen the muscles, and give new life to the nerves. They act like a charm in the digestive organs, remove all dyspeptic symptoms, and whenever the stomach is weak or there is a general loss of physical vigor, these bitters are just what you need. Only 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Cheap Burglar Alarm.

Drive a headless nail into the casing over any door, and after closing the door hang a tin pan on the nail when you go to bed. That is to say, do all this if you are naturally timid, and want a cheap burglar alarm, that will work every time. A clothes-pin put through the handle of a key will strike against the door-knob and make it impossible to turn the key with nippers from the other side. A little hook on the top of the window sash can be arranged so as to prevent a burglar from slipping a knife up between the sashes and turning the window-fastener either way.—Boston Globe.

OLD NEWSPAPERS FOR SALE

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.; HARBOR AND SUMMER RESORTS.

Charlevoix, the county seat of Charlevoix county, is a flourishing village of about 1,800 inhabitants, located on both banks of Pine River, between Round Lake and Lake Michigan. Nearly all branches of business are represented, yet a few others could be profitably added. Any of the various mills for manufacturing hardwood lumber, including handles, wooden bowls, chairs, agricultural implements, and farm wagons, will find an abundance of first-class timber easily accessible. Among the attractions are two summer resorts, which are annually visited by thousands of people. The climatic advantages are unexcelled, and they who have passed one or more summers at these resorts, recuperating their strength and securing a new lease of life, are most enthusiastic in their praise of the place. Sufferers from hay fever and asthmatic difficulties find here a sure relief. The shores of Pine Lake and Lake Michigan afford an excellent bathing place. The privileges for hunting and fishing cannot be excelled by any other locality. In their season, lake trout, black bass, pickerel, perch, and herring abound in the waters adjacent to the village, while the gamy speckled trout, the fisherman's delight, make the cold waters of the Jordan and Boyne rivers, as well as those of several smaller tributaries of Pine Lake, their favorite haunts. No rivers in the lower peninsula are as famous for their choice trout as the Jordan and Boyne. The scenery from any point of view on Pine Lake is one of surpassing loveliness. The surrounding country offers great inducements to progressive young farmers who desire to build homes for their families. There is an abundance of maple, elm, beech, basswood, ash, hemlock, and cedar timber, which, with our facilities for manufacturing and shipping, generally more than pays for clearing the land. Unimproved lands are held at from $7 to $15 per acre, while improved farms average from $15 to $60 in the interior, and from $25 to $100 near Charlevoix. The principal crops are winter wheat, oats, corn, hay, clover, potatoes, and root crops. The summer resorts at Charlevoix furnish an excellent market for all sorts of garden vegetables. All fruits do well, excepting grapes and peaches. The hardier kinds of apples are especially successful and the price for the same is generally higher than the same kind of fruit grown farther south. Charlevoix county is at the northern extremity of the celebrated Michigan fruit belt.

STATEMENTS and other Stationery for the New Year. at the Journal Office.

AT COST!

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods.

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoes. They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY, And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House CHARLEVOIX.

GEO. W. MILLER,

DEALER IN

Clothing

Gents' Furnishing Goods, Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels, GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware,

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

THE MOST USEFUL BOOK EVER PUBLISHED!

A Book that should be in Every House.

The press, teachers, and professional people throughout the country pronounce it to be the BOOK OF BOOKS. It contains upwards of 50,000 WORDS, with their definition and pronunciation, according to Webster and other recognized authorities; a large number of additional words and definitions in general use. It contains a mine of information for everybody. This book is handsomely bound in cloth, containing 542 Pages Profusely Illustrated. We propose to send you one of these valuable books, by mail, all shipping charges prepaid, to any address, on receipt of only ONE DOLLAR.

Address M. STOLZ & CO., 26 Park Place, New York.

J. MILO EATON,

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 1870

EVERYTHING

In the line of

Furniture

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H. C. Cooper

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH

Come and See me before Buying

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS,

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run for him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all.

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charlevoix

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHING,

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goods,

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets,

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Feed

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a year ago, and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our establishment.

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses or stores. Call and see us and know your pay.

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 25. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

Business Directory.

ATTORNEYS.

CRESHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, Over's Rubber Block, Charlevoix, Mich. CRESHANK. J. S. GRIER.

ANG & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, Petoskey, Mich. 22

EDWARD W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor, Real Estate business promptly attended to. SYDNEY T. DIGGS.

A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law, Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

TON & KEAY, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

AR F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

NK OF CHARLEVOIX. Capital $50,000. Savings department. Deposits[illegible] Drafts on all principal cities. Loans on first mortgages. Foreign and domestic exchange. REYNOLDS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

ST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school hour. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7, in the school house.

C. E. VANALSTYNE, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7.

J. C. BOOMER, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX HOOK AND LADDER COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall.

E. F. BISSEL, Secretary.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

A. CARLSTEIN, M. D. Office at the Rockside.

LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Dr. Lewis' block, Charlevoix, Mich.

S. PRESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Homeopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

AGUE & HARRIS, Notary Public, Real Estate Loan, and Insurance Agt., Petoskey.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. R. Baxter Post No. 193 meets second Saturday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

O. U. F. Charlevoix Lodge No. 327, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

O. U. F. Round Lake Lodge No. 366, meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

O. U. True Blues No. 137, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

ANONIC—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over office.

L. BETTARS, President. A. E. PERRIN, Vice-President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank.

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money loaned on approved paper at reasonable rates. Collections made. Interest given on time deposits. Sight exchange on principal cities. Drafts and remittances made promptly.

G. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week AND FARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobaccos and Cigars.

Prices reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON, 69, Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor. Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor. Charlevoix, Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public. Headquarters for the Pelosky and Elk Rapids stages.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CHILDS, Proprietor. Boyne City, Michigan.

Has been thoroughly refitted and refurnished.

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

A few first-class sewing machines for sale at ten-dollar prices. Call soon and have your pick.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED

D. S. WAY.

FOR

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

GO TO

Dr. G. W. CROUTER'S DRUG STORE.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

An Immense Line to Choose From.

PROBATE ORDER. State of Michigan, county of Emmet, ss. At a session of the probate court for the county of Charlevoix, holden at the probate office in the village of Charlevoix, on Tuesday, the fourth day of December, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three. Present, Hon. James A. Kent, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of

SHAW-WAWNE-PE-NAY-SE, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of George W. Lount and Adelbert R. Lount, who claim an interest in certain land described therein as grantees of the heirs at law of said deceased. Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the seventh day of January, A. D. 1884, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the said petitioners as grantees of the heir at law of said deceased as aforesaid, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the probate office in the village of Charlevoix, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioners should not be granted; and it is further ordered, that said petitioners give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in The Charlevoix Journal, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county of Charlevoix for three successive weeks.

A true copy.) JAMES A. KENT,
2-3 Judge of Probate.

MORTGAGE SALE. Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by Peter Sabourin, Mary Sabourgh his wife, joining in the release of dower in the premises, mortgagor, to Lemuel D. Bartholomew, mortgagee, bearing date the seventh (7th) day of January, A. D. 1882, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix on the twelfth (12th) day of January, A. D. 1882, at 2 o'clock p. m., in liber "I" of mortgages, on pages 60, 61 and 62, which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of [illegible] dollars and forty cents ($[illegible]), principal and interest and no attorney fee or any proceeding at law or in equity having been had to recover the money secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, therefore, and by reason whereof the power of sale in said mortgage has become operative. Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale therein contained, I will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, on Saturday, the fifth day of February, A. D. 1884, at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, at the front staircase of Town Hall, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, the said Town Hall being the place for the holding of the circuit court within the said county of Charlevoix. The premises to be sold are described in said mortgage as follows: The west one-half (½) of the southwest one-quarter (¼) of the south east one-quarter (¼) of section [illegible] and [illegible] in township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, containing eighty (80) acres of land according to the United States survey.

Dated November 15, 1883.

LEMUEL D. BARTHOLOMEW, Assignee of mortgagee.

CHURCHILL & CHURCHILL, Attorneys for assignee of mortgagee. 18-50

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has just heard the Ladies' and Children's

Furnishing Goods,

Lately owned by Fisher & Atwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and as many more as possible. Call and see my stock.

LIVERY.

The undersigned has purchased the livery formerly owned by him, and installed

Geo. Durance, Manager.

There has been added a new stock of

Horses and Carriages

And a cordial invitation is extended to all old friends and patrons to call and see him when ever they need anything in that line.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, free of charge, with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, and all THROAT and LUNG AFFECTIONS. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. WILSON, Box 208, Williamsburgh, N. Y.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (free) to any one troubled with pimples on face, a recipe that will remove them in 10 days. It is a simple vegetable remedy, discovered by a Mexican priest. Address, inclosing a 3c. stamp, [illegible]

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated

ROCKFORD WATCH.

To be had from your Grocer.

L. L. CARR

Has just received a new invoice of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and convince. Next door to Bridge St.

ROBERT GRUEN,

Boyne Falls, Mich.,

Watch-maker

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 17

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect October, 1883.

STATIONS.	GOING NORTH. No. 1.	No. 3.	No. 5.	No. 7.
Leave Grand Rapids	7 00 am	1 00 pm	5 10 pm	12 00 m
Ar Ionia	7 45 "	1 50 "	5 50 "	12 50 am
Belding	8 00 "	2 05 "	6 05 "	1 05 "
Greenville	8 20 "	2 25 "	6 25 "	1 25 "
Sheridan	8 40 "	2 45 "	6 45 "	1 45 "
Stanton	8 55 "	3 00 "	7 00 "	2 00 "
Edmore	9 10 "	3 15 "	7 15 "	2 15 "
Remus	9 30 "	3 35 "	7 35 "	2 35 "
Millbrook	9 40 "	3 45 "	7 45 "	2 45 "
Paris	9 50 "	3 55 "	7 55 "	2 55 "
Big Rapids	10 00 "	4 05 "	8 05 "	3 05 "
Ar Reed City	10 30 "	4 35 "	8 35 "	3 35 "
Leave Reed City	10 40 "	4 45 "	8 45 "	3 45 "
Cadillac	11 15 "	5 20 "	9 20 "	4 20 "
Manton	11 30 "	5 35 "	9 35 "	4 35 "
Traverse City	12 45 pm	6 50 "	10 50 "	5 50 "
Kalkaska	11 55 am	5 00 "	9 00 "	4 00 "
Grayling	12 30 pm	5 35 "	9 35 "	4 35 "
Ar Gaylord	1 00 "	6 05 "	10 05 "	5 05 "
Johannesburg	1 20 "	6 25 "	10 25 "	5 25 "
Gaylord	1 30 "	6 35 "	10 35 "	5 35 "
Otsego Lake	1 45 "	6 50 "	10 50 "	5 50 "
Gaylord	1 55 "	7 00 "	11 00 "	6 00 "
Vanderbilt	2 15 "	7 20 "	11 20 "	6 20 "
Wolverine	2 30 "	7 35 "	11 35 "	6 35 "
Mackinaw City	3 00 "	8 05 "	12 05 am	7 05 "

STATIONS.	GOING SOUTH. No. 2.	No. 4.	No. 6.	No. 8.
Mackinaw City	10 00 am	5 00 pm	2 30 am	10 00 am
Wolverine	10 30 "	5 30 "	3 00 "	10 30 "
Vanderbilt	10 45 "	5 45 "	3 15 "	10 45 "
Gaylord	11 05 "	6 05 "	3 35 "	11 05 "
Otsego Lake	11 15 "	6 15 "	3 45 "	11 15 "
Gaylord	11 30 "	6 30 "	4 00 "	11 30 "
Johannesburg	11 40 "	6 40 "	4 20 "	11 40 "
Gaylord	12 00 m	7 00 "	4 40 "	12 00 m
Ar Otsego	12 30 pm	7 30 "	5 10 "	12 30 pm
Leave Otsego	12 40 "	7 40 "	5 20 "	12 40 "
Ar Grayling	1 00 "	8 00 "	5 40 "	1 00 "
Leave Grayling	1 10 "	8 10 "	5 50 "	1 10 "
Kalkaska	1 45 "	8 45 "	6 25 "	1 45 "
Traverse City	3 00 "	10 00 "	7 40 "	3 00 "
Manton	2 15 "	9 15 "	6 55 "	2 15 "
Cadillac	2 30 "	9 30 "	7 10 "	2 30 "
Reed City	3 15 "	10 15 "	7 55 "	3 15 "
Big Rapids	3 30 "	10 30 "	8 10 "	3 30 "
Howard City	3 42 "	10 42 "	8 21 "	3 42 "
Edmore	3 50 "	10 50 "	8 30 "	3 50 "
Remus	4 00 "	11 00 "	8 40 "	4 00 "
Millbrook	4 10 "	11 10 "	8 50 "	4 10 "
Paris	4 20 "	11 20 "	9 00 "	4 20 "
Big Rapids	4 30 "	11 30 "	9 10 "	4 30 "
Stanton	4 40 "	11 40 "	9 20 "	4 40 "
Sheridan	4 55 "	11 55 "	9 35 "	4 55 "
Greenville	5 10 "	12 10 pm	9 50 "	5 10 "
Belding	5 30 "	12 30 "	10 10 "	5 30 "
Ar Ionia	5 45 "	12 45 "	10 25 "	5 45 "
Leave Grand Rapids	6 30 "	1 30 "	11 10 "	6 30 "

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free of charge to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers are recommended to profit by the advertiser's experience, as he offers a valuable prescription in correct condition. Address, B. CURTIS, 42 Fulton St., New York.

HALL'S

Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

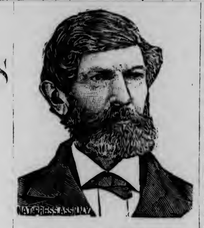
$100 REWARD FOR A CASE IT CANNOT CURE OR FAILS TO CURE.

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case and we will forfeit the above amount in a single instance.

It is nothing like other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying disease, and not prescribing for it, and CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. If you are not get it, send to us and we will forward it immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Dr. CROUTER, Agt., Charlevoix. 28



WM. D. KELLEY,

The Oldest Member of Congress, in Age and Service.

In our last week's issue we gave a portrait of the youngest member of congress, and as a sequel, we give this week a likeness of the oldest member of the house, William D. Kelley, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Kelley was born at Philadelphia April 12, 1814, and is therefore nearly seventy years of age. He received a very thorough English education, and began life as a paper dealer in his native city. After a few years service in this capacity he became an apprentice in a jewelry establishment. Having learned the trade he removed to Boston where he worked five years as a journeyman jeweler; he then returned to Philadelphia and began the study of law, and in the course of time entered the profession, also devoting himself to various literary pursuits.

Mr. Kelley was twice elected prosecuting attorney of the city and county of Philadelphia, and served for ten years as judge of the court of common pleas of that city; was a delegate to the national republican convention at Chicago in 1860, and one of Lincoln's heartiest supporters. He became the republican candidate for the thirty-seventh congress and was elected, and has been returned consecutively every term since his first election, by an average majority of about ten thousand over his democratic opponent.

Mr. Kelley has been and still is a conspicuous figure in our national legislature. His greatest ambition is to continue during life in his present position as representative from Philadelphia.

Chairman Sabin and the Workingman.

The politicians pay a great deal of attention to the laboring man. He is in their minds continually when they want anything. Whom he wants something they do not know him, or they put him off on one pretense or another. Now that we are on the eve of a new identical contest the workingman has become an important factor in politics and society once more. He will soon be called upon to swell the crowds at political meetings, to march in processions, and, more important than all else, to vote.

The republican national committee at its recent meeting awoke to the fact that the laboring man is a very desirable person to cultivate, and in its call for a national convention it took pains to say that it wanted "all who are in favor of dignifying American labor" to attend. It then elected Dwight M. Sabin, of Minnesota, its chairman. As such he will be the head of the party during the next campaign. In so far as my one man can represent the active principles of the party he will do so. The candidate will be in a measure removed from the strife. The chairman becomes the rough and tumble fighting chieftain of the party. Sabin was selected because he is rich. What has he done to dignify and ennoble American labor?

He has made his money by hiring the labor of Minnesota convicts. He has a contract with the state by which he leases the penitentiary, machinery, and everything pertaining to the institution for ten years, taking the labor of the convicts at forty-five cents a day. The product of this labor enters the market in competition with the wares turned out by workshops manned by honest men. At forty-five cents a day for their labor, Sabin & Co. can afford to undersell any manufacturer who is compelled to depend upon free labor. They make the market, and honest workingmen must meet their figures in some way or go out of business. The tendency of such a system is to cheapen labor, because the convict workshops may be operated at enormous profits and still sell their manufactured articles much lower than any others.

In almost every large manufacturing establishment in the country there are certain things in daily use which are not made in the shop, but are bought from state prison contractors like Dwight M. Sabin. Why? Because they cannot be made so cheaply, as they can be purchased. If every wagon shop in the country had to make its own carriage boxes, for instance, there would be profitable work for hundreds of honest artisans, but in some of the prisons this article is produced at a figure so cheap that employers of honest labor cannot compete with it. Convict labor not only enriches the men who use it, but it impoverishes the free artisans who see path it crosses. It is a monstrous wrong to permit it to be used as it is to day in most of the states.

Mr. Sabin, as one of the wealthiest of prison contractors, has been placed in a position where he is a legitimate subject for criticism. Made suddenly rich by putting the product of slave labor against that of free labor, he has been selected, on account of his wealth, as a party leader. The pretense that he or the men who have put him forward have any sincere desire to dignify and ennoble American labor will deceive no one.—Chicago Herald.

Michigan's Hardwood Resources

Hon. Henry N. Walker, of Detroit, commissioner of immigration for Michigan, has issued a circular supplementary to the book "Michigan and its Resources," which will be sent to state manufacturers of hardwood goods. The circular says:

"While it is well known that Michigan ranks first among the states in the manufacture of pine lumber, its great wealth of hardwoods has not been generally appreciated. In the northern counties of the lower peninsula, and in all the counties of the upper peninsula, are to be found large tracts of pine, hemlock, cedar, black birch, sugar maple, mingled in the birds-eye and curly varieties, bass-wood, elm, white and black ash, beech, hickory, iron wood, rock elm, spruce, poplar, tamarack, etc. In the lower peninsula are also found oak, cherry, and black walnut. Black birch, which is found in large quantities in both peninsulas, must soon come into general use, taking, to a great extent, the place of black walnut and cherry. It is admirably adapted to house finishing purposes, and is well suited to the manufacture of school and other furniture. Birch hubs have met with much favor in Michigan and Indiana. Michigan's great facilities for cheap water transportation have been supplemented by the extension of established railroads and the building of many new lines. To-day this state offers exceptional advantages to all industries in which wood is largely used, and its location, between the thickly populated east and growing west, well fits it for a manufacturing center. Michigan manufactures more elmwood pig iron than any other state. Hundreds of thousands of feet of choice hardwoods are annually consumed in the manufacture of charcoal. Saw mills, handle, last, and shoe-peg factories, and other wood working establishments can be located near the charcoal kilns to the great advantage of both industries."

The commissioner also calls attention to the unrivaled facilities for making wood pulp, and the attractions the state affords to tanners.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

A HARTFORD paper makes the charge that there are farmers in the surrounding country who have for years brought into the city butter for dealers and families, who are now, and for a year or two have been, buying oleomargarine in Hartford, mobbing it over at home, and supplying it to their customers as the genuine product of their own dairies.

THAT murder will not always "out" is receiving fresh proof daily in the rapidly increasing list of undetected horrors. Jeremy Cramer, Rose Ambler and Zora Burns are only a portion of the list of bloody tragedies that are likely to go unavenged. Something must be done for the better detection of crime and the surer punishment of criminals, and especially murderers, when detected.

THE Swedish firm of Nobel Bros. who have developed the Baku petroleum district of Russia, employ 7,000 workmen, own a large fleet of steamers and 1,400 oil trucks. They are building a town in which to lodge their servants, and have adopted a semi-cooperative system, giving every one a share in the profits, and allowing all to invest their savings in the business. But the Pall Mall Gazette understands that even their gigantic operations are likely to be thrown into the shade by an American capitalist who is about to lay a pipe 561 miles long, by which the oil will be conveyed across the Caucasus, from Baku to Batum, on the Black sea.

THERE is a spring of water in Shepherdstown, W. Va., which is an almost unerring barometer, and predicts by the movements of its water the kind of weather that will prevail. From twenty-four to forty-eight hours before a rainfall the water in the spring will rise from three to eight inches above its usual height and when the rain has commenced it falls again. This is particularly the case in regard to settled rains, but it has also been known to rise just before a heavy thunder-storm. The spring has no apparent connection with the town run or the river, as it is between 100 and 200 feet above the level of the river.

THE main walls of the new temple of the Mormons in Salt Lake have been completed. The first stone was laid twenty-eight years ago. The material is granite, like Maine granite, full of shining mica flecks, and is hauled from the mountains back of Salt Lake with oxen on enormous wagons, with wheels twelve feet high. The walls are exceedingly thick ten feet and the height eighty-five feet. The roof, to date, paid by tithings, has been $1,500,000, and six more years of work will be required to complete the structure. It has come to stay, whether Mormonism has or not, and it has been predicted that some day the State of Utah, so deemed and purged of polygamy, will own it and use it for a Capitol.

A TART London Lancet, the great British authority on the science of medicine and surgery, contained an exhaustive article from an eminent New York physician, Dr. Ephraim Cutter, on the "Therapeutical Drinking of Hot Water." The idea is not new. A correspondent of the Chicago Journal tells a story of the late Horace Greeley, who was a strong believer in the hot water treatment. An old friend of his said: "Once Mr. Greeley asked me if I wouldn't take some thing." I said yes, and down stairs he led me, and around a corner into a saloon, where we seated ourselves at a table. 'What shall it be, gentleman?' asked the waiter. 'Well,' replied Mr. Greeley, looking at me earnestly, 'I always take hot water, and I advise you to.'" The friend, so he says, took "nothing else," but Mr. Greeley's persistent in having his cup of boiling hot water, and declared it had a "good" and "stimulating."

THE Wisconsin wanderer must be credited with being a keener person than has been supposed heretofore. Recently the State advertised a tract of timber-land to be sold at auction, and it became known that the "land sharks" were laying schemes to buy it in cheap. A few days before the sale ten or twelve lookers-on were observed in town with long memorials of the value of the land erected, the wood on them, etc. Being asked what their object was, they said to buy in. Here was the dilemma for the "land sharks": these woodmen would run the price up to its real value. So the land agents offered a sum of money for the minutes, and, to their surprise, the offer was readily accepted. After they had bought the land they found they had been duped, for the minutes were false.

THE late Mr. Darwin has a formidable rival in his great feat of tracing the origin and descent of man from the monkey. Prof. Gheeko challenges him in respect at least to the people of Northern Europe and the American Indians. They, he says, descended from bears, which, having floated southward on icebergs toward the end of the glacial period, could not return. The warmth of the climate made them shed their furry coat, and they walked on their hind legs in order to keep their toes legs dry. Thus in process of time, by successive modifications, they developed into men. Mr. Vanderbilt, the other day, reduced the calculation still further. He traced the origin of sneak thieves to bears, or at any rate, when denying that his son had failed in Wall street, he said that "bears" were sneak thieves.

"THE Indian may dwell with the Caucasian for years, and live as the white lives, but on returning to his tribe he will fall into the habits of savage life and will prefer that life." Indian Agent Gardner said, in an interview with a reporter for the Denver Tribune. And he instanced Chipeta, the wife of the Colorado Chief Ouray. She had little communication with the whites, but her husband taught her to live as they do. Her house was well furnished and provided with many conveniences that are luxuries in border life. She always had her cook and her table was supplied with good food, well cooked, served in an elegant platter and eaten with knives, forks and spoons. Ouray died in 1880. About a year ago Chipeta married again, and returned to the old ways of her childhood among her tribe. She has three trunks of valuables stored away in the agency warehouses. One of them is filled with silverware presented to her by the ladies of Washington. For those she has no use.

A PECULIAR clock, which marks the hours from one to twenty-four, has recently been completed by a Wilmington manufacturer. The new time-piece is of the kind soon to be adopted by several of the railroads. The most conspicuous innovations are in the marking upon the dial and in the movement of the wheels which run the hands. The minute hand, instead of making twelve revolutions to every revolution of the hour hand, as in the ordinary clock, makes twenty-four revolutions, while the hour hand makes a ground once. The figures upon the dial are marked in Arabic, instead of Roman numerals. They are from one to twenty-four inclusive, the spaces between the figures thus being only half as great as those on the dial of the ordinary twelve-hour clocks. The minute hand therefore marks the half minutes as well as the minutes. The railroads proposing to adopt the new system as a standard will prepare new time-tables, upon which the distinction between trains marked a. m. and those marked p. m., which is often over looked by careless travelers, will no longer appear.

THE women in the West have taken to drinking lemonade in the hope that it will prove fattening. They do not make it in the Oriental manner, of nurses' milk, however; but they put a quart of cows' milk into three pint bottles, dividing the quantity equally. They then add to each bottle two teaspoonfuls of white sugar and a quarter of a cake of compressed yeast; fix the corks securely, shake thoroughly, and let it ferment. It is 48 to drink at the end of a day, and will keep half a week in good condition. It tastes a good deal like hard cider, but has fizz and sparkle. Those who have consulted neon physicians pronounce it harmless because that it should be drunk at the rate of a pint a day. The Cincinnati Enquirer mentions the case of a girl who is engaged to be married. The date of the wedding is fixed for Christmas Day, with the odd condition, imposed by the respective bridegroom, that the bride shall at the altar weigh 125 pounds. She can't have recourse to the methods of jockeys, and bring herself up to the required standard by strapping pieces of metal to her body, nor will the ordinary devices of producing a speedy degree of rotundity to the eye of the casual observer answer the purpose. Accordingly she is now a hard drinker of lemonade.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

What the Girl Did Not Want.

Quoth he:
The Fan a fitful weaver,
And just a little peer,
My love is ever pure;
And should my love,
To prove her worth,
Go rambling
O'er all the earth,
In spite I'd pursue her.

Quoth she:
Alas! you never knew her,
Else now had hopes been fewer,
Take her! No more pursue her,
For woman-kind
Hath grown so fair
To rather bear,
And rather hate,
The name of 'pursue her.'
—Boston Times.

Too Shocking for Anything

"Isn't it shocking?" she said to George.

"Isn't what shocking, dear?" asked George, fearfully.

"Oh, I just think it is the most shocking thing I ever heard of."

"What is it? Pray tell me what it is that is so shocking," cried George, wild with curiosity.

"Electricity, love."

Crushed.

"How stupid I am," said Birdie McHenneplin, languidly, executing at the same time quite a respectable yawn act.

"That's true," reanacted Gus De-Smith, rather impolitely.

"Sir!" exclaimed Birdie, "you are impertinent."

"But you yourself just now asserted that you were stupid."

"I only said so without thinking," said Birdie, petulantly.

"Yes, and true to the time you spoke I had only thought so without saying it."

Ring crape on the door of Miss Birdie. Another lover scratched off the list of one of the Austin belles.—Texas Siftings.

Getting Rid of a Wife.

A native of the Fiji Islands presented himself to a missionary and humbly begged to receive the rite of baptism. "But," objected the priest, "you are a polygamist—you have several wives." "Only two." "That is one too many." "Good; I will get rid of one of them." "Keep the one that you have lived the longest with." "No, I prefer the other, she is the younger." "As you please." Eight days afterward the converted savage returned to the priest, with his face radiant with innocent joy. "Now, father," said he, "you can baptize me." "You have only one wife now?" "Only one, on my word." And he pointed to quite a pleasant-looking young woman who accompanied him. "And what has become of the other?" asked the priest. "Oh, I ate her."

Advice to a Young Wife.

Never disturb a man while reading his paper.

Never ask a tired man for anything while pulling on his boots.

Never speak to a man until he has had something good to eat.

Never discuss servants at table.

When you want anything wait until he has fished his breakfast, and then help him tenderly into his coat, and while behind him, smoothing his collar the right way, ask for it.

Never offer a man anything twice.

When he looks injured and plaintive examine his plate; there is sure to be a mystery.

Be careful not to be behind him if he stubs his toe in the carpet, because you will be in danger.

If he comes to breakfast looking on the eve of subs ask not the reason, for he will answer that he had but one towel.

If he dies on the sofa after dinner and sinks the house with his snores accuse him not of drinking, for he is merely thinking with his eyes shut.

If he says he is "going to the drug store for a headache, dear," bid him adieu for the evening.

If he loses his handkerchief in every way but that it leaves his nose in his own way about it, that the washwoman is dishonest without your knowing it.

If you want him to do anything never tell him it is good for him, for he will not be tied to a woman's apron string.

When he is ill ask not his complaint, but take to your darning.—Jewish Herald.

Women Who Own Millions.

The following list of the wealthy widows and ladies of New York have been carefully compiled:

Mrs. B. E. Allen, widow of the late B. E. Allen, estate worth $1,000,000.

Mrs. A. R. Anns, inheritance, $250,000.

Mrs. William H. Aspinwall, estate worth $1,500,000.

Mrs. John Anchincloss, estate worth $200,000.

Mrs. Harriet Banks, share of Legou estate, $50,000.

Mrs. Edmund Bayliss, share Robert Ray estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. A. S. Bedford, inheritance, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Catharine A. Beekman, Beekman estate, $600,000.

Mrs. Walton P. Bell (formerly Miss Meta Kane), $100,000.

Mrs. William T. Blodgett widow of the late W. T. Blodgett, estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Bowed, estate, $1,500,000.

Mrs. Bresse, inheritance, $750,000.

Mrs. Isaac Brunson, Brunson estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Theodore Bronson, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. James Brown, widow late James Brown, founder Brown Bros., estate, $5,000,000.

Mrs. Sarah Burr, estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Catharine A. Cammann, estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Samuel Carey, share Astor estate, $3,000,000.

Mrs. David Clarkson, inheritance, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Camilla Coddington, Coddington estate, $3,000,000.

Mrs. Henry A. Coit, inheritance, $600,000.

Mrs. Wm. Coleman, widow late Wm. Coleman, large Pennsylvania mine owner, estate, $2,500,000.

Mrs. Wm. F. Coles, Coles estate, $700,000.

Mrs. Thomas Colgate, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. Coster, Coster estate, $800,000.

Mrs. F. Brackholst Cutting, inheritance, $200,000.

Mrs. William E. Dodge, widow of the late philanthropist, estate, $2,000,000.

Mrs. Henry E. Drayton, widow of Henry E. Drayton, of Philadelphia, inheritance, $600,000.

Mrs. G. W. Elder, widow of late G. W. Elder, inheritance $250,000.

Mrs. Albert S. Gallatin, estate $1,000,000.

Mrs. Thomas Garner, sister-in-law to late Commodore Garner, and share in Garner estate, $10,000,000.

Mrs. C. A. Gerard, share Gerard estate, $250,000.

Mrs. Robert Goelet, Goelet estate, $2,000,000.

Mrs. George Graham, inheritance, $200,000.

Mrs. John C. Green, Green estate, $2,000,000.

Mrs. D. Henry Haight, inheritance, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Louis C. Hammersley, formerly Miss Pierce, of Troy, left a year since $2,000,000, but will contest instituted.

Mrs. Fletcher N. Harper, widow of F. N. Harper, of Harper Bros., share estate, $700,000.

Mrs. James Harper, widow of James Harper, publisher, estate, $500,000.

Mrs. Caroline B. Johnson, inheritance, $250,000.

Mrs. Mary Mason Jones, large estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Pierre Kane, inheritance, $500,000

Mrs. Edward D. King, King estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Peter V. King, King estate, $500,000.

Mrs. James F. D. Lanier, widow late J. F. D. Lanier, estate, $1,500,000.

Mrs. Marshall Lefferts, inheritance, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Anson G. Livingston, inheritance, $250,000.

Mrs. Isaac Lenox, large estate.

The Misses Rhinelander, share of Rhinelander estate, $1,500,000.

Miss Carrie Tallman, share estate lately largely depleted, $1,000,000.

Miss Harriet Weed, daughter late Hamlow Weed, journalist, $250,000.

Miss Catherine Wolfe, large estate, $2,000,000.—New York World.

A CHINESE BARBER'S

Scenes and Incidents During the Shaving of the Celestial Queue.

Twelve or more Celestials on lunks or pallets made up in a small room adjoining the laundry on Tenth street in Arch last night. In the next dingy apartment an old a unmarried Chinaman sat stool holding in his lap the fellow-countryman, whose stretched upon the floor. man grasped in his right hand slender steel blade, while in held a sponge saturated with Having lathered with great head which he held in his lap seemingly with the utmost work of shaving off a great apparently four or five days surrounded the tonsure, known in the vernacular as After his scalp had been shaved fully as a civilized man's face at a barber-shop, the latter upon arose and shuffled a room, each Chinaman in turn his hand over the shaven head pressing either by a grunt of satisfaction or dissatisfaction. When he had nearly made the of the Celestials disappear American and who seemed to familiarly fastidious, carefully the newly-shaved skin and ran his hand over it seemingly jumped up, uttering a discord and walked toward the light after him the man whose head examining. Everybody around under a lamp that string from a bamboo crossbeam a multitude of gestures was called forward and shaved small spot upon which a few been overlooked. He then took his place on the Chinaman again assumed his position and the job was ended the satisfaction of all.

When the last man was shaved he fell into a dozing bobbing suddenly to on and so the razor slipped several hours from the sleeper. The barber, as he witnessed dent, uttering an exclamation chinese jumped and then face. His knees assumed a supple One would have supposed pression of his face that he offended or terribly mistomer, for which act he is held in close custody. Then also awakened and, putting his head, uttered a plaintive which many surrounded him present. Each person examined with consternation pictured on his face.

The owner of the laundry, a English gilly, explained the Celestials' consternation. He said that the one who the shaving had cut off some the unfortunate man's pigtail, the greatest calamity that happened to the latter. It is belief of every Chinaman, be out for evil in this or the queue he would be kept out of the Flowery Kingdom when elected to go when he died particular man had lost. count, four hairs, he would be known in outer darkness death for four years. The explained that many other and customs were connected pigtail. He said that one could not offer a greater another than to pay him a was a hair wrapped around his was always considered extra and a mark of courtesy to person offered just before nal. In his pigeon English the landlord said that he would think of paying a visit to countrymen without shaving than one of the young men to would think of calling on shaven chinee, China-

Would Think He Life a Dog.

If George Washington could have come back and taken a stroll through the city he liberated a hundred ago, he would find many things changed. He would see stately buildings where he left straws; he would find paved to with telegraph wires and electricity, where he left cows would find many of the old landmarks above all, he would find just where they were before them out—namely, in pens. Why, he would say, there is a capitol of a different type; he might regard them as big barracks. The young man who has been supplanted by the he would find the city in possession of the Germans, portioned to buy their pe find English actors and actresses theaters, and would probably would find English names "Omaha" stamp in demand libraries. He would note here conts" in the park; and the he would look wonderingly at under English bounds. If he esteemed his ancestor many people hold the dial, to the country of the Father Washington would be apt existence as having been The Judge.

BALTIMORE cooks have a method of using bread crumbs. A cracker-dust to fry oysters in result is delicious.

E JOURNAL

CHAS. J. STRANG.

EVOIX. - - MICHIGAN.

-sel individuals in England ave a policeman to look From returns just published total number of "criminal still at large and not yet in jail over 20,000, while the number ons in England and Wales, over 12,000 for the metropolis a tile over 35,000 men. ge seems to be a nice balance, ge nearly one policeman to an his breaker. The total sh policeman is 84?80 a year.

gal number of cinchona trees d at the end of last year was while the crop was the large gathered, being 280,080 pounds 3 lbs. All this was sent to the except 41,800 pounds, which arded to London at the request retary of State, to be made ferent forms of febrifuge and erward returned for reporting purposes to India. The rev. Mr. Moses Taylor, who left Moses Taylor, share Lispenard estate, $800,000.

Mrs. Robert L. Stuart, widow late L. L. Stuart, sugar merchant, estate, $2,500,000.

Mrs. Robert Stuyvesant, share Stuyvesant estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Moses Taylor, widow late Moses Taylor, sugar merchant, banker and railroad king, share estate, $8,000,000.

Mrs. Isaac Townsend, widow late Isaac Townsend, merchant, estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Smith T. Van Buren, estate $600,000.

Mrs. Daniel E. Van Valkenburgh, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, widow late Commodore Vanderbilt, share estate, $5,000,000.

Mrs. Robert T. Woodward, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. John E. Zimmerman, formerly Miss Furniss, share estate, $250,000.

There are also several unmarried women possessed of great wealth in New York whose names are as follows:

Miss E. Blatchford, sister of Judge Blatchford, inheritance, $1,000,000.

The Misses Furniss, share large estate, $1,000,000.

The Misses Hamilton, inheritance, $500,000.

Miss Selina Hendricks, inheritance, $1,000,000.

Miss Sarah Hitchcock, share large estate, $1,500,000.

Miss Lenox, sister of the late James Lenox, share of estate, $1,000,000.

The Misses Rhinelander, share of Rhinelander estate, $1,500,000.

Miss Carrie Tallman, share estate lately largely depleted, $1,000,000.

Miss Harriet Weed, daughter late Hamlow Weed, journalist, $250,000.

Miss Catherine Wolfe, large estate, $2,000,000.—New York World.

-ed Stuyvesant, share Stuyvesant estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Moses Taylor, widow late Moses Taylor, sugar merchant, banker and railroad king, share estate, $8,000,000.

Mrs. Isaac Townsend, widow late Isaac Townsend, merchant, estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Smith T. Van Buren, estate $600,000.

Mrs. Daniel E. Van Valkenburgh, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, widow late Commodore Vanderbilt, share estate, $5,000,000.

Mrs. Robert T. Woodward, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. John E. Zimmerman, formerly Miss Furniss, share estate, $250,000.

There are also several unmarried women possessed of great wealth in New York whose names are as follows:

Miss E. Blatchford, sister of Judge Blatchford, inheritance, $1,000,000.

The Misses Furniss, share large estate, $1,000,000.

The Misses Hamilton, inheritance, $500,000.

Miss Selina Hendricks, inheritance, $1,000,000.

Miss Sarah Hitchcock, share large estate, $1,500,000.

Miss Lenox, sister of the late James Lenox, share of estate, $1,000,000.

The Misses Rhinelander, share of Rhinelander estate, $1,500,000.

Miss Carrie Tallman, share estate lately largely depleted, $1,000,000.

Miss Harriet Weed, daughter late Hamlow Weed, journalist, $250,000.

Miss Catherine Wolfe, large estate, $2,000,000.—New York World.

-ed Stuyvesant, share Stuyvesant estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Moses Taylor, widow late Moses Taylor, sugar merchant, banker and railroad king, share estate, $8,000,000.

Mrs. Isaac Townsend, widow late Isaac Townsend, merchant, estate, $1,000,000.

Mrs. Smith T. Van Buren, estate $600,000.

Mrs. Daniel E. Van Valkenburgh, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, widow late Commodore Vanderbilt, share estate, $5,000,000.

Mrs. Robert T. Woodward, inheritance, $500,000.

Mrs. John E. Zimmerman, formerly Miss Furniss, share estate, $250,000.

There are also several unmarried women possessed of great wealth in New York whose names are as follows:

Miss E. Blatchford, sister of Judge Blatchford, inheritance, $1,000,000.

The Misses Furniss, share large estate, $1,000,000.

The Misses Hamilton, inheritance, $500,000.

Miss Selina Hendricks, inheritance, $1,000,000.

Miss Sarah Hitchcock, share large estate, $1,500,000.

Miss Lenox, sister of the late James Lenox, share of estate, $1,000,000.

The Misses Rhinelander, share of Rhinelander estate, $1,500,000.

Miss Carrie Tallman, share estate lately largely depleted, $1,000,000.

Miss Harriet Weed, daughter late Hamlow Weed, journalist, $250,000.

Miss Catherine Wolfe, large estate, $2,000,000.—New York World.

month incarceration. Small protends that he is an actor, formerly connected with one of the Romany Rye companies, and denies that he was guilty of the charge on which he was arrested. While in prison he amused himself by writing eccentric letters to various papers in which he referred to himself as "the gilt-edged horse-thief."

DETROIT Free Press: The great American liars from Erie, Pa., and Texas have evidently formed a partnership and established branch offices in all the chief towns and cities. They are turning out copy fast. We have only time to note the story of a sparrow which catches six ducks every day, taking hold of them with its bill, shaking them as a dog does a rat, and then throwing them over its head; of a young man in Alabama, who for several years was always considered extra and a mark of courtesy to person offered just before nal. In his pigeon English the landlord said that he would think of paying a visit to countrymen without shaving than one of the young men to would think of calling on shaven chinee, China-

Would Think He Life a Dog.

If George Washington could have come back and taken a stroll through the city he liberated a hundred ago, he would find many things changed. He would see stately buildings where he left straws; he would find paved to with telegraph wires and electricity, where he left cows would find many of the old landmarks above all, he would find just where they were before them out—namely, in pens. Why, he would say, there is a capitol of a different type; he might regard them as big barracks. The young man who has been supplanted by the he would find the city in possession of the Germans, portioned to buy their pe find English actors and actresses theaters, and would probably would find English names "Omaha" stamp in demand libraries. He would note here conts" in the park; and the he would look wonderingly at under English bounds. If he esteemed his ancestor many people hold the dial, to the country of the Father Washington would be apt existence as having been The Judge.

BALTIMORE cooks have a method of using bread crumbs. A cracker-dust to fry oysters in result is delicious.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

The Young Seamstress.

"I am learning how to sew," said an eager little miss;
"I push the needle in and out, and make the stitches straight;
I'm sewing blocks of patchwork for my dolly's pretty bed,
And mamma says the way I work it will not take me long.

It's over and over—do you know
How over-and-over stitches go?

"I have begun a handkerchief; mamma turned in the edge,
And basted it with a pink thread to show me where to sew.
It has Greenaway children in it stepping stately by a border;
I look at them when I get tired, or the needle pricks, you know.
And that is the way I learn to hem
With hemming-stitches—do you know them?

"Now I shall learn to run, and darn, and back-stitch, too, I guess,
It wouldn't take me long, I know, if I wasn't for the thread;
But the knots keep coming, and basted or hemmed I have to endure—
Sometimes I slip my thimble off, and use my thumb instead!
When your thread knots, what do you do?
And does it hurt all beneath, too?

"My papa, he's a great big man, as much as six feet high;
He's more than forty-five, and his hair has gray mixed with the black;
Well, he can't sew, because I begin to sew as well as I.
If he loses off a button, mamma has to set it back!
You mustn't think me proud, you know,
But I am seven, and I can sew!"
—Mary L. B. Branch, in St. Nicholas.

The Value of Tact and Presence of Mind.

"Jingo! there's five more pair to black; I'm awfully tired, too; guess there must be a good many strangers came to-day!"

And with a tired yawn Jack picked up a brush and began brushing vigorously.

Jack was bootblack at a large hotel in New York city, and he often had many a pair of boots to black after the guests had retired for the night, and his arms began to ache and his eyes grow heavy.

Before he had finished the last he had just taken up something very like a puff of smoke outside the window caught his eye. The window looked out upon the yard, and the smoke hung along a cellar window under the kitchen. In an instant there was another curl of smoke and the noise of breaking glass, and a glow was visible.

Jack dropped the boot and brush, and ran toward the office. In the corridor he met a night watchman, told him, and then ran to the desk and told the clerk, who instantly touched an electric fire alarm. Jack did not linger, but ran to the street corner and rang the alarm from the box.

Meanwhile 150 guests and fifty employes were suddenly awakened from sound sleep by the loud ringing of the electric bells in every hall.

The proprietor was up in an instant, gave instructions to the porters and watchmen to ring loudly on every door and inform the occupants that as yet there was no danger. Men, women and children rushed into the halls, some only partially dressed. As they reached the lower hall they were met by the smoke which was penetrating from it, and the frightened people gathered in the reception-room at the other side of the building. Three fire engines promptly responded, and the firemen discovered that the fire was in the laundry, and that it made but little headway.

They soon turned the hose onto the flames, and in a short time had them under control. And as to Jack, honest Tom the fire which had begun so quickly to eat its way up into the large building, and which, but for the presence of mind exercised by Jack, might have cost many lives, and great loss of property, was entirely quenched. The proprietor assured the guests that all danger was passed, and persuaded them to go to their respective rooms.

The ladies and children retired feeling truly grateful to the boy who had so courageously managed to prevent any danger coming to them.

The gentlemen lingered in the corridor, Jack was the center of attraction, and had to tell over how he happened to discover the fire. They decided that a boy of such presence of mind, and through whom a great calamity was prevented, was worthy of recognition.

So they immediately made up a collection and offered to Jack, who had been fated to accept, saying it was no more than his duty. But he was finally persuaded to take it. Thanking the donors, he said:

"I'll take it for only one reason, and that is it will give me a chance to go to school and learn. I often wanted to go to school, but as I have no father or mother I had to earn my own living."

When the gentlemen heard this they said, "He is worthy of an education, and one of the gentlemen was appointed guardian, the money was given in his charge, and Jack was told he would be cared for by him until he had finished his education.

Needless to say that Jack is a happy boy at school now, and improving every hour in learning that which he had so longed for.—City and Country.

White Hands.

It was the evening before commencement at Mt. Pleasant seminary. Six young ladies of the graduating class were gathered around a window overlooking the pleasant grounds, and talking eagerly about the future. Their plans were various, ranging onward, still no thought of grief or sorrow. Wealth, admiration, fame, were among the attainable. Music and art would each learn its devotee. One would continue her studies at a higher institution; another would become the mistress of a beautiful home.

One had just spoken, and when the question, a second time, was asked, patiently, "Louise, what are your plans?" her answer was eagerly awaited.

"I shall help my mother," said quiet Louise. "Oooh, we all mean to do that," said one; "but what plans have you? You can't mean just to stay at home in a jolly way and not try to do anything?" "Girls," said Louise, "I do mean to do just that; for the present, at least, my business shall be to help my mother in any way that it is possible for me to help her."

A glance at the puzzled faces around her, and she continued: "Shall I open my heart to you a bit and let you read a sad page from it? You remember Stella Morton? You remember that I once visited her during vacation. Her home was very pleasant, and a large family of brothers and sisters made the days pass merrily. Our pleasures kept us so much out of doors that we saw little of Mrs. Morton—a delicate, quiet lady, always ready to bestow sympathy when needed. I noticed that the girls were not so tidy and helpful about the house as I had been taught to be, but as I did not see it was simply all deficiencies I thought little about it. One day a picnic had been planned, and I heard the girls impatiently commenting upon the illness of the one servant, as it threw upon them some disagreeable household duties. How Mrs. Morton ever accomplished the delicious lunch we ate that day, only such overworked mothers can explain: the little assistance given by Stella and Alice must have been most unsatisfactory.

"We returned by moonlight, so tired that we went to our rooms without seeing anyone, if indeed anyone was up at that hour. Beyond-by I don't know how long we had slept—a frightened voice called Stella, who shared my room, and soon we all knew that gentle, tired Mrs. Morton was alarmingly ill. At sunrise she was gone, without hearing the voices so, full of love and sorrow. Girls, I can't describe Stella's grief; sisterless for me, a delicate hand beside the thin, toil-stained dead one, and said: 'See, Louise, at what cost mine is so fair; and I have been vain of my white hands.' She kissed the cold fingers again and again.

"One day I found Stella at her mother's work-table holding up some unfinished piece, evidently left in haste. 'Louise,' she said, 'mother asked me to do this, and I really meant to; oh, why didn't I do it at once?'

"You can understand what an impression all this made upon me, and when, a few days later, I was called home by the illness of my own mother, the feeling was intensified. Mother was very ill, and as hope grew fainter my distress was hardly less than Stella's. One night when my sister and I were too anxious to sleep, I told her about Stella, and we then pledged ourselves to take from mother every possible care, and to make our home our first object. To make the promise more binding and real we exchanged rings. Mother's illness made it seem more natural and easy at first, and everything moved on so smoothly that I really think she regained her health more quickly. All the mending and sewing was done promptly under her direction, and we always silenced her by saying that we liked to do it. She seldom knew what is prepared for tea or breakfast; we beg her not to inquire, for we know that she enjoys little surprises. The boys and the dear baby are better and happier for having so much of her time and attention.

"Last summer I visited Stella again. She is the light of the home. Only for the discipline I had passed through could I understand how she was able to accomplish so much. Once when I expressed something of this to her, her eyes filled with tears as she asked, 'Do you suppose that she can tell us that she knows what I am trying to do? She thinks me not fair and delicate, but I thought them many beautiful. Why, girls, I never see a pretty hand now without wondering if it has a right to be fair and white. So I am going to help mother; I shall be happy because I know it is my duty.'

As Louise finished speaking the entering bell sounded. Not a word was spoken, but the kiss that each bestowed upon the flushed face of the excited speaker told of the impression her words had made. Those mothers alone can tell whether the influence was lasting.

Keep Your Hat On.

No person, especially in this country, where there is always more or less breeze stirring, should walk, or ride for that matter, to a funeral, and stand around the grave during interment with his head uncovered.

There is not the slightest doubt that a person attending the burial of a friend has implanted the very seeds which will cause disease over them in a short time to assume a like position over his remains, possibly the very next subject for a similar demonstration. Then, keep your hats on, and rest assured that you are on the side of science and health, and no one with a sufficient supply of good judgment will doubt your sincerity and respect on such occasions for that simple bread of ancient and modern etiquette. Scientific Californian.

Ignorance of the Catechism.

"Do you know who came to save sinners?" asked a Bible teacher of an honest Dutchman who occupied a seat in the class. "I heard it was God," said Hans. The questioner shook his head. "No, no, my good Hans; it was one other, the Son of God." "Oh, oh! So it was one of the poys? I tought it was the ole man," replied Hans.—The Judge.

Keep Your Hat On.

No person, especially in this country, where there is always more or less breeze stirring, should walk, or ride for that matter, to a funeral, and stand around the grave during interment with his head uncovered.

There is not the slightest doubt that a person attending the burial of a friend has implanted the very seeds which will cause disease over them in a short time to assume a like position over his remains, possibly the very next subject for a similar demonstration. Then, keep your hats on, and rest assured that you are on the side of science and health, and no one with a sufficient supply of good judgment will doubt your sincerity and respect on such occasions for that simple bread of ancient and modern etiquette. Scientific Californian.

Ignorance of the Catechism.

"Do you know who came to save sinners?" asked a Bible teacher of an honest Dutchman who occupied a seat in the class. "I heard it was God," said Hans. The questioner shook his head. "No, no, my good Hans; it was one other, the Son of God." "Oh, oh! So it was one of the poys? I tought it was the ole man," replied Hans.—The Judge.

DIAMOND CUTTING.

Chicago Is the Largest Diamond Market in the Country—Fine Facets in the Cases.

"Diamond cut diamond" is an old adage, and literally true, for a diamond is the only thing that will cut a diamond.

There is a kind of mystery about a diamond—its unknown origin, its incomparable brilliancy and indestructibility—that is fascinating to the average mind.

An old legend says: "Diamonds are the teardrops of the gods shed over the fallen estate of man, and crystallized into indestructible gems of beauty, to become a source of pleasure to the children of men," and to this day it is the "emblem and symbol and bond" of a "section of Paradise," which surround "two loving hearts that beat as one."

A "diamond in the rough" is not "a thing of beauty." It requires the skill of a great artist to develop its hidden fires and rainbow tints. It requires an expert and practiced eye to discern by the latent light in the stone, the formation of its crystals, its angles, and reactions, to tell you just what manipulation will be necessary to bring out its greatest power, and then, after this plan is decided upon and laid out, an expert and practiced hand is required to bring out its latent beauty in proper proportion of lines and angles.

Many stones are spoiled in cutting, and it is safe to say that not more than 10 per cent of diamonds are cut to show their best—to show the light that is in them.

Until within a few years diamonds have been cut principally in Amsterdam, and the phlegmatic Dutchman, with his primitive machinery—the same now that was in use 200 years—cut them only for pay, at so much per carat, and his only effort and desire was to get his money as quickly and easily as possible.

The beauty of the stone was nothing to him, and it was merely a matter of chance if a stone came from the cutter perfect in shape and finish.

This kind of work did not suit the American market. It is a by-word among London and Paris dealers that "Americans will have the best," and consequently all the best goods were reserved for American buyers.

A few years ago some enterprising Americans started diamond cutting in Boston and New York, at first importing the Dutch workmen and machinery, but very quickly improved on the machinery, and put care and skill into the Dutch method, and now an "American cut stone" is a brand of excellence, and brings a better price than the foreign cut. Very many of the latter are being recut, and frequently double in price per carat after recutting.

A State street jewelry firm, appreciating the importance of this, have added a diamond cutting department to their business, and thus we have a new industry in the West. Chicago is probably the greatest diamond market in the country, handling and distributing more diamonds than any other point, and why may it not become as great a diamond-cutting city as Amsterdam?

We expect some day, not in the distant future, to see Chicago the great diamond market of the world, as it already is the largest center for grain and produce.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Great, but a Failure.

A loving, gentle boy was Samuel Taylor Coleridge. When he was an old man, known as poet, philosopher and conversationalist, his tender, gracious, benign face made his friends adore him. The sympathetic nature of the boy shines out in an incident of his school days. He was rushing through the street to be in time for school, when he ran against an old woman's apple-stand and upset it.

"Oh, you little devil!" she shouted after him, as he rushed on.

Looking back, he saw the mischief he had done. Instantly he returned, and, gathering up the scattered fruit, apologized for his heedlessness.

"Oh, you little angel!" exclaimed the indignant woman, as she patted his head.

He carried the same loving heart through life, but not the same energy to amend the blunders of his own life. He attracted great men by his spacious, subtle intellect, and fascinated them with his marvelous power of "talk."

Wilson, the severest of critics, spoke of Coleridge's conversation as "eloquent music without a discord; full, ample, inexhaustible, almost divine." In his loftiest moods he spoke like one inspired. The ear was delighted with the melodious words that flowed from "an opcane in sound." But there was little nourishment in these musical utterances of one who seemed to have given himself up to "the lazy luxury of pastoral composing."

Though Coleridge was the best of talkers, he was the worst of doers. In deference and open ostentation he made this discrepancy. His slavery to what he called "the oversexed drug" impaired his mind and embittered his life. His genius was mastered by his indolence. He never learned that no genius is great enough to exempt its possessor from patient industry.

His friends environed him with great expectations. He died fulfilling scarcely any of them, because he had to offer the industry which he was steadily nor the energy that makes one achievement a stepping-stone to higher attainments.

Such a life is full of warning to young men of genius. It says to them: "You will fail, unless you begin in youth to bend your neck to the yoke of persevering industry, and keep your self free from the slavery of an evil habit."

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 3, 1884.

Local Business Notices.

For Sale.—Two or three good horses for sale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON

Ely means COST when he says COST. Come and see.

All grades of Shingles at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

HOUSE TO RENT.—On the terms near O. B. Weed's. Inquire at the store. W. J. BRADLEY.

APPLES and Onions by the barrel and bushel at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

FOR SALE.—A second-hand portable saw mill, with engine and boiler complete, for sale cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

Highest CASH price paid for cedar Ties and Posts. UPRIGHT, EMREY & CO.

ELY is selling all leather goods in Men's Boots and Women's shoes and slippers AT COST.

Now is the time to buy a CHEAP SUIT of Clothes. Upright, Emrey & Co. have about fifty suits left.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of J. MILO EATON.

Farm Produce of every description taken in exchange at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

Come down to ELY'S and find out what COST is on Boots and Shoes. 2

The only store in town who make a specialty of Gents' Fine Hats, is Upright, Emrey & Co.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the Thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day, for the week ending yesterday:

	7AM	2PM
Thursday	12	14
Friday	16	26
Saturday	23	28
Sunday	26	22
Monday	16	20
Tuesday	3	15
Wednesday	10	18

News Brevities.

Write 1884.

Five new subscribers for a New Year sended.

Logs are moving into Nicholls' mill yard at a lively rate.

The channel is filled with ice, and both fish tugs have laid up for winter.

The Boyne Statesman says that wheat was sown in this county on Dec. 26th.

An empty can marked "10 gals. alcohol" was recently received by O. B. Weed & Co.

The band boys had a very pleasant and successful party, both socially and financially.

The Charlevoix iron company are making repairs to the machinery of the Lloyd L. Hugo.

It has been intimated that one of the pieces of New Year's day was the abduction of a colored usher.

A fire in Howard City Tuesday night destroyed 25 business buildings. Loss $75,000, insurance $9000.

Mr. H. B. Chapman will please accept thanks for a set of photographs advertising his property at Bay Springs.

An article on "Food Fish," prepared for this issue, and partly in type, is crowded out by holiday matter. It will appear later.

T. D. Smith went to Milwaukee on the tug S. S. Coe. A telegram on Wednesday announced their safe arrival on Tuesday night.

A press of holiday matter somewhat discourages our usual modesty this week. If this thing should continue, an enlargement would be necessary.

The Good Templars' entertainment announced for Friday evening, has been postponed on account of bad weather, date to be announced hereafter.

"The JOURNAL uses trenchant words for a local commemorative with the infamy attractions of Charlevoix as a summer resort."—Kalamazoo Telegraph

Miss L. Spaulding's milliner, Mrs. DePue, has gone to Grand Rapids to attend to friends, but will return in time for spring work when the season opens.

During the past week we have heard frequent expressions of a belief in better times with the opening of the new year. Incourage this belief will make the times better.

The entire reading matter of these seven pages has been put in type by the editor and wife since Wednesday noon, besides caring for the family and other home work. We haven't played any to speak of.

Mr E. H. Green, with his oldest son and daughter, have gone to Maytown, Pa., to attend the golden wedding of his parents. He will be absent about three weeks. Travis Sanford was left in charge of his office.

Among the callers at the Fountain City house, Dr. Crocker's, and other old residents, on Tuesday, were several parties of dense shadows of the forest. A few years ago New Year was a great day for farm help.

Hiram Weed and Lizzie C. Skinner, both of Charlevoix, were married by Rev. C. F. Van Aiken, at the residence of the bride's parents, on Wednesday evening, January 1st, at 7:30 o'clock. Numerous presents were received.

The throat is often diseased on account of catarrh, producing dryness and a constant desire to cough. That tickling sensation and the hoarseness that is so annoying to public singers and speakers especially, is relieved at once by Hamilton's Cough Troches, which are prepared from the best expectorant remedies. Try and be convinced of their merits. Sold by druggists at 25 cents a box. 1

A dilapidated cutter drawn by a raw-boned horse weeping a cow bell, and driven by a bare-headed girl, with a fellow who looked as if he was lost, or wanted to go home to his ma, was one of the features of Bridge street on New Year.

Farmers are interested in having a gristmill in Charlevoix, because it will save them the long drive to Petoskey. It has been suggested that perhaps some of them would be willing to take shares in a stock company if one was organized here.

"Mr. W. J. McGeogh, of the saw and grist mill located three miles from Charlevoix, made us a call last Saturday. Mr. M. is talking of putting in a handle factory at his place, and came here to see about purchasing machinery."—Petoskey Democrat.

"Among the passengers on the Charlevoix stage Tuesday morning were two ladies from London, England, and a gentleman from North Carolina. The latter had not taken a sleigh ride before in 20 years. Oh, how he shivered!"—Petoskey Democrat.

The pastor of the M. E. church will give his second apocryphyl sermon next Sunday morning, subject, "The New Heaven and New Earth." At night will be the introduction of the week of prayer, subject, "Launch out into the Deep." All who can come are cordially invited.

We have here a mild climate. The Grand Rapids, Petoskey, Journal records as below, and a private letter from Black River Falls, Wis., mentions 35° below on Dec. 26th. Compare this with the figures on this page, and the fact that the mercury has not yet been down to zero here this winter.

Mrs. Jane Sherman, aged 85 years, died at the residence of her daughter, on Sunday evening, and was buried yesterday. She was born in Ireland, removed to near Toronto, Canada, at the age of 18, and to Charlevoix three years ago. She has not been well for a year past but was confined to her bed only about a week prior to her death.

No. 25 of the new Detroit Times is just at hand, and the first we have seen of that sheet. Typographically, it is almost a counterpart of the Chicago Herald, which means that it is a little beauty. It contains 28 columns of choice condensed news, all for two cents. If you want a morning newspaper from Detroit, without politics, the Times is the best for the price.

Messrs. E. C. and L. C. Tubbs, of Wayne and Cheaming, Mich., have been prospecting in Charlevoix the past week, and express themselves pleased with the town. One of the gentlemen has a friend, a practical miller, now operating a rated gristmill, who wants to own a mill in such a town as this, and Mr. Tubbs thought he would come and look over the prospects here.

Why waste time and money on that which does no good? Your children have worms, and are cross, always hungry, sleepless, puny and weak from the presence of worms in the stomach which prevents the food being taken up to nourish the body. Parmelee's Sanative Worm Candies will dissolve and remove the worms and the result will be well. You cannot do better to give your children them to attend to their health. Price 25 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

One of the most disgusting sights between Charlevoix and Petoskey is the many loads of grain that go there to market, which would come here if we had a gristmill. It is safe to say that every man spends a large portion of the price of every load of grain or other produce he puts to town in his outfit. A gristmill would not only save for Charlevoix merchants what now goes to Petoskey, but would become at once an industry and increase many-fold in value.

Hating and starving, it is all the same, for one cannot get enough to eat. A worse torture can be conceived of. Hind or itching piles are unequaled for annoyance, but by a few applications of Parmelee's Pile Ointment they entirely disappear. The kind is often resorted to by physicians for the removal of protruding piles, but such barbarity is not a necessity for Parmelee's Pile Ointment does not according to directions speedily relieve, applies and directions cure. Warranted to cure. Price 50 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

At home and abroad, at church and theatre, in the counting house and work room, in fact everywhere is heard that hacking cough which soon develops into congestion or inflammation of the lungs, bronchitis, pneumonia, and consumption. He wise in time. Immediate relief and cure can be cheaply obtained. Hamlin's Wizard Oil Balsam will never give you relief from these direful and long troubles that often terminate in death. Instant relief in croup and all forms of whooping cough. Your children may live and will be greatly benefited. Price 25 and 50 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

"The JOURNAL publishes Charlevoix people to patronize outside papers that advertising here is useless and disadvantages. That's good advice, and the editor of Upright, if he will be so impolite, will have no subscribers in that village. The Telegraph gives more news of that locality than all other Michigan papers combined outside of that county."—Kalamazoo Telegraph. True enough. The copy of the daily containing the above reached the office the day before it was issued, and a private letter from Black River Falls, Wis., mentions 35° below on Dec. 26th. Compare this with the figures on this page, and the fact that the mercury has not yet been down to zero here this winter.

Mrs. Jane Sherman, aged 85 years, died at the residence of her daughter, on Sunday evening, and was buried yesterday. She was born in Ireland, removed to near Toronto, Canada, at the age of 18, and to Charlevoix three years ago. She has not been well for a year past but was confined to her bed only about a week prior to her death.

No. 25 of the new Detroit Times is just at hand, and the first we have seen of that sheet. Typographically, it is almost a counterpart of the Chicago Herald, which means that it is a little beauty. It contains 28 columns of choice condensed news, all for two cents. If you want a morning newspaper from Detroit, without politics, the Times is the best for the price.

Messrs. E. C. and L. C. Tubbs, of Wayne and Cheaming, Mich., have been prospecting in Charlevoix the past week, and express themselves pleased with the town. One of the gentlemen has a friend, a practical miller, now operating a rated gristmill, who wants to own a mill in such a town as this, and Mr. Tubbs thought he would come and look over the prospects here.

Why waste time and money on that which does no good? Your children have worms, and are cross, always hungry, sleepless, puny and weak from the presence of worms in the stomach which prevents the food being taken up to nourish the body. Parmelee's Sanative Worm Candies will dissolve and remove the worms and the result will be well. You cannot do better to give your children them to attend to their health. Price 25 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

One of the most disgusting sights between Charlevoix and Petoskey is the many loads of grain that go there to market, which would come here if we had a gristmill. It is safe to say that every man spends a large portion of the price of every load of grain or other produce he puts to town in his outfit. A gristmill would not only save for Charlevoix merchants what now goes to Petoskey, but would become at once an industry and increase many-fold in value.

Hating and starving, it is all the same, for one cannot get enough to eat. A worse torture can be conceived of. Hind or itching piles are unequaled for annoyance, but by a few applications of Parmelee's Pile Ointment they entirely disappear. The kind is often resorted to by physicians for the removal of protruding piles, but such barbarity is not a necessity for Parmelee's Pile Ointment does not according to directions speedily relieve, applies and directions cure. Warranted to cure. Price 50 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

At home and abroad, at church and theatre, in the counting house and work room, in fact everywhere is heard that hacking cough which soon develops into congestion or inflammation of the lungs, bronchitis, pneumonia, and consumption. He wise in time. Immediate relief and cure can be cheaply obtained. Hamlin's Wizard Oil Balsam will never give you relief from these direful and long troubles that often terminate in death. Instant relief in croup and all forms of whooping cough. Your children may live and will be greatly benefited. Price 25 and 50 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

"The JOURNAL publishes Charlevoix people to patronize outside papers that advertising here is useless and disadvantages. That's good advice, and the editor of Upright, if he will be so impolite, will have no subscribers in that village. The Telegraph gives more news of that locality than all other Michigan papers combined outside of that county."—Kalamazoo Telegraph. True enough. The copy of the daily containing the above reached the office the day before it was issued, and a private letter from Black River Falls, Wis., mentions 35° below on Dec. 26th. Compare this with the figures on this page, and the fact that the mercury has not yet been down to zero here this winter.

Mrs. June

A THANKSGIVING TRAGEDY.

BY EUGENE FIELD.

James sat down to eat his dinner
On a bright Thanksgiving day,
And he murmured, "I will tackle
Everything that comes my way."
"James," his mother gently warned him,
"James, you mustn't eat too much—
You will find it dangerous business,
Eating turkey, quail and such."

James paid no attention to her,
Save to give a passing frown,
But continued doing business—
Putting all the viands down:
Venison, partridge, duck and pullet,
Lobster, goose and chicken pie—
Salads, sauces, nuts he vanished
In the twinkling of an eye.

"Come, my son," exclaimed the father,
"You have eaten quite enough;
If you'll catch a dreadful colic
I'll disclaim on such a stuff."
All in vain—his heir appointed
Would not listen unto him,
But continued mastic'ating—
Naughty, foolish, silly Jim!

Bigger, bigger grew his stomach,
Filled with pies and cake and meat—
Squealer, antler, clutter, plunger—
Still he did not cease to eat.
When at last appeared the pudding,
James-indulged a smothered groan—
"Darling, are you sick?" his mother
Queried, in no anxious tone.

Into the foolish little fellow
Shoved one hand as to his head
And the other upon his stomach—•
Then he fell down dead.
Upon inspecting his remains
Mamma shrieked and tore her hair;
Pa, before assembling parties,
James had climbed the golden stair.

O'er the cause a local explosion,
Leading it oft James somewhere—
Filled too full of truth-some viands,
He had lorded all to thunder!
And for several weeks they lid-ored
The mouth of James was found
Dwellers a modest corner
In the family burying-ground.
—Chicago Daily News.

OUTWITTING A MOONSHINER.

BY N. C. FARLEY.

For months we had been following up what seemed a hot trail.

The Government had got wind of an illicit distillery hidden somewhere away in the wooded fastnesses of a certain locality in Kansas—that shall be nameless at present—and I had been detailed, with several others, to run it down and bring the offenders to justice. But so far they had eluded long grasp.

During the last three or four weeks, however, we had hovered pretty close upon its discovery. Several times lately I had received such accurate information as to the locality of the still that each time we had moved upon the works fully expecting to capture the moonshiners actually engaged at their unlawful business. But disappointment only crowned our efforts. In every instance we found where they had been working, but nothing more. It almost seemed as though they were gifted with supernatural powers, for they not only successfully eluded capture, but they showed by various manœuvers at different times that a knowledge of the plans made by the Government was familiar to them. There was certainly treachery somewhere, though I could not decide where.

The long day was fast drawing to a close, and having been in the saddle since early morning I was thoroughly tired out, and drawing rein before a cabin hard by, asked for a night's lodging, with supper and breakfast. To my surprise the rooster of the house—if house it could be called, after glancing sharply at myself and horse, gruffly took me ride on, adding that he had neither room nor food for a stranger. Being in anything but a good humor in the first place, his rough dismissal served to completely destroy the little stock of good nature that remained to me at the end of my day's travel.

This is a specimen of the famous Kansas hospitality, is it? I asked angrily. This makes the fourth time in the last three hours that I have been refused food and lodging. And yet you fellows boast that your latchstrings are always out to the traveler.

It must be that there's a sort of differ-ence in trav'lers," was his laconic reply, as he glanced wonderingly at my waistcoat. A sudden suspicion of the truth flashed across my mental vision, and following his eye my suspicions were verified, for there, only partially concealed by my top-coat, which was unbuttoned, on account of the heat, shone my badge.

Inwardly cursing my stupidity, and resolving to make mistakes in the future, we started on, though the poor beast was too badly spent to take any gait faster than a walk.

Jogging on, tired to death, and still pondering over what was a mystery to me, I saw far on ahead in the fast gathering gloom of the approaching night a bright light, shining like a star in the distance.

The horse gave a joyful whinny and quickened his pace. It was not long before we drew up before a small stone cottage.

Taking care to hide my badge before going in, I once more applied for food and shelter.

A youngish woman answered my knock on the door, but my request was met with the usual demurrer.

"My horse has given out, and I am exhausted and starving," I insisted, pushing my way into the room. "You shall be well paid for your trouble."

"But my husband is not at home and won't be until to-morrow," she objected.

"Forty husbands, for that matter, madam, couldn't improve my comfort any if they were all at home. Just give me a corn-pone and a cup of Kansas coffee, with a bucket to sleep on, and room in your barn for my horse, and I'll be all bright and early in the morning."

"Better let him stop ma'am," spoke up a big-hulking fellow in the side of the log place. "It's a good lot to, any how, and there'll be a storm before mornin' if I don't miss my guess."

The woman put her head out of doors and glanced anxiously at the sky.

A great black cloud that had been slowly crawling over the hill tops was now hanging lowering overhead.

Knowing how quickly storms gather in that locality, and having had evidence on several occasions of the awful destruction of life and property caused by them, I too glanced uneasily at the heavens.

"Joman," cried the woman quickly, as if she had at last made up her mind to accept the inevitable, "take this man's horse to the barn and feed it, and he can sleep with you in the little room off the kitchen."

The hired man, for such he was, led my horse away, and I sat down before the fire.

A good supper was soon smoking before me, though over and anon my hostess peered out through the small window, evidently greatly worried at the approaching storm.

Joman returned from his trip to the barn, and taking up the seat opposite mine, challenged me to a friendly game of checkers. He was by no means a poor player, and we were deeply engaged in what we called the "rubber," when we were all startled by a strange, roaring noise.

"A cyclone," screamed the hostess frantically, lifting a trap door and disappearing in the cellar; "come down for your lives!"

But there was no time for escape. Even as her head went down out of sight, the roof of the house was lifted up, and we were caught by some terrible power and carried whirling away, with terrific force.

Boards, stones and trees, and every conceivable thing went grinding and whirling through the air with us.

How long this lasted I never could tell. Gasping and struggling for breath, my first sensation was that of drowning; then in an almost senseless condition my body was suddenly dashed with stunning force to the earth and left there. During all this time there was a frightful roaring noise, and a rushing together of two great bodies, as of two vast armies struggling for a victory. It was an awful moment. Groaning with agony, I realized what had befallen me. To be caught up in a Kansas cyclone was bad enough, but to be caught in chasing a Kansas moonshiner to cover.

The storm, however, did not stop for any comments of mine, but went on over the hills, shrieking and whirling and crashing through the forests, leaving havoc and desolation in its track. I was wedged into a tree top, and here, shivering in the chill air, I spent the night.

Joman's body, nothing unusual had happened. Picking my way along as best I could, I went to a barn not far away, which, having been located outside the storm path, I got a dog out from Denver to play the part of a Siberian blood-hound. He was a big, sneaking animal, who looked as if he had small self-confidence and self-respect. The first time the company played the comedian had to drag the dog on with a rope. When he saw the lights and stage rocks and fired at Legree, the dog, instead of barking loudly and springing forward to seize the fugitive, sneaked off into the wings and hid behind the scenery. At the next stand, and at a critical point in the play, the dog jumped into the stage river and tried to drown himself. He was evidently not an animal that would be contentiously called before the curtain. The leading man said that something must be done. Time and time again times spoiled the best situation in the play. Harris proposed that the dog be moved two or three times to make him ferocious. The company made the jump of four days to the next town. The actors started out on a long Indian trail with the dog—scenery and the dog in the wagon. The property man gave the dog nothing but a pint pail of water and an oyster cracker a day. When the players reached the grand opera house at Leadville, the dog was chained in a dark cellar under the theater. The property man who went down to get him in the evening found him chewing his chain. His eyes were bloodshot and his tail wagged mournfully. He was brought on the stage in a condition of sullen ferocity. Legree had the center of the stage, talking down in the aisles of his boots. Harris was on the rocks, chewing his lines and breathing fire. Marks stood by Legree with an umbrella. Enza was floating wildly in the river on a cake of ice.

Legree was even more terrible than usual. He flourished his strip around his head. In one of its flourishes it hit the dog on the tail. The animal, with a horrible yell, jumped high in the air and attacked the actors. He made a wild grab and tore off Marks' coat tails. He ripped Uncle Tom's coat down the back. He snatched the wig off of St. Clair. He bit off a mouthful of Legree's trousers, and started up the rocks, making the gravel fly for Harris. Harris fired at the dog one shot which sounded the leader of the orchestra, and ran, with the animal bounding after him. The play became realistic and the audience howled with delight. Harris climbed up the side of a piece of scenery. The dog leaped on the ice and seized Eliza. She dropped her baby and ran. When the curtain came down, the stage was deserted. The dog was standing on a cake of ice, chewing a gutta percha colored baby. In the next act the dog was taken out into the back yard and shot by old Uncle Tom, while Eva looked on.—Exchange.

The Broken Pane.

It was spring time. The buds were bursting into blossom—the birds sang joyfully as they built their nests—the green grass was hiding the ugly scars of winter. A child's pale face peered through a broken pane out upon the glorious sunshine and the soft wind kissed her cheeks and whispered:

"By and by!"

Outside the house was life and health and happiness. Inside was sickness, sorrow and poverty. Child though she was, the shadows had settled down about her as the fog gathers round the ship which the rocks thirst to destroy. There were children there, but no childish laughter. The sunshine streamed into the bare rooms, but it warmed no hearts. It was a poor widow's struggle against that gaunt, grim shadow whose other name is poverty. Hunger and cold and rags dwarf the body, and give the pallor to the face of one limited for years by an implacable enemy. Despair will waste whoever dares enter the struggle, and anxiety leaves its mark so plainly that no one can mistake it.

The child of 12 had known nothing but shadows, grim, silent, stealthy shadows, ever since she came into life to rob it of every happiness. Even as she looked out upon the glorious world she felt that she was no part of it. It was around her, but beyond her reach.

It was midsummer. Every tree was a thing of beauty—every flower a silent tribute of praise to the Creator. The grass had become a velvet carpet—the blossoms were young fruit—the sun was sending his warm rays into the darkest corners. The world was joyous under the blue skies of summer as the pale face again looked from the broken pane. Out in the world around her the children shouted in their glee. In the dark old house one child lingered for bread—the same struggle for bread—the same burdens and anxieties and bitterness of heart. The child had grown paler, and the haunted look had climbed every other expression away. Her eyes saw the trees, the flowers, the streets, the busy world and its happiness, and her ears heard the summer breeze as it softly whispered:

"By and by."

What would it bring? What is the by and by to those hunted by hunger and striving against poverty?

One day when the north wind shrieked and moaned and the snowflakes whirled and flew, another face appeared at the broken pane. It was that of a boy who could not resist the temptation to look in. He was poorer but than he had ever seen—in a room so cold and bare and cheerless that he shivered as he stood there. The sunshine of the child who had looked out upon the spring and summer. The snowflakes which struck in at the broken pane were no whiter than her face. There was no smile to cloak its coldness, but around the mouth were lines of pain, and deep in the hazel eyes were whispering. "Snow and poverty and despair have beckoned and cut short a young life. Have you?"

The soft winds had whispered: "By and by." It had come. In life the child—in that boy's eyes would be lightened her sorrows and made her heart braver. They had come too late. —M. Quad.

Cold Feet.

Some men will jump into bed after coming late and pull their bare feet over against their wife, who has fallen into a gentle, peaceful sleep. She dreams of bossing a polar expedition for about a second when she awakens to a realization that her cold-footed and cold-hearted husband is making a warming-pan of the small of her back. About this time, in many cases, it becomes decidedly sultry for the husband. Then he is sorry he ever made a mistake, and after solemnly promising never to do it again, and to keep his feet entirely by day hereafter, he goes generally quiet. All of that vast expanse, exceeding many times in area Homer and the Vedas and the Bible all together, was, at any rate until the later periods, the growth of oral tradition, for which he had indeed a memory, and yet it was carried from century after century, in the mouths of long-lived bards, who had committed to writing the old memories continued in the schools. Indeed, it was not entirely erased even now, for my friend, Dr. Gottheil, of New York, tells me he has had in his study a man who has known the entire Talmud by heart, and can take it up at any word that is given him, and go on repeating it syllable by syllable, without hesitation and with absolute correctness.—Hereditary Quality.

Influence of Kind Words.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath," and not unfrequently, changeth it into gentleness. An impressive illustration of the transmuting power there is in gentle words once occurred to De Quincey. When a lad of 17 he was walking on the outside of a stage coach. By his side was a rough fellow, too, for the first four or five miles, who amused and annoyed by occasionally pulling sleepy and nodding against him that the coach rolled to his side. The young man ejaculated his complaint at intervals in no gentle words. At last the fellow pulled De Quincey gently apologized, exclaiming that he was ill and could not help it. Instantly the tone and manner of the young man changed. When the fellow awoke—for he had fallen asleep—he found himself lying in the arms of the young man, who, "warm on with care and work, on a sum of business of importance, was yet so tender of the sufferings of others as to watch by a stranger, and support him with the fraternal arm of sympathy." Kind words can never be lost.

The Band Played On.

There has been writing in India for 20 years now, yet the custodians of Vedic traditions have never trusted it. They trust, for the perfect preservation and transmission of the sacred books, to disciplined memory. They have manuscripts, they have even printed text, but, says Max Muller, they do not learn their sacred lore from them. They learn it as their ancestors learned it thousands of years ago, from the lips of a teacher, so that Vedic succession should never be broken. For eight years in their youth they are entirely occupied in learning this. They learn a few lines per day, repeat them for hours, so that the whole lesson resounds with the words, and does they strengthen their way to that degree that, when their specific ship is finished, you can open the book at any page, and find any passage you like, any word, any accent. And as Muller shows, from rules given in Vedic themselves, that this oral handing of them was carried on, exactly as now, at least 500 B. C. Very much the same was it with those rude and clumsy ballads which the Talmud ordinarily grew up. All of that vast expanse, exceeding many times in area Homer and the Vedas and the Bible all together, was, at any rate until the later periods, the growth of oral tradition, for which he had indeed a memory, and yet it was carried from century after century, in the mouths of long-lived bards, who had committed to writing the old memories continued in the schools. Indeed, it was not entirely erased even now, for my friend, Dr. Gottheil, of New York, tells me he has had in his study a man who has known the entire Talmud by heart, and can take it up at any word that is given him, and go on repeating it syllable by syllable, without hesitation and with absolute correctness.—Hereditary Quality.

Influence of Kind Words.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath," and not unfrequently, changeth it into gentleness. An impressive illustration of the transmuting power there is in gentle words once occurred to De Quincey. When a lad of 17 he was walking on the outside of a stage coach. By his side was a rough fellow, too, for the first four or five miles, who amused and annoyed by occasionally pulling sleepy and nodding against him that the coach rolled to his side. The young man ejaculated his complaint at intervals in no gentle words. At last the fellow pulled De Quincey gently apologized, exclaiming that he was ill and could not help it. Instantly the tone and manner of the young man changed. When the fellow awoke—for he had fallen asleep—he found himself lying in the arms of the young man, who, "warm on with care and work, on a sum of business of importance, was yet so tender of the sufferings of others as to watch by a stranger, and support him with the fraternal arm of sympathy." Kind words can never be lost.

JINGLES.

KEEN SIGHT.

There is an old lady in Lynn,
Who has such a very long chin
She often hangs on it
Her shawl and her bonnet,
When in a friend's house she goes in.

There is a young lady in Lowell,
Whose sight is so keen she can see well
Without any light,
In the darkness of night,
And over the fact she can crow well.
—Somerville Journal.

STATIONERY POETRY.

Why did the penciller so light,
And lift the paper cutter so?
When Papa Terry knew 'twant write
To have a ruler for a la an.
Why did the inkstand blily by,
And note that things weren't straight?
It should have tried to mister sky,
And make the paper weight.
—Merchant Traveler.

A WINTER ETCHING.

Frosty sidewalk
White and slick,
Man in shell
Walking quick,
Hands in pockets
Elbows heavy,
Nose down hill
Exceeding steep.
Heel strikes sad head,
Ground flies
Man in air.
With bulging eyes.
Hands in pockets!
Won't out;
Awful moment—
Hope ain't made,
Hope abandoned,
Hands objected—
Inquest in
The court-house hold.
—Eugene Field, in Chicago News.

HOMEOPATHIC SOUP.

Take a quart of leg-mind, the driest merely,
Put it in a vessel filled with water nearly.
Stand it off of doors in a place that's shady,
Let it stand a week—or less if for shady,
Put a teaspoonful of the liquor into the kettle.
Which must not be of tin, or you loser metal
Fill it with water—set it on a boiling—
Strain the liquor well to prevent it oiling.
Put in one grain of salt,
If you want it flavory;
Stir it twice around with a stick of savory.
When the soup is done nothing can excell it,
Then three times a day let the patient swell it.
If he chance to die say 'twas nature did it—
If he chance to live—give the soup the credit.

TO AN ATHLETE!

Oh, J. Sullivan! oh, J. L. Sullivan!
Oh, John Lawrence Sullivan, oh, ball!
Thou bottomless inimitude! Thou god, Thou you!
Thou Zeus with all-compelling hand!
Thou glow of Thor's red hair round all! Thou Bacchus-born!
Thou Albion lord! Thou light of the Anglo!
Thou son of a gamdolier!
Fifty-nine inches round thy chest!
Twain knuckles luse thou! and all twice twain.
Thou scattrest men's teeth like antelope dew
Thou straightest thine arm, and system-ically and irresistible strikest only sent Oh, thou grim granulator! Thou soul-nor Thou lightsome, yet powerful!
Thou cooing dove! Thou stroll, droll John!
Bon bonier!
Oh, you! Oh, me too! Oh, me some more!
Oh, thunder!!!

STITCH, STITCH, STITCH.

A woman sat perched in a chair,
Close to the window where
Stitch, stitch, stitch!
Nothing away in the gloom.
Two little girls are playing
Ache-ing a crystallized cream;
Their mommies thoughts are staying
Stitch, stitch, stitch!
Yo-o calm and peaceful,
Far over the heights and away,
While, with a quick, sharp ripple,
How the new dime rippled by, plee,
While she is sewing, stitching,
All the way up and down,
Then vowed a speedy and sweet retribution.

Under pretense of looking for the woman, I left Jonas and reconnoitered.

The stable was built on a hill-side, and every detail had been so cleverly arranged that, but for Jonas' confession, the place would have passed the closest scrutiny without exciting the least suspicion. Luckily, I found my hostess still in the cellar, though more dead than alive, with fright, and getting her out of the debris that surrounded her, for the house had been completely demolished, I got on my horse and rode away to summon help.

It is not to be supposed that grass grew to any very great height between my departure and my return.

Luckily my men were stationed at no great distance off, and, rallying them together, we visited the scene of the storm.

When I got back the owner of the place had just returned to what was left of his home. With his wife, he was surveying the ruins as I rode up and accosted him. It didn't take me two seconds to recognize my quondam friend and informant, and the recognition was mutual, though he had no idea of what was in store for him.

"You haven't got those fellows yet?" said he, as I drew rein beside him.

"No," said I calmly, "but thanks to your hired man, I soon will have them," and quicker than lightning my men gathered round him, and before he fairly realized what had happened we had the handcuffs on his wrists. Before going into the barn where the hired man still lay on the hay, I purposely left my badge in a conspicuous place in order to watch the effect it would have upon him.

His face was a sight to behold when his eyes first lighted on that tell-tale star.

He gasped a little, then he raised partly up on his elbow, and shaking his fist at me, growled out:

"You was a blamed sight more than a match for me, you was; Darn yer picter. I'd ha' torn yer livers out'n yer carcass of I'd suspected such a thing last night when ye was talkin' to me, but I thought Missis was right; she wanted to send you off on yer business, an' now I wish I'd a let her done it; I do, by gosh!"

We seized ten barrels of whisky and all the various accouterments with which to run it, and, leaving only sent the two offenders to prison, but captured more of the gang shortly after, including the leader, a Denver fence.

The dog became realistic and the audience howled with delight. Harris climbed up the side of a piece of scenery. The dog leaped on the ice and seized Eliza. She dropped her baby and ran. When the curtain came down, the stage was deserted. The dog was standing on a cake of ice, chewing a gutta percha colored baby. In the next act the dog was taken out into the back yard and shot by old Uncle Tom, while Eva looked on.—Exchange.

NATURALLY clocked stockings are the most striking.

What the Human Memory Can Do.

There has been writing in India for 20 years now, yet the custodians of Vedic traditions have never trusted it. They trust, for the perfect preservation and transmission of the sacred books, to disciplined memory. They have manuscripts, they have even printed text, but, says Max Muller, they do not learn their sacred lore from them. They learn it as their ancestors learned it thousands of years ago, from the lips of a teacher, so that Vedic succession should never be broken. For eight years in their youth they are entirely occupied in learning this. They learn a few lines per day, repeat them for hours, so that the whole lesson resounds with the words, and does they strengthen their way to that degree that, when their specific ship is finished, you can open the book at any page, and find any passage you like, any word, any accent. And as Muller shows, from rules given in Vedic themselves, that this oral handing of them was carried on, exactly as now, at least 500 B. C. Very much the same was it with those rude and clumsy ballads which the Talmud ordinarily grew up. All of that vast expanse, exceeding many times in area Homer and the Vedas and the Bible all together, was, at any rate until the later periods, the growth of oral tradition, for which he had indeed a memory, and yet it was carried from century after century, in the mouths of long-lived bards, who had committed to writing the old memories continued in the schools. Indeed, it was not entirely erased even now, for my friend, Dr. Gottheil, of New York, tells me he has had in his study a man who has known the entire Talmud by heart, and can take it up at any word that is given him, and go on repeating it syllable by syllable, without hesitation and with absolute correctness.—Hereditary Quality.

Influence of Kind Words.

"A soft answer turneth away wrath," and not unfrequently, changeth it into gentleness. An impressive illustration of the transmuting power there is in gentle words once uttered by De Quincey. When a lad of 17 he was walking on the outside of a stage coach. By his side was a rough fellow, too, for the first four or five miles, who amused and annoyed by occasionally pulling sleepy and nodding against him that the coach rolled to his side. The young man ejaculated his complaint at intervals in no gentle words. At last the fellow pulled De Quincey gently apologized, exclaiming that he was ill and could not help it. Instantly the tone and manner of the young man changed. When the fellow awoke—for he had fallen asleep—he found himself lying in the arms of the young man, who, "warm on with care and work, on a sum of business of importance, was yet so tender of the sufferings of others as to watch by a stranger, and support him with the fraternal arm of sympathy." Kind words can never be lost.

An Interesting Patent Suit.

Nelson Lyon, of Albany, N. Y., has recovered judgment of $48,000, against H. T. Fisher & Co., in the U. S. circuit court, at Detroit, Mich., for an infringement of Lyon's Patent Metallic Reed Stiffener. This construction is one of the most useful of modern inventions, and has materially increased the demand for American manufactures, having been so adopted in Europe. The invention consists of a steel metal plate fastened to the underside of a boot or shoe heel, arranged to prevent the counters from breaking over and the heel from wearing down unevenly. The Attorney General of the United States declared the Lyon patent invalid on account of an interference in the application. This was afterward reversed by the commissioner of Patents in accordance with a special act of Congress directing it. Action was commenced in May, 1881, a perpetual injunction was obtained by the complainant and the case was referred to a master, who reported the damages as $48,000, but on motion the court doubled the same and directed judgment to be entered against defendants for such double damages, with interest and costs.

Nothing Like It.

No medicine has ever been known to relieve pain in the extent of all those diseases arising from an impure condition of the blood as Scovill's Sarsaparilla, or Blood and Liver Syrup, for there one of sarsaparilla with aromatic and other roots, barks, herbs, flowers, seeds, berries and gums, which are absolutely free from poisonous substances. It is a compound which has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world, and has given more complete satisfaction than any other. Sold by druggists.

Cured a Clergymen.

Rev. L. S. Canfield of Circleville, Kan., says: He Warner, your White Wine of Tar Syrup has done in my family and myself all and more than you claim of it. It is a speedy cure for all Throat and Lung diseases.

The medical properties of petroleum have not been known to the scientific, and Shiloh's Cure does the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Sold by druggists.

Nothing Like It.

No medicine has ever been known to relieve pain in the extent of all those diseases arising from an impure condition of the blood as Scovill's Sarsaparilla, or Blood and Liver Syrup, for there one of sarsaparilla with aromatic and other roots, barks, herbs, flowers, seeds, berries and gums, which are absolutely free from poisonous substances. It is a compound which has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world, and has given more complete satisfaction than any other. Sold by druggists.

Cured a Clergymen.

Rev. L. S. Canfield of Circleville, Kan., says: He Warner, your White Wine of Tar Syrup has done in my family and myself all and more than you claim of it. It is a speedy cure for all Throat and Lung diseases.

The medical properties of petroleum have not been known to the scientific, and Shiloh's Cure does the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Sold by druggists.

DR. SCHENCK'S
PULMONIC SYRUP,
SEAWEED TONIC,
& MANDRAKE PILLS.

As the proprietor of these medicines I cannot conscientiously offer them to the public as safe, reliable and certain remedies for the Cure of Consumption, and with equal confidence as that a superior dinner pill will relieve one of the body, which it might kill, I recommend to invalids and all diseases of the lungs. I desire that the use of my remedies will cure Consumption.

I do not claim that they can cure all the diseases of the lungs no doubt will, but no one can even know even one, but I assert as the first cause of Consumption are curable, even when the lungs are partially decayed. When the liver is out of order, the lungs are sure to become affected, but that they are incurable, or that my remedies will not cure them, I do not claim, nor do I believe any one else does.

It may be asked, How is it, that you can know so much about this disease, and profess to cure it, when so many eminent physicians say that it is incurable? I answer, by close attention to the study of the disease, and how to cure it, when I first commenced the practice of medicine, I was taught by the best physicians that Consumption was incurable, and I was by the same authority taught that it was a family disease, and that it was hereditary in the system, and that when one of a family died of Consumption, the rest must die, and I believed it. But in the course of many years' practice, I found that I was losing a large per cent. of my patients, and I began to think for myself, and to reason from cause to effect, and I found that Consumption was not always hereditary, and that it was not always incurable, and that it was not always fatal. I found that the reason why it was not always hereditary was because the cause that produced it in the parents was not always entailed upon the children, and that the reason why it was not always incurable was because the cause could frequently be removed, and when removed, the disease would disappear, and the patient would get well, if the lungs were not too much decayed, and I found that the reason why it was not always fatal was because the cause could frequently be removed, and when removed, the disease would disappear, and the patient would get well, if the lungs were not too much decayed, and I found that the reason why it was not always fatal was because the cause could frequently be removed, and when removed, the disease would disappear, and the patient would get well, if the lungs were not too much decayed.

I do not claim that my remedies will cure Consumption in all cases, for I am aware that there are cases of Consumption that are beyond the reach of medicine, but I do claim that my remedies will cure a majority of the cases that are now considered incurable, and that they will cure more cases of Consumption than any other remedies now known to the public. Because they are the only remedies that will cure Consumption by purifying the blood, and by curing the diseases of the liver, which is the cause of Consumption in the majority of cases. Any person who is afflicted with Consumption, or any disease of the lungs, liver, stomach, throat, or blood, can write me, and I will give them my opinion of their case, and what my remedies will do for them, free of charge. Any person who is afflicted with Consumption, or any disease of the lungs, liver, stomach, throat, or blood, can write me, and I will give them my opinion of their case, and what my remedies will do for them, free of charge.

DR. SCHENCK'S MEDICINES:
MANDRAKE PILLS,
SEAWEED TONIC,
and PULMONIC SYRUP

Are sold by all Druggists, and full directions for their use are printed on the wrapper of every package.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Me.

BIG PAY to sell our rubber hand stamps. Terms free. Taylor Bros. & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 to 1 assortment. Cost 30 cents. Particulars FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

WANTED experienced Book and Bible Agents in every county in the United States. Address, with reference, P. O. Box 1, Chicago, Ill.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for pricelist. Agents wanted. L. Wigs sent by express. LYON & HEATH, 11 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Elicit For Business or Pleasure, Actual Commercial College, Circular free. Actual Business Practice. Davis & Jaques, Chicago, Ill.

MEN MAKE $100 to $300 per Month and WOMEN A.G. Nellieton & Co., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of hose with HEEL and TOE complete in 20 minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy work. Price only $20. Send for circular and terms to agents. Address Crescent Knitting Machine Co., 367 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

CONSUMPTION.

Have you a cough, cold, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, or any affection of the throat, lungs, or chest, that cannot be relieved by Piso's Cure? If you have, why will you neglect it? Piso's Cure for Consumption is the best remedy. Sold everywhere. 25 cts.

AN OPTICAL WONDER

For pioneers and prospectors.

A NEW, original, and inventive, but progressive and liberal proposition. Pamphlet, explanatory, free. Agents wanted everywhere. Address, DR. A. A. STOCKER, 161 Franklin, New York.

SHARP PAINS

HOP PLASTER

Will relieve them at once. Strengthening, Soothing and Invigorating. Hop Plasters are the best pain-killing, strengthening, soothing and invigorating Porous Plaster ever made. Hop Plasters are sold by all druggists and country stores generally. Price 25 cts.; five for $1.00. Mailed on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Co., Proprietors and Manufacturers, Boston, Mass.

An Open Secret.

The fact is well understood that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT is by far the best external known for man or beast. The reason why becomes an "open secret" when we explain that "Mustang" penetrates skin, flesh and muscle to the very bone, removing all disease and soreness. No other liniment does this, hence none other is so largely used or does such worlds of good.

DR. SCHENCK'S MEDICINES:
MANDRAKE PILLS,
SEAWEED TONIC,
and PULMONIC SYRUP

Are sold by all Druggists, and full directions for their use are printed on the wrapper of every package.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Me.

BIG PAY to sell our rubber hand stamps. Terms free. Taylor Bros. & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 to 1 assortment. Cost 30 cents. Particulars FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

WANTED experienced Book and Bible Agents in every county in the United States. Address, with reference, P. O. Box 1, Chicago, Ill.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for pricelist. Agents wanted. L. Wigs sent by express. LYON & HEATH, 11 Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Elicit For Business or Pleasure, Actual Commercial College, Circular free. Actual Business Practice. Davis & Jaques, Chicago, Ill.

MEN MAKE $100 to $300 per Month and WOMEN A.G. Nellieton & Co., Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of hose with HEEL and TOE complete in 20 minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy work. Price only $20. Send for circular and terms to agents. Address Crescent Knitting Machine Co., 367 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

CONSUMPTION.

Have you a cough, cold, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, or any affection of the throat, lungs, or chest, that cannot be relieved by Piso's Cure? If you have, why will you neglect it? Piso's Cure for Consumption is the best remedy. Sold everywhere. 25 cts.

AN OPTICAL WONDER

For pioneers and prospectors.

A NEW, original, and inventive, but progressive and liberal proposition. Pamphlet, explanatory, free. Agents wanted everywhere. Address, DR. A. A. STOCKER, 161 Franklin, New York.

SHARP PAINS

HOP PLASTER

Will relieve them at once. Strengthening, Soothing and Invigorating. Hop Plasters are the best pain-killing, strengthening, soothing and invigorating Porous Plaster ever made. Hop Plasters are sold by all druggists and country stores generally. Price 25 cts.; five for $1.00. Mailed on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Co., Proprietors and Manufacturers, Boston, Mass.

ALLEN'S Lung Balsam!

A GOOD FAMILY REMEDY!
—THAT WILL CURE—

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP,

CONSUMPTION.

CONSUMPTION.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM

Is harmless to the most delicate child! It contains no opium in any form!

Recommended by Physicians, Ministers and Nurses. Every bottle warranted to give satisfaction. It never fails to bring relief.

As an Expectorant it has no Equal.

SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE DEALERS.

$100 A MONTH "Hard Cash and How to Get It" The BEST all-Canvassers outfit. Terms Liberal. If you mean business, address, with stamp, Sacks. Waterbury Watch Co., Waterbury, Conn.

ORGAN AGENTS

Wanted in every County.

BEECHER, TEMPLETON & CO., 161 State Street, CHICAGO.

KIDNEY-WORT

THE SURE CURE

FOR

KIDNEY DISEASES, LIVER COMPLAINTS, CONSTIPATION, PILES, AND BLOOD DISEASES.

PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT HEARTILY.

"Kidney-Wort is the most successful remedy we have ever used."—Dr. P. C. Bailey, Monkton, Vt.

"Kidney-Wort is unequaled."—Dr. H. Clark, St. Peter, Vt.

"Kidney-Wort has done me more good than anything I have ever taken."—Dr. C. S. Bennett, Burlington, Ia.

IN THOUSANDS OF CASES

It has cured where all else failed. It will cleanse the whole system of poisonous humors. It will restore healthy action to the Liver and Kidneys, and will build up the broken down system. It has specific action upon these organs. It has been prescribed for years by leading physicians. It is now recommended by the best men in the country. It is purely vegetable, and is the strongest, yet safest remedy ever known. It is put up in dry vegetable form, in tin cans, one package of which makes six quarts of medicine. Also in liquid form, very concentrated, for those who cannot readily prepare it. Both forms are equally effective. Ask your druggist for it. Price, $1.00 (liquid or dry). Sold by druggists. Dry can be sent by mail.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington, Vt.

KIDNEY-WORT

TO OWNERS OF HORSES!

Do you not know that a horse is ordinarily dead does not have the feeling which nature intended. For travel on pavements hard and stony as is some pavements for horses' feet is necessary, but ordinary shoeing is made more cruel and injurious. It throws the entire weight of the horse on the concave rim of the hoof alone, and to remove it entirely from the sensitive frog, the latter exposed to injury from mud, gravel or ragged stone, so much so that shoeing is liable to stop at any time. The result in thousands of cases is that the horse becomes lame from contraction, corns, thrush, quitter or sore feet. Ordinary shoeing is wrong in principle and injurious in its practice. It is little better for a horse than would be a shoe with only a ring for the wall to rest upon. A horse can be shod so that the pressure can be distributed just as it would be were the horse standing barefooted on the turf, and at the same time a rational space given for the natural impulses and expansion of the parts. This can be done by using the LOCKIE HORSESHOE PAD, the principal feature of which is a steel sole-leather sole placed between the heel and the line, as seen in the cuts. The LOCKIE PAD is used and indorsed in and manufactured by BEHR BROS. and several well-known horse-shoers and trainers; HI. W. SHEPARD and scores of well-known veterinary surgeons; H. V. HIRMS and scores of well-known horsemen; C. J. LONG and scores of well-known lawyers. Hundreds of horse-shoers indorse it. Save your horse by saving his feet. Its proper location to expand his feet. Make him much more a thinker by giving him always a safe, sure and springy footing. Increase his speed, endurance and speed, improving his temper, and straighten the disposition to do his prettiest and best. Then and then only are you making the LOCKIE PAD, and every one indorses it. Every horseowner is cordially invited to call and have horses shod with the PAD, or write for full particulars. We will show some lame horses with the PAD, and if they are not cured we charge you nothing. Liberal discount to the trade. All horseowners can apply the PAD without license.

LOCKIE HORSESHOE PAD COMPY.,
ALBERT CROSBY, Prest. D. McLEAN, Manager.
OFFICES: N. E. Cor. N. Clark and Kinzie Sts.,
Rooms 1 and 2, CHICAGO, ILL.

CATARRH SURE CURE

CANCER INSTITUTE

AURORA ILL.

Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and Skin Diseases, without the use of the knife. Pamphlet free. Dr. F. E. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

PATENTS

NO PATENT NO PAY
U. S. & FOREIGN. Patents, Caveats and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business attended to for MODERATE FEES. Our office is opposite the U. S. Patent Office, and we can obtain patents in less time than those remote from Washington. Send model or drawing. We advise as to patentability free of charge, and make no charge unless we obtain patent. We refer to the Postmaster, the Supt. of Money Order Div., and to officials of the U. S. Patent Office. For circular, advice, terms and references to actual clients in your own State or County, write to C. A. SNOW & CO., Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

TO SPECULATORS.

E. LINDBLOM & CO., N. G. MILLER & CO.,
Grain Commission Merchants,
52 Sheldon Building, 52 Sheldon Building,
Chicago. New York.
GRAIN & PROVISION BROKERS.

Members of all prominent Boards Exchanges in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee.

We have excellent private leased wires between New York and Chicago. Will execute orders on our Chicago or New York Boards of Trade, or on any exchanges. ESTABLISHED 1873.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 3, 1894.

What Congress Costs.

The total number of employees and subordinate officers of the house is 277, divided as follows: Under speaker, 35; clerk, 33; doorkeeper, 153; sergeant-at-arms, 8; postmaster, 16; journal clerks and messengers to committees, 51; reporters, 7.

The speaker's salary is $6,000 with a private secretary at $1,800 and two clerks, one at $1,600 and the other at $1,400. The chaplain of the house receives $900, the clerk of the house $4,500; doorkeeper $3,000; sergeant-at-arms $4,500; postmaster $2,500. The subordinates to the above officers are enumerated, 7 official reporters at $5,000 each; 6 clerks at $4,000 each; 4 at $2,500; 3 at $2,250; 26 at $2,000; 4 at $1,800; 7 at $1,600; 2 at $1,500; 7 at $1,440; 47 at 1,200; 44 at $1,000; 16 at $900; 11 at $840; 43 at $720; 11 at $600; 2 at $500; 29 at $400. These salaries aggregate nearly $350,000, to which add the salaries of the 326 congressmen at $5,000 each and we make the discovery that simply the personnel of the house costs the country nearly $2,000,000 per annum, or an average of about $20,000 per each day in session.

The senate side of congress have a larger proportion of aids than the house, there being a total of 202 subordinates to 78 senators. There are in the vice-president's office 2, chaplain 1, secretary's office 31, sergeant-at-arms 98, engineer's department 10, post office 7, clerks to committees 48, official reporters 5, their salaries being, the president of the senate $8,000; his secretary $2,500; and messenger $1,440. The chaplain receives $900; the secretary of the senate $6,000; sergeant-at-arms $4,500; postmaster $2,250; and engineer $2,150. Below these there are 2 clerks at $3,000 each, 7 at $2,500; 30 at $2,250; 2 at $2,000; 5 at $1,800; 42 at $1,440; 10 at $1,200; 11 at $1,000; 21 at $900; 1 at $840; 32 at $720; 6 at $600; 20 pages at $400; and 5 official reporters at $5,000 each, the roll aggregating $2,054,000. The 78 senators receive annually $468,000, making the personnel of that branch of congress cost the people three-quarters of a million dollars annually.

The above figures include only the salaries, and do not represent the aggregate expense of congress, which averages in total about $47,000 for each days session.

The personnel of the senate averages $10,000 to each senator, while that of the house reaches only $6,000 to each member. If the house indulged in the same rate of expenditure that does the senate, it would cost $2,250,000 a year for the personnel of the former body, against $2,000,000, its present expense.

The average number of days that congress is in session during a year is about one hundred, of four hours each day, a total of four hundred hours per annum, at an expense of $10,000 per hour, or $166.66 per minute. The comparative cost to England for its parliament is about $50,000 per hour, or $30 per minute.

Don't Read This.

To every person who will pay us three dollars in cash in advance for two years' subscription to the JOURNAL we will present one year's subscription to that peer of all weekly papers, the Detroit Weekly Free Press, which also includes that best of ladies' papers, The Household. In view of the fact that next year occurs another great political struggle, and the desire of every true patriot to be fully informed on the vital issues of the hour, we think no better offer than this can be made. It is equivalent to three papers for the price of one, or rather, the getting of two papers as interest on one year's subscription in advance. There is no better weekly paper published than the Detroit Free Press, and every subscriber to that paper gets free a copy of The Household, devoted, as its name indicates, to matters pertaining to the home and fireside, and is in every respect a paper for the ladies.

Remember, three dollars pays for the JOURNAL two years, and secures the Free Press and Household one year free. Subscribe now. Sample copies may be seen at the JOURNAL office.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. Prevent disease and take up the cash on you will find Farmer's Guide, Poultry invaluable. Full points Breeds, Management, Veterinary, Etc. 576 pages, 300 Illustrations. Price only $1.75. Send for extra terms to agents. Address HENRY HOWARD, Publisher, Detroit, Mich.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: HARBOR AND SUMMER RESORTS.

Advantages of Charlevoix

Charlevoix, the county seat of Charlevoix county, is a flourishing village of about 1,800 inhabitants, located on both banks of Pine River, between Round Lake and Lake Michigan. Nearly all branches of business are represented, yet a few others could be profitably added. Any of the various mills for manufacturing hardwood lumber, including handles, wooden bowls, chairs, agricultural implements, and farm wagons, will find an abundance of first-class timber easily accessible. Among the attractions are two summer resorts, which are annually visited by thousands of people. The climatic advantages are unexcelled, and they who have passed one or more summers at these resorts, recuperating their strength and securing a new lease of life, are most enthusiastic in their praise of the place. Sufferers from hay fever and asthmatic difficulties find here a sure relief. The shores of Pine Lake and Lake Michigan afford an excellent bathing place. The privileges for boating and fishing cannot be excelled by any other locality. In their season, lake trout, black bass, pickerel, perch, and herring abound in the waters adjacent to the village, while the gamy speckled trout, the fisherman's delight, make the cold waters of the Jordan and Boyne rivers, as well as those of several smaller tributaries of Pine Lake, their favorite haunts. No rivers in the lower peninsula are as famous for their choice trout as the Jordan and Boyne. The scenery from any point of view on Pine Lake is one of surpassing loveliness. The surrounding country offers great inducements to progressive young farmers who desire to build homes for their families. There is an abundance of maple, elm, beech, basswood, ash, hemlock, and cedar timber, which, with our facilities for manufacturing and shipping, generally more than pays for clearing the land. Unimproved lands are held at from $7 to $15 per acre, while improved farms average from $15 to $20 in the interior, and from $25 to $100 near Charlevoix. The principal crops are winter wheat, oats, corn, hay, clover, potatoes, and root crops. The summer resorts at Charlevoix furnish an excellent market for all sorts of garden vegetables. All fruits do well, excepting grapes and peaches. The hardier kinds of apples are especially successful and the price for the same is generally higher than the same kind of fruit grown further south. Charlevoix county is at the northern extremity of the celebrated Michigan fruit belt.

A correspondent of the Toledo Blade, writing from Charlevoix under date of Dec. 15th, says: "Among the many fine places in the northern part of the southern peninsula is Charlevoix county, situated between Grand and Little Traverse bays. This region possesses the finest natural advantages, being located on Lake Michigan, with two large lakes extending across the country, navigable for the largest vessels, making shipping facilities unexcelled. Immense tracts of valuable hardwood timber cover the country. The soil is capable of producing the finest wheat, oats, potatoes and grass. Vegetables grow to perfection. Apples, cherries, pears, and plums do well. Finest strawberries in the world, and they rarely fail. Climate moderate and equable compared with more southern latitudes. Ground never freezes to any depth. Last winter the coldness was only 15° below zero, while this winter thus far has not been colder than 18° above zero. Summers are pleasant, with cool nights. Climate very healthy. Fish of the best varieties in abundance. Farmers of small means can make themselves homes here with fewer disadvantages than in the west from the first, while capitalists can find many chances for profit. Charlevoix is a village of eighteen hundred and offers a rare chance for a flouring mill, furniture factory, tannery, etc., as their material would be at their doors. This region is becoming famous for its summer resorts, which bring thousands of people, seeking rest and recreation as well as health in the life-giving breezes from the clear spring like lakes. Purest water in the world, and plenty of it."

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FA

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Company

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN

EVERYTHING

In the line of

Furniture

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H. C. Cooper

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH

Come and See me before Buy

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS.

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them a

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charl

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHI

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goo

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & F

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfacti

COME AND SEE U

Yours,

AMOS FO

AT COST!

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods.

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoes. They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY. And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House

CHARLEVOIX.

GEO. W. MILLER,

DEALER IN

Clothing

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels,

GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware,

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

UMBER 26. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1894. $1.50 PER YEAR.

HE JOURNAL

ublished every Thursday morning,

CHAS. J. STRANG.

ffice over L. D. Smith's grocery,

HARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AN SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

USINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

EHANK & SHIRE, Attorneys at Law, ver Barnes Block, Charlevoix, Mich. LEBRATION. C. C. SHIRE.

A ALBERT, Attorneys at Law, Ea Block, Mich.

N MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor Patent business promptly attended to. OOD, DETROIT.

ERSLEY, Attorney and Counselor at ffice in United States Hotel, Boyne

CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix,

ON EATON, Attorney at Law, Charle

OWN KEYS, Attorneys at Law. Office Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

EY WEBSTER, Attorney and Solicitor, Examiner U. S. Patent Office, Washington

BANKS AND BANKERS.

ge of CHARLEVOIX, Capital $50,000, Undivided Profits $5,000. Deposits Gov't, commercial bonds, real estate and loans for sale. Draft allowed on all cities in the United States, Canada and Europe. REYNOLDS & BROWN, Bankers.

CHURCHES.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Rev. Wm. Wood, Pastor. Sunday-school at 12 m. Preaching every Sunday, at 3 p. m. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening, at the residence of the pastor.

C. F. VAN ATTA, Janitor.

BAPTIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Sunday-school at 12 m. Preaching every Sunday, at 7 p. m. Prayer meeting every Friday evening, at the residence of the pastor.

A. L. HOWES, Janitor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHAS. LOCKE, Chief. AND READY FIRE COMPANY. Meets at call and second Monday evening of each month.

OFFICERS AND MEMBERS.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

CHASTELL, M. D.

Office at the residence, Mich.

N. McLEAN, Physician and Surgeon, Office at the residence of Mrs. Mary Mich.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

U. S. LAND OFFICE, Petoskey, Mich. Office hours, 8 a. m. to 4 p. m.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Charlevoix Lodge No. 244, meets every Saturday evening, at Odd Fellow's Hall.

Lake Rhine No. 142, meets every Saturday evening, at Odd Fellow's Hall.

Charlevoix Lodge No. 262, meets every other Friday evening, at Odd Fellow's Hall.

Lake Rhine No. 142, meets Saturday evening, at Odd Fellow's Hall.

A. E. CRAMER, Vice President.

Exchange & Farmers' Bank, OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A banking business transacted. Money on approved paper at reasonable rates. Collections promptly made. Sight exchange on Detroit and Chicago bought and sold. Interest allowed on time deposits.

M. S. HOUGHTON, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Toboggan and Cutter.

M. S. JOHNSON,

Cor. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Ridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Mountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Commercial for the traveling public. Headquarters for the Petoskey and Elk

United States Hotel,

Geo. W. CURTIS, Proprietor.

Boyne City, Michigan.

Newly refitted and refurnished.

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

ALL MACHINES WARRANTED

D. S. HAY.

Ladies paper and envelopes with your address, 100 for 50 cts. postpaid.

FOR

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

GO TO

Dr. G. W. CROUTER'S DRUG STORE.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

An Immense Line to Choose From.

MORTGAGE SALE. Whereas, default has been made in the payment of a certain mortgage executed by Peter Sweeney and Mary Sweeney, his wife, parties of the first part, to Jeremy H. Bacon, party of the second part, bearing date the 1st day of January, A. D. 1891, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix, on the twelfth day of January, A. D. 1891, at 8 o'clock a. m., in liber 20 of mortgages, on page 350, and there is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of $1,400. A. D. 1893, and said mortgage was assigned by H. Clark, which assignment was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix on the fourteenth day of January, A. D. 1893

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

A MONTREAL man sued an artificial leg-maker for damages because the leg will not bend when he tries to kneel in prayer. In consequence of this stiffness of the limb he has been cruelly in body and spirit. Sad to say, the story of his tribulations had no effect upon the Judge, and he refused him any financial recompense. A maker of praying legs can find a customer in Montreal now.

G.S. FERRIS, historically known as the "Pathfinder," is now living in New York with his noble wife, both well advanced in years, he being over 70. It is intimated that Congress intends his sister is to provide a pension for the General in acknowledgment of his distinguished services in the past. The plan proposed is to have him reinstated as Major General of the army and then put on the retired list.

MR. CHAS. of Cairo, N. Y., wooed a widow, who would not have him because he was gray. Then he began to use hair dye, and just as he had succeeded in getting his hair turned yellow he heard that the widow had married another. Mr. Gray concluded that life was a failure, and that if he could not attain happiness by dyeing it was time for him to die. So he drank a bottle of dye and died. Boston Globe.

IT will be remembered that the patriotic Artemus Ward nobly offered to sacrifice most of his relatives while the late war was in progress. Sergt. Mason has beaten Artemus in this matter. He actually tried to kill his relatives himself. He says that he went into the war and fought against four uncles and twenty-two cousins. If he was as poor a shot then as he was when he drew a bead on Guiteau, his relatives had little to fear.

THE Rev. Dr. Deems, of New York, has strongly inveighed against the evil of squeezing such citizens' hands when shaking hands. He thinks a gentleman need not seize a lady's dainty fingers as though they were made of iron, but should "hold them in a proper manner, and not too long." But there's the rub. What is the proper manner, and how long is too long? Would the Doctor think four hours about right, or would he enroll, step in on a Sunday night and put a stop to the business of the evening? What young folks want are specifications.

THE Indians of the reservation in Polk county, Tex., adhere to their ancient customs. When they enter a cotton patch they pick the entire stalk and pile the cotton in one common heap. On Saturday they select some white man in whom they can confide to weigh all the cotton. After doing this he computes the amount due the tribe, and after collecting that amount from the planter he divides it equally among the members of the tribe. Then the planter or gives the chosen agent his account against the tribe for provisions furnished, and the agent apportions the expense equally among the Indians, and then collects it pro rata from each. Settlement cannot be effected in any other way. This is the Indians' way, and no other will answer.

THE Berlin police authorities possess almost complete collection of photographs of living German murderers, forgers—this sex, bigamists and universal generally, and have found it very useful that they have now decided to make a collection of photographs of the executioners of other countries. They have therefore communicated with the Detective department at Scotland Yard, the Federal Police office in New York, and the Bureau of Police in Paris and Stockholm, requesting the favor may be granted to Herr Reindel, Executioner of Pomerania, three times; James O. Blanc, of Maine, twice; and Schneider Cotta, of Indiana, three times. No Speaker has ever been a born from Illinois, or from the Gay State beyond the Mississippi. The South has had the office of Speaker and a considerable number of years, but for longer period than the North. The first Republican to occupy the chair was Nathaniel P. Banks, of Massachusetts, who was elected in 1856, after a contest of two months, on the thirty-third ballot. The speakership has seldom proved a stepping-stone to anything higher. But one ex-Speaker, Andrew J. Polk, has ever reached the White House. Colfax is the only one who has become Vice President, and Blaine the only one who has been defeated for the Presidential nomination after having been chosen Speaker. The Speaker who has held it a full term is Mr. Carlisle, who presided over the House for four years, and was then defeated for re-election. Mr. Randall was Speaker for six years, but they were not consecutive. Mr. Reed is the only Speaker who has ever been chosen from Maine. Mr. Keifer, of Ohio, was Speaker for a single term, and Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, for two terms. Mr. Carlisle is the only Speaker who has ever been chosen from Kentucky.

THE Indians of the reservation in Polk county, Tex., adhere to their ancient customs. When they enter a cotton patch they pick the entire stalk and pile the cotton in one common heap. On Saturday they select some white man in whom they can confide to weigh all the cotton. After doing this he computes the amount due the tribe, and after collecting that amount from the planter he divides it equally among the members of the tribe. Then the planter or gives the chosen agent his account against the tribe for provisions furnished, and the agent apportions the expense equally among the Indians, and then collects it pro rata from each. Settlement cannot be effected in any other way. This is the Indians' way, and no other will answer.

THE Berlin police authorities possess almost complete collection of photographs of living German murderers, forgers—this sex, bigamists and universal generally, and have found it very useful that they have now decided to make a collection of photographs of the executioners of other countries. They have therefore communicated with the Detective department at Scotland Yard, the Federal Police office in New York, and the Bureau of Police in Paris and Stockholm, requesting the favor may be granted to Herr Reindel, Executioner of Pomerania, three times; James O. Blanc, of Maine, twice; and Schneider Cotta, of Indiana, three times. No Speaker has ever been a born from Illinois, or from the Gay State beyond the Mississippi. The South has had the office of Speaker and a considerable number of years, but for longer period than the North. The first Republican to occupy the chair was Nathaniel P. Banks, of Massachusetts, who was elected in 1856, after a contest of two months, on the thirty-third ballot. The speakership has seldom proved a stepping-stone to anything higher. But one ex-Speaker, Andrew J. Polk, has ever reached the White House. Colfax is the only one who has become Vice President, and Blaine the only one who has been defeated for the Presidential nomination after having been chosen Speaker. The Speaker who has held it a full term is Mr. Carlisle, who presided over the House for four years, and was then defeated for re-election. Mr. Randall was Speaker for six years, but they were not consecutive. Mr. Reed is the only Speaker who has ever been chosen from Maine. Mr. Keifer, of Ohio, was Speaker for a single term, and Mr. Crisp, of Georgia, for two terms. Mr. Carlisle is the only Speaker who has ever been chosen from Kentucky.

THE Eiffel tower, historically known as the "Pathfinder," is now living in New York with his noble wife, both well advanced in years, he being over 70. It is intimated that Congress intends his sister is to provide a pension for the General in acknowledgment of his distinguished services in the past. The plan proposed is to have him reinstated as Major General of the army and then put on the retired list.

MR. CHAS. of Cairo, N. Y., wooed a widow, who would not have him because he was gray. Then he began to use hair dye, and just as he had succeeded in getting his hair turned yellow he heard that the widow had married another. Mr. Gray concluded that life was a failure, and that if he could not attain happiness by dyeing it was time for him to die. So he drank a bottle of dye and died. Boston Globe.

IT will be remembered that the patriotic Artemus Ward nobly offered to sacrifice most of his relatives while the late war was in progress. Sergt. Mason has beaten Artemus in this matter. He actually tried to kill his relatives himself. He says that he went into the war and fought against four uncles and twenty-two cousins. If he was as poor a shot then as he was when he drew a bead on Guiteau, his relatives had little to fear.

THE Rev. Dr. Deems, of New York, has strongly inveighed against the evil of squeezing such citizens' hands when shaking hands. He thinks a gentleman need not seize a lady's dainty fingers as though they were made of iron, but should "hold them in a proper manner, and not too long." But there's the rub. What is the proper manner, and how long is too long? Would the Doctor think four hours about right, or would he enroll, step in on a Sunday night and put a stop to the business of the evening? What young folks want are specifications

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX. MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

"Yes," said Miss Penn, "I rejected Mr. Hogg. Nice fellow, but I couldn't have the announcement of my marriage appear in the papers under the headline 'Hogg-Penn.'"—Ex.

Elias J. Palmer treasurer of Emmet county, has paid to the county the sum of $2,681.11 in full settlement of his indebtedness which includes all expenses to which the county has been put, as well as the deficiencies.

The fuel, wheat, corn, beans, potatoes, garden sauce, meat, milk, butter, eggs, poultry and sundry other farm products, used in the family, are as much a part of the farmers income as is the cash he receives for whatever he may sell in the market.—N. W. Farmer.

The report that D. R. Locke, (Nasby) of the Toledo Beade, has gone to Maine to investigate and determine whether prohibition prohibits, is a step in the right direction. If there is whisky to be had in Maine either for love or money Locke will find it. —Evening News.

Theatres were burned in Cleveland, Chicago, and St. Louis last Saturday night. In the latter place the entire department of the city were at one fire, and the loss aggregates $200,000. About the same hour, a Catholic convent at Belleville, Ill., burned and 1,500 young ladies were suddenly turned out into the extreme cold, many of them in their night clothes.

Our exchanges generally regard the decision of the supreme court in regard to the Detroit News as outrageous, and the fact that the News maintains its large circulation in spite of bitter competition, also proves that it is a paper for, and appreciated by, the people. Whether it be a slanderous sheet or not, it is just what the people want and are willing to pay for.

Whiskey causes murders unnumbered, sends scores of people to our poor houses, proves the ruin of tens of thousands of men every year—and yet we are told saloons are a benefit. The man who can contemplate the direct work of whiskey and then say a saloon is a benefit, either is very near sighted or has a "policy stern" in the matter. Saloons are a curse even to their owners.—Ex.

It is stated that at a recent meeting of the Allegan county greenbackers Mr. John M. Potter was present and made a bitter speech against any further combination with the democratic party. Is this the same John M. Potter that the democratic aldermen of this city recently helped to elect city assessor for the term of two years at a salary of $900 per annum?—Lansing Journal.

Every farm in this new country, if ordinary improvements are being made, is constantly increasing in value. This increase is money made and is a permanent and safe investment. If farmers will look back a few years they will almost invariably find their farms have largely increased in value. Think of this, farmers, when you are despondent at not "getting along" faster.—N. W. Farmer.

Are the times really as hard as we try to make ourselves believe? We are confident if complaining farmers will compare their present condition with some former periods in their history they will see that there is a marked contrast, and that they have been much worse off than they now are. The fact is we are too much inclined to forget the troubles of the past and magnify the difficulties of the present.—N. W. Farmer.

Discussing the question of contracting prison labor, the Frankfort Express offers the following suggestions: We believe the prisoners should be put at work but not in a manner to compete into direct competition with our skilled mechanics. It is a fact that prison labor does largely interfere with skilled labor in those branches of manufacturing in which prison labor is employed. Wagons, chairs and other articles come under this class. Some of the most experienced mechanics in the state are in our state prison. If all available prison labor could be kept at those which which would not interfere with skilled labor, to improve the roads a direct benefit will be rendered to the state and there would be less crime. The same is true of our county jails. Many a man commits some act in the late fall that will insure him a good home and plenty to eat during the winter with nothing to do. No prison labor should be farmed out to contractors.

The selection of Chicago for the holding of the eighth republican national convention next June, makes that city's record four out of the eight held since the party's organization. In 1860, Abraham Lincoln; in 1868, Ulysses S. Grant, and in 1880, James A. Garfield received their nominations in the great city by the lake. It is a melancholy reminiscence that the first and the last of the illustrious trio nominated there, died in office at the hand of the assassin.

Referring to the probable extension of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad the Grand Rapids Eagle says: This road, stretching across the state from southeast to northwest, should be induced to run through Isabella, Clare, Missaukee, Kalkaska, Antrim and Charlevoix counties. It would afford them a direct eastern outlet besides furnishing a strong inducement to the settling and development of all the country tributary to its line. Reasonable action and a liberal contribution to the enterprise may secure the desired extension.—Kalkaskian.

A writer in the Kansas Farmer says: "In estimating the farmer's profits, he is apt to overlook a great many things which he does not put any value on. The writer of this was very much surprised once, when he had to pay a farmer for a small quantity of buttermilk. We had never before thought about buttermilk having any value, though we were getting this particular lot for use. How many farmers count the value of the apples, cider, or potatoes they have in their cellars, or the canned and preserved fruits, and the jellies and jams in their pantries? A thousand and one small items are about the place that are useful, very useful, and would cost a good deal of money if they were from merchants, that in the farmer's books are not written down at all."

For the week ending Dec. 29, 1883, the reports to the state board of health indicate that pneumonia greatly increased, that inflamation of the kidney, whooping cough, diarrhea, intermittent fever, and influenza increased, and that rheumatism, consumption, and remittent fever decreased in area of prevalence. At the state capital the prevailing winds during the week ending Dec. 29, were southwest; and, compared with the preceding week, the temperature was considerably higher, the absolute humidity slightly more, and the day and the night ozone less. Including reports by regular observers and others, diphtheria was reported present during the week ending Dec. 29, and since, at 10 places, namely, Adrian township, Bridgeport, Delta, Detroit, Grand Rapids, Isabella, Kalamazoo, Monroe, Otisville, Pontiac; scarlet fever at 17 places, Adrian township, Coldwater, Colfax, Colon, Detroit, Ersley, Grand Rapids, Isabella, Kalamazoo township, Kalamazoo city, Monroe, Manistee, Medina, Oxford, Orleans, Roxand, Selma; Measles at 7 places, Bridgeport, Cedar Springs, Grand Rapids, Gaines, Hudson, Monroe, and Roxand.

The manufacturers of glass at Pittsburg, Penn., having backed the workmen out of their factories, are importing glass from Europe to fill orders from their customers. They are doing this and paying about 50 per cent. duty on the imported glass, rather than pay the wages to their workmen which they claimed, only a few months ago, the tariff would enable them to pay. While this is going on some 3,000 men in Pittsburg alone are lying idle, and the consumers of glass are paying 50 per cent. more than they would have to pay if there was no tariff. The whole matter sums up as follows: The workmen are out of employment and wages, the consumers are paying an exorbitant price for glass, and the manufacturers are making money by importing and selling foreign goods. What blessed fraud protection is! How charmingly it protects American industry! Idle workmen, manufacturers selling foreign glass at a profit, and the users of window glass compelled to pay 50 per cent. more than it is worth—that is the way the swindling tariff works! It is very evident that protection does not protect the workingmen.—Jackson Patriot.

A Peculiar Case of Protection.

The urgent necessity of protecting the American infant industry against foreign pauper labor, and particularly against the foreign labor of Great Britain, is signally illustrated by the case of the Lamb Knitting Machine, manufactured at Chicopee Falls, Mass. There is a general tariff of 45 per cent on all machines, and a special tariff of 45 per cent on knitting machines. This tariff, like all the rest in the list, is laid for the purpose of enabling the Massachusetts manufacturer to hold the home market against the knitting machines made by pauper labor in Europe.

We have before us now two price-list circulars issued by the Lamb Knitting Machine Co. One of these is for the American market, the other for the British. The company sells a No. 10 machine in Detroit for $200, and in London, England, in the midst of the pauper labor against which our tariff protects it, for $131.25. The American laborer, for whose benefit the tariff is laid on, can purchase a No. 9 machine for $175, while the British pauper, against whom the tariff ingeniously discriminates, need only pay $120 for the same machine.

The machines sold in England for $131.25 and $120 respectively, are made in the shops at Chicopee, Mass., with the machines sold in America for $200 and $175, by the same labor, of the same materials and at the same cost.

The advantages of the arrangement to the American laborer are obvious. —Evening News.

SUGGESTIONS OF VALUE.

A bit of economy is to save the peel of orange as dry it, and grate it for flavoring mince pie and orange cake, and custard, also. If it is dried perfectly, and is kept in a dry closet there is no danger of its becoming musty.

To remove oil or grease spots from carpets, use fullers' earth and water; spread thickly over with paper, and let it remain two days; brush off, and if not removed, make another application. If shade is required, use benzine.

A teaspoonful of borax put in the last water in which clothes are rinsed will whiten them surprisingly. Hand the borax so as to dissolve easily. This is especially good to remove the yellow that time gives to white garments that have been laid aside for two or three years.

A correspondent of the Fruit Recorder says that canned tomatoes stewed on the ground round ripened tomatoes in the spring before frost is out will keep off the cutworm and keep the birds from scratching. The tomatoes distasteful to the worms, and they will not eat over it to unearth the fruit.

Broken bones are much slower to unite if exposed to cold in the room in which they are healed. While the fracture still does not tongue-lamb a dairy up a hill does steam heat from the water in coil, consequently there is less exercise to go up and down the table. But take it as a whole, the occasion for the fall of the kettle so that the steam may escape.

The occasion for the degree of crimsons of the incendiary accident as he views the tumult and appears in order to set fender and firemen, but really cleaned at expense of physical energy, will at least be partially removed if a mixture of powdered and boiled emery and oil be used. An application now and then, followed by polishing up with soft leather, will leave them in a lightly reflective condition.

Hasty-on table covers are made of alternate squares or half squares of basket flannel and of velveteen. One made of two shades of brown is very pretty, and one of brown and bronze color is part curiously effective. The spread should be lined; it is not a necessary that the entire lining should be of expensive material; unbleached factory cloth will answer, providing that the facing was done. No book or paper site, but, if one prefers to have it, this should be of velveteen, and the facing of a contrasting color. If the blocks are made by put together, no needle-work is necessary to adorn the spread; but of course if puffs may be determined according to the taste and means of the maker.

An old black bunting dress may be made to serve a further period on one of lines by being renovated and made a petticoat. The dust shakes out of bunting with so little effort of the weaver that it cost sues to be popular year after year. Rip the dress up, select the best for cleaning, buy 5 cents worth of soapbark at a drug store, let it stand in water until dissolved, if it is the pulverized; if not, you will be obliged to boil it some and then steep it for a few minutes. Put your bunting in enough lukewarm water to cover it, and turn the preparation in, rinse it up and down until the cloth is saturated with it; then rinse it in clear water, which should be lukewarm also. The effect upon the goods is remarkable; it cleanses and restores. Black goods of various kinds may be renovated in the same way.

Provision Market.

RETAIL PRICE TO CONSUMERS.

The question frequently comes from parties in other states who receive sample copies of the JOURNAL, "What is the cost of living in Charlevoix?" As a partial answer to this question, we give the following figures as an average, and may add to the list in the future:

FLOUR, per bbl, $5.00@8.00.
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $3.00.
CORN MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.50; unbolted, $1.00.
HAY, per ton, $10@12.
OATS, per bu, 30c.
GROUND FEED, per cwt, $1.50.
APPLES, per bu, $1.50.
POTATOES, per bu, 35@50c.
ONIONS, per bu, $1.00.
BUTTER, per lb, 28@30c.
EGGS, per doz, 30@35c.
HONEY, per lb, 25c.
LARD, per lb, 12@14c.
MEAT, beef steak, 12@15c; pork steak, 20@12½c; mutton, 8@12½c; sausage, 15c; hams, 16; shoulders, 12½c.
TALLOW, 05@6c.

How Screws Are Threaded.

Screw threads are "originated" in the lathe usually. All lathe turning, with regular—constant—feed of the turning tool, is screw cutting, or threading; the tool cuts a spiral around a revolving cylinder.

It is evident, therefore, that by increasing the speed of the feed relative to that of the revolving cylinder, and leaving the point of the cutter properly shaped, a screw thread would result, instead of a paring off of the entire surface of the cylinder. All important estimating or working screws, as those for feeding on machine tools, are formed in this way, and large numbers, also, of ordinary machine screws, which when once started are expected to remain in place until the machine or implement of which they form a part is worn out.

Wood screws, as screws for fastening wood to wood, metal to wood, etc., are threaded in a similar manner, the thread being cut from the solid by a single cutter removing the material between the threads.

Large bunches of screws are the rule of by dies, which may be called hollow screws, or nuts with cutting edges. These, by rotating, form the feed as well as the cutting device for threading the smooth cylindrical rod or bar. Some of these dies are worked by hand, others by power, but in either case the cut, by modern and improved dies, is clean, and the thread is formed from the solid. The old fashioned dies were adjustable so as to be "set up," and could be made to cut several sizes of thumbers. Much of their work was done by pressure, or squeezing, and a part of the thread was "raised" instead of being cut from the solid material. There are adjustable dies made now, but they are so formed as to do solid cutting.

There is another method of cutting threads direct from the solid, and that is by milling. The machine is entirely automatic, the blank to be cut being rotated as in a lathe, and a rotary milling tool running against it at an angle adapted to the pitch of the thread desired. As the blank revolves slowly toward the cutter, the cutter revolving more rapidly forms the thread by being fed along over the blank as is the cutting tool in a lathe. The milling tool is so formed in cross section as to produce any shape of thread desired.

Threads on large cast iron screws are sometimes formed simply by being cast, and formerly there was much cheap small work of that sort in the market.

Threads may be raised by forging in dies, and some good work by this is produced. In both these cases, however, an after finish in the lathe is desirable.

For some peculiar purposes threads are formed by twisting a square or a flat bar; a common form of hand drill that has superseded the bow drill being a case in point. The stock of this drill is a bar, square in cross section, twisted, and which is rotated by sliding a loosely fitting nut rapidly back and forth over its length. A familiar instance of a screw thread of this description is the ordinary auger or bit, the cross section of which is a flattened parallelogram like a flat bar.

One peculiar method of forming screw threads remains to be mentioned. It is that of raising a thread by rolling between dies under pressure. There is a great deal of what is known as "bright wire goods" in the market, which are threaded in many cases these threads are formed by simply rolling one revolution, or a little more—he wire between two hardened steel plates that are corrugated spirally to form, when combined, a continuous thread. Sufficient pressure is applied during the rolling which, however, is very rapid—to raise the metal from the lumen of wire enough to make a thread. It is seen the threaded portion is considerably larger than the stock, or wire, at least half the depth of the thread on each side.

The threads in nuts are produced either by the "originating" method, cutting them in a lathe, by being tapped, or sometimes by being cast of soft metal.

Brass, on a threaded core of hard metal, as iron or steel. But nuts are mostly threaded by tapping, running in, two, or three successive taps through one either by hand or in a power machine. Nuts of very thin material, as most brass for lamp tops, jar covers, etc., are formed simply by rolling between serially corrugated rolls, a work analogous to "beading" on tin ware.—Scientific American.

An Army Story About Meade.

"Did you ever hear about Meade's goose?" asked a lobbyist at Grand headquarters the other day.

There was an encouraging crowd to hear the story, and the speaker continued:

"During the winter of 1863 and '64 I was a private in a Pennsylvania regiment in Meade's brigade of the 5th corps."

"A private," exclaimed a dozen majors, Colonels and Generals in a breath.

"Yes, sir, a private; and what's more I was private during the entire war and have never had a chance to get a motion since. Well, as I was saying when interrupted, I was in Meade's brigade. Shortly before the battle the General decided to entertain some of his friends at Christmas dinner, and procured a handsome goose for the occasion. For a month that goose was stuffed and crammed with the choicest goose-feed that would produce fat, and when Christmas arrived presented a most tempting appearance—he was rolled in fat, and scarcely able to waddle. The night before Christmas the General's cook killed the bird, and after dressing it, hung it up to cool in order to make it as tender as possible. As the dinner was fixed for four o'clock the cook was in no hurry to commence preparing for it, and let the goose hang. At nine o'clock Meade, having given explicit directions about the dinner, went into his ambulance and drove to Washington for his guests, among whom were two ladies, a member of Congress and a distinguished general officer.

"About noon the cook, deeming it time to commence cooking the goose, went to the place where it had been hanging, and lo!—consternation!—that it had been stolen. There was nothing to be done but wait for the arrival of the party, when the sad story was explained.

To say that Meade was furious would be a mild expression. Orders were immediately given and carried out for a strict search for the missing bird in an hour every tent, camp-kettle and mess-pan in the division was searched without disclosing the goose. But a suggested canned meats from the sutler's, but the suggestion was promptly rejected; and bringing the matter into requisition, an order was issued that celebrated Washington restaurant to whom about six o'clock a splendid dinner was brought over, smoking hot, spirit-lamps having been used to keep it so.

"The dinner went off in good style, but the loss of the goose being the subject of good joke by the guests. But I could not forget it easily, as the mouth afterward kept up an incessant cry for the head of the unfortunate bird, and I was considerably relieved when it was finally found.

"In 1872, at the Grand Army encampment at Philadelphia, a grand banquet was given, Generals Meade, Hancock, Sickles, Patterson and a number of other distinguished men being guests. A delegate from Georgia, formerly of Meade's command, was very anxious for an introduction to Meade, and as I had been intimate with I gratified him by presenting him to the General. After a few minutes conversation the delegate said: 'By the way, General, did you ever find out what became of your goose?'

"The General laughed and said he had not.

"Well, I didn't of course like to say anything about it then, but I knew the man that stole the goose, and had a good guess it was, too.'

"A queer twinkle came into the General's eye, and smiling quietly remarked: 'It would not have been a bad idea at Christmas for you if I had known the time; but,' he added, after a pause, 'there is something remarkable about that goose. Since the war I have met at least forty men who have claimed to be the men that "stole my goose."

"The last claimant beat all. He was a lobbyist, and a storm of laughter followed.—Denver Times.

C. R. BELLING
carries the largest and finest stock of
JEWELRY
Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the ROCKFORD WATCH, the best in the market. All goods left for repairs must be left for six months or are subject to storage.

SPECIAL OFFER
Discharges in advance for the subscription to the JOURNAL of the Second year's subscription to the WEEKLY FREE PRESS, and which is published weekly from the office of the Detroit Free Press, one of the best papers for the family in the country. In view of the fact that during the next two years another great political campaign will be in progress, and the desire of everyone to be fully posted on the vital issues of the hour, no better opportunity can be made. It is getting the paper for one year as interested on the JOURNAL, a year in advance, and the Three Dollars pays for the JOURNAL and secures the FREE PRESS one year free. SUBSCRIBE NOW. Specimen copies may be obtained at this office. THE JOURNAL, Charlevoix, Mich.

New Goo

At Cos
FOR CASH
For the Next 30
MISS L. SPAULD
Ladies' Furnishing G

E JOURNAL
levoix, Mich., Jan. 10, 1884.

cal Business Notices.

NTED—A good stout boy to printing business. Inquire at this Sale.—Two or three good ale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

rades of Shingles at Upright, o's.

SE TO RENT.—On the ter- O. D. Wood's. Inquire at the store. W. J. BRADLEY.

LES and Onions by the barrel at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

S SALE.—A second-hand portwell, with engine and boiler complete, cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

est CASH price paid for cedar Posts. UPRIGHT, EMREY & CO.

is the time to buy a CHEAP ronos. Upright, Emrey & Co. have ty suits left.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

cords of good dry birch and ulsh wood for sale. Good measure ed. Call at the office of J. MILO EATON.

Produce of every description exchanged at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s, and a distinguished general officer.

"About noon the cook, deeming it time to commence cooking the goose, went to the place where it had been hanging, and lo!—consternation!—that it had been stolen. There was nothing to be done but wait for the arrival of the party, when the sad story was explained.

To say that Meade was furious would be a mild expression. Orders were immediately given and carried out for a strict search for the missing bird in an hour every tent, camp-kettle and mess-pan in the division was searched without disclosing the goose. But a suggested canned meats from the sutler's, but the suggestion was promptly rejected; and bringing the matter into requisition, an order was issued that celebrated Washington restaurant to whom about six o'clock a splendid dinner was brought over, smoking hot, spirit-lamps having been used to keep it so.

"The dinner went off in good style, but the loss of the goose being the subject of good joke by the guests. But I could not forget it easily, as the mouth afterward kept up an incessant cry for the head of the unfortunate bird, and I was considerably relieved when it was finally found.

"In 1872, at the Grand Army encampment at Philadelphia, a grand banquet was given, Generals Meade, Hancock, Sickles, Patterson and a number of other distinguished men being guests. A delegate from Georgia, formerly of Meade's command, was very anxious for an introduction to Meade, and as I had been intimate with I gratified him by presenting him to the General. After a few minutes conversation the delegate said: 'By the way, General, did you ever find out what became of your goose?'

"The General laughed and said he had not.

"Well, I didn't of course like to say anything about it then, but I knew the man that stole the goose, and had a good guess it was, too.'

"A queer twinkle came into the General's eye, and smiling quietly remarked: 'It would not have been a bad idea at Christmas for you if I had known the time; but,' he added, after a pause, 'there is something remarkable about that goose. Since the war I have met at least forty men who have claimed to be the men that "stole my goose."

"The last claimant beat all. He was a lobbyist, and a storm of laughter followed.—Denver Times.

The Temperature.

Following is a record of observations of the Thermometer at the Journal office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day for the week ending yesterday, as given in all cases unless marked otherwise (*):

	7AM	2PM
Monday	14	4
Tuesday	0	9
Wednesday	15	23
Thursday	13	15
Friday	14	19
Saturday	8	17
Sunday	16	21

News Brevities.

winter weather.

sleighing can't be beat.

d. Clark returned home last is forming rapidly on Lake have far to roll, take it to ght. Emrey & Co. are buying

ities of the and hops.

Springs has a new fire en- ing finished two of these.

. Wood and wife expect to n Wisconsin in the near future.

Frank Aks of the Advance- ns, gave the JOURNAL a call last week.

Stockman has gone on a visit and, Ohio, and will be absent about ten Occidental hotel at Petoskey ased to Mr. M. V. Pillon, of Indianola county.

ork of prayer is progressing, erable interest manifested on the ne citizens.

ngine and boiler for the new are on the ground awaiting suitable place in position.

ghter of the East Jordan Enter- and a call on Tuesday. He hopes to paper out again in a fortnight.

Northwest Farmer for January and is an ideal contains many good e people of northern Michigan.

n Charlevoix assumes the dig- small boy will be the fine skating rink.

more sea" will be the subject Church next Sunday morning. Subevening: "Belshazzar's Feast." All are outlook for Charlevoix for next owth of population and improvements, ummer sites. Open wide the gates; let as within the anticipated railroad.

ks to the people of the village, ve been a good paper last week were ppreciated that we sold nearly one hundred peoples. Good enough for one week.

k Louis, Mo., last Saturday the thermometer registered 22 degrees at Rockford, Ill., 18 below; Bismark, Dakota, 31; St. Paul, 30; Salt Lake, Charlevoix was 15 degrees above.

JOURNAL is in receipt of a very ress Almanac for 1884, from the manufacturers, Green Bay, Wis. It is 64 St. Jacobs Oil. In its pages are contributions from the leading humorists in the country. Eleven million copies are to be distributed free in this loads of merchandise for the ns passed through here yesterday. Two cargoes were brought in for destination closed, but their sales were so they were compelled to "sort up," and loads would make a fair stock for a store.

storms of the past week all over ve caused terrible suffering. At Lexington, Ky., the thermometer degrees below zero, and at Knoxville, there was a foot of snow. Some of our readers may remember having experienced ourselves here in 1856 on the very mild winter we are having.

Shipbuilding the Congregationalists of Harrisonal lake whither the seating capacity of the school room proved inadequate to them, they found it necessary this winter to make room for the large congregation. Notable the large sailing congregation. The school numbers 151 and additions to the congregation.

The movement to establish a canning factory in Charlevoix is not dead, though it sleepeth. Gentlemen from new York are trying to get suitable property in this vicinity, for the purpose of raising fruit and vegetables, and erecting buildings and machinery for canning their own product. Everything is suitable but the price of the land.

Last week's storm was like "the gentle murmur of a summer's brook to the fierce roar of angry surges on a rocky beach" compared to the fury of the storm outside. In some portions of the state the mercury fell as low as 30° below, and snow as high as 30 inches deep. The mercury only registered two below here, and only three or four inches of snow fell, the wind forming the worst feature of the storm king's exhibition.—Independent.

Advance Lumber Co.

We call attention to the business card of the above firm in this paper. Another permanent partner, Mr. Frank Ake, has been added to the firm, and they are prepared to do custom sawing of all kinds, and guarantee satisfaction. We shall have more to say of this firm later on.

I. O. O. F. Election.

The following are the newly elected officers of Round Lake Lodge, No. 293, I. O. O. F.: N. G., John Burns; V. G., Fred. W. Mayne; Secretary, A. F. Draper; Financial Secretary, Orlando Blair; Treasurer, Charles Swallow; Warden, F. E. Wood; Conductor, James E. Wood; Chaplain, Rev. J. T. Iddings; R. S. N. G., G. W. Crouter; L. S. N. G., Richard Knight; I. G., George Madison; O. G., J. M. Thompson; R. S. S., George Darrance; L. S. S., Alden Chamberlain; R. S. V. G., Joseph Swailes; L. S. V. G., Harry Widdifield; Representative to Grand Lodge, Dr. G. W. Crouter.

Death of Hugh O'Neil.

This gentleman died at his home in Charlevoix Saturday morning, Jan. 5th, and was buried with Masonic ceremonies on Sunday afternoon. Sermon by Rev. J. T. Iddings, at M. E. church.

Mr. O'Neil was born in Ireland in 1809, removed to America in 1854, lived at Washington Island afterward at Milwaukee, and from there came to Charlevoix. He has been infirm since last spring, and was confined to his bed about eight weeks.

He leaves a wife and one child, who will receive $1,000 on an insurance policy in the Masonic Society.

The funeral was very largely attended, the church being crowded.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Uptegrove Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $200 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Jan. 8, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Carl G. Voultaire to Anthony Wortel, lot 16, blk 91, Voultaire's add. to Advance, $200.

Ellen S. Weed to J. Milo Eaton, lot 12, blk 10, Charlevoix, $241.84.

N. A. Belch to G. W. Crouter, lot 12, blk. 16, Charlevoix, $500.

Charles H. Ward et al, to Charles W. Freese, s w ¼ of s w ¼, s 35-35, $500.

Petite F. Meech to Trustees M. E. church, Norwood, lots 1, 2, and 6, in blk. 3, Norwood, $50.

Caroline E. Nichols to John Nicholls, s ½ of n e ¼, 26-34-8, $2,000.

Wm. W. Smith to Chas. W. Smith, n e ¼ of n w ¼, 2-33-8, $800.

Mary J. Stone to Wm. F. Pabstler, e ½ of lots 11 and 12, Stones add. to East Jordan, $125.

James H. Frost et al, to Selina A. Grupen, s ½ of n e ¼, 36-33-5, $1,000.

An Error Corrected.

"Charlevoix has some things to be proud of, and some in which not much pride is taken. There is the jail, for instance; it is so shabby that a prisoner now held for trial for murder is confined in a store cellar. The court house is not fit for use either, and court is held in a public hall."—Evening News.

We notice in the News of the 3d an article upon the glory and shame of Charlevoix. Now be it known that our circuit court commissioner, O. F. Wisner, discharged Burgess, the alleged murderer, on bail, and that he no longer haunts cellars and underground apartments, if he ever did, which we stontly deny. Our jail is beautifully located, commanding a view of a vast country, and is visited by as many high bound breezes as is desirable to be met; and the jail is unusually comfortable at this season of the year. We are glad to correct the error into which our able editor of the News has this time fallen. And as to our court room: it is a charming, a high-sounding hall, with a talented bar, and a presiding judge of whom we are proud. CITIZENS.

Buy note paper and envelopes with name of Charlevoix, at O. B. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

Historical Society.

The parlors of Mrs. O. D. Wood on Tuesday evening, were filled to overflowing with a happy party, John Nicholls presiding.

The exercises were opened with music, an instrumental solo by Mrs. O. D. Wood.

Mrs. L. E. Allen then read the regular history lesson, her subject being, "Thrilling events of 1776."

This was followed by an instrumental duett by Mrs. G. S. Thomas and Miss Abbie Bennett.

Mr. Ed. Parmelee rendered a vocal solo entitled Lorelei, from the german

Mrs. Thomas and Miss Abbie Bennet, by request, favored the audience with the duett, with variations, entitled "Twinkle, twinkle little star."

Mrs. J. A. Carlstein recited "The old fashioned doctor," amid storms of applause.

Abbie Bennett and Flora Ainslie followed with a vocal duett, and Mr. Ed. Parmelee recited "Independence Bell," doing great credit to the same.

On Tuesday evening next the Society will meet at the parlors of Mrs. C. L. Lovelay.

Chandler.

Plenty of snow and prospects for more.

Rufus Rice and George Strndling are at present chopping wood near Petoskey.

Head quarters for birds-eye men at Jacob Snyder's.

The spirit of Charles Bennet, deceased, is being seen by several of Chandler's citizens.

It appears that the devil has been let loose in Chandler recently, considering the ghost stories that are afloat. One lady saw three fires burning under the window of a certain house, and several other ladies, while seated in this same house, saw the face of a certain young man who was supposed to have been murdered a short time ago, followed by frequent rapping on the windows and doors; and there was seen by an old gentlemen seventy years of age the same person standing at the corner of this same house; also, a horse was heard going on the gallop toward the same house.

Considering everything the writer hears, Chandler is having a monkey and a parrot of a time, consequently every resident of Chandler, big and little, young and old, black and white, is carrying a four year old beach club in their vest pockets, in case of emergencies. ROCKY MOUNTAIN SAM.

Hayes.

Now is the time to pay your taxes.

Strong talk of erecting a church at Burgess.

Mr. Chas. Liddle has been sick the past week, but is now convalescent.

During the storm last week the roads in Hayes, were drifted full of snow, making them almost impassable.

Miss Ada Lowis, who is teaching in South Arm township, was visiting friends in this vicinity last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Trowbridge, who have been visiting relatives in this township the past two weeks, return to their home in Ohio this week.

The spelling school at Maplegrove last Friday evening, was not largely attended, owing to the stormy weather, but nevertheless those present report a good time. Master Henry Howe was the champion speller.

Chicken thieves made a raid into Hayes last week, relieving some of the farmers of their small brood of hens. One good thing can be said of Hayes, (and a few more,) there is no one in this township that would be guilty of robbing a hen roost. Of all thieving, stealing chickens cups the climax.

A great many persons complain about the condition of the roads during the winter months. As we have been in northern Michigan more than four years, and have been over the country a great deal during that time, we noticed that where the roads are four rods wide, which the law requires, that it belives plenty of room for a track when the snow is drifted. If the farmers and other persons owning real estate, would build their fences as the law requires, people would not be annoyed by snow drifts. ZERO.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every month that use Ely's Cream Balm. Sold by druggists, 50 cents. Ely Bros., Owego, N. Y.

Advance Lumber Co
Are now prepared to do
CUSTOM SAWING
Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.
GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO. ADVANCE, MICH.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,
DEALER IN
Hardware,
FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.
Charlevoix, Mich.

GEO. W. MILLER,
DEALER IN
Clothing
Gents' Furnishing Goods,
Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels,
GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.
Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST!
All kinds of
Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods.
The Finest Line of
French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear
Ever brought to Charlevoix.
Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoes.
They have no Superior.
CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY.
And Satisfaction Guaranteed.
L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House
CHARLEVOIX

Overcoats!
AND SUITINGS
Gents' Overcoats.
Youths' Overcoats.
Boys' Overcoats.
Gents' Suits.
Youths' Suits.
Boy's' Suits.
I have just received a large assortment of the above goods, bought at reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are actually worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing out at $2.00. Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and judge for yourself.
E. M. Clark.
Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

Joseph Hyland,
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Boiler Maker,
Sheet-Iron Worker,
and manufacturer of
Hyland's Patent Fireman.
Dealer in all kinds of
SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.
Repairing and setting of all kinds, and Repairing of all kinds promptly attended to

O. B. WEED & CO.
Are headquarters for
DRUGS
CHEMICALS,
Patent Medicines, all Kinds,
Imported and Domestic Perfumery,
Toilet Articles,
AND FANCY GOODS.
Boiler Maker, None but Pure Medicines
Kept in stock.
Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us, we will please you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's store
Opera Block

"I OWE NO MAN A DOLLAR."

BY CHARLES F. SHIMAS.

Oh, do not envy, my own dear wife,
The wealth of our next-door neighbor,
But bid me still be stout of heart,
And cheerfully follow my latest.
You must know the list of those little debts,
That have been our lingering sorrow,
Is paid this night; so we'll bush or frith
And shake hands with the world to-morrow.
Oh, the debtor is but a shame-faced thief,
With the creditor's name on his collar,
While I am a king and you a Queen,
For we owe no man a dollar.

Our neighbor you saw in his coach to-day,
With his wife and the haughty daughter,
While we sat down at our express board
To a roast and a cup of water;
I saw that you grieved to see me so,
And that you tried your best to conceal it;
I know that the contrast reached to our hearts,
And you could not help but feel it.
But knowing how thin our scanty fare
Has freed my mark from the collar,
You'll join my laugh, and help me shout:
"That we owe no man a dollar!"

The neighbor whose show has dazzled your eyes
Is (as is a wretched debtor);
I pity him oft, from my very heart,
And I wish that his lot was better.
Why, the man is the veriest slave alive;
For his cunning wife and daughter
Will live in style, though ruin should come,
So he goes like a knight to the slaughter.
But he feels it tighter every day,
That terrible debtor's collar;
Oh, what would he give, could he say with us
That he owed no man a dollar!

You seem amazed, but I'll tell you more:
Within two hours I met him
Sneaking along with a frightened air,
As if a fiend in fact beset him.
Yet he fled from a very worthy man,
Whom I met with the greatest pleasure,
Whom I called by name and bowed to stop,
Though he said he was not at leisure.
He held my last note, so I held him fast
Till he freed my neck from the collar;
Then I shook his hand as I proudly said,
"Now I owe no man a dollar."

Ah, now you smile, for you feel the force
Of the truths I've been repeating;
I know that a downright honest blurt
In that note he forgot was hurting!
To-morrow I'll rise with a giant's strength
To follow my daily labor,
But ere we sleep let us humbly pray
For our wretched next-door neighbor;
And we'll pray for the time when all shall be free
From the weight of the debtor's collar,
When he who was crushed in the vise may cry,
"Now I owe no man a dollar."

"THE STAGE WAITS."

"I will drink the toast," said Monsieur Grattin. "Your noble profession, the lyric art. I have no great fancy for your gin, but I will drink the toast in the liquor of your country."

He was on his legs at this time, and bowed forward left and right before he drank, so as to include all the company under his condescending compliance in pledging the art to which he belonged in a product of England.

"Hear, hear, hear!" cried several voices cheerfully. The Frenchman emptied his glass and sat down with a look of profound satisfaction.

They were all men present—a dozen—and they all appeared in the very best humor and spirits. They were seated in the dining-room of James Walford, a professional singer, and the occasion of the meeting was to commemorate Walford's signature to an agreement with the lessee of the Cremorna theater. A few days ago the business had been finally completed: Walford was to have £20 a week, the largest salary he had yet reached, and was to create the leading tenor part in a new comic opera. To be sure, the Cremorna was not a first-class theater, but Walford was glad to get a leading part anywhere, and £20 a week was a great advance upon £10, which he had been formerly earning in a subordinate part.

Walford himself was hardly as glad as his friends, for he was the best natured, least tempered, kind-hearted fellow that ever lived, and all his friends washed him well. There were other reasons also which made those who liked him, glad of his success. A few months ago he had lost a young wife, to whom he was devotedly attached, and he was left a widower with an only child, a boy of 4 years old. Now that his wife was gone, this boy was the very apple of his eye. He took the child with him wheresoever he might, and when he came home, who ther it was early or late, his first act was to visit the boy. Those who knew him best said it was well he had the child to center his affections on, for otherwise they feared his reason might give way.

He was not one of those who wear their hearts upon their sleeves. He was made of stubborn stuff. But then all knew that when he married his late wife he and given her the love of his whole nature, and that very quiet, cool of his manner, upon her death, meant a stubborn nature terribly controlled. To one or two of his most intimate friends he had said confidentially that if anything happened to his boy he should not care to live.

One of the pleasantest things in connection with the present social meeting was that M. Grattin had come and shown himself most cordial and agreeable. Everyone regarded this as a wonderfully good sign in part, for it was known to all that the chance of a tenor for the Cremorna Theater lay between him and Walford. Thus he had come, as it were, to signalize the triumph of a rival over himself.

Grattin was a man of medium size, black-haired, silken, with dark eyes, a subtle and mobile face, and keen genius. He was a strikingly-handsome man. His manner seemed refined and accomplished, and the only thing against him was that he was a Frenchman. He had found it very difficult to get engagements in London, because in small things as in great, of sincerity in greater, the English are proud. Although the part secured in Albany Lodge, Camberwell, had created his arrival excitement, and had led him to be was a Frenchman, and, although he had no definite idea of the parrying powers of a shilling, he knew they were much greater than those of a penny.

The father handed the boy a shilling, and having kissed him again long and lingeringly, rose with a sigh and left.

Walford himself was hardly as glad as his friends, for he was the best natured, least tempered, kind-hearted tenor that ever lived, and all his friends washed him well. There were other reasons also which made those who liked him, glad of his success. A few months ago he had lost a young wife, to whom he was devotedly attached, and he was left a widower with an only child, a boy of 4 years old. Now that his wife was gone, this boy was the very apple of his eye. He took the child with him wheresoever he might, and when he came home, who ther it was early or late, his first act was to visit the boy. Those who knew him best said it was well he had the child to center his affections on, for otherwise they feared his reason might give way.

He was not one of those who wear their hearts upon their sleeves. He was made of stubborn stuff. But then all knew that when he married his late wife he and given her the love of his whole nature, and that very quiet, cool of his manner, upon her death, meant a stubborn nature terribly control

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 10, 1884.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent

Keifer's position as leader of the republican side is being contested by Hiscock and Kelley, and the recent snub the ex-speaker has experienced at the hands of the very men who gave him their complimentary vote at the opening of congress, for his old position, has sent Mr. Keifer to his home in Springfield, Ohio, in quite a surly mood. A prominent republican member said to me yesterday:

"Mr. Keifer should know that the harmony and success of our party demands his retirement as a leader, and if he will not recognize this fact and act upon it, we shall be compelled to treat him in a manner in public debate that we should prefer to avoid. But the interests of the republican party are paramount if not greater than Mr. Keifer's personal vindication, and up on his further attempt to become the dictator of the minority he will be submitted to further humiliation."

Mr. Keifer's friends say, however, that he must and will be recognized by the republican members as the leading spirit of their body. They quote the fact that Mr. Carlisle and the democratic side look upon him as such, and predict that upon the reassemblage of congress Mr. Keifer will be the central figure of his party in the house.

BRIEF NOTES.

The grand jury of the district have at last indicted W. W. and S. C. Fitzgerald and one Webb for pension frauds. This is only the beginning of Col. Dudley's warfare against a large number of attorneys violating the pension laws.

The wife of Lieutenant Greely now lost in the arctic regions, will soon be in Washington to urge an expedition for the relief of her husband as soon as the weather will permit.

Sergeant Mason was in the city recently on his way to Zanesville, Ohio, to attend the reunion of the 78th O. V. I., in which he served during the war. He said Batty had $10,000 well invested and that they were happier than ever now. The sergeant says he learned a good trade while in prison —making shoes—and that he will go into the retail shoe business in Washington next spring.

Poultry Raising.

We don't know as any man ever made a fortune raising poultry. We don't know as it can be done. We have seen fortunes figured out on paper "as plain as day." So many hens —so many eggs—cost so much—worth so much in market—net profit so much. That is easy enough and plain enough. But things are not always what they seem, and figures made in advance do not always tally with the facts that come afterward.

But while we have not very strong faith in poultry raising as a business, we do believe that farmers generally would find it profitable to give more attention than they are now doing to this matter.

How many farmers' tables are supplied once or twice a week with poultry? How many have nice, fresh eggs the year round? How many eat at Thanksgiving and Christmas turkeys of their own raising? How many on their weekly visit to town take a few dozen eggs or a few nicely dressed chickens to exchange for groceries?

In the markets of northern Michigan there has nearly always been a scarcity of poultry, and often it is almost impossible to procure fresh eggs. A year ago not half the families in this village, who desired to do so, were able to procure a Thanksgiving turkey. "Ye editor" had to content himself with oysters and chicken. This year, by skirmishing around for a few weeks in advance, we fared better.

Now what we want to impress on the reader is this: Every farmer can keep from 50 to 100 hens without much expense. The income from them would be a generous supply of meat and eggs for his own table, and several scores of dollars for products sold. The expense would not be felt, while the income would be no inconsiderable addition to the yearly products of the farm.

We notice a number of people in this village have prepared yards for keeping poultry. More will do so if they have to pay, as they have been doing for a year past, from 20 to 30 cents a dozen for eggs. We think it would be a wise thing for our farmers to give more attention to poultry.—N. W. Review.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors [illegible] Catarrh Cure, offer a thousand for any case of Catarrh that they cannot cure. Take Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by druggists.

Tariff and Wages.

The five years of America's greatest industrial depression—from 1873 to 1878—the Galveston News remarks, coincided with the five years of our very highest tariff. "In 1877 there were more strikes, and riots, more men out of employment, more communistic murders, more militia calls, than in all the fifteen years covered by the low tariff of 1846."

What does the tariff have to do with wages, anyhow? Only last week one of our farmers was offered $18 per month for himself and team to work for one of our lumbermen in the woods.

Does any intelligent laboring man think that he would have been offered less but there not been any tariff of $2 per thousand on lumber?

Where does the protection for the laboring man come in? Has he any protection at all against the hordes of Canadians who are thronging the northern part of the state? Or is the protection only for the manufacturers who have $2 per thousand on lumber?—Chebogan Democrat.

Eating and starving. It is all the same to the man who is troubled with Dyspepsia. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is a positive cure for this disease. Read on another page what a prominent druggist says about it.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is a specific for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, and Consumption. Every family should have it in the house. Read on another page what a prominent druggist says about it.

The grandest instrument in parodise is the human voice. The poorest instrument in existence is a worthless one. Personal observation may please if it does not edify, but to the type-setter of husband and wife, money should not enter into the consideration. The happiest homes the world over know have been bought and paid for by mutual earnings after marriage. The good old times when editors ate bread and butter without butter, and meat was a luxury, a thing and never dwelt within. There are no such goals in such a household.—Ex.

At household sketches, at church and theatre, at parties, at holiday social gatherings, at home, looking such as with most success in expression or fashion, with perfect gentleness and self-possession, and with immediate attention, the most distinct, liquid impression as food. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, many tried in vain for years to find relief from boils, carbuncles, and other humors, have found a speedy, permanent cure. Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $10.

If the democratic party wants to win the next presidential battle let it sink all its factions in the one issue and corruption that is now sapping the life blood out of the government under republican misrule. Gigantic monopolies like the Pacific railways and the Standard oil companies have been fostered by republican administrations, the treasury has been relieved of millions of dollars and not a single public robber has been brought to punishment, the public domain has been plundered and extravagance and waste have characterized every department. Republican promises of reform are made year after year only to be cast aside with a new lease of power.—Detroit Journal.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. Improved disease and lice on the season you will find Pierce's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds in cans, $1.00 in U. S. Weed & Co. 8-26

Professor King, the tattooist, as noticed in Cleveland recently, in connection with A. D. Davis, of Chicago, and Rose Kennedy, of Springfield, Ill., were married in the ballet, in a balloon ascension and trapeze performance, while floating through the air at a height of [illegible] feet. The ceremony was performed by a justice of the peace who was also in the balloon, and who had to climb up the rigging to reach the happy couple. The ascension was made from the Kennard house, and the balloon descended in a field about a mile and a half from the city.—Chicago Journal.

Advice for the season: Keep a dozen or two Lyon coffee sold out run more.—N. O. Picayune.

Feed for Young Pigs.

Perhaps there are no greater mistakes made in feeding animals than in the case with pigs. Indeed, we are inclined to think that the climax of massive absurdity is reached in asking. Often animals do grow and well in spite of very bad feeding. As to swine, we might almost say as a rule, they do not develop. Put [illegible] case of developement and somehow we get the idea that fat is growth. If we go and make fats all alone from the beginning, we are entirely too apt to fall into the error before the pig reaches maturity. It is quite a very great mistake, and the earlier in the [illegible] pig fat we begin to make it, the greater all-round it is. To expect a young pig to develop bone and muscle, without feeding it anything that will make bone and muscle, is a great blunder. Yet there would often seem to be a theory in keeping. After its [illegible] the pig is fed only to take care of itself, the idea not even being to feed and [illegible], or to feed upon and [illegible] theory that fat is growth. Men have been known to feed all the corn meal that the young animal would eat, just as soon as it would be taught to eat corn meal. What could naturally be expected as the result of such a course? Corn meal contains about 8 per cent. of albuminoids, seven per cent. of fat, ten per cent. of nitrogenous elements, and correctly any other plant or item. Now a growing pig can be literally starved to death upon corn meal, although it may be of fat that it carries stored in its body. Indeed, the inability to stand upon its own would soon manifest itself, and would be an evidence that it was starved. It [illegible] not be strong muscularly. Its bones and muscular system would have nothing to build upon, and not a muscle or bone would, in case, be in proportion to its age and growth of fat. There would all the feeding [illegible] for an increase of muscle and bony strength to support the growing weight, and no response would be made to the demand.

In the artificial feeding of young pigs skim milk stands at the head of foods, and a handsome gain of meat from [illegible] pounds of skim milk is not [illegible]. Cooked corn meal may be advantageously added to skim milk in the proportion of one pound of meal to [illegible] gallons of milk; but the milk that will form, in time, quite as much meat as the meal, [illegible] quite and nutritious as the meal. Indeed, there is plenty of milk, as well as

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN.

JOHN HUNTINGTON, of Cleveland, some years ago put $26,000 into the Standard Oil company, and has drawn large dividends ever since. The other day in New York he was offered $1,000,000 for his interest and he sold it. He went home with a deed for a $700,000 house in one pocket and drafts for $900,000 in the other.

FANNIE B. WELD writes from Saltillo that at whatever hour a person dies in Mexico, it is customary to appoint the funeral just twenty-four hours later, and that as the mortality is greatest all over the world at night, the most of the funeral ceremonies in Mexico are performed at night, no women being permitted to attend. The poor hire the coffins in which their dead are borne to the grave.

GEN. "BOB" TOOMBS, of Georgia, lives in a big two-story frame house, into the hall of which a wagon-load of hay could almost be driven. He is rich, having received for years a handsome income from his law practice. When he was young he bought large tracts of land in Texas, and it is said that he has cleared $100,000 on properties thereof that he has sold, while he still owns enough to turn him two or three times as much more.

ROSS BONHEUR is 61 years old, but is said to be full of energy and in excellent health. In conversation with a young artist not long ago she said: "My dear, you can't afford to ignore the opinion of the world, even in small things. If you do, you are sure to suffer. It doesn't pay to be eccentric, even if your eccentricity helps you along in your studies. You must remember that all studies are a means to an end, and you are to neglect nothing, nothing whatever, that can further that end."

AN Auburn (N. Y.) newspaper contained the following paragraph the other day: "The polygamous marriages continue in Utica in spite of Congress and the gentile papers succeed now and then in learning the facts. They have just revealed a marriage in the Endowment house of a young English girl who, at the time she came to Utica, was engaged to be married to a respectable young man." The Utica people declared war, and an insurrection was prevented only by a public announcement that the college meant Utah and not Utica at all.

VALENTEMAYR (or Candelaga, Mass., who says that in his youth Sojourner Truth was a servant in his uncle's family, and subsequently an inmate of his father's house, writes that Sojourner did not then know her own age, but some twenty or thirty years ago it was decided, from what she could tell and from what those who had long known her said, that she was born between 1795 and 1800. This would make her considerably under the age she has often years claimed for herself, and there are other circumstances going to sustain this gentleman's assertion.

BERNARD BOZANO, who, he was scarcely 14, went into a foolish street to tap the till. He was sizeable young employee who was killed in the struggle. Bozano was indicted for murder in the second degree, the council advised him to plead guilty, and he was sentenced to the State prison for life. After serving ten years, it lately dawned upon the minds of friends that he should never have been sent to that prison, inasmuch as the statute provide that none shall go there under 16. The fact that Bozano was only 14 seems to have escaped the notice of the prosecuting Judge. A pardon has been granted.

A NEW patent paper calls attention to a new method of adulterating milk, by the use of an aqueous solution of gelatine. This method has not been hitherto noticed by milk inspectors, or for aught I know, and it probably lies not been extensively adopted by dealers. The specimens which have come under notice are well calculated to deceive, as much thicker by the eye or glance, the density of the milk is perfectly maintained as the sweet taste is not impaired by the addition of milk to moderate extent. The adulterant in milk has been done by soaking oatmeal and some substances, which, while retaining the liquid, would not dissolve, as to give the gravity, as does simple water. Glucose meets this want. It does not materially sweeten the liquid, and it adds to its density, and gives it "body." Let milk-inspectors look out for the new glucosed milk.

PUCK'S Sun: A "detective camera" is the latest invention. It is carried in a pretty box about a foot long, which looks like a little medicine chest with a handle on it. The camera is so made that one can carry it around anywhere, and take a view of a street fight, or a policeman in the act of clubbing a man, or a pretty girl's smile on a street-car, without any trouble. All one has to do is to press a button, after looking through a lens in the top of the box to see if the object is in view, and presto! in the twinkling of an eye the picture is taken. Then the exulting amateur has only to draw out a slide and reverse it, and he has his photographic gun ready for the next shot. The slide holds two extremely sensitive plates, and if one wants more than two pictures he can carry half a dozen extra plates in his pockets. If the plates are not exposed to light after taking the picture, they can be left for any time before "developing."

AN American eagle, trapped on one of the islands opposite Santa Barbara, was sold to a game fowl fancier, who put it in his chicken park. Suddenly one of the fowls flew at the eagle and struck it upon the wings. The eagle merely looked at the little chanticleer with a curious, inquisitive glance. Then another game fowl struck him in the breast, while the first one hit him on the neck. The eagle now opened his wings with a leisurely swing and erected his chief feathers, and his eyes seemed to blaze. Again one of the fowls dashed reckless-ly at the eagle, grasping a bunch of feathers in his attack. Before it recovered from its charge, the eagle extended one of its talons and seized the cock by the neck, and, with a dexterous swing, laid it fluttering and quivering beneath its left foot. The second cock now charged upon the huge stranger, whose wings were half opened and lazily rising and and falling. As the cock struck it was met by a blow from the eagle's wing, and as it fell was caught in his talons and lay dying upon the ground. The third fowl did not appear to be afraid. And, after thus disposing of his trouble-some adversaries, lazily stepped to one side and seemed to relapse into reflection, every once in a while looking down deliberately upon the dead fowls lying at his feet.

NEW YORK Graphic: Billiard-playing is an artistic pastime which is only less popular in America than our various out-of-door games of foot and base ball. It is doubtful if the introduction of more stringent rules for the former game will help to further popularize it; but it has long been evident that some change was necessary to make matches between professional players as interesting as they were formerly. The change has come though many changes since twenty-five years ago when Michael Phelan was champion because of a run of 200 on a five-inch-and-a-half by eleven four table, with six pockets and four balls, the carroms counting two and three and the pockets each three points. First the table was reduced and the two-inch pockets discussed with. Then one of the red balls was given a spot next the four remaining pockets; and in counting all carroms counted one. Finally, as it was supposed, cushioned carroms were resorted to as making the game sufficiently difficult to prevent professional players from making a game in a single inning. But Daly and Garnier are to play Hartly at Lyons, France, on a table laid out in eight 9 squares, and the player cannot carom twice on the balls while on the same square. This certainly ought to put a stop to "nursing." But there is nothing to what perfecting the science of billiards may not be brought by experts. It is as uncertain a problem as that of the eventual speed of the fastest trotting horse.

A VINEYARD proprietor near Nimes having had complaints made about his wines, required M. Barthelemy, Professor of the Faculty of Science at Toulouse, to analyze them. In some of them a rather large proportion of arsenic was found, larger than the trace sometimes found in red wines. The wine from one barrel tested contained no arsenic at all, and in this instance the cask containing the wine was a new one. It had not been previously used. All other barrels had been cleaned after use with "vitriol," which, in point of fact, is diluted sulphuric acid and some substances, which, while extracting the liquid, would not dissolve, as to give the gravity, as does simple water. Glucose meets this want. It does not materially sweeten the liquid, and it adds to its density, and gives it "body." Let milk-inspectors look out for the new glucosed milk.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Bovey Explains.

"Oh, naughty little Bovey!"
Sid Hermans. "To try to bite
Your dearest friend! I'm very sure
You knew it was not right.
What made you do it, darling?"
The baby-boy to Sid who,
While a world of mischief sparkled in
His beautiful, black eyes,
Said, "Mother's mean to hurt him,
Oh! too, of course me couldn't."
Reasoned, "Ma no hurt him so
Me thought me'd teal him my, you k ow—
And 'cause me is awful me wouldn't."
Detroit Liberty.

What Will You Be?

We see two boys standing side by side. Both are intelligent looking and kind looking; but one becomes an idle, shiftless fellow and the other an industrial and useful man. Perhaps when they were boys no one could have seen much difference between them; when they were men the contrast was marked. One became dissolute, day by day stepping the other became virtuous step by step; no one went up the other went down.

It is a question of great moment—What will you be? One determines he will do right and improve his powers and opportunities to the utmost. He is industrious, learns his business, becomes a partner or proprietor, and is known as a man of influence and power. Another does not intend to be bad, but is lazy and neglects to improve his opportunities. He shirks work, he "fools around" most he is seen with tobacco, and probably beer and whisky follow; his appearance shows he is unhealthy; he does not do his work well, he loses his position and becomes intemperate and probably a criminal.

There are many to-day who are standing at the parting place. You can take one path and you will go down as sure as the sun sets. If you prefer lounging around a saloon to reading good books at home, then you are on the road to ruin. If you do not obey your parents, if you run away from school, if you lie, if you swear, you will surely go down in life.

If any boy steadily improves his time, tries to learn his business, obeys his father and mother, is truthful and industrious, is respectful and pleasing toward others, he will succeed. No one can stop his doing well in life. He has determined that he will be a noble specimen of a man, and every good person will help him.—Scholar's Companion.

Bernese and the Bears.

I have been in a city full of bears over here in Switzerland, children, and when I was there I thought I should have to write and tell you about it, for it was a queer old place. Although there were bears everywhere—in the stores, in the streets, in the parks, on fountains, on clocks, in dens, on bridges and almost everywhere you looked you could see a bear—I don't believe you'd know why? Because most of them were made of stone, or wood, or pottery, or metal in images and pictures, I suppose also, and they could not hurt me; and the few fierce old fellows who were alive, that were where you have seen caged in some of our parks or a menagerie, were in dens, and, although they looked up at us with hunger eyes, and perhaps were wishing they could just get their teeth into our little children, and have a rich community dessert, they could not reach us, so we weren't afraid of them either.

Do you know where Berne is? Look on your atlas, and you will find it in the central city in Switzerland and Switzerland is the best place to ride a bicycle I know. And this city is the capital of all, where the Parliament lives, and where the laws are made. It is as large as a foreigner he is obliged to have the various customs performed here in the capital before he can get a great many weddings in the hotels in the city, and the children coming and going quite often. The people rule for this President just as we do at home, which comes every four years over here, where nearly all the other countries are ruled by Kings, or Emperors, or Czars or Queens. A queer way it was that the people named this town! Many, many years ago, when the place was a small village and the dense woods, in which hunters found fine game, there were only a few people in the town, and they got to quarreling about it, for each man was determined it should his own way, so that finally the all agreed that to settle the episode they would go hunting, and would name the town after the first animal that was killed that day. The first one killed proved to be a bear, and the city of Berne, which is the Swiss word for bear, and ever since his figure has been on the arms of the town and all the people have his image everywhere.

The city is beautifully situated and is surrounded by the prettiest country on hand. It is built on a high promontory nearly 2,000 feet above the sea, and the river, broad enough for steamboats at its three sides. The river here between very high banks which slope gradually to the water's edge, and which are laid out in beautiful terraces, and flowers gardens, and shaded walks; while down on the heights is a promenade and a drive whose miles in length, through avenues of great linden trees, which are as beautiful as our maples. Here the people, rich and poor, come at evening, to walk, or to sit in pleasure arbors, taking their suppers, or to drive on the avenue, some which have quite a fine view of the lovely Bernese Alps, which, when the sun is setting, and reddening their snowy summits in fossile lines, is a delight to behold.

The city itself we should hardly call handsome, as it is long streets of, compact and rows of high, narrow, strange, old-looking houses, resting upon arcades, and all lined with shops, with roofs that project many feet beyond the houses. The covered walks under these arcades are pleasant when the sun is hot, or in rainy weather, but they make the shops dark and damp and gloomy. Certainly these houses do not compare with our avenues of beautiful homes set apart from each other, bright and sunny, and away from the shops and the noise and traffic of the busy streets; but we see none such in Europe.

There are many fountains in the public squares of this old city of Berne. One of them is a bear in armor, with a sword, a bolt and a banner; another has a bear as a cross-bearer attending a squire, and another still is a large statue of an ugly old ogre, eating up little children. He has pockets full of them, and some are crouching down behind him, others on his shoulders and some poor little mortal is just slipping down his throat. I should think the little folks would want to keep away from that street.

There is an old clock in one of the towers of the city, and when the hour is about to strike, a little bronze bear strikes it on a bell, and immediately a number of bears come from the interior of the clock, and each in succession a bear to one who sits upon a throne with a scepter in his hand. It is amusing to watch them. At one end of the city there is a Bear's Ditch where the bears are kept, which have been trained to dance, to fan themselves, and to perform many tricks which afford great entertainment for the children. At all hours of the day you see children, and grown people, too, leaning over the stone wall which surrounds this den, watching these creatures and feeding them. They tell the story that some years since two British officers who leaned over too far, lost their balance and fell into the den and were torn to pieces and devoured by the bears, but I cannot vouch for the truth of it.

I am sure you all would be amused to look into the shop windows there, and see bears painting Alpine scenes with their paws in one and brushes in the other, and quite an artist's pose to their heads as they look at their work; others playing on pianos, flutes, violins and guitars; others standing up in a church to be married; others carrying great baskets on their backs, or umbrellas, or parasols, or walking with canes, and in fact all sorts of attitudes, and fixed up like people everywhere. After seeing the city, you could never think of it that we have no bears.—Cor. Chicago Standard.

Children's Magazines.

The subject of literary entertainment for the young, and especially for children, will be as prominent as any other in the literature of 1885. Much has already well upon us. It is a matter of common remark, and has been any time the last two years, that great attention is paid to the classes of juvenile readers, not only at this particular season, but all the year round, and every month and week in the year. There is very much to say in this respect, and the demand upon our consideration have grown with equal step in the development of magazine entertainment for the young and for the mature. But many little compunctions suggest themselves the question recurs whether this extra attention measures the real value of the provision given next morning by a hungry child.

The great fault of the children's magazines is that they give the least possible quantity of solid nourishment with as well to be amused, and the lightening of the reading of childhood by the riches of various folklore, the invention of new fairy and fantasy, the infusion of poetic beauty, and the organization of the child's delight in the story worthy to be told, besides. The objection is that there are no hearties; that tribes love the whole solid food, and confess, as in fact that the principal constituents of the child's paper or magazine are made up of sweets and confections. Now, we do not feel our children after this sort at their home tables. We think they have milk and bread and meat and fruit—the sweet stuff is a mere occasional luxury. Why should we allow their finer being, their mental qualities, to be demoralized any more readily than their physical? We are now greatly improving in physical hygiene and we could we lower the intellectual conditions?

We shall not be suspected of the slightest desire to underrate the value of pure entertainment, and when so great an original genius as Frederick Stockton appears, we earnestly desire to limit his appearances, for we shall seldom in a generation find his equal. The Saxe Holm or American production is not in the fashion of Mr. Stockton though he has brilliance and substance—but in the general line of forceful trash and silly fiction. It really affords us a grave sense of comfort to open an English juvenile like the Chatterbox, with its honest dullness, its pragmatical lessons and its plain child-like wonderments.

The publication of annuals has lead to another good reform, and that perhaps the radical one. It is that our American children's magazines, papers and books are written and illustrated for the best American talent. We want no different from a sane literary diet—one in which sensational trash and silly fiction will be sternly excluded. We want good morals and a standing menace to the enemies of virtue.

Boston Transcript.

"How strict do you call Carleton's wealth at?" asked Landon correspondent. "I don't know exactly, as from all I can judge I should be in worth $10,000 at the outside. He was worth $20,000 when he left Hillsdale, very economical and he carefully invested some of it, and is still a young man, as I know, having only graduated

HE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

ALEVOIX, - MICHIGAN.

UEEN VICTORIA is passionately fond of baked apples. The walnut is another favorite of hers. She has a dish of nuts constantly prepared, with the shells removed and every bit of the skin taken off, leaving the nut pure and whole.

PRESIDENT GOWEN, of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, says that a New York syndicate offered to purchase the coal lands of the company for $75,000,000. The road cost $60,000,000. The company would not sell for less than $150,000,000.

GEORGE SMITH asked a New York police station for lodging and was refused. He went out for a few minutes, returned with a roll of muslin, said he had stolen it, and they would have to take him in. He said he had no occupation, which would end him in a few weeks at most, and as he must find his place besides the street in which to die, he had taken this course to get it.

FANNIE ZIMMERMAN, daughter of a German in Baltimore, engaged her self to two gentlemen and fixed the wedding day. One lover, from Pennsylvania, went to her residence with a horse, and, as he was about to drive away with her to a minister's, his rival, from Virginia, made his appearance. After a race through the streets, the two were arrested and detained until the ceremony had been performed.

During the year ending June 30 the net American exports of corn, cattle, kerosene, bacon and hams, butter and cheese, lard and pork, fell off materially, especially provisions; but the increase in cotton was over 847,000,000 and in wheat and flour $25,000,000, so the increase exceeds the decrease by over $30,000,000. It would seem that the country is in a healthy condition, when judged in the balances of the Italian scale, the excess of exports over imports being over $100,000,000.

After calling himself Miss Dalrville to cook a magnificent apartment in the Arlington, Reginald Jukes, a dusky legislator was informed that there was no such committee as Ways and Means, but the Committee on Agriculture was that of which he was chairman, and that he was expected to look after the agricultural interests of the State.—Detroit Free Press.

Speed on Railways.

What is known as the "Dutchman," running from London to Bristol, is the train which travels rapidly than any other in the world. It completes a distance of 118 miles in two hours and fifty minutes, an average of 59½ miles an hour. The train which runs between Paddington and Swindon, England, takes the same distance at the rate of 58 miles an hour. The fastest train in America is that which runs between Jersey City and Philadelphia, a distance of 90 miles, which is accomplished in 90 minutes, an average of 60 miles an hour. The train on the Grand Trunk road between Montreal and Toronto, 333 miles, is run at the rate of 50 miles an hour. The fastest train in Germany between Berlin and Hamburg, 178 miles, is run at the rate of 47.89 miles. Between Berlin and Cologne, 360 miles, the rate is 47.40 miles. The fastest train in Belgium is that between Brussels and Ostend, 72 miles, which is run at the rate of 46 miles an hour. The fastest train in France is that between Paris and Calais, 185 miles, which is run at the rate of 45.25 miles an hour. The best previous American record was made by Conductor Watson Schaefer's 4208, in the game with Sisson in Chicago in 1878. The best record in the world was made by Vignaux in Paris, 1,537 points, playing with Slosson, also in the same game made 1,103.

FRANK B. WOOD, writing from the city of the Mexican National railway, says: "In course of the morning we passed what was to us a singular spectacle—a flight of migratory birds, known as yellow butterflies, darkening the entire valley by their myriads. There were solid miles of them, wending their way northward, apparently by command of well-organized tactics. They were on the wing for days, and in all the time we were in Mexico we never saw a butterfly, but each little creature called mariposa in Castilian—kept strictly on his course. Millions of them are thus seen in transit at this season of the year, but where they come from, or whither they go, none can tell."

AT West Point once, Gen. Sherman, accompanied by the commandant of cadets, was making an inspection tour of the barracks. He wasn't looking for contraband goods, but while in one of the rooms he got talking about his cadet days, and "When I was a cadet," he said to the commandant, "we hid things in the chimneys during the summer months. I wonder if the boys do so still." "It was then in June). So saying, he stepped to the fireplace and reached up the chimney. Rattling down at his touch came a board, followed by a frying-pan, a bottle empty) and a suit of citizens' clothes. The faces of the cadets who occupied the room were a study, but the General only laughed, and, turning to the commandant, said: "This is an exceptional case, Colonel. No need of reporting these young men."

NOTWITHSTANDING the numerous crimes that have been committed in the compartment railway cars of Europe, this system of traveling is still maintained, as though for the special benefit of thieves and garroters, and instances of theft and violence continue to be of frequent occurrence. Signora Falconi, an Italian prima donna, is the victim of the latest of these offenses. While traveling from Madrid to Malaga, at the station of Alcazar a handsomely dressed young man entered her compartment, and by degrees dropped into conversation with her. He finally made himself so agreeable that, when at a station further on he left the carriage and returned with a lemonade for the lady she was easily persuaded to accept it. The drink was drugged; and when Mme. Falconi awoke at Cordova she found that her pleasant traveling companion had disappeared, and with him the best part of her baggage, including all her jewelry, a fan set with diamonds, a costly cashmere shawl, and other articles of value.

THE most-taken history of Lord Coleridge's recent tour in this country would probably be far more interesting than the daily chronicles which were furnished by the press. The following is told in confidence and with bated breath by the inhabitants of a flourishing city in Western New York: The Chief Justice was entertained at dinner one evening by a local magnate. A caterer well known in that part of the State furnished the refreshments and chim on which they were served, which, by the way, was a very handsome and beautiful hand-painted set. During the course of the dinner it is related that Lord Coleridge said to his charming hostess: "You will excuse the comment, but I really must compliment you on the exquisite beauty of your china." My lady calmly appropriated the compliment, and gracefully replied: "Thank you, my Lord. It is used for the first time in your Lordship's honor." Then the dinner moved to a successful close. Judge of his Lordship's surprise when, at a breakfast served in the parlors of the local hotel next morning by a large party, he was confronted with the same beautiful set of china. But his surprise was augmented when, the following day, the banquet in his honor, given in a rival city ninety miles away, was graced with the hand-painted china used for the first time in his Lordship's honor.

SAYS Dodd's Sons: There are more novels in real life than are ever found within the covers of books. Take the mysterious tragedy reported from a little village in Maine for instance. Six years ago a tramp named Barrows stopped at the house of a farmer named Cate, and became his "hired man." When Cate died the widow employed Barrows to run the farm. After a while he became ambitious to step into Cate's shoes, and proposed marriage to his "boss." She refused his offer, whereupon he fired a revolver at her, and in running away she fell and broke her leg. Barrows thought he had killed her, and so shot himself in the breast. He recovered and had to serve a sentence in jail for his offense. But the shooting seemed to warm Mrs. Cate's heart toward her would-be murderer. She refused to appear against him at the trial, and soon after he got out of jail she married him. The strangely matched pair have lived happily to all appearances ever since, until the other evening Barrows was nowhere to be found in the barn, and did not come to the house for supper. Search was made, but without casting any light on the tragedy. Truth is indeed stranger than fiction, even in a steady-going New England community.

A WRITER in the London Lancet ridicules the habit of being in great haste and terribly pressed for time which is common among all classes of commercial men, and argues that, in most cases, there is not the least cause for it, and that it is done to convey a notion of the tremendous volume of business which almost overwhelms the house. The writer further says that, when developed into a confirmed habit, it is fertile in provoking nervous maladies

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

A Candid Proposal.

I love you, love you! love you!—yet confess
A conscientious scruple thrilling does come over me
When all the other shapes of loveliness
To whom I've said the same thing else before me,
They were, you are, the idol of my heart;
An idol it must have—which must be ki-ssed.
Hence,
That selfish wish once more I'm off my life's part
To woo my whole existence.

I see a merciful light crowd in your eyes,
And yet they shine like stars half hid be-neath
Mock-flowers! You are the fairest prize
My errant heart ever fought for in lances-lists.
You see, I'm candid; you have heard me over,
And now I drink, and thus, and here in love
I puzzled half an hour just to discover
The perfume of your cheek!

But now all empty was this heart of mine;
Some woman must be in it. With that vow,
Give me your self, and walk into the shrine
Of sovereign goddess. In short, I propose—
Mr. Won't the Johnson Mowbrays be caused,
The summer's changed this fall of many a row?
That we stand to be genuinely engaged
Until the season's over!

Why She Went with Charley.

"I have got two invitations for to-morrow," said Clara. "Charley wants me to go with him, and Fred also sent me an invitation. I hate Fred, and the place he's going to I don't like one bit. "Then you will go with Charley?" suggested her friend. "No; I shall go with Fred. The tickets to his excursion are $1 apiece, while the tickets to Charley's are only 75 cents."

She Was Not Mistaken.

He was a musher holding up the corner, and as a very pretty girl came along he spotted her, and made a break to mash her. "Ah," he said, with a greasy smile, tipping his hat, "I beg your pardon, but are you not Miss ——?" But before he could continue she interrupted with: "Not mistaken in thinking you are a fool? No, I don't think I am," and she sailed past, while he fell up against a lamp-post and grasped as the crowd standing around gave him the laugh till it made him sick in fourteen languages.

The Woman Question in Sweden.

Before the extensive use of steamboats on the waterways around Stockholm the Dalecarlian girls were accustomed to come to the capital in great numbers each season to row the passengers from that point to their own neighborhood of the city. This custom still exists to some extent, and the visitor may be rowed by a brawny peasant girl on an island restaurant, or across an arm of the lake. The girls have lost none of the moral independence and the remarkable physical strength which have since the beginning of Swedish history distinguished their ancestors. In the large cities they are found to-day mixing mortar, carrying burdens and rowing boats quite as skillfully as the men, and quite as scrupulously to the employers. The most famous boatwomen are the girls of the parish of Battvik, whither we are conducted in the search of the mythical mid-summer dance. Frank D. Millet, in Harper's.

"I Wasn't a Mash.

Soon after we left Meridian, on the way across to Vicksburg, a solemn-looking old chap came into the smoker and ground and sighed and took on like a man terribly distressed, and when we asked him where he seemed to feel it the worst, he replied:

"Gentlemen, there is a powerful good-looking young woman in the next car, and she has fallen into the hands of a human hyena."

"No?" shouted three or four voices at once.

"Yes, indeed. He's a wicked-looking wolf in sheep's clothing. If I mistake not, he represents some New England theological seminary. He has engaged her hand, and a whispering of his love, and the giddy thing has fallen right into the trap. I couldn't bear to see it in the least, and so I came in here, Gentlemen, some of you have daughters?"

Yes, there were three of us who had daughters ranging from 2 to 6 years old, and we were honest enough to admit it.

"Just think of your daughters being kidnaped by a Philistine!" he continued. "He's talking, and flattering, and promising, and she's somebody's daughter, gentlemen, something ought to be did!"

We agreed. We all lounged in and say that she was a good-looking, happy-faced girl of 20, and we returned and held an indignation meeting. After a fine display of eloquence and oratory it was unanimously agreed that if the musher got off at Jackson, where we were to wait twenty minutes, the good old man should go in and tell the girl what was what. Jackson was finally reached, and sure enough the human hyena got off and ran into the hotel. He was not out of sight when we all entered the car, and the philanthropist took a seat beside the girl and began:

"My dear young lady, my heart is sad—old so sad! for you! You are on the road to destruction!"

"We're not on monopay?"

"I mean that the villain who left you a moment ago is seeking to ensnare you!"

"The evilhain!"

"Yes, ma'am, the wolf in sheep's clothing—the hyena in human form—the scoundrel whose very look proves the vileness of his heart. I warn you to beware of him as you would of a serpent."

"Why, he's—he's my husband!" she shouted at the top of her voice, and the next instant she had her fingers playing through his venerable locks and executing channels down his wrinkled cheeks.

All of us got away at last and found hiding-places in the baggage and mail cars—all but the old man. When he managed to get clear of the bride he slid off the car and took a beeline up town, and though he met several people while in sight of us we couldn't see that he stopped to answer any questions.

M. Quad.

Singing as a Profession.

Mrs. Imogen Brown, the leading soprano of St. Bartholomew's church, has a salary of $1,000 a year, and, it is said, a further emolument of $2,000 a year provided for her by subscription. Miss Thursby, when the leading soprano of the Broadway Tabernacle church, received, it is said, similar rewards. But such instances are exceptional. The average pay of the soprano of a church quartet choir is not more than $600 a year, and $350 is considered a very fair remuneration. Her duties are to sing one rehearsal night a week, and at two services on Sunday, and she must be a cultivated person with a good voice, and accustomed to the service she performs. If her voice is unusually good, and has had some intelligent training, she may begin at $200 or $300 a year, without the preliminary experience. A young woman with such a voice obtained such a position a short time ago, and within a few days after signing her agreement received three similar offers at increased prices. In two years she will probably command $600, $800, perhaps $1,000 per annum.

The position, too, has certain prerequisites. It brings to her side the social influence that will exert for her its own valuable kind offices. It leads to other engagements—for instance, to engagements to sing at private entertainments —a practice much in vogue nowadays, during the fashionable season. The fee on such occasions is usually $25; but singers like Miss Beebe receive more, and an entertainer like Mr. Vanderbilt might give a check for almost any amount. Social influence can secure for our young artist engagements in the concert hall, where she will be in the receipt of from $25 to $100 a performance. Mr. Theodore Thomas usually pays his vocal soloists $100, but these are almost always professionals, amateurs getting no pay save the honor of having been invited to sing. By a professional is meant a singer who has been before the public for some time, and who makes singing or the teaching, her entire business. By an amateur is meant—almost anybody.

But if our young artist asks what annual income she can depend upon upon what moneys she may be sure of receiving month by month, the answer is that she can be sure of nothing at all. An engagement in a church choir may be depended upon while it last, and so may a series of paying pupils, if one has them. But opportunities to sing at private parties and in the concert-hall come and go like the flocks of sea-gage that they are. There are so many singers, so many teachers, that the ones are left out in the cold.

Opera is a different field altogether—different in its social aspects; for while in the church choir, the private party, and the concert-hall our young singer is among her friends and among Americans who will protect her, in the opera house her associates are for the most part foreigners, some of whom have little regard for a woman's character or reputation. Yet a great many of our best singers and truest women have reached the heights of their present positions through the operas of the opera. Only, where the danger is greater our young artist will exercise the greater care. A chorus singer in English opera receives about $15 a week; in Italian opera, from $15 to $20 a week. Her costume in English opera she usually pays for herself; in Italian opera the manager usually pays for them. A leading singer in Italian opera receives from $800 to $400 a month for the lighter parts; for the principal parts, from $800 a month to $2,000 a night. Madame Patti's share last winter of $4,500 a night and next winter of $5,500 a night—is, of course, beyond all generalization, and stands apart. Madame Gerster received about $1,000 a month when under Strakosch; Madame Lucca about the same. Miss Cary's terms were $600 a night. The scale is very sliding, and the great prima donne command almost as much as they ask. Harper's Bazar.

Just Too Utterly Awful.

A party of young ladies were visiting a photograph gallery in Austin.

"Do you know, girls," suddenly observed one of them, "that in the photographic camera everything stands on its head?"

"It can't be possible!" exclaimed one of the young ladies, growing pale, and trembling like an aspen leaf. "You don't mean that?"

"But it's so. Why, what's the matter with you?" said the speaker.

"Matter enough! Why, I had my photograph taken here last Monday, and I—oh, it's just too terrible for anything!"

Gambling on Transatlantic Steamers.

The London papers have entered upon a lively discussion of the system of gambling which prevails on transatlantic steamers. Passengers who have suffered or been annoyed by it write that gangs of American gamblers, card-sharpers and bunko men make a regular business of traveling on the fortnightly liners. Their victims are generally Englishmen. It is even stated that these dangers must be known to the officers of many of the steamers, and the question is asked, "Why doesn't the managers of the Atlantic line steamships rid themselves of this criminal nuisance?"—New York World.

Our Boarding House.

"Mrs. Gimps," said the law student, as the party seated themselves at the supper table, "I was born, raised and brought up in an orthodox Methodist family, and since I have became an inmate of your hashery I have sorely missed my table devotions. Why do you not have some one return thanks at your table?"

"I'd like to know what for," interposed the hungry freight clerk.

"Well, Mr. Bills," said the landlady, who was busily pouring tea, "if you want to say grace you can do it in any way or language that you please."

"Thank you, Mrs. Gimps, I will. Pedite mensas, qui estas en sus ciesa—"

"Oh, say, now, Bills, what do you call that?" interrupted the grocery clerk.

"That's a Spanish prayer. What did you suppose it was—Choctaw?"

"Well, let up on it any way; don't you see you are frightening the young ladies?"

"Well, as I was going to say—"

"Please pass the butter," from the counter skipper.

"—It is manifestly proper to always say grace—"

"Grease, you mean," said the grocer's boy.

"—Before meat, and the memory of my holy childhood is too fresh—"

"Want some salt?"

"My friend, an old Italian proverb says: 'Give mother counsel nor salt until you are asked for it,' so please excuse. As I was saying, the memory of my childhood clings to me still."

"Ladies and gentlemen, as an ardent lover of athletic sports, I would propose a little diversion for this company," interposed the counter-skipper.

"What is it?" asked the milliner.

"Let us have some feats of strength between this butter and the codfish balls. Do you understand, Miss Giggs?"

"Sof-fish-ently well."

"Oh, spare us! spare us this is worse by far than the hash!" groaned the grocer's boy.

"My friends," again ventured the law student, "by your ribald joking you have sought to throw me from the thread of my recital. I was about to say that though as a child I was surrounded by religious influences my every wish was gratified, and I had everything I wanted.

"I saw a quotation the other day that will just fit your case. I think, Mr. Bills."

"What is it?"

"Here it is:"

"Others children sit by their doors,
And wear the fine clothes of their mothers,
With many a curl dangling about their knees."

"Ah, Mr. Scales, since you are reversed in no thank you, Mrs. Gimps, not any more sweetmeats in poetical quotations, be kind enough, to explain the meaning of what Gloster says in Richard III."

"Why, what a position it was that of Gate, the knight, as see the silver of a bell."

"Do you understand it, Mr. Scales?"

"Very well."

"What is it?"

"He wanted his son to be cook of the walk—that's all."

"When I read that," said the milliner, "I thought it had some reference to hats—bell. They have 'fools' in base ball, don't they?"

"Yes," said the grocery clerk, looking at his crippled fingers. "Yes, Miss Giggs, they have some tough fools in base ball."

"Any tougher than we have on this table occasionally?"

"No, not quite so tough."

"Gentlemen," angrily exclaimed the landlady, "this is scandalous! You infidel me and my vittals right to my face. Now you've got to let me or pay what you owe."

"Well let up."—Fort Wayne Monitor.

Bad Whist.

The following is a specimen of bad whist raised to the height of positive genius. A leads a plain suit, A plays low, B wins with queen, Y in lady, of course drops a singleton. B returns the suit, and Y nails the card second hand with the king of trumps. Later, B, who holds ace, knave, eight of trumps, and is convinced that Y has two aces alone, takes up the picket suit, and it is trumped again with the queen. Stupefaction of B, followed by the reflection that Y didn't think of the due referred precedence in word possession, being merely trance-sound up. R, Y and hands put on the eight with a contemptuous sniff, and Y gathers it up with the nine. Being overpowered with gentle, the eight affectionately. Y exclaims: "What on the sea of putting on a small one second time? Do king and ace not the more surface?" Groans from sides and exit. Rochester Post-Express.

A QUART of whiskey was mixed with coal and carried to a saloon in New York town, and half an hour later one animal was following. "We won't go home till morning," or something that way, and treated several persons to a couple of "beers," and acted in a very proper-possible manner generally. When she stooped up she grasped down a beak and broke her nose. This shows the superior intelligence and good sense of the cow over the average lobulous person. When the latter gets drunk and makes things howl, instead of jumping down a bank and breaking his neck when he gets sober, he immediately begins to lay the foundation for another reeling drink. Northtown Herald.

LEARN to control your temper now, children or by-and-by it will control you.

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

The best way to have good children is to be good yourself. There is a rough and ragged old saw to the effect that we may not expect a good whelp from an ill dog.

To destroy a healthy body by intemperance renders a man as much of a suicide as if he were to hang himself or take poison for the especial purpose of killing himself. Young man beware.

If you want to keep warm don't drink whisky; its effects are only transitory and it leaves you colder in an hour. Drink a glass of ale with a plentiful supply of black pepper. It will fix you.—Ex.

The Detroit Free Press has generously opened its columns for the publication of "help wanted" and "situations wanted" without charge. If you are out of work, or if you want help, send your notice to the daily Free Press.

"Any items to-day?" asked a reporter. "Yes," answered a citizen; "just say that when Ben. Butler was a republican general at New Orleans he stole spoons, but when he was a greenback candidate for governor of Massachusetts he was an honest man and did not steel spoons." Soit is; they have to leave the republican party to become honest.

Every one is complaining of high taxes, higher than ever before. Here is a state boasting of millions in the treasury and state taxes constantly on the increase. Reason, every legislature for over twenty years has been republican by immense majorities. Every member has free passes on railroads. They adjourn over to go home or to travel, to visit some institution. They do not legislate on an average of four days in a week. They passed a resolution for instance that all could go to Yorktown at the expense of the state. They make immense appropriations for partizan purposes. In fact, that party in the state is so strong they squander all the money they choose to with impunity. People will complain of increased taxes and still vote to keep the party that creates them in power.—Ex.

Hardwood Timber.

The following extracts from the Grand Traverse Eagle touch a matter of equal importance to Charlevoix, and we recommend them to the thoughtful consideration of those who have influence with unemployed capital:

It was but a short time since the finest timber in Northern Michigan was slashed down and burned as rapidly as possible in order to get it out of the way. It is now more generally understood that good hard wood timber is an element of wealth to its owner and to the whole country. Hard wood mills are multiplying in every direction and are almost as important as railroads to remote settlements. This industry is now merely in its infancy and yet much of the later development and prosperity of northern Michigan is owing more to the hard wood interests than to the pine. The next important step to take is to establish hard wood manufactures as far as possible in connection with the mills. This has been done in many towns in the vicinity of hard wood forests with the most satisfactory results. * * * Our shipping facilities by water are of the utmost importance because they can never be successfully pooled with railroads. There is a vast amount of money in the large cities seeking profitable investment and the opportunities offered here for great and profitable enterprises cannot long be overlooked.

Touching the same subject the Traverse City Herald says:

There is a vast amount of most excellent hemlock timber in Western and Northern Michigan, which must very soon become available, as the pine is rapidly disappearing. Ten or twelve years ago the writer, who was then looking up pine timber, had his attention called to some of the finest hemlock he ever saw, located in the southwest part of Kalkaska county. At that time it would not pay to cut it, but such timber is now becoming valuable. Much of the hemlock of Northern Michigan is very large and exceptionally fine timber, and its preservation is now or soon will be a matter of importance.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure, that the doctors had given up and said could not be cured. It cures a beauty. Sold by Dr. Chester

C. R. BELLINGER
carries the largest and finest stock of
JEWELRY,
Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best time-piece ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges.

New Goods.
At Cost
FOR CASH
For the Next 30 Days.
MISS L. SPAULDING,
Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

G. W. JEFFERIES,
Dealer in
Fresh and Cured Meat
Fresh and Salt Fish,
AND VEGETABLES.
Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.
West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

SPECIAL OFFER To every person who will pay in Three Dollars cash in advance for two years subscription to the JOURNAL, we will present one year's subscription to the Detroit WEEKLY FREE PRESS, acknowledged to be the best weekly family newspaper in the West, which also includes THE HOUSEHOLD, one of the best 16 page literary journals ever printed in the world. The last four campaigns each year necessitate another great political struggle, and the desire of everyone to be fully informed on the vital issues of the hour, no better offer than this can be made. It is getting two papers free for one year as interest on the price of THE JOURNAL a year in advance. REMEMBER, Three Dollars pays for the JOURNAL two years and secures the FREE PRESS and HOUSEHOLD one year free. SUBSCRIBE NOW. Sample copies may be obtained at this office. Address THE JOURNAL, Charlevoix, Mich.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.
The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge,) with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure CURE for COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. WILSON, 194 Penn St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

O. B. WEED & CO.
Are headquarters for
DRUGS
CHEMICALS,
Patent Medicines, all Kinds,
Imported and Domestic Perfumery,
Toilet Articles,
AND FANCY GOODS.
None but Pure Medicines
Kept in stock.
Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Barkholow's new
Opera Block

Joseph Hyland,
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Boiler Maker,
Sheet-Iron Worker,
and manufacturer of
Hyland's Patent Fireman.
Dealer in all kinds of
SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.
Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of boilers promptly attended to.

AT COST!
All kinds of
Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods.
The Finest Line of
French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear
Ever brought to Charlevoix.
Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoes.
They have no Superior.
CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY,
And Satisfaction Guaranteed.
L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House
CHARLEVOIX

GEO. W. MILLER,
DEALER IN
Clothing
Gents' Furnishing Goods,
Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels,
GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.
Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

Advance Lumber Co
Are now prepared to do
CUSTOM SAWING
Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.
GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.
ADVANCE, MICH.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,
DEALER IN
Hardware,
FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.
Charlevoix, Mich.

Overcoats
AND SUITINGS
Gents' Overcoats.
Youths' Overcoats.
Boys' Overcoats
Gents' Suits.
Youths' Suits.
Boys' Suits
I have just received a large assortment of the above goods, reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing out Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and yourself.
E. M. Clark
Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

EVERYTHING
In the line of Furniture
AND
Undertakers' Goods
Can be found at the old reliable house of
H. C. Cooper
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,
CHEAP FOR CASH
Come and See me before Buying
THIS IS THE SAME
OLD FOX
OF BY-GONE YEARS,
And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them
The Old Reliable Establishment in Charlevoix
Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment
DRESS GOODS, CLOTHS
Boots and Shoes,
Hats and Caps, Gents' Goods
Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets
Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Feed
And you can't guess anything we haven't got
FRESH
Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our
REMEMBER
We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction
COME AND SEE US
Yours,
AMOS FOX

THE JOURNAL.

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 17, 1884.

Local Business Notices.

Apples, Onions, Pork, etc., by ... Prices guaranteed.
DUMONT, EMREY & CO.

... only store in town who make a ... of Gents' Fine Hats, is Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

... Sale.—Two or three good ... for sale cheap for cash or good security.
J. MILO EATON.

... grades of Shingles at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

... SALE.—A second-hand portable mill, with engine and boiler complete, ... cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

... Oats, Feed, Bran, Middlings, and Fine Corn Meal. Remember rates, Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

Wood, Wood, Wood.
... cords of good dry birch and ... stock wood for sale. Good measure ... Call at the office of
J. MILO EATON.

... right, Emrey & Co.'s Apples and ... alone strike the hearts of all who have ... them. For sale by the barrel and bushel.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the ... meter at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. ... m. each day, for the week ending yesterday. ... zero in all cases unless marked with

	7AM	2PM
Thursday	17	23
Friday	11	14
Saturday	15	20
Sunday	30	29
Monday	12	11
Tuesday	1	10
Wednesday	8	18

Provision Market.

RETAIL PRICE TO CONSUMERS.

... ER, per bbl, $6.00@8.00.
... BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $3.00.
... MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, ...
... per ton, $16@12.
... per bu, 45c.
... COND FEED, per cwt, $1.50.
... KES, per bu, $1.50.
... TOES, per bu, 45@50c.
... ONS, per bu, $1.00.
... TER, per lb, 28@30c.
... per doz, 30@35c.
... EY, per lb, 25c.
... S, per lb, 12@14c.
... E, beef steak, 7@12½c; pork steak, 9@ ... ution, 8@12½c; sausage, 15c; hams, 14c; ... 12½c.
... ow, eight.

News Brevities.

...llent sleighing now.

... Kalkaska Leader is offered for ...

H. Vannormum is quite sick at ... in Norwood.

W. Kane went to Kalamazoo Thursday for a brief visit.

... ox team drawing saw logs ... on Bridge street yesterday.

... any earthly use in abusing ... because you disagree with him?

... Crawford and Francis Sin... of East Banks, were married ...ly.

... fire department are to give an ... of their unrivaled parties on the ... of Feb.

... and Albert O'Brian, of Nor... are lumbering at South Arm ...winter.

... C. F. VanAuken, and Mr. ..., of Atwood, exchange pulpits Sunday.

...aster Bolton, of Inwood fell ... his horse last Saturday, and ...severely injured.

... Mr. Morgan of Atwood, is ...ing a very interesting series of ...ngs at Barnard.

... French has been here a few ... looking after his interests. Ex... to return home this week.

... Good Templars had an interest... program and a fair audience at ...entertainment last Friday even...

...ing through the ice on Round ... reported successful, some fine ...es of perch and herring being ...

...ing 1883 there were 849 deeds ...92 mortgages put on record in ...e of register of deeds of this ...y.

... Saveland, a well-known com... merchant of Milwaukee, is ...ng after his business interests ...s vicinity this week.

...e Statesman, Dec. 25th: "The ...evoix Sentinel is a good paper." ...mon, Jan. 15th: Charlevoix "has ...ood newspaper and a —— poor ...

Well, Phil., what in —— is ...matter with the JOURNAL now? ...this a part of the game of "freeze ...

"The Charlevoix JOURNAL is placed on our exchange list this week. It is only a five column folio, but it has more in it than many nine column folios."—Pentwater News. Thanks, but the regular edition of the JOURNAL is a five column quarto instead of a folio. To our exchanges and our free list who care only for the local news, we send half sheets of four pages.

Notwithstanding the fact that times are hard all over the whole country, the outlook for a profitable winter in this vicinity is very encouraging. Wages for laboring men will not be as high as last year, but are better than in almost any locality in the state. The cord wood business is brisk, wood bringing $1.40 per cord, which will allow a fair profit, to those who go into the business.—Progress.

An exchange well says: "The natural inclination of some people in conversation is to belittle everything in connection with the city or town in which they are resident, and very often they even go so far as to sneer at their local paper for publishing statements intended to promote the interests of the locality represented by them. There is a heap of sound logic which it would be well for such people to take cognizance of in the advice of a rural sheet which urges the readers never to speak anything in disparagement of their town or any of its citizens who are engaged in promoting its prosperity. The way to advance the interest of your city is to do all you can to aid your laborers, mechanics, merchants, doctors and ministers. Help to build your churches and schools. Aid every enterprise of merit, encourage every movement that will honestly bring a dollar to your town and maintain labor and capital. Stand by your own town and people at all times and under all circumstances. This is the way to make things lively and prosperous."

A Mild Winter.

The Charlevoix JOURNAL of January 3d, congratulates itself and residents of that locality, that the thermometer had not been down to zero this winter. How is it now, brother Strang? Weren't you a little previous so to speak.—Cassopolis Democrat.

Guess not. Just glance at the figures in the first column of this page and see what they indicate. The thermometer which gave this record hangs on a small strip of board attached to the stairs leading to the office. It is twenty feet from the ground, five feet from any wall, and gets the west and north wind without obstruction. As it differs but little from other thermometers in the village, we consider it a fair indication of the weather.

Boyne Falls.

Boyne Falls is situated in Charlevoix county on the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad six miles south east from Boyne City, between which places runs a daily stage. Boyne City is at the head of Pine lake, which connects with Lake Michigan at Charlevoix. Boyne Falls has four stores; two drug stores, one furniture store, one bakery, one blacksmith shop, one shoe shop, one hotel, one livery stable, a postoffice, a school-house, a church, a depot, a saw-mill, a broom handle factory and thirty four dwelling houses. A gristmill is partly finished which is to have five run of burr stones and one set of rollers. The buildings as a whole are of good appearance. The hotel is kept by Israel Dandy, formerly of Mayfield, Grand Traverse county.—Cor. T. B. Eagle.

Heavy Taxpayers.

We give this week a list of tax-payers who pay over one hundred dollars tax in this township. These figures do not include amounts paid where the individual is a member of a firm whose total is less than $100, nor names of those who pay in this and adjoining townships a total of $100 or more, which we understand several of our citizens do. Fractions of a dollar are omitted.

Amos Fox	$266
Charlevoix Summer Resort	264
John Nicholls	205
Upright & Hurlbut	178
John S. Dixon	142
L. D. Bartholomew	123
Richard Cooper	122
Upright Emrey & Co	122
Jas. Inwood	118
M. J. Stockman	114
J. Milo Eaton	113

Farm Produce of every description taken in exchange at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

Half a Century of Married Life.

The Lancaster, Penn., New Era of Jan. 3d contains the following report of the golden wedding of the parents of Mr. E. H. Green, of Charlevoix, which will doubtless be of interest to Mr. Green's many friends in this vicinity:

On Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Green, of Maytown, the father and mother of the wife of Mr. Simon May, of this place, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding by a golden wedding entertainment. Mr. Green is 73 years of age and his wife is 72. They were married in Ephrata in 1833 by the Rev. William Bates, a Lutheran minister. A few years after their marriage they removed to their present place of residence, where they have since lived continuously. Thirty-four guests were present at the golden wedding, among them being seven children, seventeen grand children, three sons-in-law, two daughters-in-law, and a sister of Mr. Green—Mrs. Harry Hulsinger, who also resides in Maytown. The house of the aged couple had been beautifully decorated for the occasion. Over the parlor mantle-piece, in gilt letters, were the dates, "1833-1883." Spanning the entrance door to the parlor were the words, "Welcome Home," also in gilt. The gifts were numerous and elegant. Highly prized of those presented is a beautiful gold-headed cane to Mr. Green from his son, Major E. H. Green, of Charlevoix, Mich., who served in the One Hundred and Seventh Regiment of Pennsylvania Reserves during the late Rebellion.

The guests sat down to an elegant banquet at 1 o'clock p. m. After disposing of this, speeches and music followed. The delightful day's pleasures continued until the evening, when they came to a close. Mr. Green retired from business some years ago, and both himself and wife are now enjoying a peaceful old age, beloved by their relatives and hosts of friends and esteemed by all others.

South Arm Items.

Christmas and New Year's passed off quietly. Some entertained family parties and several Christmas trees were held in this and adjoining townships. At the Bennett tree, some sneak thief stole Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Vance's gloves from his overcoat pocket.

Mr. Shoal's children have the measles.

Miss Edith Cole of Bay Springs, is teaching the school in Hipp's district.

Mrs. Watts, of Allegan county, is visiting her daughters, Mrs. Roe, Mrs. Stray, and Mrs. J. Mathers, of Central Lake.

Miss Ogletree, who has been teaching in Echo, is quite ill, and it is doubtful whether she will finish her school.

Mr. John Crawford and Miss. Mary A. McClain of East Jordan, were joined in holy matrimony on Christmas. May many merry Christmas days be given them.

Mr. Forbes Murray and nephew, Peter, have gone to Canada canvassing for family records.

Mr. Richard Tyndall preached in the Bennett school house on Sabbath, Jan. 6th, to a large and attentive audience. He expects to spend every alternate Sabbath there, hereafter.

A party of young folks came down from the peninsula on New Year's night, with plans all made for a gay time, but their prospective host was "out," and the school house was engaged for them to go on with the dance.

A special school meeting was held in district No. 4, Echo, on Dec. 29th, but no business could be legally transacted on account of the want of sufficient details in writing the notice. Instead of inserting the object of the meeting, it was written exactly as it stands in the law book. F. A. N.

Resolutions of Respect.

The following resolutions of respect were adopted at a recent regular meeting of Charlevoix Lodge F. & A. M., on the death of Brother Hugh O'Neil:

WHEREAS, By one of the mysterious decrees of Divine Providence, it has been pleased to remove from our midst, and from the tools and labors of this earthly quarry, our worthy brother, Hugh O'Neil; therefore be it

Resolved, That while we murmur not at the infinite wisdom which decreed the event, we mourn in sincerity for the loss of our beloved brother who, after a useful life here, has been "called up higher."

Resolved, That we will cherish the memory of his modest virtues, his square and upright life, and the genuine and unfeigned brotherly feeling which marked his coming in and going out among us.

Resolved, That to the bereaved widow and child whom he leaves behind, we offer our sincere condolence and sympathy, and assure them that while they have lost a fond husband and kind father, we beg to share the feeling of our loss with them, and mingle our tears with theirs.

Resolved, That as an outward expression of our sense of bereavement, the furniture and jewels of this lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family of the deceased, and published in the Charlevoix papers.

J. MILO EATON,
O. D. HILTON,
O. S. WARBURN,
Committee.

Historical Society.

Reported for the Journal.

This society met at the parlors of Mrs. C. L. Loveday, Tuesday evening, with president John Nicholls in the chair.

An instrumental solo by Miss Essie Buttars opened the exercises of the evening. Al. Washburne then read a carefully prepared paper on "The Attitude of France, Spain, and Germany during the Revolution."

Miss Esther Buttars, Mrs. Oscar Upright, and Messrs. Buttars and Parmelee, favored the audience with a beautiful weird piece entitled "Annie Snow."

Miss Maud Loveday rendered a guitar solo which bordered on the sweet strains oft times heard in the military life.

"The miser dying amidst his gold," was recited in a very efficient manner by Miss Nina Stephens, as was also one rendered by Miss Maud Loveday, a selection from Eliza Cook, on Washington.

Miss Essie Buttars and Mr. Parmelee rendered the charming duet of "Brown eyes close to the window," and Mrs. Loveday closed the exercises of the evening with an instrumental solo.

The society will meet at the parlors of Mrs. L. E. Allen on Tuesday evening next.

Take Warning.

Petty thieving is reported to be altogether too frequent in some quarters, and if it don't stop pretty soon, measures will be taken to put a forcible stop to it. Frank Shanbut is one of the victims, and he thinks when an axe is taken from a wood-pile in the daytime, it is time to settle accounts with someone. Numerous other articles have been taken from his premises at various times. Other parties are also sufferers. Barn doors have been broken down, hooks and hinges broken, oats and feed carried off, and in fact a sort of general skirmish for supplies seems to have been inaugurated. In some of these cases parties have been suspected and will be watched until their guilt or innocence is proven. Let us hope that there will be no more reason for complaint, but if there is, let justice come quick and sure.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by UPHAM Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or more, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Jan. 15, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Henry D. Luff to Ellis J. Hagenbuch, n e ¼ sec 6 T 33 N R 6 W, 63.58 acres, $200.
Geo. Struble and wife to Edgar L. Miller, w ½ of lot 37, 6th F. South Bayou, $250.
Chauncey Howe and wife to Charles C. Howe, 40 acres of s w ¼ sec 26-34-7, $100.
Mary H. Wood to Antoine Duval, n e ¼ of s w ¼, 15-33-8, $300.
Charles Ballika and wife to Gottfried Brauer, w ½ s e ¼ of sec 1, Ballika, $75.
Charles H. Wright to Wm. Hogg, n e ¼ of s w ¼, 18-32-7, $300.

From Florida.

L. D. Bartholomew writes from Jacksonville Fla., Jan. 11th, as follows:

We arrived here at 1 o'clock this morning about 15 hours behind time. The cold wave and blizzard extended as far south as Florida, doing great damage to orange groves in northern Florida, but today it is uncomfortably warm. We found plenty of snow all the way to Montgomery, Ala.; Mercury at Cincinnati and Louisville down to 30° below zero.

Cash! Cash! Cash! Bring your Furs, Wool, and Furs to Upright, Emrey & Co.'s and get the Cash for them.

PIMPLES.
I will mail, Free, the recipe for a simple vegetable balm that will remove TAN, PIMPLES, FRECKLES and blackheads, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful. Also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing a 3c. stamp, Prof. T. Fellows & Co., 19 Barclay St., N. Y.

ACROSS THE PLAINS.

The plains were wide and vast and drear,
The mountain peaks seemed cool and near,
The sun hung low toward the west,
"So near," we sighed, "are we to rest."

But journeying through the closing day,
Our feet are weary all the way;
Far, far before our aching sight
The plains lie in the waning light.

The mountain peaks that seemed so near,
And held our rest forever there,
Are far across the desert lands—
We vainly cry with lifted hands.

O hills that stand against the sky,
We may not reach you ere we die.
Our hearts are broken with the pain,
For rest and peace we may not gain.

Upon the plains we faint and fall,
Our tears toward the mountains fall;
The plains are cheapest, but not to pray;
So die we with the dying day.

A Conspicuous Opportunity.

"Why don't I get married?"

"I wonder if there is any process of law or condition of ethics that can protect me from that question?"—and Miss Margaret Winthrop turned sharply round and looked at her brother-in-law as if for a reply.

Dr. Ainslee looked up from his paper with an expression that evinced a certain enjoyment of the chase, rather than a sympathy with the pursued, and answered:

"Yes, there is one means of escape."

"And that is to get married, I suppose?"

"Exactly."

Miss Winthrop was not soothed by the suggestion. She regarded it as an unwholesome state of civilization in which a woman with a handsome income and a natural bias toward contentment could not pursue her own course without being headed off at every turn with that bugbear, query. Among her friends she was spoken of as eccentric, a woman who unfortunately had ideas, and, while possessing undoubtable advantages, had signally failed to make any use of them. This failure was all the more conspicuous from the fact that in her first season she had promised much. She had allowed brilliant opportunities to slip through her fingers one by one, until she had brought the reproach of spinsterhood upon a family that within the memory of man had married its daughters young and well, and, to crown all, was the only woman in the country, happier. She was 28 to-day.

This was the view taken of the situation by her friends. Miss Winthrop regarded it from a different point of observation. She knew many things that had not come to the knowledge of the world could not know concerning the past behavior on the part of her late lamented husband. Perhaps out of regard for Mrs. Ainslee's abnormally sensitive sympathy for connubial bliss, or perhaps because it was not forgotten, Miss Winthrop preferred it in secret and ultimately revealed it to no one.

John Remsenway had been cursed by no catastrophe. He had simply been uniformly unlucky. A series of apparently unimportant speculations, each insignificant in itself, but united of his once ample fortune to a meager income barely sufficient for his needs. The strenuous effort to retrieve it in a climate unsuited to him had sapped his vitality, destroyed his nerves, and left health and spirit, to the within sight of his ancestral roof, but not beneath its shelter. His own people were dead, the other members of his family had gone away; the only familiar face he had seen since his return was that of Tom Glessel. His coming was not heralded, he arrived in hired lodgings, and they were as bleak and dismal as such places usually are. The room where he lay when he was called Brussels carpet, an armchair out at elbows, a lambskin sofa, and the same other essential articles, in keeping with those already mentioned. The room was hot, and the air filled with the odor of coal. He lay there listlessly, looking at the stunted maples, with leaves all covered with coal dust, that grew just outside the window by his bed, yearning for one breath of pure, fresh air, one hour of peaceful sleep. But he was conscious of anything else but that until it was all over; he would never leave this room until he left the world. He turned his face to the wall and wondered confused his eyes with his hand.

There was a knock at the door, and in response a gaunt bobbly, "Come in." It was scarcely for the Doctor; it might be his landlady, who sometimes came in to see how he was getting on, and to ask him his medicine. He heard the rustle of drapery, and startled in faint, sweet voice: "Mr. Remsenway?" Then a hand touched his arm, and beheld a vision. A fair, slender woman, clad in soft white mull that seemed to radiate the room around her, grave order, was standing by the bed. She wore a bunch of heliotrope in her belt, these fragrances seemed like a blessed breath from that faraway nook he had been longing for only a moment before; from under the fluffy, feathery edge of her hat fell a heavy, golden fringe of bright-brown hair, and a pair of large violet eyes beamed on him with a sweet compassion.

He was an unpromising subject, truly; his face was sharp and sallow, his eyes were sunken, and his hands nearly bony. He must be very tall, for he seemed to stretch away from her and darkly, as she stood there at the bed's head, and he was thinly emaciated.

"This is Mr. Hemingway," she said at last.

"I was once," he answered wearily.

"I am Miss Margaret Winthrop," she continued. "I am Dr. Ainslee's sister-in-law. I believe you are his patient?"

"Yes: Tom and I are old friends, and formerly college pals. Father very well. Won't you be seated?" he asked, suddenly remembering his position as host.

She drew up the shabby arm-chair and sat down by the bed. It was not so easy to begin as she had imagined.

"He will take me for a lunatic or an assassin with designs upon imaginary wealth," she thought as she sat there recovering her cold-blooded scheme and wishing she had deliberated upon it more fully before taking this step. But it was too late to go back now. What plausible excuse could she give for having come there unattended? He would tell Tom, of course, that she had been there. Tom would tell Annie, who would look unutterable things and lecture her for a week. He had evidently suffered much; he was lying there so miserable and helpless; it seemed that she had never appreciated the inhumanity of the cliché processing until now. But she was a woman of resolution. She had satisfied herself that the arrangement would be one of mutual advantage. The only question in her mind was how to begin.

"It was very kind and thoughtful of you to come," he said, breaking the somewhat protracted silence.

"Thoughtful, but not kind," she replied with new discrimination. "Tom was telling us to-day how uncomfortable you were here, and how ill. I understand from him that you did not have proper attention and—that—you could not get well, and I came with a purpose."

He looked up gratefully, and she could not have felt more guilty or contemptible if she had stabbed him with a knife and received in return his dying benediction. But she had the courage of desperation, and she kept on. She told him her plans of climbing, briefly, to marry him and attend him carefully for the trifling remnant of his existence. In return for which he was to bestow upon her the inestimable privileges of widowhood.

It was not sublimely stated, of course, and was accompanied by many whys and wherefores intended to modify to some extent what she considered the fiendish concoction and the indelicate execution of the plot.

It was of no consequence whatever to Hemingway that she desired his decease; was even figuring upon it at that moment with pleasurable anticipations of a date when it would be considered about her a mantle of unimpeachable dignity and permanent security from social persecutions. She was telling them, like a section of paradise, pitted into that dingy chair, illuminating the whole dreary room, calling it into the proper color of heliotrope. To touch a creature a man may forgive much. There was interest in terrestrial things, and, as the weeks passed on, John Hemingway a man of honor and considerable consciousness—began to be troubled with a misgiving—a misgiving that, after all, he was not going to fulfill his part of the contract. He felt that for the first time in his life, he was about to go squarely back on an obligation. He had entered into a deliberate contract to die within a given time, and what amends could he make for his ungenerous recovery? It would be but a poor return for her assiduous attention and tender ministrations. She could not have been more sweetly careful of his comfort if she had "loved with a love that was more than love," in return for which he was about to inflict upon her a permanent and unmitigated disappointment. In vain he assured himself that had he even dreamed of a possible recovery he would never have allowed her to take such a risk. This could not possibly alleviate her disappointment nor excuse his perfidy.

He was thinking of these things one day as he lay with his face turned inward looking at Meg, whose eyes had wandered from the book in her hand to the hills beyond the river. She brought them back presently, and they rested for a moment on the face among the pillows. The disfiguring beard had been removed and the face was certainly fuller than when she had first seen it. She supplied an imaginary roundness of contour and decided that nothing but health was needed to make him a very handsome man.

"John, your face is certainly getting fuller; suppose after all you should get well?"

This sentence, inspired by a tender interest, had somehow a heartless ring about it.

"It would certainly be an ungrateful return for all your kindness, but I am afraid I am getting better," he said, apologetically. "In fact, Tom permitted to-day that I might recover."

Meg also had a misgiving. She had thought a good deal about the possibility of his recovery, and wondered whether it would make much difference to him whether Alvin Hemingway or the Byrnesmonkey replied: "I don't you may me?" said the gentle Tawenus retorted. "I would have very good reason

"I UNDERSTOOD you to say that charge for services would be complained the client, she had invalided him a tremendous bi lieve I said my bill would be clear—" "Oh, I see," interclient, "phenomenal"—Chicago Sunday Night.

A PITTSBURGH preacher took text from Isaiah: "For t shorter than that a man c himself on it, and the cov power than that he can sa in." Every member of the sion was certain he was goin denunciation of life at a re but he didn't.—Pittsburgh

A GENTLEMAN who was in a musical soirée-in-law, on seeing to the effect that "the melod sook, unless his brand-new ing." That may be so, but in my case the melody is lost in my ears because the music's breed out of me."—Inside Morning Call.

A SMART "Aleck" on the bus? That he could put a p in his mouth. So for the forfeits have been to me effe thought that the only way can be gotten out is to ask whether the patient can swa eaten anything for seven Pedler's Weekly.

A LITTLE Clifton girl went child, whom his friend had playing the devoted to the same time back, she rushed mother was confined to b what do you think? Ishaw dient while I was walki sister's arrival. Of course, sented with a bonnet."—Ind

THE tramp is still scouring try. It is the only thing he —Exchange.

ENGLAND is the mistress of but the numerous forests of try leave America mistress o

"THAT'S the second fit on and to-day," said an observ ster. "Don't keep a record things," remarked his com "To count her fit is a crime."

A CONNECTICUT woman ha to the Emperor of Brazil and if he won't please emancipate that country. He will pro so to oblige her.

AN agricultural paper says flies from horses, brush th with a brush that has been pretoleum." Bosh! You ha with a shingle or anything handy, and he'll go away.

SAID Tawnus to Byrne Don't you envy me?" said Byrnesmonkey replied: "I if you had brains, I should e And the gentle Tawenus retor

HUMOR.

BILL-STICKER: Mosquitoes.

A BIER wagon: The hearse.

A TILE club: The butters' ass

A LADY-DAH: The porcine

A FALL soot: The contents o pipe.

A SHANGHAI rooster: The t tramp.

A CLEAR case of walk-over: bridge.

A BLUNT question: Will you this knife?

THE tramp is still scouring the

ENGLAND is the mistress of

A SMART "Aleck" on the bus? That he could put a p in his mouth. So for the forfeits have been to me effe thought that the only way can be gotten out is to ask whether the patient can swa eaten anything for seven Pedler's Weekly.

A LITTLE Clifton girl went child, whom his friend had playing the devoted to the same time back, she rushed mother was confined to b what do you think? Ishaw dient while I was walki sister's arrival. Of course, sented with a bonnet."—Ind

A CONNECTICUT woman ha to the Emperor of Brazil and if he won't please emancipate that country. He will pro so to oblige her.

AN agricultural paper says flies from horses, brush th with a brush that has been pretoleum." Bosh! You ha with a shingle or anything handy, and he'll go away.

SAID Tawnus to Byrne Don't you envy me?" said Byrnesmonkey replied: "I if you had brains, I should e And the gentle Tawenus retor would have very good reason

"I UNDERSTOOD you to say that charge for services would be complained the client, she had invalided him a tremendous bi lieve I said my bill would be clear—" "Oh, I see," interclient, "phenomenal"—Chicago Sunday Night.

A PITTSBURGH preacher took text from Isaiah: "For t shorter than that a man c himself on it, and the cov power than that he can sa in." Every member of the sion was certain he was goin denunciation of life at a re but he didn't.—Pittsburgh

A GENTLEMAN who was in a musical soirée-in-law, on seeing to the effect that "the melod sook, unless his brand-new ing." That may be so, but in my case the melody is lost in my ears because the music's breed out of me."—Inside Morning Call.

A SMART "Aleck" on the bus? That he could put a p in his mouth. So for the forfeits have been to me effe thought that the only way can be gotten out is to ask whether the patient can swa eaten anything for seven Pedler's Weekly.

A LITTLE Clifton girl went child, whom his friend had playing the devoted to the same time back, she rushed mother was confined to b what do you think? Ishaw dient while I was walki sister's arrival. Of course, sented with a bonnet."—Ind

THE tramp is still scouring the try. It is the only thing he do —Exchange.

ENGLAND is the mistress of the but the numerous forests of the try leave America mistress of

"THAT'S the second fit on and to-day," said an observ ster. "Don't keep a record things," remarked his com "To count her fit is a crime."

A CONNECTICUT woman ha to the Emperor of Brazil and if he won't please emancipate that country. He will pro so to oblige her.

AN agricultural paper says: flies from horses, brush th with a brush that has been pretoleum." Bosh! You ha with a shingle or anything handy, and he'll go away.

SAID Tawnus to Byrne Don't you envy me?" said Byrnesmonkey replied: "I if you had brains, I should e And the gentle Tawenus retor would have very good reason

"I UNDERSTOOD you to say that charge for services would be complained the client, she had invalided him a tremendous bi lieve I said my bill would be clear—" "Oh, I see," interclient, "phenomenal"—Chicago Sunday Night.

A PITTSBURGH preacher took text from Isaiah: "For t shorter than that a man c himself on it, and the cov power than that he can sa in." Every member of the sion was certain he was goin denunciation of life at a re but he didn't.—Pittsburgh

A GENTLEMAN who was in a musical soirée-in-law, on seeing to the effect that "the melod sook, unless his brand-new ing." That may be so, but in my case the melody is lost in my ears because the music's breed out of me."—Inside Morning Call.

Thought It Was Dead.

A little girl climbed up something, and tipping a all, began to cry as loud very. Mamma comforted her, and gave her twenty fire to buy the noisiest. The Queen forgot the circumstance till her birthday came, when she was reminded of it by the arrival of a new and well-knit stockings and the maker's best wishes. Not to be outdone, Queen Margarethe sent a pair to her young friend as a return gift, one stocking being full of fine pieces and the other of bonbons. These were accompanied by a little note: "Tell me, my dear, which you liked best?" A reply reached Pie palace next day: "Dearest Queen: Both the stockings have made me shed many bitter tears. Papa took the one with the money and my brother the other."

FIVE MILLIONS of the $10,182,000 deposited in the Amoskeag Savings bank, in Manchester, N. H., belong to the mill operatives.

A Story Item.

Queen Margherita, of Italy, asked a little girl to knit her a pair of silk stockings as a birthday gift, and gave her twenty lire to buy the material. The Queen forgot the circumstance till her birthday came, when she was reminded of it by the arrival of a new and well-knit stockings and the maker's best wishes. Not to be outdone, Queen Margarethe sent a pair to her young friend as a return gift, one stocking being full of fine pieces and the other of bonbons. These were accompanied by a little note: "Tell me, my dear, which you liked best?" A reply reached Pie palace next day: "Dearest Queen: Both the stockings have made me shed many bitter tears. Papa took the one with the money and my brother the other."

THOMAS NAST, says Tribune correspondent, the office of Harper I am told, a green-look asked for a job. He s but, in order to get it, told him to sketch one of Washington crossing the He was gone for a few turned to show a piece full and full of life, stamped with genius, immediately engaged.

Hysterical Young Woman.

Ga N., an hysterical young woman in the South of France, becom in 1856, to accesses of what first considered as somnambulistates lasting a few minutes or of which she retained no con as on regaining her normal Gradually the duration of accesses increased, they became able enough to rank as a state," and it was observed this second state Felida perremembered the first state—in first or normal state she the second. The second gradually grew upon her has become almost continuer relapses into the first state ing perhaps not more than one month. And it is remarkable per second state is in all respects to the first. Her health is her character is more cheerful she is never perfect for both She is aware of her occasional into her first state, but she conthat as abnormal, and though fully distressed by it she would ed its occurrence. When in the ate, on the other hand, her aches pains, and her memory for second state disappears. She has admiration for strength, my dear friend, I lose sight of a hundred faults."

"Why, my friend," the Colonel replied, "this Trego-worth is a lady of strong character.

"No, no, she's weak. Now, Colonel, you know I am a man of the world, and attach more importance to strength than has enthroned man would."

"Is she too girlish in her manners?"

"Oh no."

"Is she sitting in her fat-toes?"

"No, quite the contrary.

"Then how the deuce is she weak?"

"Well, you see, while I was with her the other evening the maid of the family was away from home. While we were talking pleasantly a servant entered and said the washerwoman had come and would like to see my wife, sir, about making an attempt to stand the woman off, she deliberately paid the amount. I can't understand anything like that, and I am convinced that she would not do for my wife."

"I quite agree with you," the Colonel replied, after a moment's reflection. "Such a weakness of character would soon break a man up. Fortunately, I didn't marry that kind of a woman."—Delaware Traveler.

A Story Item.

Queen Margherita, of Italy, asked a little girl to knit her a pair of silk stockings as a birthday gift, and gave her twenty lire to buy the material. The Queen forgot the circumstance till her birthday came, when she was reminded of it by the arrival of a new and well-knit stockings and the maker's best wishes. Not to be outdone, Queen Margarethe sent a pair to her young friend as a return gift, one stocking being full of fine pieces and the other of bonbons. These were accompanied by a little note: "Tell me, my dear, which you liked best?" A reply reached Pie palace next day: "Dearest Queen: Both the stockings have made me shed many bitter tears. Papa took the one with the money and my brother the other."

FIVE MILLIONS of the $10,182,000 deposited in the Amoskeag Savings bank, in Manchester, N. H., belong to the mill operatives.

Venezela Lake Dwellers.

Parts of the world, particularly Europe, there are many pictures of an ancient people on Lake Dwellers, from the fact ge lived in houses built over the In that beautiful sheet of in Switzerland, Lake Geneva, ing perhaps not more than one month. And it is remarkable per second state is in all respects to the first. Her health is her character is more cheerful she is never perfect for both She is aware of her occasional into her first state, but she conthat as abnormal, and though fully distressed by it she would ed its occurrence. When in the ate, on the other hand, her aches pains, and her memory for second state disappears. She has admiration for strength, my dear friend, I lose sight of a hundred faults."

"Why, my friend," the Colonel replied, "this Trego-worth is a lady of strong character.

"No, no, she's weak. Now, Colonel, you know I am a man of the world, and attach more importance to strength than has enthroned man would."

"Is she too girlish in her manners?"

"Oh no."

"Is she sitting in her fat-toes?"

"No, quite the contrary.

"Then how the deuce is she weak?"

"Well, you see, while I was with her the other evening the maid of the family was away from home. While we were talking pleasantly a servant entered and said the washerwoman had come and would like to see my wife, sir, about making an attempt to stand the woman off, she deliberately paid the amount. I can't understand anything like that, and I am convinced that she would not do for my wife."

"I quite agree with you," the Colonel replied, after a moment's reflection. "Such a weakness of character would soon break a man up. Fortunately, I didn't marry that kind of a woman."—Delaware Traveler.

A Story Item.

Queen Margherita, of Italy, asked a little girl to knit her a pair of silk stockings as a birthday gift, and gave her twenty lire to buy the material. The Queen forgot the circumstance till her birthday came, when she was reminded of it by the arrival of a new and well-knit stockings and the maker's best wishes. Not to be outdone, Queen Margarethe sent a pair to her young friend as a return gift, one stocking being full of fine pieces and the other of bonbons. These were accompanied by a little note: "Tell me, my dear, which you liked best?" A reply reached Pie palace next day: "Dearest Queen: Both the stockings have made me shed many bitter tears. Papa took the one with the money and my brother the other."

FIVE MILLIONS of the $10,182,000 deposited in the Amoskeag Savings bank, in Manchester, N. H., belong to the mill operatives.

Time is Money.

Time and money will be saved by keeping Kidney-Wort in the house. It is an invaluable remedy for all disorders of the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, and for all diseases arising from obstructions of these organs. It has cured many of silastic cases after hundreds of dollars had been paid to physicians who did not obtaining relief. It cures Constipation, Piles, Biliousness, and all kindred disorders Keep it by you.

A FOND mother, in excusing her daughter for marrying a negro, said: "Poor dear thing, she has been color blind for nearly a year."

SMALL boy—"Pa, did you know on long before you married her?" Pa—"I didn't. I didn't know her until long after I married her."

A Quick Recovery.

It gives us great pleasure to state that the merchant who was reported to be at the point of death from an attack of pneumonia has entirely recovered by the use of Dr. Wilbur's Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. Naturally he feels grateful for the benefits derived from using this remedy in his lungs and throat, and in giving publicity to this statement we are actuated by motives of public benefaction, trusting that others may be benefited in a similar manner.

MENNEN'S PEPTONIZED BEEF TONIC, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritive properties. Revitalizes blood-making, force-generating and life-sustaining properties; invaluable for bulimerchia, dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility; also, in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, disease, particularly preceding from pulmonary complaints. Unwell, Buzard & Co., proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

I was troubled with chronic catarrh and gathering in my head, was very deaf at times, had discharges from my ears, and was unable to breathe through my nose. Before the second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm was exhausted I was cured, and to-day enjoy sound health.—C. J. Conroy, 224 Chestnut st., Reading, Pa. Manufacturer Pub. House. Pa. (See advertisement.

"Put up" at the Gault House.

The business man or tourist will find first-class accommodations at the low price of $2 and $2.50 per day at the Gault House, Chicago, corner Clark and Madison streets. This favorite hotel is located in the center of the city, only one block from the Union Depot. Elevator; all appointments first-class.

H. W. Rose, Proprietor.

Universally Approved.

J. A. Rogers, M. D., of Keuton, Ohio, says: I must say Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup has been universally approved by my customers; never hear any complaints about it here; sold it for years.

Carbo-lines.

He wins at last who builds his trust
In loving words and actions just.
Who's healed, whose walk, his very utter,
Prove balm the use or carbo-line.

She Best in the World.

Dr. J. W. Hamilton, of Meredian, Miss., says: I have sold Warner's White Wine Tar Syrup for years. It is the best cough medicine in the world and has no equal for asthma.

Why suffer your life is a month, take Piso's Cure. Sold by druggists. 25 cents.

"Rough on Rats" clears out Rats, Mice. 15c.

Mother Swan's Worm Syrup, tasteless. 25c.

"Rough on Coughs" Troches, 15c; Liquid, 50c.

Wells' May-Apple (Liver) Pills, 10c.

"Rough on Toothache," instant relief. 15c.

"Rough-on-Pain," Great Kidney and Urinary Cure. $1.

"Rough on Corns," for Corns, Warts, Bunions. 15c.

Wells' Health Renewer cures Dyspepsia, Impotence.

The "Rough on" Tooth Powder, elegant. 15c.

"We always keep Piso's Cure for Consumption in the house."

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, BACKACHE, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, SORE THROAT, QUINSY, SWELLINGS, SPRAINS, Soreness, Cuts, Bruises, FROSTBITES, BURNS, SCALDS, And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 Languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co. (Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

St. Jacobs Oil

HAIR Whiskers and Mustaches, Send for circular. Prof. O. J. Wilson, 1 Bond St., New York.

KIDNEY-WORT
DOES WONDERFUL CURES OF KIDNEY DISEASES AND LIVER COMPLAINTS.
Why?
Because It acts on the LIVER, BOWELS and KIDNEYS at the same time.
Because It cleanses the system of the poisonous humors that develope in Kidney and Urinary diseases, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Piles, or in rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervousness and Female Complaints.
IT WILL SURELY CURE
CONSTIPATION, PILES, and RHEUMATISM, By causing FREE ACTION of all the organs and functions thereof.
THOUSANDS OF CASES
Of the worst forms of these terrible diseases have been recently cured, and in a short time.
PERFECTLY CURED.
PRICE, $1. LIQUID or DRY, sold by druggists. They can be sent by mail.
WELLS, RICHARDSON & Co., Burlington, Vt.
Send stamp for Dry Kidney-Wort.
KIDNEY-WORT

ALLEN'S Lung Balsam!
A GOOD FAMILY REMEDY!
—THAT WILL CURE—
COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP,
CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Meredith, Dentist, of Cincinnati, was thought to be in the last stages of Consumption. He was induced by a friend to try Allen's Lung Balsam after all other remedies had failed. We have in hand his letter, in which he says he owes his present good health entirely to the use of Allen's Lung Balsam.

Jeremiah Wright, of Marion County, W. Va., was given up by the Old Physicians to die of Consumption, and was prepared to meet his fate. He was induced to try Allen's Lung Balsam, and was perfectly cured by the use of Allen's Lung Balsam. He cheerfully recommends it to all afflicted with Consumption in the world.

Wm. A. Graham & Co., Wholesale Druggists, Cincinnati, O., say: Allen's Lung Balsam is selling better than any Consumption remedy we handle. We have had testimonials from those who have been cured by it, and we believe it to be a reliable remedy for Consumption.

CONSUMPTION.
ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM
Is harmless to the most delicate child! It contains no opium in any form!
Recommended by Physicians, Ministers and Nurses. In fact by everybody who has given it a good trial. It never fails to Bring Relief.
As an Expectorant it has no Equal.
SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE DEALERS.

Loss and Gain.

CHATTEL.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With kidney-in-my-back."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I Could not move!
I shrunk!
From 203 lbs. to 130! I had been doctoring for six liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my nerves seemed renewed and by magic, and after using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my Life.
Dekalb, June 6, '81. B. Pierpoint.

CHATTEL.

"Sublime Mass., Feb. 1, 180, gentlemen:—I suffered both attacks of sick headache.
Neuralgia, female troubles, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.
No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters.
"The first bottle
Nearly cured me.
"A second bottle me as well and strong as when a child.
"And I have been so to this day."
My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious
Stomach, liver, and urinary complaint pronounced by Boston's best physicians incurable.
Seven bottles of your bitters cured him and I know of the Seven right persons.
In my neighborhood that have been saved by your Bitters.
And many more are using them with great benefit.
They almost
Do miracles." Mrs. E. D. Sleeth.
Don't Get Sick.—Expose yourself day and night, eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

FREE. By return mail. Full Description of Wonderful New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. Address at Once, S. M. Co., Box 3333, New York.

BIG PAY. Sell our rubber hand stamps. Terms free. Tailor Bros. & Co., Cleveland, O.

Alcolol Cures the Worst & Most Obstinate Cases of Nervousness, Dyspepsia, Nervous Headache, Sleeplessness, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Kidney Complaints, Female Weaknesses, Etc. Sold by druggists. Pamphlet free. Alcolol Co., 1 Park Place, New York.

Young Men Circulars Free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 40 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample free. Address, with stamp, J. WORTH & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

AGENTS WANTED for the best and fastest-selling Subscription Book and Bible. Terms reduced. Outfit 50 cents. Address, for agency, Children of Men, Chicago, Ill. NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

ORGAN AGENTS
Wanted in every County in the United States and Canada. Address, 139 State street, Chicago.

THE BUTLER BOOK.
FATHER COLUMBUS' SAYS: means to elect Butler and Ellen Jones. Sells like wildfire. Agents wanted. Send 10 cents for sample. Outfit 75 cents. Address, by postpaid, Children of Men, Chicago, Ill. Or, Columbus, Ohio. Or, Cincinnati, O. Or, Indianapolis, Ind. Or, Louisville, Ky. Or, St. Louis, Mo. Or, Kansas City, Mo. Or, Omaha, Neb. Or, Denver, Col. Or, Salt Lake City, Utah. Or, San Francisco, Cal. Or, Portland, Or. Or, Seattle, W. T. Or, Tacoma, W. T. Or, Spokane Falls, W. T. Or, Helena, Mont. Or, Butte City, Mont. Or, Minneapolis, Minn. Or, St. Paul, Minn. Or, Duluth, Minn. Or, Milwaukee, Wis. Or, Chicago, Ill

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 17, 1884.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

"Do you know, sir, that an event occurred in this city on Christmas Day, the facts of which would make a splendid New Year's morsel for the people of the United States?"

The above interrogatory was addressed to me by a well known congressman who has a national reputation as the best informed politician in Washington, and the secret monotone in which the words were uttered indicated that startling information was in possession of this omnipotent humbug; hence, I endeavored to creep into his confidence, and sallied forth with the blandishments of astonishment and curiosity.

"Is it possible! Was it in the political arena?"

"Certainly; and a high toned arena it was. You remember that President Arthur dined with Secretary Frelinghuysen Christmas night?

"Yes, but there is nothing startling in that."

"Don't be impatient young man. Of course the people know that Arthur dined with his secretary of state, but they don't know that thereby hangs a tale. Not a half dozen people in Washington are cognizant of what happened in Frelinghuysen's private parlor that day. I will give you the facts if I may depend upon your honor that my name be not given as your informant."

"Mr Blank here's my honor. ("We shake.") May this tale be given to the thirsting public as positively reliable."

If it ever comes to a denial, you may publicly call on me for the necessary substantiation."

"Very well; give us the tale."

"You may say that shortly after Arthur and Freylinghuysen had concluded their Christmas dinner, a close carriage drove up before the secretary's residence; from the carriage alighted James G. Blaine, who hastily disappeared into his successor's abode. It had all been prearranged, and they met there in conclave for a purpose."

The congressman stopped here and tantalizingly began to puff at a cigar. Very seldom does a newspaper man lose control of a serene equanimity when information is being imparted to him, but this much of the congressman's story excited my intense anxiety to know the balance, and I impetuously said:

"See here. Don't vex my inquisitiveness with that tobacco smoke. Why did Blaine condescend to call on Arthur and his secretary?

"You shall know young man, and I want the public to know for reasons that you may surmise. I am not a Blaine man nor Arthur man, and I want to see Arthur's plan nipped in the bud. It is a well known fact that Arthur, Blaine and Logan are now the leading candidates for the nomination at Chicago in 1884. You will remember it was reported that Blaine and Logan had agreed that their supporters in the convention should sing 'in joint chorus against Arthur. The president became alarmed at this alleged combination, and sent for Blaine. Blaine, not averse to entering any new compact that will increase his chances for the ambition of his life, called on Arthur as I have said. Or dine, you know. he invited to make a friendable effort for the nomination, because three or four eastern states seem to prefer his candidacy. He is aware that Blaine will hold a large delegation, the largest possibly of any one candidate, and he maliciously turned to him this smack of the republican ruler of Napoleon in France.

A few more whiffs at his cigar, and his congressman continued:

"Arthur intimated to Blaine that if the latter was not nominated on the first ballot, and the vote declared that Arthur's delegates numbered respectively with either Logan's or Blaine's, and the Logan delegation exceeded the latter's on which case report says that Blaine is to throw his forces to Logan, then if Blaine would transfer his support to Arthur, thereby secure the nomination. Arthur would place at [illegible] secretary of [illegible] statesship, and the naming of a man for any other bureau in the cabinet! Mr. Freylinghuysen endorsed this proposition by assuring Mr. Blaine that he was very willing to retire from the cabinet at the end of this term, and hoped that such amicable relations could be established between Mr. Blaine and the president as would lead to the consummation of a mutual understanding."

"Did Blaine agree to the proposition?"

"No, sir. He rejected it, declaring that he is not a candidate for the nomination, but you and I know that Mr. Blaine wants to be president of the United States, and that he has little confidence in Arthur's strength before the convention. The matter is resting in that pose at present, but Arthur is not done with Mr. Blaine unless these facts are published to the people. Send them out, and if any one attempts to corner you, call on me."

After hearing this strange Christmas story, I found myself in such a dazed condition that it required some effort to look after the more common place news, but there are a few stray waifs of talk about Carlisle's council-ress that will be of special interest just now, as tending to show what the outlook indicates in way of of legislation. That great free trader, "Tom" Ochiltree, of Texas, often amuses me with his terse and original opinions of public matters, as we frequently meet at Willard's over the festive board, and given a half bottle of cognac, he becomes the most expert talker and thinker in Washington. I asked him the other day what he thought of the ways and means committee. His reply summarizes about the truth of this important body of men. Said he:

"There is too much presidential timber in the committee. Bill Morrison and Abe Hewitt both want to be president, and it's no use of expecting any reform tariff from them, although they both believe in it. Neither one of 'em will imperil his chances for the nomination or election by opposing the business interests. They're both cowards. Morrison made a little fun of Randall's 'business interests' during the speakership fight, but he knows as well as any one that the business interests have the money to run the campaign, and are ready to spend it to save themselves from free trade and tariff reform. Bill and Abe, and the republicans make a majority of the committee, and that is the way they'll divide when it comes to a vote."

CHALMERS MANNING.

I find upon inquiry among a majority of the elections committee that general Chalmers will be given his seat. Judge Lowry, of Indiana, one of the new democratic members and who is on this committee said to me:

"Don't quote me as saying so, but I have no doubt but that Chalmers will be given his seat instead of Manning, from the second Mississippi district, and it will be given to him on the merits of the case. He will certainly get my vote."

COX AND SPRINGER.

It has been reported that Mr. Cox had telegraphed Mr. Carlisle his acceptance of the naval affairs committee, but Cox's friends here deny it and say that he will resign when congress reconvenes. Mr. Springer of Illinois seems to be growing mad every minute and says he will not submit to this insult of his constituency and himself. He and Morrison are at loggerheads, as Springer claims that Morrison's dictation is the cause of the slight. Mr. Springer at the announcement of the committees seemed disposed to show his energy, but his friends now urge him to resent this unfairness to talk" as they call it Morrison in behalf from Mr. Springer.

NOTES.

The wife of General Rosecrans, who died Christmas morning, was for a long time a great invalid. The cause of her death was hemorrhage of the brain.

Senator Cameron, who is now in Paris, writes that he will not resume his seat in the senate until spring.

W. W. Corcoran, the philanthropist of this city, celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday on the 27th of December with a grand family gathering. He is yet [illegible] and hearty.

The holidays in Washington were not very brilliant, the social entertainments being limited and private.

The lawyer, E. C. Ingersoll, who died here last week was not related to Col. Robt. Ingersoll.

Croaking Detrimental to Trade.

Times are bad enough, but they might be very much worse, and they certainly will be made no better by the constant grumbling in which not a few are at present wont to engage. The fact that so many see fit to constantly talk in a despondent strain about the condition of trade does more than anything else to retard the coming of better times. For, after all, views which people entertain of the future have a more or less controlling influence upon what they will do in the present. A trifling objection will sometimes defeat an important project If a syndicate of capitalists are made to believe that the present unsatisfactory condition of general business is to long continue, they, through an over-abundant caution, may defer executing their plans for the building of a railroad or the establishment of a large manufacturing plant. Their very action is productive of the stagnation in business which they so much deprecate. The example of their timidity is infectious, and others through their influence are led to do the same thing. It is needless to say that when everybody stops trading, business is dead. The inactivity which they deplore is, in part, produced by themselves. Hence it is evident that what one says, as well as what one does or fails to do, is an important element in controlling the actions of others. If everybody goes to crying hard times, it is not singular that just the restrictions and limitations which produce hard times are brought about. Confidence is the key note to activity and success in business. Confidence is the child of faith. It cannot be expected that men who think they see a panic in store in the near future will embark in enterprises which would be likely to be frustrated and defeated by such a panic. No one could hope to engage mariners for an ocean voyage by attempting to convince them that they were about to encounter terrific hurricanes and probable shipwreck.

If everyone to day were freely engaging in enterprises warranted by their means, there would be a healthy and profitable movement in all trades. But men under the influence of fear and caution restrict operations, and go to the extreme limit of retrenchment. Railroads, instead of repairing their rolling stock as they ought to, only do those things which they feel the time being are forced to. Individuals, instead of buying the needful clothing or necessaries in the household, make the old things answer. The shoes are patched, the old hat is made to serve the purpose of the new one, and instead of enjoying the comforts of two fires, the family now huddle together in one room over one fire. The much-needed painting of house and barn is deferred until another year, and broken fences are left for future mending or patched up temporarily. And thus in a thousand ways the work of retrenchment goes on. In the meantime, the artisan whose business it is to manufacture supplies for their wants is left without employment. Now why all this retrenchment? Not because the country is poor, for it was never so rich as it is to-day. Not because crops have failed, for such has not been the case, except with one or two crops, and such failures were only in certain sections. The trouble is that people generally have allowed themselves to be scared over the situation of business, and being thus fearful of what may come, they have commenced a system of economy which they little dream has a retroactive influence upon their own interests.

The abnormal dullness in trade is in no small degree chargeable to the croakers, who are constantly prolicting evil in the future. Why is it not as well to take a cheerful view of the situation? The exercise of a little philosophy will teach these misanthropes that there is no such thing as eternal night; that there is an ebb and flow to trade as well as to the tides of the ocean; that prices, in the very nature of events, cannot go on continually declining, and that all the prognostications point to the fact that we have reached solid rock now, or are very close to that point.

It is better for all to cherish a feeling of hopefulness, although it is more natural to indulge in desponding than in cheerful predictions. Many who are closely scanning the future discern numerous encouraging signs. The wonder is that there are not more who do so. When we come to think of the magnitude of the country, the diversity of the wants of the people, the wealth of the nation, and the facilities we have for commerce and manufacturing, it is not surprising that the intelligent observer should see a bow of promise in the future. As surely as the morrow's sun shall rise, so surely will prosperity return to the country. The time of this return may be much nearer than many anticipate. This being true, how idle is it to continue in predictions of evil, especially since such predictions are promotive of the evils feared. – Tradesman.

Why waste time and money on that which does no good? Your children have worms and are cross, always hungry, sleepless, puny and weak from the presence of worms in the stomach which prevents the food being taken up to nourish the body. Parmelee's Vanedine Worm Confits will dissolve and remove the worms and then all will be well. You cannot do better by your children than to attend to their health. Price 25 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Eating and starving, it is the same, for you are sure to suffer from worse torture can be exercised than itching piles are unequaled for quick by a few applications of Parmelee's Pile Ointment; they directly relieve. They are presented to by physicians for the immediate trending piles, but such barbarity is unnecessary for Parmelee's Pile Ointment according to directions quickly relieves and drive them away. Warranted to cure. 50 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

A little temperence now and then relished even by drinking men. Chicago Blizzard.

And temperence men, all of them, do often go upon a spree. Boston Folio.

But when they take their liquor some other fellow sets 'em up. Cincinnati Traveler.

Or have it charged against their score, and then slide out by the back door. – Pretzel's Times.

At home and abroad, at church and theatre, in the counting house and on the street, the fact everywhere is heard that the cough which soon develops into consumption, or the termination of the lungs, bronchitis, pneumonia or consumption. Be wise in time, and check relief and cure can be elegantly obtained by the use of Piso's Cough Balsam will surely give relief from these threat and lung troubles and prevent their termination in death. Instant relief is given by a solution of almost any cough. Those who use it once will be greatly benefited by it, and 50 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

OLD NEWSPAPERS FOR

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN

FOR 188[illegible]

CHARLEVOIX, MICH., NO SCHEAT BEARS.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL

A Progressive Local and Family Newspaper.

Published Every Thursday, at $1.50

With the coming of spring and the opening of trade, our friends should make a resolution to do a little for us in the shape of subscription and popularity of the JOURNAL. If every one of the part of each subscriber's patronage at least one more subscriber, would soon be added to our list. Any one can do it, and it is not now impossible. It is the aim of the publisher of the JOURNAL to make it a complete local paper through local newspaper in the county and a correspondents make it a record of the transactions of the whole county. To this end a more extensive correspondents in localities not now represented, is desired. Correspondents should write in a plain, legible hand, and make no unnecessary words. Only sample room [illegible] has been in the past is best told by a few extracts from many favorable notices which we have received. Only sample room [illegible] belongs:

Bright and newsy, and ranked in politics.—Petoskey Republican.

Filled with interesting local and general news.—Ypsilanti Commercial.

Our best wishes go with it. Such a paper should receive a liberal support.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Is a bright, newsy sheet.—*Grand Rapids Democrat

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

DR. JAMES P. BRICK, of Braddock, near Pittsburgh, whose practice was good for $4,000 a year, awaits sentence for decoying unmarried men to lonely localities, where highwaymen robbed them.

THE Southerner is becoming grim in his humor. When Andy Tayler, the day before he was hanged in Knoxville, asked Sheriff Foote for a drink of whisky, the Sheriff said, "I will give you a drop to-morrow."

JOHN VAN WILLIAMS, a farmer residing in Woodstock, N. Y., butchered a cow recently that had no gall on the liver. The animal was 10 years old, and was one of the healthiest cows on the place. Medical men have frequently averred that no animal could live without gall, and this instance may be considered a marvelous one.

MR. EDMUNDS writes to an anti-polygamy society in Cleveland: "My views in respect of further legislation regarding polygamy are mainly expressed in the bill reported last session by the Committee on Judiciary, which I shall again introduce at this session, with, perhaps, some additional provisions. I have reason to believe that the legislation already adopted is operating favorably to the end desired."

A PHILADELPHIA man was recently found wandering about the streets with his throat cut. He was carried to a hospital, where he has become what the surgeons call a "beautiful case." They have sewed him up and rigged up an apparatus for forcing a chemical substitute for air into his lungs, and some other apparatus with a rubber tube to introduce food into his stomach. The man was living at last accounts, and his case is said to be without a parallel in the history of surgery.

THE Board of Supervisors at Sacramento said some carpenters cut to where the Chinese leper lives, beyond the north levee, to build for him comfortable winter quarters. The poor fellow was much pleased at the interest taken in his case by the Board of Supervisors, and went very profuse in his thanks for their kind services. Holding up his hands, the fingers of which are dropping off one by one, and pointing to his feet, the toes of which have disappeared, he said, with a grave smile, "You see, kindly Chinaman all gone."

THE Hon. Thomas A. Robertson, Proctor Knott's successor in Congress, is said to be a better story-teller than the Duluth statesman. He has an easier command of language, and is altogether more graceful in his manner of delivery. He is above medium height, with very square shoulders. His face is round, full and high-colored. The color of his face is intensified by a fiery red mustache and goatee. Reddish, curly hair comes down well upon his broad forehead. There is an air of reckless good-fellowship about Robertson which is certain to make him a popular member.

The Sun's Star: Here is patriotism: An aged couple of colored people reside at Terre Haute, who were born slaves in Virginia and who have been married sixty years. They have had twenty-five children, four of whom were killed in the war. "Don't you draw a pension from the Government for the death of your sons in the army?" was asked of the old man. "No, indeed! No, indeed! Me and Chloe don't want de government to do no mo for us; de good 'nough done got de black man free, and we's happy." This is the class of colored people on whom the salvation of the race depends. They have something else to do than loafing around asking for aid.

THE Bartholdi statue is made of copper, strengthened by an inner skeleton of iron. For each piece a center or model was made of wood, on which the copper could be worked and fitted. The sheet-copper epidermis of the figure is made of 300 pieces, and weighs 178,000 pounds. The iron frame weighs 250,000 pounds. When finally erected, the molded sheets of copper will be riveted together by copper bolts, and the iron skeleton will be secured to the masonry by twelve great foundation bolts. The variations due to temperature are provided for by elasticity in every part, and corroding will be checked by painting with red lead wherein iron and copper are in contact. It is reckoned that the pressure of wind upon the statue, which will be 150 feet high, may go as high as 100,000 pounds.

THE newest swindler discovered is a girl. She was in a telegraph office writing a message. She wore mourning clothes, which were strikingly neat and cheap. "Will you please tell me," she said to a bystander, "how I can condense this message to ten words? I don't wish to have to pay anything extra." This was what she had written on the blank: "I am friendless here; have only a dollar left. Send some money." The unsuspicious bystander marveled at her sagacity in the face, and found it charming, though not to a delusive degree. The pulor was artificial, and the dolorous expression was mindery. Every day for a week she had written that same message, without ever sending it over the wires, but with more or less success in exciting lacrimative sympathy.

A NEW YORK letter says Gen. Sickles is always mentioned as among the prominent people at the opera, and it accounts for it in this way: This is not because Gen. Sickles is so distinguished, but rather from the manner of his entrance at the opera. You probably know that Gen. Sickles has but one leg, and has been unable to wear an artificial one, so that he is naturally obliged to walk on crutches. After the house is comfortably seated and the opera is going smoothly along, just as the prima donna reaches her most florid passage, or the tenor touches his high C, you hear a dull thud down the main aisle of the opera-house, and, looking around, you see a rather fine-looking man on crutches swinging himself into his seat. You naturally ask, "Who is that?" and soon get your answer that it is Gen. Sickles.

JUDGE GEORGE DENNY, who shot and killed James B. Anderson in a terrible hand-to-hand encounter at Lancaster, Ky., is one of the most prominent criminal lawyers in the old commonwealth. He is a man of splendid physique, six feet two inches in height, and weighs about 200 pounds. Judge Denny was the leading counsel for prosecution in the celebrated Thompson-Buckles murder trial at Harrodsburg, Ky., last May. In that case the Judge made a speech two hours in length, which excited the warmest congratulations of Hon. Joe Blackburn and Senator Dan Voorhees, of Indiana, who represented the defendant. Judge Denny is an eloquent man, and talks with an earnestness which carries conviction. He has always been an uncompromising Republican, and was elected Judge in a district strongly Democratic. At the Kentucky Republican State convention held in Lexington last July Judge Denny was temporary Chairman. He delivered a speech which set the convention wild with enthusiasm, and the effect produced by his address is present that he could have received the nomination for Governor almost by acclamation had he not refused to be a candidate. Two or three years ago he went to Carter county, Ky., to assist in the prosecution of some "moonshiners" and desperadoes with which that locality was infested. Upon his arrival he was warned that if he made a speech to the jury advocating the conviction of the offenders it would cost him his life. The Judge paid no attention to the threats. When he arose to address the jury, the court-room was crowded, and among the crowd were many desperate men, friends of the prisoners. The dauntless advocate glanced his eye over the assemblage, drew a pistol from his pocket, laid it on a table in front of him, and coolly said: "If it please your honor and gentleman of the jury, I have come here to do my duty in the prosecution of the prisoners at the bar. I have been threatened with death if I make a speech. I shall make that speech now, and the first person who interrupt or menaces me I will shoot dead."

Use of Railroad Tickets.

The number of tickets collected by a first-class railroad in the course of a year is something stupendous. Five tons of these trifling paper slips accumulate in the Boston and Albany railroad office in this city yearly, and yield a sung sum when sold for paper stock. The colored tickets are handled up by themselves in neat packages, and the white ones in separate lots, the latter, of course, bringing the higher price. Springfield Republican.

Even at average prices are among the cheapest and most nutritious articles of diet. Like milk, egg is a complete food in itself, containing everything necessary to the development of a perfect animal, as is manifest from the fact that a chick is formed from it.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

Daisy's Dimple.

Have you seen my Daisy's dimple?
It is just a small indentation
Made by fate in her cheek
But when she laughs so merry,
Oh, what a very, very Pleasant language it does spe-ak!

'Tis a mem'ry where Cupid's fishing,
In his beamings have quite ing-
Till I seek and lose him sing-
"Come, I see found him to dwe-ll now,
Close here something sweet to tell—do.
If it is me, what are you do-ing?

He, he only whisper's dai-sy,
And says "Oh, she's most hea-venly
Pleasing to be long near!"
But I kiss at how sweet kisses,
Notes sure wins sounds and misses—
For I do the merry part!

A Much Misused Word.

The intelligent woman expressed her opinion upon the ancient custom that yet obtains among a few obscure papers of calling a woman a female. The term, she said, is a technical one and should be left to the exclusive use of physiologists and zoologists. It took writers a long time to come to a realizing sense of its nullness when applied to individuals of feminine gender. Nothing looks quaeer now than those gooily-gooily little books that were written by presidents of "female" boarding schools, and bloodless pastors of struggling parishes wherein the "female" element was a silent majority. The subjects were "Female Piety," "Female Modesty," "Female Meekness," "The Virtues Most to Be Admired in the True Female," as if the omnipotent Creator recognized two separate sets of moralities, one to be appropriated by the "male," and the other to be worn in meekness and humility by the "female" portion of humanity. The Bible says that God in the beginning created man in His own image, "male and female created He them"—accepting the two sexes according to their two kinds, but not using the terms as names. Sarah Josepha Hale probably did more than any other one person to fix the use and abuses of the word. The floods on trash which the old Godey's Lady's Book used to let loose upon the country may be excused in a measure, since it let no opportunity pass to criticise and ridicule the writers of "female" literature. Nobody hears of male boarding-schools or male academies. Men are admitted to be "brilliant male writers," or "eminent male artists." Books were never written on male piety or male integrity, yet the use of one, in the same sense, is as correct as the other. Inter-Ocean.

The Female Force.

Given a small, straight, flat figure, with a face delicate in its features, and the proposition of walking the gulf-path like 75 until she is altogether past her teens is not exceedingly difficult. It can be very simply worked by refusing to let her petticoats grow to a reasonable length, eschewing all devices of bodice that produce attificial undulation, and enjoining an unswerving sturdiness of carriage and manner. That was what had been done with the bride whom I have mentioned. There was in her family the usual inventive in thus retarding her apparent growth from childhood to womanhood. Two only of her sisters went to matrimonially place themselves before their ages were emphasized by the youngest daughter remaining an adult. Why, I remember that one evening at a reception the dear girl came down to the parlor in a lovely costume of white tulle, as simple and infantine as a christening robe and with a hem no broader than the tops of her high bootees; but she had presumed to give a slight roundness to her corsage. That was an amendment to the family resolution which was instantly voted down, though she pleaded hard to carry it.

"I'm a woman, and I want to look like one," she pleaded.

"You may be a woman, but you've got to look like a child as long as anybody will let you," was the maternal mandate.

So she had to go back to her room and flatten the bosom in which indignation was swelling.

"I'll develop all of a sudden, the first thing they know—see if I don't!" she said to me as she departed.

And she did it on her wedding day, for certain. The dignified little creature who dropped a train up the center aisle of a fashionable church was no longer childish. Her babyish bonds of hair had become an elaborated Tuscan; her ankles were out of sight, and, instead of their stockinged display, there was a charming decorum of bare arms that were far more plump and tapering than anybody had expected, and as fair as eighteen years of seclusion could make them; her bodice, for the first time, was shapely—by exactly what means is none of the public's business. Improved? I should say so. If the bridegroom had fallen in love with her former aspect he had every reason for augmenting his passion when he beheld her in her bridal robes. Chicago Belle.

Popular Catechism.

What is this?
That is a managing mamma, darling.
Why a "managing mamma?"
Because she is managing or trying to manage.
To do what?
To marry off her daughters.
Me? that is a huge undertaking.
Mountainous, my precious.
But those seven gawks hanging behind her?
She? Those, dear, are her charming and accomplished daughters.
But that sallow old girl with the gigantic and stiff neck?
That, my precious, is Mathilde, the literary light of the family.
How "literary?"
Well, Mathilde has read Swinburne and Herbert Spencer, knows two professors of the Concord School of Philosophy, has published four poems in the Philadelphia Ledger, and can write verses all night long. Besides, Mathilde knows four constellations, Mathilde does, acts in amateur theatricals, and is writing a play.
Gracious! and how old is she?
Just 19, sweet.
And who is the wall-eyed young lady with freckles and lever-blisters walking with Mathilde?
That, dear, is Angele, the beauty of the family.
How the "beauty?"
Well, whenever they get up tableaux at the church Angele is selected, and that proves it.
How old is Angele?
Just 19, love.
And that one immediately behind Mathilde—the young lady with the crooked teeth and a nose like an india-rubber shoe run down at the heel?
That, darling, is Therese.
And who! does she do?
She is the good girl of the family—goes to church twice a day, says grace at meals, and works Bible-marks for every num she meets.
How old?
Just 19.
Next?—the pudding-faced girl with twisted hair?
That is Marie.
Old?
Marie is the tiff of the family. Marie uses slang and pursues up her mouth, snubs her cigarette, and makes faces, and always says what a bad, naughty girl she has been, and is generally as playful as a kitten.
Old?
Just 19, dear.
Dear—the meek little dunce with a figure like a shad?
Madeleine.
Well, what is the matter with her?
She is the housekeeper of the family. Madeleine can cook right through four cook-books; she makes her own dresses.
I could have guessed as much myself.
Sh! and then Madeleine looks after everything, and sees that everything is right, and—oh! well, there's no end to the comfort brought about by Madeleine.
She is just 19, too, I suppose?
Not even last week, darling.
Next?—that billious sorrel-top in the hat?
Sh! that, my precious, is Belle.
Well, what is the chronic trouble with Belle.
Why, Belle has freckles, and she is the wit of the family. When Lord Mailfax was toiling a long story in Belle's presence, Belle told him to "saw it off" and "squeeze it."
That was very funny.
Yes, dear.
I'll say—she has "traveled?"
Yes, dear.
Where?
Well, she has been in Colorado, and Chicago, and Milwaukee.
Her age?
Just 15, sweet.
Well, now tell me about that pessimistic consumptive with gold teeth.
That, dear, is Celeste.
Nineteen?
Just.
Any miraculous talent?
Yes, darling.
What?
A voice.
Cultivated?
Well, Sig. Tutti Frutti di Vernicelli says that he thinks about 200 lessons will "develop" it.

An Insect Used as Food.

The great valley of Mexico, lying at its vast altitude of 7,000 feet above the sea, possesses many curious and peculiar forms of animal life. Among these is the Axe-gotl, known to the natives as "Water fleas"; an insect about the size of the common house-fly. It is found around the marshes of Lake Tezcuco, where its eggs, called ahuauhtli or "water wheat," are collected in great quantities. The insects are pounded into a paste, as they are collected in myriads, boiled in water, and then sold in the markets of Mexico. The eggs, likewise, which resemble little fish roe, are evaporated into a paste, mixed with the eggs of fowls, and form a staple article of food, particularly called for during Lent. The Indians of the Mexican lakes, who make a business of gathering these eggs, have a system of the method; they plant bundles of reeds in these lakes, a few feet apart, with their tops sticking out of the water. The insects deposit their eggs upon these reeds in such quantities that they not only cover the plants, but depend in clusters, like the alabaster eggs of frogs. When completely covered, these bundles are removed from the water and shaken over a sieve, then replaced for a fresh deposit.

Prize flags a good old monk, who loved his joke, and was fond of his food: "They gathered much of this and kept it in Heaps, and made thereof Cakes like unto Brickbats, and they did eat this meal with as good a Stomach as we eat Ch eese yea, and they told opinion that the Scum of fatness of the Water is the Cause that such great numbers of Fowl cometh to the Lake, which in the winter Season is infinite.—Good Cheer.

MARK upon barometer by taking a long narrow bottle, dissolve in it two and one-half drachms camphor in eleven drachms spirit of nine (decoloz); dissolve in another bottle thirty-eight grains saltpeter and thirty-eight grains sal muriatic in nine drachms water and add. Cork the bottle and seal it with wax, then make a very small aperture through the wax and cork, with a red-hot needle.

BROWN AS A COIN DO

How Some Bank Officers Ma Themselves of a Ta

"Is that a good half-do gentleman of a friend, a Dearborn street cigar cash find all the others spurious piece. It looked felt greasy and somabel thrown on the counter.

Without waiting for a gentleman said: "I had with one of these pieces ing once in a bank at many years ago, and the whom I will call Brown not here to defend himself to load about the bank in mer in everybody's lexicon a dreadful force, always pe little practical jokes a never tolerant of the slight himself. One day Mr. cashier and Mr. Read, been Mayor of Minneapo job. I was to go out and make a collection, bringing these half dollars, which left sided. I went, and when I handed the money over the Mr. Bradley.

"Here, said he, holding looking coin, "what kind you call this?

"Al this Brown pinged thought he would, and let coin, began to lanch at me for not knowing more tha had a counterfeit as that.

"I said I thought it was Brown said I was a fool Read came up and agreed "Well, said Brown, I of you, Read. A man that millions and millions a ought to know just a lit about money.

"I do, said Mr. Read, why I say this is a good pi

"I'd bet $1,000 it isn't, said Brown.

"All right, said Mr. Read up a certain amount. I take the bet.

Both checks were sta Brown asked, "Which is t

"You may, replied Mr. ing off the thin to feel wa pay the man had been cast

"Brown was the meekest saw. Oh, how he rajoiced He called as a set of th consented to rob him. I would rather leave 1 bar of a beer saloon than Suppose any longer. As a he abandoned the idea walked toward another p ented, however, and fol with a sickly grin, "I'll because simply because indictments from a mancuvi in a few days he learn Read never had any de his $1,000; but for the he did not feel about the he felt both pain and pl played another trick on like the same trick, an glad to play the part of played before. But this a comfort it holds with the finder. The with Brown's discovery of trick on him was a lasti never came into the bank great business after that. was very short with us, smiled."—Chicago News.

The Richland Bar

It is a peculiar mistake to the origin of the bonanza Long before it sounded Comstock it had been in countries and cities of Eu larly in Rome, where it great esteem, so much so Empire was finally ruined place on the coin of the even worn farther, for i by Suetonius that when Augustus' uniform Imp which followed employes had to devote a ce ly to their salvation. During he has had charge of the department of the Women's Temperance Union. "But treated as considerately as was a cripple," she says; "a smasher lately remarked to were glad to help you when can't walk, and you'd be wel—if you couldn't talk."

W. CARLE, the celebrated author, spoke before the Bath Century club" the other New York. As the Century man by which he came bo public it was quite appropriate to add as a century club.

Out of the discourse was "The Act of the Heinsick." are about 200 persons present that but five or six of the others of the country were cel This, he said, was due to that certain sorts of literary such as journalistic ones, brought large graduates at once started salaried labor, and was, therefore given by them in preference to itself, which only said "Silver have I none, but such as I give thee." He pleaded for quality in fiction and inveighed local realism which descended to coals it for imaginations so be no more in addition of being insulted. He urged upon all young the necessity of constant practice, and hegged them not to wait upon imagination, but rather to let imagination rest at effort. He deplored the manner in which amateurs bounded into the literary arena, hoping for indulgence and mungering for applause.

SPEAKING of the bonanza kings, a correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "Flood, Fair, and Mackey are brawny, full-blooded men, with good color, lightened by good living and drinking. They dress carelessly, and have all the Californian characteristics—free and easy in address. Still fellows well met with all their friends. Sharon, on the contrary, could sit for a picture of a good Connecticut deacon. He is thin, angular, undersized, flat-chested, with straight, lank hair, whitened by age, combed down smooth over his small head; a pallid face, almost destitute of expression, and a mustache that adds nothing to the countenance. When he looks at you, however, you notice a pair of eyes as sharp as those of a weasel, and the quiet gestures show that the small body has a good deal of nervous energy. He always dresses in plain, black broadcloth, of ministerial cut, and this, with his white necktie and silk hat, adds to his clerical appearance. He is one of the best poker-players on the Pacific coast."

A REMARKABLE bird story is related by Thomas Prince, of Carson River, Nev. A pair of robins built a nest on a fence near his house, and in a bush not far away a pair of catbirds had their house. The young in both nests were hatched about the same time; but after several days the catbirds were seen no more, having mysteriously been shot by boys. The young catbirds were evidently starving. When the robins came with a worm or beetle for their young they always alighted on the top rail of the fence before hopping down to their nests. Every time when a robin thus alighted the little catbirds opened their mouths, thrust up their heads and made an outcry. They were begging to the best of their ability for food. The robbins appeared to understand the appeal, and began feeding the hungry little catbirds. They did not do what they had undertaken by halves. Every evening the female robin went to her own nest and warmed her young, while the male robin took the nest of the catbirds. In this way both broods were reared, the little catbirds growing up as strong and lively as though they had been cared for by their own parents.

THE star-fish takes its oysters raw, but it is putting oystermen in a stew. The star fish or "five fingers," as the fishermen call it, has made its appearance in the oyster beds and is rapidly destroying the oysters. Off the Stratford shore one man's tract of 100 acres has been destroyed in three weeks' time, and what would have been worth next season $25,000, is now worthless. Mr. Henry J. Lewis, of Stratford, has been engaged in the oyster business for sixteen years, and he said that he had never known the star-fish to make a clean sweep until now. Mr. Lewis is at work with a small steamer dredging for those enemies of the oyster, and destroying them may be formed of their rays when it is known that he captured over 30bl bushels of five-fingers during seven hours' dredging. One bushel is estimated to contain more than 1,000 star-fish. Mr. Lewis owns a farm in Stratford and the stars are spread on the land as a fertilizer. The average size of the star-fish is six inches from outer across the fingers. It is not uncommon, however, to find some that measure a foot or more. The oysters are attacked singly by the stars, who, enveloping their prey with their long fingers, eject a fluid between the shells, which kills the oyster. The meat is then sucked from the shell.

A Grand Deed.

"Did you ever accomplish anything in your life that might be called grand or noble—some action that would distinguish you from your fellow-men and to which you can now look back with pleasurable emotions?" was the rather clumsy question put by a visitor to a State prison convict.

The poor convict paused for moment and then replied:

"Yes, I have. I once did a grand deed that gave me distinction of a certain sort, but," he added bitterly, "I can honestly say that I look back upon it with any pleasurable emotions.

"I am very sorry," returned the visitor, who was a good man. "That you cannot find pleasure in its contemplation. It might afford you blessed consolation in this your hour of trial and darkness. May I ask what this grand deed was?"

"Yes, you may," replied the poor prisoner, while his voice became choked with emotion. "It was grand larceny."—Philadelphia Call.

E JOURNAL

CHAS. J. STRANG.

VOIX. - - MICHIGAN.

aks whisky; what will you ?" said a man in a New ion. "I don't feel like drink- l Fred. The first speaker ot a generous glass of whisky, lf of it, and handed the rest to l remarking, with a wry face: something the matter with

Try it." Fred finished the The first speaker had 10 cents r bar, and they walked out. a new game," remarked the r to a New York Sun man.

g Jony P. Jones, who is said nat $25,000,000 within the past s, is trying to get another for- o has leased the Bonanza om the 1,550 level upward. anza, which has turned out 0,000,000 of gold and silver, d at a depth of 1,550 feet, and pects to find valuable ore de- above that level. His lease ee years, and he will explore and for all it is worth. He is t for 50 per cent. of the assay the ores found; all over that

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Baby's Eyes.

Look down deep in baby's eyes,
Tell me what therein you see,
Only starlight and wondering thoughts
Or the purest purity.

Eyes grow dim with toil and care,
Something goes with tears and sighs,
But we linger-ers fret,
Look down deep in baby's eyes.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Claud's Captive.

"I've been setting a trap," said Claude, coming into supper, with a very bright face.

"Where?" said Aunt Ruth.

"Down by the big elm, just over the creek. Jason helped me to make it, and I've put a forked stick in it, with a nice bit of apple on it's end. I'm sure I'll catch a s-pirrel before morning."

"Why do you wish to do so, Claude?" said his aunt.

"Oh, Aunt Ruth, a squirrel is such fun! And there in the attic is a cunning little cage, with a wheel on purpose for the fellow to run up and down. It is a shame to have that cage and nothing to put in it. I'll be real good to my squirrel, aunty. He shall have fresh water and plenty of nuts, and I'll make a perfect pet of him."

"But he will be a prisoner," said Aunt Ruth.

"Oh, he'll soon get used to that," replied Claude, taking another slice of bread and butter.

Aunt Ruth said no more, but she secretly hoped that Claude would not succeed in catching his squirrel. For several days he said nothing about it, returning from his little trips to the elm tree with a disappointed look. One evening, however, he came flying with great leaps over the meadow, and, as he drew near the house, he called out, gaily:

"Hullo, Aunt Ruth! I've got him!"

"Let me beg, then, Claude, that you'll not shut him up, after the free life of the woods, in that cobble-pile of a cage. Put him in the loft over the granary. That will be a splendid place for him."

But Claude shook his head. He was proud of his captive, and meant to be good to him, and every day he fed him plentifully, or tried to do so, though often the nuts were untasted. The sharp little teeth tore at the bars, and the bead-like eyes fairly snapped with anxiety to be free.

"Let me out! let me out!" Mr. Squirrel kept saying with all his might.

Aunt Ruth would stop and take a pitying peep at him now and then, saying:

"Yes, you poor creature. I would, in a minute, if you were not my nephew's property, and perhaps I'll do it any way."

She set her wits to work, to see if she could not give Claude a lesson, and one day, not a great while after, the little boy, who had gone to one of the upper rooms of the house on an errand, found himself, to his surprise, locked in. Somebody had turned the key on the outside.

He knocked called, and listened, but no one came, not a step did he hear. He glanced from the window. Aunt Ruth, her little velvet bag on her arm, was leisurely walking down the road to a neighbor's.

A party of boys were going nutting. He heard their merry shouts, but could not make them hear his calls. Once Rob Farley did look round, but presently went on, as though he had been mistaken in his suppostion.

"If this isn't a mean shame!" said Claude.

He looked around as he spoke. He was in one of the prettiest chambers of the cottage, and as he began to notice its numerous pictures, he discovered that a basket of fine needlow pieces and a plate of cookies were standing on the table. There was a china pitcher filled with cool water from the well. At the other time Claude would have eaten the fruit and enjoyed it, but he now felt so angry that he scarcely tasted both.

"I wouldn't have believed Aunt Ruth would have played such a trick on me," he said, as he sat sullenly down beside the window.

Presently Tim, the hired man, crossed the yard below, and stopped a minute to speak to Sally in the kitchen.

"That tree pears jairred of Claude's is jist a-growin' himself to death," were the words that reached the boy's ear.

"Tim! Tim!" cried Claude, leaning far out over the sill. "Send Sally up here, would you, please?"

Sally's slow, heavy step came upstairs. He could hear her panting with exertion. When she reached the third landing Claude said, very pleadingly:

"Unlock the door, Sally, there's a dear, good woman."

She needed no urging, and, after an hour's confinement, Claude was at liberty. He rushed down to the barn, set wide open the door of Penny's prison, and let that little circling go back to the woods and groves.

That night the Aunt Ruth told him the story of a great painter, named Leonardo da Vinci, who used to put cages and cages of birds in the market-place just for the pleasure of setting them free. And Claude's eyes sparkled, as he said: "Aunt Ruth, that's just what I mean to do when I grow up."—Youth's Companion.

The Kiss I Never Took Through.

I shall never forget my introduction to Tom Thumb. For weeks after I had been to "the village" with my father and seen the wonderful posters announcing "Barnum's show," I lived chiefly on the contemplation of going to see it.

How consistently I treated it to say and my clothes, or make little sister when asleep, but be a good girl in general, for many times a day I heard, "Now, Dolly, if you want to go to the show and see Tom Thumb, you must," or "must not"—well, do everything that was good and nothing that was bad.

I thought the day never would come. I had counted those which came before it on my fingers, and turned them below one after another until they were sore, and lame, but at last it dawned bright and clear.

In my new kid shoes, white leghorn hat, and muslin dress, which had been purchased and made with reference to this very event, I rode with my parents to the village of A., some five miles distant, in time to see the show "come in."

To go to the circus in those days, about thirty years ago, was not the common occurrence which it now is. There were only two or three circuses in the United States, and Barnum's then, as now, was the largest. I cannot stop to quarrel with those who may disagree with this last statement. The locomotive did not carry such establishments with lightning speed from cities to large towns merely, but strong horses drew them leisurely to the lumber villages as well. To see them "come in," in their gorgeous trappings and then unload and pitch their tent as by magic, was, and still is, one of the best and most interesting features of such a show. Many who were too scrupulous to attend the show properly regarded it as no breach of Christian conduct to witness all this.

Of the show which I am describing, and which was similar in many respects to those of the present time, I can distinctly recall only three things.

One was the elephants, so mammoth in size! Why, Bolivar and Jumbo are mere puppies compared to them, as impressed upon my childish vision. And I am almost led again the creeping, withering fright with which I walked among them, holding my father's hand. Another and pleasanter curiosity was the man without arms, who fired a pistol with his toes and nimbly cut paper dolls and other things for the crowd, holding the scissors most easily with his toes.

But longest to be remembered of all was the dwarf, Gen. Tom Thumb, originally named Charles S. Stratton. He was about 16 at this time, only twelve inches high and weighed less than twenty pounds. He was fresh from his three years' visit to Europe, where he had won the wonder and admiration of all its ruling monarchs, and her Majesty Queen Victoria had bestowed on him the title of "General."

I remember he stood upon a mixed platform covered with red calico or flannel. Mr. Barnum announced that all the little girls under 7 years of age, who would come upon the platform and kiss the dear little General would be given a colored lithograph of him standing in a scarlet upholstered chair.

At once there was a fluttering of hearts and modest blushing of faces among the little folk. Then were consultations held with papas and mammas, and after general smoothing of dresses and straightening of locks, ribbons and ruffles, the army of little misses began to ascend to the platform. Smack, smack, smack went the little lips for half-an-hour, for be sure all the kisses were not given in the most approved style, but no doubt not they are remembered by the actors as vividly as certain other memorable kisses received in other years. I remember that I turned my rosebud cheek to his tiny lips, for I could not, some way or other, summon courage to kiss so distinguished an individual.

But I received a picture, just the same, which was framed and hung in an honored place, and is still a treasured keepsake.

In view of the facts in the case I suppose I should have enlisted this paper in the Kiss that Tom Thumb Gave Me." Grand Chief.

Why They Parted.

"Alfred de Galore," said an wife, while her step-ch ildren were in the sensible land-slum in his first storm. "I have always tried to be a good and faithful wife to you; day by day I have flung your footprints o far under the bed that you had to get on your hands and knees and rake it out with the tongs; I have carefully arranged the coal scuttle so that you might find it the first thing when you came home late at night; I have done the hanket-ing myself and bought shank steaks, prematurely aged fowls and abominable canned butter; I have piled up your books and tidied up your room so that you couldn't find anything you wanted to, and yet—and yet—all these things have I done, freely and munificiningly, but there is a limit to aifely duty, and I can be, I am more. We must part. I have loved you so fondly—" Her fair head drooped, and the hot tears rained big rain-drops on an agony of grief seen as she had never known since her four young girlhood, when Mrs. Brown's pet sparrow she stabbed her and fled screaming with horror when she meant to be graceful and beautiful.

Meanwhile, Alfred had been taking it all in with a dazed, hideless earl-stand, upon the departure and expression on his pale, pale face. Then he spoke. His voice was husky with remorse-agency an fear, and that it had to send: "Why, this, dear—"

For Alfred was trying to work the virtuous-ign rance racket. "What have I done? May I not know the degree and breadth of some offence? It seems to me you have committed no crime at all, except—except—"

"Because," she sobbed through her grief, "because it is to be a woman who likes a pretty name. Sat Francisco Wasp.

Perforated Paper.

In any small stationery store or grocery the eye is attracted to an edge of colored paper hanging from each sheet. The sheet paper, as it is called, has scalloped edges, and is perforated in prettily arranged designs, making a lace-like appearance.

"The business in sheet paper is only about ten years old," a manufacturer said. "Then its edges were cut by a cutting machine, and the cost came to about $1.50 per gross. By and by better machinery was used, and the price fell to 40 cents per gross, and then came in with labor-saving machinery and further reduced it to 24 cents. The paper used when the industry began to spread out was of good quality, and was called master paper; now we use a peculiar kind made of wood pulp, and unless they can get some cheaper material that kind of paper will never be less in price. We take that paper and run it through a stamping machine, which stamps out the design. The dies used in stamping are very costly, and the presses also. There is one worth about $2,000, including dies. The quantity of sheet paper sold is amazing. We ship it by the ton. I think that $150,000 worth is sold in a year.

"Another branch of this business is stamping out stars, squares, etc., in pretty designs. Perhaps you think that these stars, which are so complicated and delicate, are stamped out by a die with a full design on it. That would be too expensive. I have a number of girls to fold for me, and according as to how it is folded so is the design. It is run through the press and stamped, and when it is taken out we unfold it, and there is your pattern perfect. We make designs to place dishes, vases, lamps, anything upon. And just now I have started making basket-paper and lace-edging of perforated paper. In time we will have as fine curtains as you would care to see, and when they are dirty just throw them away and get another pair. They cost less than a dollar, and will be cheaper by and by.

"We make perforated board also. Here is the finest we make. It has about 50 holes to a square inch. From these we go up to large holes, only a dozen to an inch. We also stamp oil-cloth for shelves, and wood, too."—New York Sun.

The True Wife.

Oftentimes I have seen a tall, ship-like glide by against the tide as if drawn by some invisible bowline, with a hundred strong arms pulling it. Her sails were unfilled, her streamers were drooping, she had neither side-cloud nor stern-wheels; still she moved on rapidly, in serene triumph, as with her own life. But I know that on the other side of the ship, hidden beneath the great hull that swam so majestically, there was a little bottle-nosed steaming, with a heart of fire and arms of iron, that was tugging it bravely on; and I know if the little steaming imprisoned her arms, and left the ship, it would wallow and roll about and drift hither and thither, and go off with the ebbing tide, no man knows whither. And so I have known some than one example, high-bodied, architected, silk-sailed, gay-pennoned, that but for the force-loving genius of brave, warm-hearted partner to unfold letter-wise that we therefore to him so that no wind or wave could part them, would have come down with the storm, and have been wrecked of me more.—G. W. Holmes.

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

The Detroit Evening Journal may be straddle the fence on politics, but it is not on the tariff—it strikes hard for protection.

A Michigan farmer propounds the following question in the Chicago Tribune: "We should like to inquire of some believer in a high tariff if the American manufacturers cannot compete with the European without the aid of a tariff, how is it that we could sell to England in the two years of 1880 and 1881 26,788,992 yards more of cotton goods than we bought of her?"

Most parents are too careless about the character of books, periodicals and papers their children read—boys more especially. Those who have investigated the evil influences of bad reading in New York, report that of the 3,313 inmates of the homes of refuge in that city, nearly every boy under 16 years of age, confined there, had been a reader of "dime novels." "As ye sow, so shall ye reap."

The Detroit Evening Journal makes the following center shot: "Texas is a democratic state to the tune of 60,000 majority, or more. The Texas treasury contains $1,075,000 in cash to day. The state does not owe a dollar, and the officials are puzzled to know what to do with the money. We publish this information for the benefit of the republican organs that are eternally shouting about the danger of democratic rule."

At a recent printers' banquet in New York, Henry Ward Beecher declared that it is a crime to print a newspapers in small type. "God might wink at such a crime," he remarked, "but the man who continually reads such a sheet would soon be deprived of the pleasure of winking." We are glad to observe that Mr. Beecher has profited by the clear type and clean pages of the JOURNAL, two of the strong points that commend it to popular favor.—Stolen.

The Detroit Evening News and Evening Journal are rated as independent rather than political papers. They are not. They are partisan of the bitterest kind. The News is free trade and the Journal is protection, and each represents the extreme view of its party. No matter what the name of the party which espouses either of these principles, their partisanship is none the less radical whether they own the party name or not. "Fiat" money found as extreme supporters as these, a few years ago, yet the money question was settled without serious injury to any industry, although dire misfortune was promised by the party in power if any change was made. The tariff and revenue questions can be settled equally well and without a fraction of the damage that is caused by the croakers who claim to fear a change.

Michigan Crop Report for January.

For this report returns have been received from 739 correspondents representing 591 townships. Four hundred and sixty-six of these returns are from 343 townships in the southern four tiers of counties.

At Lansing the average temperature during December was 28 degrees F., the highest on the 7th, 56 degrees F., and and the lowest on the 19th, 2 degrees F. It began snowing in various, perhaps all, parts of the state on the 14th, and during the next few days snow fell in sufficient quantity to cover the wheat fairly well, and the ground has not been bare since. This statement is made up from meteorological returns to the state board of health.

Farm animals are yet in very good condition, but correspondents quite generally note the fact that the failure of the corn crop begins to tell in their appearance. To the question "has wheat during December suffered injury from any cause?" 89 correspondents in the southern and 78 in northern answer "yes," and 333 correspondents in the southern counties and 154 in the northern answer "no." "Horse distemper," "epizootic," and "catarrhal inflammation" in horses are reported prevalent in a number of localities. "Hog cholera" is reported from a few localities, and the presence of "chicken cholera" is noted by two correspondents.

The quantity of wheat on hand in the southern four tiers of counties is estimated at 33 per cent, and in the northern counties 28 per cent of the 1883 crop. These figures indicate about 7,560,284 bushels of wheat now in the hands of farmers.

The quantity of wheat reported marketed since the first of September is 5,977,712 bushels, but as reports have been received from only about one-half of the mills and elevators in the state, the total quantity marketed is probably twice this amount, or say 11,950,000 bushels. The quantity used for seed is probably about 2,500,000 bushels, and the amount consumed by farmers, and others supplied directly from farmers' bins may be estimated at 1,500,000 bushels, making the total amount marketed, used for seed, and consumed by farmers, 15,950,000 bushels. Deduct this amount from the total product, 23,147,135 bushels, and we have 7,197,135 bushels as the probable amount remaining in farmers' hands, or about 312,000 bushels less than the amount as estimated by crop correspondents.

Historical Society.

Reported for the Journal.

Mrs. L. E. Allen's spacious parlors were well filled on Tuesday evening, by a meeting of the historical society, John Nicholls presiding.

The program for the evening opened with an instrumental by Mrs. Ella Smith.

Miss Maud Loveday read the paper for the evening, describing in a clear and interesting manner "The operations of 1776."

W. A. Smith excelled his own record in a tenor solo.

Ed. F. Parmelee gave a select reading, the "Revolution rising."

Mrs. G. S. Thomas and Miss Essie Buttars rendered an instrumental duet, and Mrs. Bradley and Miss Lottie Mason a vocal.

Mr. Severance, by a Shakespeream reading, added greatly to the evening's entertainment.

Mr. Parmelee closed the exercise with a vocal solo.

The society will meet next Tuesday evening at the parlors of Hon. A. Buttars.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by UPRIGHT BROS., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Jan. 22, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Richard Williams to Wm. Ferguson, Shore lot 17 & 7, $100.

A. C. Glenn and wife to Walter L. French, 30x rods, off e end of lot 1 blk 1 South Lake, $850.

Thomas C. Bird and wife to John Peterson, 4 acres on ne cor. of se ¼ 18-33-7, $100.

Joseph Lewis to W. F. Empey & Co. w ½ of se¼ 26-32-6, $450.

Job Printing

AT THE JOURNAL OFFICE.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. WILSON, 194 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS,

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery,

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. As we will use you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's new

Opera Block

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish,

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.

ADVANCE, MICH.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware,

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

GEO. W. MILLER,

DEALER IN

Clothing

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels,

GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mi

AT COST

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goo

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' W

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt S

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTL

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. H

CHARLEVOIX

Overcoats

AND

SUITINGS

Gents' Overcoats.

Youths' Overcoats.

Boys' Overcoa

Gents' Suits.

Youths' Suits.

Boys' Su

I have just received a large assortment of the above goods, bu reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing ou Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and j yourself.

E. M. Clark

Charlevoix, Nov., 1883.

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS,

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard ru him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances the

The Old Reliable Establishment in Chari

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHI

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Go

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets

Groceries, Provisions, Flour &

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our est

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfac

COME AND SEE U

Yours,

AMOS FO

JOURNAL

...ix, Mich. Jan. 24, 1884.

Business Notices.

...oes, Onions, Pork, etc., by ...ers guaranteed. EMPEY, EMREY & CO.

...k.—Two or three good ...cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

...s of Shingles at Upright, ...

...LE—A second hand por... with engine and boiler complete, ...call soon. J. MILO EATON.

...store in town who make a ...ans' Fine Hats, is Upright, Em...

...od, Wood, Wood. ...s of good dry birch and ...ood for sale. Good measure ...all at the office of J. MILO EATON.

...Emrey & Co.'s Apples and ...ake the hearts of all who have ...for sale by the barrel and bushel.

...e Temperature.

...ng a record of observations of the ...at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. ...ch day, for the week ending yester... ...es in all cases minus marked with

	7AM	2PM
...	26	37
...	30	28
...	29	*1
...	*8	16
...	0	24
...	23	26
...	0	*1

...ovision Market.

...AL PRICE TO CONSUMERS.

...ected by Upright, Emrey & Co.

...ght, $6@6.50

...AT FLOUR, per cwt, $6.00.

...L, per cwt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, ...

...m, 8@9. ...e, ...

...TOES, per cwt, $1.80. ...per bu, $1.10. ...s, per bu, 15@50c. ...ots, per bu, $1.00. ...ter, per lb, 28@30c. ...ese, per lb, 26@30c. ...ggs, per doz, 20c. ...ckens, per lb, 11@12c. ...ey, Steelers, 12@c. ...ese, Ivory, 8@9c.

...Items from the Market.

...f steak, 7@12½c; pork steak, 9@ ...@12½c; sausage, 15c; hams, 14c; ...@c. ...@15c.

...ews Brevities.

...your smile!"

...harvest continues brisk.

...en is in Detroit this week.

...enormum is slowly recov...

...n in Detroit this week on ...

...e is again in the employ of ...h.

...ll you get that "da' bad co'd ...ed!"

...ckburn is pushing the work ...sooner.

...church at Barnard next ...is talked of.

...Smith returned home from ...n Tuesday.

...you forget to bring that ...e Journal.

...etings at Barnard continue ...ated interest.

...ishes clear is taken out of ...ake this week.

...RNAL and the Weekly Free ... year for $2.00.

...d Livingston, of Boyne, is ...f the JOURNAL force.

...Williams, of Ironton, was ...r callers on Tuesday.

...clock this morning the ther...indicated 23° below.

...d the south end of Bridge ...excellent place for coasting. ...fright is in Kalamazoo this ...business connected with the ...land is overhauling and re... the boiler of the tug Bob ...

...hermometer has indicated ...below, several times during ...week.

...Cook, of Inwood, gave the ...a brief call on Tuesday. ...

...down hill has been the favoring pastime of the young ...ade.

...ar that a party of four or ...emen have purchased a saw... ...h will soon be erected near ...ks, south of this village.

None seem to stand the chill of a frosty morning better than the little boy with his sled.

Last Saturday morning opened clear and cold with the thermometer 9° below zero, and no wind.

Unhappy is the little boy or girl this winter who isn't the possessor of a sled or a pair of skates.

Paul Chartrand, of Rock Elm, has, it is said, one of the cleanest, best improved farms in his vicinity.

The Fremont Indicator just at hand, is a five-column quarto with the first page full of local brevities.

M. J. Stockman arrived home last Friday. He reports colder and more disagreeable weather outside than we have here.

Mr. D. J. Hays, for some time as sistant book-keeper for the iron company at Ironton, has returned home to remain.

Charlevoix has an amateur engraver who turns out work equal to much that is done in the cities.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Mr. Harry Tooker will carry "italic shooting sticks" and point out "type lice" to the visitors at the Journal of fice for a few months.

J. Milo Eaton and Geo. A. Leonard went to Grand Rapids on Tuesday, to look after the manufacture of special machinery for the brush handle factory.

The M. E. Sunday School is on the road to successful work. With mercury ranging from 10 to 12 degrees below zero, there were 110 present last Sunday.

If you want a first class weekly paper from the metropolis of the state, come and pay us two dollars for the JOURNAL and the Detroit Weekly Free Press one year.

The ladies' aid society of the M. E. church will meet with Mrs. Iddings, at the parsonage, next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All are requested to be present.

A child of Albert O'Brian, of Norwood, has been very sick for some time, but is now so far recovered as to permit Mr. O'Brian to return to his work in the lumber woods.

The "Round Lake Fish Co." have built a shanty on the ice and gone into business. They will be ready to supply the trade—after they get enough for their own breakfast.

From the amount of lumber being sawed this winter to be used for building purposes next summer we should judge that Boyne City will easily double in size this year.—Statesman.

Edwin Cook, of Norwood, has fatted and sold nine head of cattle this winter, selling the last of the herd to Elk Rapids butchers last week. This is but one of many items of his success.

We don't think there will be enough vessels navigating Lake Michigan next season to carry all the shipping wood, logs, etc., being got out here this winter. It is really immense.—Statesman.

Fox's ponies ran away last Thursday afternoon, and threw out Geo. Miller's little girl, and then ran to the barn and stopped against a tree. Luckily the girl was not seriously injured.

The ladies of the Congregational church and society will give an oyster supper, at the Bridge Street House, on Friday evening of this week. Supper will commence at 7 o'clock. All are invited.

Miss Lizzie Watson, for the past four months a compositor on the JOURNAL has returned to her home near Bay Springs. She will make a trip to visit friends in the west in the near future.

The Mancelona Herald was printed last week on a fine quality of tinted book paper, and announces its intention of continuing. That paper must be making something more than ordinary profits.

During last year 2,510,935 passengers were carried on the various steamers in the eighth supervising district of the great lakes and out of the whole number only 12 lives were lost, six by the foundering of the steamer Manistee in Lake Superior Nov. 16, and six by the foundering of the steam barge H. C. Akely on Lake Michigan Dec. 13. The crew of the Manistee were also lost, making a total of 16 lives lost attributed to the dangers of navigation. There were 9 accidents by fire, 6 by collision 1 by snag, and 10 steamers were wrecked or foundered with a loss of property amounting to $363,965.

Peter McPherson, an old resident a few miles south of Charlevoix, who went to Kansas with his family a year ago, recently returned overland with horses and wagon. They were two months an the road returning.

"What will the harvest be?" is the question now asked by many of our leading farmers. From all reports it will undoubtedly be a good one, as wheat is reported as looking exceedingly fine in most parts of the country.—Ex.

Three of Mr. Bacot's children narrowly escaped drowning yesterday. They were riding on a load of saw logs on the ice, and the load went through, and the children were pretty thoroughly chilled before they could be rescued.

"Romy" Emrey, who has charge of Upright, Emrey & Co's camp, manages 15 to 20 men, and gets out 35 cords of wood every day, no matter what the weather is. This is his first experience, but he proves himself able and successful.

The Gratiot Democrat, which was burned on Jan. 4th., resumed publication, with the aid of its neighbors, without missing a date. Johnson's personal loss was considerable, but he is not one to sit down and cry over misfortune.

We understand the proceeds of the oyster supper at the Bridge Street House to-morrow evening are to be devoted to furnishing the Sunday-school room in the new church. It is a worthy object and our citizens should patronize liberally.

The manufacturing company are building foundations for their engine and boiler this week, and will soon have them in their place. The windows and doors are in the lower story and men can work there very comfortably in the coldest weather.

J. Milo Eaton drove to Boyne last Saturday on the ice, and cut ten or a dozen holes in different places to learn its thickness. The thinnest he found was not less than six inches, and most of it was eight to ten inches of clear solid ice. He thinks it entirely safe for teams with moderate loads.

Touching the matter of successful missionary work here, and the appreciation of it, we have been informed that many on going out the M. E. Church have indulged in such remarks as "how delightful the service," "precious Savior," etc. This is without doubt a great encouragement to the pastor.

The Charlevoix Sentinel suggests and the Harbor Springs Republican approves Hon. A. Buttars of Charlevoix as the next republican nominee for lieutenant governor. Buttars is a clean, strong man and mentally and physically wouldn't rattle around in any chair the people might call him to fill.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

For the morning service at the M. E. Church next Sunday the subject selected is "The Immortality of the Soul." The discussion "will go upon the basis that there is something in us all, which fire cannot burn nor death assail,—impregnable to corruption." For the evening service the subject announced is "How to shine." If you will hear the discussion "you will understand how Daniel came to talk about shining." Can you be present?

The Clinton and Shiawassee Union says: "This is a time when everyone should do his best to financially help his neighbor, by not withholding from him any of those rights which are due from a creditor to a debtor, or a debtor to a creditor. Let every one so far as he can, prove his manhood, and soon the pinch will have passed, and in the months beyond we can look forward to a harvest that must even now be recognized as our bridge of safety."

The Allegan Gazette makes the following remarks concerning a subject that is now of considerable importance to fruit growers: "Whenever the mercury flirts with zero people begin to wonder if the peach buds have been hurt, and the question has been asked many times this week. The Michigan peach bud is pretty hardy under some circumstances. When the wood ripens thoroughly the buds will stand twenty degrees below zero, especially if the succeeding weather does not become suddenly warm. If the wood goes into the winter in a growing, unripe condition, ten degrees below zero would kill the buds. Last fall was late and pleasant, and the trees entered the winter in fine order."

Mr. William Van Buren, who has been connected with the State printing office of W. S. George & Co., at Lansing, for 13 years, has acquired an undivided one-third interest in the business, and will continue to fill the position of business manager. Mr Van Buren is one of the best printers in Michigan, and a most excelent business man. He has a host of friends throughout the State and is extremely popular with those having dealings with the state printing house or the Lansing Republican office.

"Six months ago" the JOURNAL "had a healthy appearance and was quite a favorite here, besides bidding fair to become a strong rival of the Sentinel," but now "it seems to have lost its early energy."—Statesman. If a constant increase of business, as well as personal commendations for the clean, newsy paper, means loss of energy, why, then we are "guilty," and we are willing it shall continue. As to the slang: if you do not already understand what it means, you will later on. It is well understood around here, though.

The lawyers in attendance on the Supreme Court had considerable fun at the expense of one of their number, who was making an able legal argument on Wednesday. He was explaining to the court that he was not able to discuss all the points raised by the opposing counsel for the reason that he had been handed their brief but a few moments before they began to speak, and he said that he had listened to the argument of learned counsel with one ear while reading the brief with the other! Of course this "brought down the house."

The Kalamazoo Telegraph has secured a correspondent in this place, and readers of that paper who are interested in this town and vicinity may reasonably expect to find its news department more valuable to them than heretofore. The Telegraph is doing as much or more than any other state paper to build up Charlevoix, and this will make a material addition to the efficiency of their efforts. An increasing subscription list to their daily or weekly edition would prove the appreciation of our citizens of the service rendered.

We have recently received two copies of the Eaton Rapids Journal, a handsome, newsy, six-column quarto. Sixteen years ago next March we entered that office in the position of "satanic majesty." It was then a seven-column folio, both sides printed at home, but was frequently issued as a half sheet for lack of paper. Its type was old and worn out, the remains of the Lansing State Journal, —and was a very poor specimen of printing as compared with the present handsome sheet. J. B. TenEyck, the editor, who was also postmaster, years ago, was called upon for a "corrected proof," and his form was locked up and laid away by the side of his ancestors. Eaton Rapids whiskey was the chief obstacle to his financial success, though he was seldom intoxicated. Henry A. Shaw was judge of probate, and it was currently reported at that time that the fees for printing were frequently staked at the poker table, and the judge's success at the game left the editor with little besides "dead type" to show that his was the official paper of that department of the county. The high water in Grand River, in the spring of '68, swept down main street, and deposited huge blocks of ice in the street as far down as the old Herrick House.

Farm Produce of every description taken in exchange at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

Cash! Cash! Cash! Bring your Ties, Wood, and Poles to Upright, Emrey & Co.'s and get the Cash for them.

Eating and starving, it is all the same, for you are sure to suffer from Piles. No worse torture can be conceived of. Blind or bleeding piles are unequaled for annoyance, but by a few applications of Parmelee's Pile Suppositories they entirely disappear. The knife is often resorted to by physicians for the relief of protruding piles, but such barbarity is not a necessity for Parmelee's Pile Suppositories used according to directions quickly reduce, replace, and drive them away. Warranted to cure. Price 50 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

ANOTHER FIRE.

Whiskey Brings Disgrace and Ruin to a Once Happy Home.

Henry Cunningham, living in the south part of town, has been on a spree for several days. Last Saturday night, it is reported, he drove his wife to the neighbors by various threats On Sunday she saw the marshal, but when that officer arrived at the scene of action all was quiet and he claimed no jurisdiction, but advised the woman to get a warrant early Monday morning if she wanted to do anything about it, then the man could be taken care of. This, for some reason, she did not do. During Monday, while Cunningham was away from the house, the wife went and secured the three children, and hid them away, we are told, so he could not find them. Sometime during the evening he returned to his home. About ten o'clock one of the neighbors was awakened by him, with the report that his house was burning. Two men started for the house, but could see no light, nor the man who gave the alarm. They went inside and found the house full of smoke. After vain efforts to get to the chamber, where the fire seemed to be, they removed the furniture from the lower room, and decided that they could do no more toward saving the property, as by that time the entire upper story was beyond help. It is supposed that Cunningham went to bed smoking, and the fire communicated to the bed. The wonder is that he was not himself suffocated. If the children had not been taken away during the day, the probabilities are that they would have perished. This matter may yet find a place in the courts.

Hayes.

Occasional cold days, with the thermometer at zero.

The sleighing is not to be excelled.

Chas. Whitford, the school inspector, is visiting the schools in this township.

The M. E. protracted meeting at Fair Grove, closed last week. A society of 28 members was organized.

The way some of the farmers are getting out logs, and from appearances, and what they say, there will be some buildings erected next season.

A new comer arrived at Mr. Yores —a little girl.

Quite a number of men of this township, are at work near South Arm.

Mrs. Ella Gregory, of Cross Village, is visiting her parents, W. S. Baker, at present. Mr. Baker's daughter, Mrs. Jennie Wade, returned to her home last week.

Miss Flora Nelson is teaching the Whitford school. The schools of this township are now all supplied with teachers.

Chas. Whitford is building a dock at his mill on Pine Lake. He expects to ship lumber next summer.

Young men of this vicinity should be on their guard, as some of the ladies here are observing leap year.

ZEKE.

List of Jurors.

The following is a list of jurors drawn for the February term of circuit court to be held in Charlevoix, commencing Feb. 26th.

John Gemmel, Bear Lake.
Jas. D. Mitchell, Boyne Valley.
Chas. Bellinger, Charlevoix.
Jno. W. Howard, Chandler.
Daniel Tantter, Evangeline
A. L. Cash, Eveline.
Wm. M. Hood, Hayes.
Lewis F. Price, Hudson.
Ben. J. Rice, Marion.
Geo. Wardrof, Melrose
Jno. Muirhead, Norwood.
S. M. Richardson, South Arm.
Addison Darrow, Springvale.
Chas. A. Bachman, Wilson.
Jno. Stimetz, Bear Lake.
Wm. Nelson, Boyne Valley.
A. Buttars, Charlevoix.
Wm. Tingle, Chandler.
Jas. H. Thompson, Evangeline.
Geo. M. Wood, Eveline.
Geo. Pierce, Hayes.
J. D. Leach, Hudson.
Henry Dixon, Marion.
Amidon Stafford, Norwood.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best time piece ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges.

MODERN MARRIAGES.

O Love! Love! Love! what times were those Long ere the age of belles and beaus,
And dresses bare and silken hose,
When, in the green Arcadian close,
You married Psyche under the rose.
With only the grass for a bedding!
Heart to heart, and hand to hand,
You followed Nature's sweet demand—
Roaming loving through the land,
Nor sighed for a diamond wedding.

So have we read, in rhyme or prose,
How Hero watched for her beloved,
Impassioned nod youth, Leander;
She was the fairest of the fair,
And wraps him round with her golden hair,
Whenever he landed golden and bare,
With nothing to eat and nothing to wear,
And we'll that was easy enough!
For Love was Love, and Lover then was Lover—
The object the child, the sweetest the heaven,
And kissing was cheaper, all the world over,
Wherever Cupid might wander!

Six thousands of years have come and gone,
And still the moon is shining on,
And Hymen's torch is lighted,
And hitherto, in this land of the West,
Most couples in love have thought it best
To follow the ancient way of the rest,
And quietly get united.

But now, True Love, you're growing old—
Bought and sold with silver and gold,
Like a horse, or a horse and carriage:
Midnight balls,
Moonlight walks,
The glance of the eye and the sweetheart sigh,
The shadowy haunts will be out of fashion,
I do not wish to disparage;
But every kiss
Has a price for its bliss,
In the usual ex-cash of marriage.
And the contract sweet is not complete
Till the high-contracting parties meet
Before the altar of Mammon;
And the bride must be led to a silver lower,
Where pearls and rubies fall in a shower
That won't be eaten by moth or canker.

"A WITLESS THING."

"A moment in madness; thoughts and reasonableness sifted"—Hamlet, act iv., scene 5.

"Now remember, Lord Grayton," said the Doctor, solemnly, "all I told you. You are very welcome to come to our ball, though, as a rule, we only ask a certain set of wise men and maidens who know our ways and their ways. Still, you are good-looking, humorous, and cheery, and if you are sensible you can enjoy yourself, and, maybe, do them a world of good. I believe in electricity as a curative agent—not the quack nonsense of belts and chains and nerve forces, that only shake the nerve-centres, but the real electricity of animal spirits, the tonic of good health."

"I shall do exactly as I am bid," said Lord Grayton, a handsome, florid, muscular young man, strong as a horse, buoyant as a balloon, just back after a self-imposed exile of five years in India with the big game; "but tell me of all these cut-and-dried customs again. I did a lot of dancing of various kinds years ago, before I went after the tigers" and he laughed as mingled memories of Mayfair and the Lotus club swam back to him—"and I've tried both the Corroboree and the Salouga; but you honor me never danced with a lunatic yet, eh?"

"Are you quite sure of that?" said the Doctor, grimly: "they are to be met with outside Cygnosoul, I can tell you. However, listen; the rule is simple. Be civil and don't contradict. If old Crackton asks you to play chess, play. He's a good player, and will beat you fairly if he can; if he can't he'll make a false move and call 'checkmate,' and then you must resign. If poor Snoddy thinks you are the Prince, and 'Sirs' you all over the place, and throws out hints about being asked to Sandringham; if you are asked to listen to the chiming clock in Baker's interest, or to avoid some one else, because he's glass and night brank, you must do your best to be courteous to them all, and on no account laugh at their fancies."

"Sounds rather jimpy. And the ladies?"

"I'll see to that, and introduce you to the nicest, and tell you what to avoid in speaking about; and you will make the talking for themselves, the women don't talk much."

"Sign of insanity, I suppose. And what am I to talk about?"

"Everything save some one thing—the Empress of Austria, or the stage, or white roses, or Mr. Mallock, or black stockings. I'll give you the one—never fear; only it may happen that one of them will ask you to dance, and then you must steer as best you can—talk society or art or chance. My own girls and their friends get on famously with the male patients, and you must do your best. Come, you are going to be on last term tonight, and you must be off and dress: 3 sharp, mind, as they all go to bed at midnight."

"Queer thing this," soliloquized Grayton, as he completed an elaborate dressing, "beginning my first season after five years by dancing with a lot of lunatics. Hope they won't wear straw in their hair: if they do I shall bolt to the Congletons' dance."

He had many strange adventures that evening to be studied about the pretty ball room at the Copswood private asylum. He was duly detected at chess by the wealthy Cracktons, who dabbled exactly old back a squad spaces on the board, and performed prodigies of the kind later. He soon vanished with the gentleman who had swallowed a crocodile, and he noticed the pale, quiet young lady, who dared herself to count up the lights on each side of the room and sing softly to himself, "Nearer, dear Master, nearer," very confidentially. He had been an acrostic editor once upon a time. He noticed the mass little man with the pale blue shirt-front, who wanted to step-dance the six-in lancers, and who presently entered the dancers, "to go first all over again, please, and try to keep together," and the erratic journalist, who wrote paragraph on his shirt-cuff, and many other folks that passed him in the grand pursuit of unsettled occupation.

This is long for a "very witless thing," whereof the Doctor, as "a very foolish, fond old man, four score and upward," passed them, muttering of "Brighton A's;" "you know who he was?" and he whispered a name in Grayton's ear that made the nobleman whistle softly.

"And are there many Ophelias, "whose young maid's wits should lie as mortal as an old man's life?" asked Grayton, showing that he knew his Shaks-peare as well as the Doctor.

"Yes, but we keep their secret. Now go and dance," and the Doctor took King Lear off for a cup of coffee.

It was a sad, weird sight altogether, and, as Grayton watched it, it reminded him of Kaulbach's "Dance of Death," and he felt oddly morbid as he thought of his own lonely life. He had once loved and given his heart to a woman whom he had both idealized and idolized; he had youth, brains, and with her he felt he could conquer the world. It was an old story; she turned out to be as loveless as she was lovely, and so he took to the tigers. He had got over it all now, but he shuddered as he remembered the fret of it all, and thought how near madness he had been driven when he heard of her ultimate fate and where her life had drifted to. So there where Ophelias here! More like Andrew, he thought, as he watched some rather uncouth gambling in a corner. His eyes wandered round the room and rested on a face.

It was an exquisite oval face, somewhat sad and wistful in expression, of that rare, delicate olive color one sees in the South, with the skin of so fine a texture that the red flush springs up through the vehemence at a moment's summons; the large brown eyes, soft and dreamy, the chiseled mouth was half parted, and the dark-brown hair, looking black in night, was worn Greek fashion close to the head, sweeping in undulating lines past the tiny rose-tipped ears. She was seated on a low sofa, carelessly clasping one knee with both hands. She wore a simple white frock, just most ricgly frilled around the little white edition of a throat, and a great blackered rose nestled in her breast. One little high-arched foot, in pink-colored netted silk, kept swinging to the music. No one seemed to talk to her except the two sentinels, but the real electricity of animal spirits, the tonic of good health."

"I shall do exactly as I am bid," said Lord Grayton, a handsome, florid, muscular young man, strong as a horse, buoyant as a balloon, just back after a self-imposed exile of five years in India with the big game; "but tell me of all these cut-and-dried customs again. I did a lot of dancing of various kinds years ago, before I went after the tigers" and he laughed as mingled memories of Mayfair and the Lotus club swam back to him—"and I've tried both the Corroboree and the Salouga; but you honor me never danced with a lunatic yet, eh?"

"Are you quite sure of that?" said the Doctor, grimly: "they are to be met with outside Cygnosoul, I can tell you. However, listen; the rule is simple. Be civil and don't contradict. If old Crackton asks you to play chess, play. He's a good player, and will beat you fairly if he can; if he can't he'll make a false move and call 'checkmate,' and then you must resign. If poor Snoddy thinks you are the Prince, and 'Sirs' you all over the place, and throws out hints about being asked to Sandringham; if you are asked to listen to the chiming clock in Baker's interest, or to avoid some one else, because he's glass and night brank, you must do your best to be courteous to them all, and on no account laugh at their fancies."

"Sounds rather jimpy. And the ladies?"

"I'll see to that, and introduce you to the nicest, and tell you what to avoid in speaking about; and you will make the talking for themselves, the women don't talk much."

"Sign of insanity, I suppose. And what am I to talk about?"

"Everything save some one thing—the Empress of Austria, or the stage, or white roses, or Mr. Mallock, or black stockings. I'll give you the one—never fear; only it may happen that one of them will ask you to dance, and then you must steer as best you can—talk society or art or chance. My own girls and their friends get on famously with the male patients, and you must do your best. Come, you are going to be on last term tonight, and you must be off and dress: 3 sharp, mind, as they all go to bed at midnight."

"Queer thing this," soliloquized Grayton, as he completed an elaborate dressing, "beginning my first season after five years by dancing with a lot of lunatics. Hope they won't wear straw in their hair: if they do I shall bolt to the Conglotons' dance."

He had many strange adventures that evening to be studied about the pretty ball room at the Copswood private asylum. He was duly detected at chess by the wealthy Cracktons, who dabbled exactly old back a squad spaces on the board, and performed prodigies of the kind later. He soon vanished with the gentleman who had swallowed a crocodile, and he noticed the pale, quiet young lady, who dared herself to count up the lights on each side of the room and sing softly to himself, "Nearer, dear Master, nearer," very confidentially. He had been an acrostic editor once upon a time. He noticed the mass little man with the pale blue shirt-front, who wanted to step-dance the six-in lancers, and who presently entered the dancers, "to go first all over again, please, and try to keep together," and the erratic journalist, who wrote paragraph on his shirt-cuff, and many other folks that passed him in the grand pursuit of unsettled occupation.

This is long for a "very witless thing," whereof the Doctor, as "a very foolish, fond old man, four score and upward," passed [illegible]

ture! Where did you get your beautiful thoughts about marriage?"

"I suppose my dream girl taught me."

"Is she pretty?"

Grayton wondered if deliberate barefaced compliment would be a good tonic for a lunatic. "Yes, beautiful. She has large brown eyes, wonderful hair, a low voice, an olive oval face, she dances superbly, and she wears a black-red rose in her bosom."

Ophelia looked a little frightened.

"Forgive me, I didn't mean to be rude, but she is—really, you are not angry with me?" and he laid his hand gently on hers.

"Oh, no!" then there was a pause. "Come, and let me show you some pictures; I'm something of an artist myself;" and she led him into a long gallery, and talked art so sensibly and sympathetically that here, at all events, he felt there was a very pleasant method in her madness.

"Talking art" is a recognized method of interchanging sympathies.

He was on bad lodge at a picture, but he preferred to affect ignorance, and asked the stupidest questions simply for the pleasure of hearing her talk. There was a kind of innocent dignity about her that fascinated him. She was more like a vestal virgin than a lunatic. So the evening passed all too quickly, till he suddenly bethought himself that there was an important division in the Lords that night, and that he was bound to be a "not content" before the clock struck 11, and after that he was due at Lady Congleton's dance.

"Must you go away?" she said; "why?"

"Well, you see, I'm one of those much-abused people that the Radicals call hereditary legislators, and I am not undivided yet; I must be in our House at 11."

Of course she could not have understood a word he said, for she murmured to herself, "Poor fellow! so young to go!"

He rose and held his hand out. "Good night; thank you for a very charming evening."

"Good night," said Ophelia, tenderly. "I should like a little memory of this meeting; will you give me that rose? I've been longing for it all the evening."

"Of course I will; why didn't you ask for it before?" and she took it from her dress and fastened it in his coat. "I shall often think of you when I walk round the Senate cleanlier, when he was overtaken by Mr. Jarvis, the public lion of the Copswood asylum."

"Poor fellow, divided from herself and her fair judgment!" the quotation was irresistible. "I wonder what sent her into a state of insanity. Some sudden grief killed at Kassassin. Gracious! I hope this terrible Meg Merrilies is not going to ask me to dance" and he moved away as he saw a wild-eyed woman bearing down upon him, to a seat somewhere near the pale girl with the black-red rose.

For a time he watched her; then he tried to magnetize her. At last their eyes met; he stared her full in the face. She never shrank from his look, only a sort of pitying light seemed to glow in the sorrowful eyes. A moment passed, and then she arose quietly and with perfect grace and stately gravel walked over to him—to his intense astonishment sat down quietly by his side, and said, in a soft, musical voice:

"You seem sad tonight. I am sorry."

For a moment he was tongue-tied; then he recollected his instructions and pulled himself together.

"Well, I think I was sad because you were looking sad."

"Was I? I suppose I always do, then. Of course being here naturally makes one feel sad. But we won't talk of that," she added, gently. "Do you care for dancing? I'll dance with you, if you like."

"Dance with you?"

"Oh, yes, if you like; many of the others dance, you know."

"How calmly she seems to recognize her sad state!" thought Grayton, as he stood up and passed his arm around poor Ophelia's slender waist, wondering how she would "jig and amble." They were playing the "Dream Faces," and as they swung in undulated rhythm to the pretty waltz, and the few slips of same 17 would come up to her.

"That's right," said the Doctor, encouragingly; "set a good example." "Means I'm to be a tonic, I suppose," thought Grayton; so he carried off Ophelia for an air.

"You dance beautifully," she said. "No, you sat down and I'll get you the next three; then there's a spoon and a wafer; now you feel comfortable, don't you? Isn't that a lovely valse?"

"Yes, it is indeed 'Dream Faces;' the people one meets in dreams are generally vastly nicer than the real folk. I love many dream friends."

"Have you?" she said, looking amused; "tell me of them."

"Well, you know, I think I'm married to a dream—for just like Gilbert's Princess Toto, you know, with her dream husband. And she comes to me sometimes and scolds me if I've done anything wrong in the day; and sometimes she's very loving, and sometimes she's cross and doesn't come near me for weeks."

He felt as if he were telling a fairy tale to a child.

"How charming! Do tell me more of her. Is she beautiful? What is she like?"

The fanciful conceit seemed to amuse her, so he went on drawing pretty pictures of an ideal woman; then growing unconsciously eloquent, he burst out, "Ah, if one could only meet her alive, what a wife she would make! A lover second self, aiding, sympathizing, helping, loving—at once the choicest of chums and the most adored of ladies!"

She had flushed a little as he spoke, but she went on, "What a pretty picture! Where did you get your beautiful thoughts about marriage?"

"I suppose my dream girl taught me."

"Is she pretty?"

Grayton wondered if deliberate barefaced compliment would be a good tonic for a lunatic. "Yes, beautiful. She has large brown eyes, wonderful hair, a low voice, an olive oval face, she dances superbly, and she wears a black-red rose in her bosom."

Ophelia looked a little frightened.

"Forgive me, I didn't mean to be rude, but she is—really, you are not angry with me?" and he laid his hand gently on hers.

"Oh, no!" then there was a pause. "Come, and let me show you some pictures; I'm something of an artist myself;" and she led him into a long gallery, and talked art so sensibly and sympathetically that here, at all events, he felt there was a very pleasant method in her madness.

"Talking art" is a recognized method of interchanging sympathies.

He was on bad lodge at a picture, but he preferred to affect ignorance, and asked the stupidest questions simply for the pleasure of hearing her talk. There was a kind of innocent dignity about her that fascinated him. She was more like a vestal virgin than a lunatic. So the evening passed all too quickly, till he suddenly bethought himself that there was an important division in the Lords that night, and that he was bound to be a "not content" before the clock struck 11, and after that he was due at Lady Congleton's dance.

"Must you go away?" she said; "why?"

"Well, you see, I'm one of those much-abused people that the Radicals call hereditary legislators, and I am not undivided yet; I must be in our House at 11."

Of course she could not have understood a word he said, for she murmured to herself, "Poor fellow! so young to go!"

He rose and held his hand out. "Good night; thank you for a very charming evening."

"Good night," said Ophelia, tenderly. "I should like a little memory of this meeting; will you give me that rose? I've been longing for it all the evening."

"Of course I will; why didn't you ask for it before?" and she took it from her dress and fastened it in his coat. "I shall often think of you when I walk round the Senate cleanlier, when he was overtaken by Mr. Jarvis, the public lion of the Copswood asylum."

"Poor fellow, divided from herself and her fair judgment!" the quotation was irresistible. "I wonder what sent her into a state of insanity. Some sudden grief killed at Kassassin. Gracious! I hope this terrible Meg Merrilies is not going to ask me to dance" and he moved away as he saw a wild-eyed woman bearing down upon him, to a seat somewhere near the pale girl with the black-red rose.

He felt as if he were telling a fairy tale to a child.

"How charming! Do tell me more of her. Is she beautiful? What is she like?"

The fanciful conceit seemed to amuse her, so he went on drawing pretty pictures of an ideal woman; then growing unconsciously eloquent, he burst out, "Ah, if one could only meet her alive, what a wife she would make! A lover second self, aiding, sympathizing, helping, loving—at once the choicest of chums and the most adored of ladies!"

She had flushed a little as he spoke, but she went on, "What a pretty pic

There was a little pause as he looked at her with his frank, kindly eyes.

"Let us forget and forgive, Lady Mary; after all, you were very good to poor Daniel."

"And you were very nice and kind to foolish Ophelia. Listen! there's the 'Dream Faces' again; let us see if we can dance it in our right minds," she said, as she rose with a nervous smile quivering in the corners of her lips.

And it so happened that in a moment they both came to their right minds, and the Doctor was at the wedding.—London World.

John Adams and Editor Jarvis.

John Quincy Adams' Private Secretary was his son, John Adams, who had a married name of his father's peculiarities, and who soon made himself very obnoxious to the friends of Gen. Jackson. One morning Mr. Russell Jarvis, who then edited the Washington Telegraph, a newspaper which advocated Jackson's election, attended a "drawing room" at the White House, escorting his wife and a party of visiting friends from Boston. Mr. Jarvis introduced those who were with him to Mrs. Adams, who received them courteously, and passed on into the east room. Soon afterward they found themselves standing opposite to Mr. John Adams, who was conversing with the Rev. Mr. Stetson. "Who is that lady?" asked Mr. Stetson. "That," replied Mr. John Adams, in a tone so loud that the party heard it, "is the wife of one Russell Jarvis; and if he knew how contemptibly he is viewed in this house they would not be here." The Bostonians at once paid their parting respects to Mr. Adams and withdrew, Mr. Jarvis, having first ascertained from Mr. Stetson that it was Mr. John Adams who had insulted them. A few days afterward Mr. Jarvis sent a note to Mr. Adams by a friend of his, Mr. McLean, demanding an explanation. Mr. Adams told Mr. McLean that he had no apology to make to Mr. Jarvis, and that he wished no correspondence with him. Considering his personal relations with Mr. Frelinghuysen, Mr. Jarvis had no right to be at the drawing-room.

A week later Mr. John Adams went to the Capitol to deliver messages from the President to each member of Congress. Having delivered that address to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, he was going through the rotunda toward the Senate chamber, when he was overtaken by Mr. Jarvis, who pulled out a pistol, presented it at his face. A scuffle ensued, but they were quietly parted by Mr. Dorsey, a Representative from Maryland. President Adams notified Congress in a special message of the occurrence, and the House appointed a select committee of investigation. Witnesses were examined and elaborate reports were drawn up, but neither the majority nor the minority recommended that any punishment be inflicted upon Mr. Jarvis.—Ben: Perley Poore.

A Poetic Contest.

A resident of Carlisle, drawing nigh 50 years of age, in his solemn moments often asked himself by what means it might be made known to the world that such a man as Andrew Horner ever lived; and as according to his own estimation if he excelled in anything it was as a poet, he resolved to publish a volume of his manuscript poems, composed at various periods during his eventful life.

Finding it cheaper to get them printed at Glasgow, on his way he put up at the head inn in the town of Ayr. After tea, and seated enjoying a long pipe with a glass of grog, several weighty lords dropped in, who soon knew his business affairs, and prevailed upon him to read some of his compositions, which were much applauded one after another.

A cynical remark, however, dropped from one of the company, who remarked that he believed there was a new ploughboy in the town who could make better poetry.

"Produce him," said Andrew.

The challenge was clenched by a bet of a guinea. The boy was found taking his porridge after a hard day's work, and with difficulty brought to the inn when he understood the business. Being seated, the bell was rung for writing materials, which were placed before Mr. Horner, who took the paper and wrote a little and rubbed his forehead repeatedly, but at last passed the paper to Robbie (who was afterward the celebrated Robert Burns) with the remark that Pegasus would not fly.

"You see, friends, I have written the year in which I was born, and intended to put into numbers some events of my life, but they won't flow," and, passing the paper, he said, "Let the lay try."

Bobby, receiving the sheet, saw—

Is seventeen hundred and thirty-nine,

And added:

The deil's gi'en me's nae a saxpence
But I'll be seventeen hundred
But after stand be examined by pen.
Mair's no to come and sae's I've penned.

And told Mr. Andrew Horner.

Upon hearing this, Mr. Horner rammed his volume of manuscript into the fire, and returned home to Carlisle the following morning.

One of the Family.

"Say pard," said an Austin man to a stranger who was shuffling so slowly along the street that the latter seemed to be stuck fast to the sidewalk, "don't you come from the West?"

"I reckon you're about right in your calculations," he drawled.

"I thought so."

"What made you think I hailed from that region?"

"Because I hear that there has been a shower of snuff there lately, and I see that you've been out in the rain."—Texas Siftings.

HUMOR.

USED up—A weather vane.

THE Indian ring—A war-whoop.

NEWS of the week—Health bulletins.

THE chord of sympathy is often expressed by a cord of wood.

NONE but the most inhuman would think of pulling down the blind.

"TWINKLE, twinkle, little star,
How we wonder what you are."
Wouldn't it be Shame upon them
Does your mother know you're out?
—Somerville Journal.

A WIFE is called a better half by a man had better half her than no her. P. S.—If you don't get on at first you may do so halfway.—Merchant and Traveler.

A good sister was seen shopping last Sunday night, and when asked to explain if she expected "We'll been taking a pretty heavy sacrament," but I didn't get over a pint," preacher communed with the jug. Talk about me being full! you ought see Sister Rumpler.—Ackmenta Bee.

TOGETHER they were looking at the paper. "Oh, my, how funny!" "What is it?" he asked. "Why, here's an advertisement that says reasonable offer refused." "What sold about that?" "Nothing, now," she replied, trying to blush, "only are exactly my sentiments."

"Pray, my good man," said a to an Irishman who was a witness trial, "what did pass between you the prisoner?" "Oh, then, plase lordship," said Pat, "sure I see little any of the wall." "Pauly?" says "What?" says I. "Here," sa "Where?" says I. "Whisht!" Hush!" says I. And that's all your lordship."

A LADY subscriber wants to how to catch a husband. We have no experience in this kind of thing personally, as we are unmarried; but have known a husband to be caught by his wife as he was leaving town. From the animated conversation exacted it seemed to be a social that the catching was very much sport.—Oil City Derrick.

DID you ever think that when to heaven—if we do not first professional gentlemen will be of our employment? The doctors have nothing to do, because everybody is well; the lawyer will have nothing to do, because everybody will take his sign down and seek some employment, because there will be no public offices to be appointed and no litigation; and the preacher can't preach his old sermons more, because the people will have heard the doctrines absolutely perfect, and will be so much changed it for some old fellow visitor, looking at the china, that it was very fine, and that he have been handed down by fifty ancestors. "Yes," said the woman of the family promptly, "it has come down to us from Aunty Clay."

As Jerahmiah was one morning a Donnybrook fair when he was accosted by a man from the country pitiest Pat into the ditch. The slept until morning, when a same thing. Seeing Jerahmiah "Is that you, Patrick Moriarty don't know whither it be or no blood Pat, looking around. "Is Patrick Moriarty. I've lost a good horses; if I do not Patrick arty I've found a good one."

"My son has the elements of business man in him," said a gen to a friend whom he met on Fr street. "How so?" "Why he several men's names so mutilated they couldn't tell them from the "Indeed. By the way, here's been recorded and collected, for years after it was supposed to court was in session except when Smug' was in bed and asleep. Press.

The Chemistry of the Stomach.

In the wonderful processes of the laboratory of the stomach, it is essential that the reagent employed should undergo no change in matter or shall remain unchanged, so also it is imperatively necessary that the bodily organs in which digestion takes place, and the secretions that feed the blood, shall be in the perfect-est condition. When the stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels or blood are disordered or diseased, the digestive process is imperfect, and the question arises from a deficiency in the chemical properties of the food. Some years since, the second most valuable medicine ever discovered by man, was brought before the public, and has ever since been steadily growing in favor with the most intelligent people of the land, and commands it very highly. A Parkhurst, lawyer, known to many of our readers, testifies that he was cured of painful dyspepsia.—Petersburg (Va.) Gazette. Not a ill pold or smut. 50 cts.

Universally Approved.

J. A. Rogers, M. D., of Kenton, Ohio, says: I used our Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup has been universally approved by us and our patrons; never hear any complaints about it here; sold it for years.

IS another column will be found the advertisement of the FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE, offering $50,000 in presents to new subscribers. This publication ranks among the best and handsomest of family and agricultural papers, and its proprietors are fully able to carry out any offer they may make. An award of $40,000 was made to the present list of subscribers, all of which was carried out as shown by the letters and addresses, in the advertisement, of some of the receivers.

For the Colonels-?"

You must get some one else to dis-turb them with you."

The Wife, Wife World.

Rev. Rockwell or Penn.—Senor A. [illegible] Delgado, LL.D. and Counselor-at-law of Justice, Lima, Republic of Peru: "One single application of St. Jacobs Oil cured me completely of rheumatism in my left arm. I recommended it to many friends, the Mrs. Emma Johnson, widow, and Mr. D. Herman Decker, gentleman, Mahlon Creek. Both were cured entirely by the pain-cure from intolerable pains of few months' standing." Mr. Decker was cured of inexplicable pain by a single application of the cure. Mrs. Johnson, 75 years of age, was cured in 60, cured me completely of rheumatism in my left arm. I recommended it to many friends, the Mrs. Emma Johnson, widow, and Mr. D. Herman Decker, gentleman, Mahlon Creek. Both were cured entirely by the pain-cure from intolerable pains of few months' standing." Mr. Decker was cured of inexplicable pain by a single application of the cure. Mrs. Johnson, 75 years of age, was cured in 60, cured me completely of rheumatism in my left arm. I recommended it to many friends, the Mrs. Emma Johnson, widow, and Mr. D. Herman Decker, gentleman, Mahlon Creek. Both were cured entirely by the pain-cure from intolerable pains of few months' standing." Mr. Decker was cured of inexplicable pain by a single application of the cure. Mrs. Johnson, 75 years of age, was cured in 60,

The Best In the World.

Dr. J. W. Hamilton, of Merrillan, Wis., says: I have sold Warner's White Wine Tar Syrup for years. It is the best cough medicine in the world and has no equal for asthma.

Be afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

Cover-uptives given up by doctors have been cured by Piso's Cure. 25 cents.

"Rough on Rats" cleans out Rats, Mice, 15c.

Mother Swan's Worm Syrup, Destroys, 25c.

"Rough on Coughs" Troches, 15c; Liquid, 50c.

WELLS' May Apple Cliver Pills, 10c.

"Rough on Toothache," instant relief, 15c.

"Burdo-pain," Great Kidney and Urinary Cure, $1.

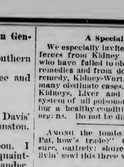
"Rough on Corns," for Corns, Warts, Bunions, 15c.

WELLS' Health Renewer cures Dyspepsia, Impotence, Blood Diseases, Weakness, $1.

The "Rough on" Tooth Powder, elegant, 15c.

ST. JACOBS OIL

TRADE MARK



THE GREAT

GERMAN REMEDY

FOR PAIN.

CURES

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites.

AN ALL-EXTERNAL REMEDY. 50 CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents bottle.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER DRUG CO., Successors to A. VOGELER & CO., Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM

HAY-FEVER

ELY BROTHERS, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED for the best selling Pictorial Books on Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. NATIONAL PUBLISHING CO., Chicago, Ill.

IF YOU WANT TO MAKE MONEY

write to CARRUTH & CO., Bankers, Washington, D. C.

640 ACRES of Land near R. R. in Pecos Co. Texas. Price $1 per a. Title clear. Patent from State. Send 10 cents for particulars. Blanches, and Lands for sale in all parts of Texas. Address, with stamp, Box 1076, Galveston, Texas.

CHICAGO SCALE CO. 81 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. Manufacturers of Scales for Every Purpose. Write Us for Prices and Descriptive Circulars. Send for Price List.

ORGAN AGENTS

Wanted in every County.

REED'S TEMPLE OF MUSIC, 139 State Street, CHICAGO.

A Special Invitation.

We especially invite a trial by all those suffering from Kidney and Liver complaints who have failed to obtain relief from other remedies and from doctors. Starner's great remedy, Kidney-Wort, has effected cures in many obstinate cases. It acts at once on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleansing the system of all poisonous humors, and restoring a healthy condition of those important organs. Do not be discouraged, but try it.

Among the tombs: Stout party.—Well, Pat, how's trade?" Grave-digger.—"Purely, sure, entirely: shure, we have n't buried a livin' soul this three weeks!"

Twenty-four Hours in Live.

From John Klein, Lafayette, Ind., who announces that he is now in "perfect health," we have the following: One year ago I was, to all appearance, in the last stages of consumption. Our best physicians gave me up. I finally got so low that our Doctor said I could only live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a burial robe. Was, Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, which considerably benefited me. I continued until I took nine bottles, and I am now in perfect health.

Many persons in Pittston are using Ely's Cream Balm, and obtaining prompt and satisfactory results. A lady is recovering from the effects of a severe cold in the head, of fifteen years. She had given up her case as incurable. Mr. Berber has used it in his family and commends it very highly. A Presbyterian lawyer, known to many of our readers, testifies that he was cured of painful deafness.—Pittston (Pa.) Gazette. Not a ill pold or smut. 50 cts.

Universally Approved.

J. A. Rogers, M. D., of Kenton, Ohio, says: I used our Warner's White Wine of Tar Syrup has been universally approved by us and our patrons; never hear any complaints about it here; sold it for years.

IS another column will be found the advertisement of the FARM, FIELD AND FIRESIDE, offering $50,000 in presents to new subscribers. This publication ranks among the best and handsomest of family and agricultural papers, and its proprietors are fully able to carry out any offer they may make. An award of $40,000 was made to the present list of subscribers, all of which was carried out as shown by the letters and addresses, in the advertisement, of some of the receivers.

For Dyspepsia, Dangerous, depression of spirits and general debility in their various forms; also as a preventive against fever and ague, and other intermittent fevers, use Peruvo-Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Crosby, Russel & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic, and for patients recovering from fever or other sickness it has no equal.

The Best In the World.

Dr. J. W. Hamilton, of Merrillan, Wis., says: I have sold Warner's White Wine Tar Syrup for years. It is the best cough medicine in the world and has no equal for asthma.

Be afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

Cover-uptives given up by doctors have been cured by Piso's Cure. 25 cents.

"Rough on Rats" cleans out Rats, Mice, 15c.

Mother Swan's Worm Syrup, Destroys, 25c.

"Rough on Coughs" Troches, 15c; Liquid, 50c.

WELLS' May Apple Cliver Pills, 10c.

"Rough on Toothache," instant relief, 15c.

"Burdo-pain," Great Kidney and Urinary Cure, $1.

"Rough on Corns," for Corns, Warts, Bunions, 15c.

WELLS' Health Renewer cures Dyspepsia, Impotence, Blood Diseases, Weakness, $1.

The "Rough on" Tooth Powder, elegant, 15c.

GAIN

Health and Happiness.

How? DO AS OTHERS HAVE DONE.

Are your Kidneys disordered?

"Kidney-Wort brought me from my grave when all else failed."—Mrs. Mary Allen, Rochester, Vt.

Are your nerves weak?

"Kidney-Wort cured me when my water was diseased."—Frank Wilson, Peabody, Mass.

Have you Bright's Disease?

"Kidney-Wort cured me when my water was diseased."—Frank Wilson, Peabody, Mass.

Suffering from Diabetes?

"Kidney-Wort is the only remedy that has done me any good."—Dr. Phillip C. Bolton, Montpelier, Vt.

Have you Liver Complaint?

"Kidney-Wort is a sure cure for diseased Liver."—Henry Ward, Isle Cal. 68th Sts., Grand, N. Y.

Is your Back lame and aching?

"Kidney-Wort fit it to a T. Only 1 dose and my back was lame. I had to walk out of bed."—C. S. Belanger, Milwaukee, Wis.

Have you Kidney Disease?

"Kidney-Wort cured me after 2 doctors and many remedies failed to affect even a moment's relief."—Mrs. Jos. Hall, Bellevue, Wis.

Are you Constipated?

"Kidney-Wort cures every case of constipation and piles of 10 years' standing."—Nelson Tabor, St. Albans, Vt.

Have you Malaria?

"Kidney-Wort has done better than any other remedy I have ever tried."—Jos. Wells, Jr., Macon, Ga.

Are you Bilious?

"Kidney-Wort has done for me more than any other remedy I have ever tried."—Jos. T. Goodman, Ex-Treas. Virginia.

Are you tormented with Piles?

"Kidney-Wort cured me of terrible Piles of many years' standing."—Geo. H. Reed, Cashier N. Bank, Sycamore, Ill.

Are you Rheumatism racked?

"Kidney-Wort cured me of terrible Rheumatism of 20 years' standing."—Geo. H. Rowe, Cashier N. Bank, Swanton, Vt.

Ladies, are you suffering?

"Kidney-Wort cured me of peculiar troubles of several years' standing. Many friends have used it with like success."—Mrs. Jno. A. Logan, Carbondale, Ill.

If you would Banish Disease and gain Health, Take

KIDNEY-WORT

THE BLOOD CLEANSER.

SHARP PAINS

Pain in the Chest, and all external pains, are relieved instantly by the Ideal Pain-Killing Plaster. Absolutely unrivaled for Pleurisy, Stitch in Side or Back, Lumbago, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Hysteria, Female Pains, Backache, Kidney Troubles, Inflammation, Soreness, Weakness, Nervousness, Hip Disease, Spinal Complaints, Heart Disease, Sores, Bruises, Lame Back, Chronic Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, Paralysis, Epilepsy, Fits, Nervous Prostration, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Neuralgia of the Heart, Hysteria, Female Weakness, Dizziness, Fainting Spells, Malaria, Ague, Chills, Fever, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Flatulency, Nervousness, Sick Headache, Impure Blood, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Boils, Felons, Tumors, Cancers, Ulcers, Abscesses, Piles, Fistula, Fever Sores, Salt Rheum, Eczema, Tetter, Ringworm, Itch, Scald Head, Barber's Itch, Blood Poisoning, Mercurial Poisoning, Contagious Blood Diseases, Diseases of Women, Children or Old Age, Broken Down Constitutions, Colds, Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 24, 1884.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

January 1st, 1884, has passed into the history of time, and with it the annals of another New Year Day festivities in Washington life. With the exception of Inauguration Day every four years, the first of January is the most brilliant day in Washington social and political circles, and although the inclemency of the weather this year detracted from the usual exhibitions of street gaiety, the indoor receptions in official and private residences were on a scale of lavish expenditure and display.

THE PRESIDENT'S RECEPTION of course was the center of attraction, to fully describe which would require to much of your valuable space, but a synopsis of the event may not be uninteresting to the readers of the JOURNAL.

The interior of the executive mansion was elaborately decorated with floral designs at an expense of nearly $10,000. At eleven o'clock as the first notes of "Hail to the Chief" were played by the marine band stationed in the vestibule, President Arthur, accompanied by Mrs. Carlisle, entered the corridor followed by the members of his cabinet with their wives and some twenty-five prominent ladies without escort who were to assist in the reception. The party proceeded to the "Blue Room" in the middle of which the president took up his position with the ladies on his right and the secretary of state on his left, the other cabinet ministers being in the rear.

The diplomatic corps were the first received. Secretary Frelinghuysen presenting them to the president, after which followed the justices of the United States supreme court and their wives. Colonel Packwell and Marshall McMichael then took the secretary of state's position and presented the senators and representatives. This continued one hour when the army and NAVY were received, followed by department officers, Mexican soldiers, the grand army, oldest inhabitants' association, and then the public in general. The president shook the hands of and afterwards, in answer to an inquiry whether his arm was fatigued, he replied: "Not at all. I have learned the science of spending a day in shaking hands without becoming tired. I invariably manage to grasp the hand and do the shaking myself before my visitor has the opportunity to collect his thoughts."

OVER FIVE THOUSAND PEOPLE,

The residence of the cabinet, ministers, supreme judges, senators, congressmen and the lesser officials of note were "open" during the afternoon, and it is estimated that over 100,000 calls were made in the city from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m.

THE NEW CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY

has just been completed by the public printer and it reveals some curious personal statistics. Of the 76 senators who were sworn in at the beginning of the present session only twelve are new to that body. Mr. Morrill of Vermont is the oldest, being 74, while Mr. Kenna of W. Va., is the youngest senator, he being only 35 years of age. The busiest senatorial biography in the directory is that of Mr. Brown of Georgia, who admits that because he favored reconstruction measures he "became very unpopular," but salves his vanity by asserting that "in every instance when he has been a candidate before the people he has been successful." The briefest sketch is that of Senator Call, of Florida, who occupies four lines. The richest senator Fair, of Nevada, reputed to be worth forty millions, though Mr. Bowen of Colorado, is said to possess nearly as much as Fair. The poorest are about a dozen of the southern senators whose riches are on an even plane, being confined to their senatorial salaries. Brown of Georgia, and Matoon of Virginia are the only two from the south who are wealthy. Senator Butler of S. C. is pronounced the handsomest man in the senate, though Mr. Riddleberger of Va. disputes the palm in this respect. Senator Ingalls is considered the best debater and Senator Morgan the best logician. Messrs Edmunds an l Garland are the ablest lawyers, while Senator Vance is the finest rhetoritician and best story teller. Both Mahone and Riddleberger make their confederate records a conspicuous portion of their personal sketches. Senator Anthony is the oldest in senatorial service, and Edmunds next.

NATIVITY OF THE SENATORS.

Kentucky leads the states in furnishing the present senate with eight native born senators; Ohio comes next with seven; New York, six, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia and Pennsylvania each four. Ohio furnishes two senators for Indiana, and two for Iowa, the four gentlemen representing these states having been born in the buck eye state.

THE HOUSE IN THE DIRECTORY.

There are twenty foreign born members of the House. The oldest is Mr. Kelley and the youngest Mr. Post. General Rosecrans has the longest biography, nearly a page, while Messrs. Skinner, of N. C. and Houseman, of Mich., give simply their names and post office address. After Rosecrans, ex-speaker Keifer indulges in the longest sketch. A grandson of Henry Clay, who now sits in the house employs less than three lines.

THE MEMBERS WRITE THEIR OWN SKETCHES, and a great diversity of taste is manifested as to what is worth telling of themselves. For instance, John S. Wise of Virginia considers it an honor that he "was captain of the Richmond light infantry blues for several years." L. H. Weller, of Iowa, known in his state as "Calamity Weller," informs the country that though born and reared a democrat, he voted for Fremont, Lincoln, Grant, Greeley, and then sandwiched Tilden in, and next voted for Weaver, the greenbacker. After moving to Iowa he "tilled the soil in the day, and studied law, politics and theology at night; was admitted to politics at once, subsequently to the courts, and finally to the church." Mr. Weller then details a number of defeats while running for office, while most congressmen conceal the defeats and make the successes prominent. Col. "Tom" Ochiltree says that he is the "first native Texan ever elected to congress, and as the colonel is a bachelor he omitted to say when he was born, but gives his age away when he states that at the age of sixteen he engaged in the Indian campaign of 1854-55; he is therefore forty-six, or thereabouts.

NATIVITY OF THE MEMBERS.

The only native of Washington in congress is Gilbert M. Woodward of Wisconsin, whose birth in this city was accidental. New York leads in the house with 35 native sons; Pennsylvania, 35; Ohio, 31; Kentucky and Virginia, 17 each; Massachusetts and Tennessee, 13 each; North Carolina, 12 Of the entire Arkansas delegation (7) in both houses, but a single member was born in the state. Only two of the Mississippi delegation (9) are natives of the state, but she gets even by having some in the Arkansas, Missouri and California delegations. Of the 401 senators and congressmen 267 are lawyers, while the remaining number represent over forty different trades and professions.

THE PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSION

question will probably be settled this winter by the passage of a bill providing that the line of succession from the vice-presidency shall be the president of the senate pro tem, next the speaker of the house, and finally the chief justice of the United States supreme court, with one to fill the office until another election has been ordered and taken place. Ex-Senator Eaton, now a representative in the house, from Connecticut, will champion such a bill and it has a large number of advocates.

THE HUNTINGTON LETTERS are still the great theme of conversation among politicians. One benefit will accrue to the country from their publicity, and that is, they are an insuperable obstacle to the Huntington-Mills Crocker schemes to grab the Texas Pacific land grant. Fourteen millions of acres of land are involved in this grant, and the committee on public lands have prepared a number of bills declaring it forfeited together with about 50,000,000 acres in the northwest. Very few members, in the light of these letters and the Newell diary implicating several western senators and representatives as having received over $500,000 to aid in securing the passage of the grants, will dare to oppose the forfeiture of these public gifts to the railway monopolies, gifts that were secured by the shameless lobby of 1870-72.

BRIEF NOTES.

It is now settled that Mrs. Carlisle is the official head of society in Washington. The president's recognition of this fact New Year's day compels the wives of the cabinet dignitaries to submit to the ruling, though a few of them acquiesce very ungracefully.

Mr. Blaine's late conference with President Arthur is gradually leaking out, and causing considerable speculation as to its final results. Further developments may be expected.

Quick Pay.

The leading locomotive works of Philadelphia employ 3,000 workmen, and the hands are paid off regularly every week. In thirty minutes after the paymaster begins his work every man has his cash. The system of keeping the time and paying this vast number of workmen, says the Record, is quite simple. When a man goes to work he receives no pay until the second week. This permits of five days in which to calculate the wages of each man and place the money in envelopes. In each department there is a timekeeper, who makes a return every day to the paymaster. The counting and arranging of the immense amount of money required to pay the large force is accomplished by the paymaster and an assistant. On the books of the company opposite the name of every employe, is a number by which he is known. The figures range from 1 to 3,000. On Friday evening the men form in line in the order of their number. The paymaster and his assistant take their places at the head of the column. "Number 1, 2, 3," says the assistant, as the men step up in a lively manner to receive the envelopes containing a week's wages. He rapidly calls the numbers, soon running into hundreds, then into thousands, and at the end of half an hour the vast crowd of workmen has disappeared, and the paymaster's labors are done.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure, that the doctors had given up and said could not be cured. 75 cents a bottle. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. 10 percent of cause and cure up the system you will find Dewitt's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pound, 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

The throat is often diseased on account of catarrh, producing dryness and a constant desire to cough. That tickling sensation and the numerous clearings in public singers and speakers especially, is relieved at once by Hamilton's Cough Troches, which are prepared from the most approved formula. Do not wait ill acute bronchitis or even consumption takes firm hold of you. Price only 25 cents per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

The circulation of the Detroit Evening Journal has increased so rapidly that its managers have found it impossible to promptly meet the demands for it from all parts of the state, but in a few weeks it will be able to supply all Michigan readers without delay. One of the famous Scott perfecting presses, with all the latest improvements, was ordered several weeks ago, and will be completed about the middle of February. The Evening Journal will then become one of the fastest presses in Michigan, and be able to meet its rapidly increasing circulation without difficulty.

At home and abroad, at church and theatre, in the counting house and work room, in fact everywhere is heard that hacking cough which soon develops into congestion or inflammation of the lungs, bronchitis, pneumonia, and consumption. Be wise in time. Immediate relief and cure can be cheaply obtained. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will surely give you relief from these threat and lung troubles that often terminate in death. Instant relief in croup and a balsam of whooping cough. Your consumptive friend will be greatly benefited. Price 25 and 75 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

"With the beginning of the year the Detroit Evening Journal congratulates itself upon the marked success it has achieved, and promises to give its readers the benefit of every dollar it earns for the next 12 months. The Evening Journal aims to meet the long-felt want for a clean, spicy and enterprising newspaper. It avoids sensationalism, and all matters of an objectionable character are excluded from its columns. This may be safely said to be one of the great secrets of its success, and as a family paper it is now a recognized favorite. It prints more reading matter than any evening paper in Detroit, and gives all the news of the day in an attractive form. It is the slave of no party, and the servant of no man or set of men, but stands as a thoroughly independent journal, devoted only to what it believes is for the best interests of Michigan."

PIMPLES.

I will send FREE the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLACKHEADS, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing a 3c. stamp, Mrs. LAWRENCE & Co., 71 Bromfield St., N. Y.

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FA

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN

FOR 1884

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.; HARBOR AND SUMMER RESORTS.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL

A Progressive Local and Family Newspaper

Published Every Thursday, at $1.50 a

With the coming of spring and the opening of trade, our friends should make as a respective beehives to increase the circulation and popularity of the JOURNAL. A the part of subscribers to preserve at least one newspaper subscriber, would sometimes enable us to make improvements not now possible. It is the aim of the publishers JOURNAL the most complete and thorough local newspaper in the county, and with correspondents make it a record of the transactions of the whole county. To effect we desire correspondents in localities not now represented, who will carefully and business transactions and personals of a nature to interest all in their vicinity. What has been in the past is best told by a few extracts from many favorable notices exchanges:

Neat, newsy, and spicy.—Boyne Statesman.

Bright and newsy, and radical in politics.—Petoskey Record.

Filled with the choice local and general news.—Elk Rapids Progress.

Overflowing with fresh local and general news and presents as fine an appearance as any paper in the state.—Grand Traverse Herald.

Independent in politics, and thoroughly enterprising in appearance.—Harbor Springs Independent.

In the future we shall strive to maintain this excellence, and to improve in every whenever possible. AS A PROMOTER OF ENTERPRISE the JOURNAL will be to build up not only the village of Charlevoix but the whole county. One item of accomplished has been productive of good results; other features planned for the an equal proportion to the value of the JOURNAL as a county paper. The following show how our work is appreciated by newspapers competent to judge:

The picture of the celebrated summer resort, Charlevoix, appears in this week's will be the means of drawing many a weary mortal there next season.—Detroit Evening Journal.

The Charlevoix JOURNAL presents its readers with exceedingly correct views of the town and summer resorts.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

As an inducement to begin the good work NOW, we offer the following

Cash Club Rates.

Five subscribers for one year, at one time, accompanied with the cash, ONE DOLLAR. Ten subscribers for one year, at one time, accompanied with the cash, ONE DOLLAR an EXTRA COPY to the one who sends the club.

For one name and Two Dollars, Cash, we will send the JOURNAL one year, Free Press one year.

Samples furnished on application. Address

THE JOURNAL, Charlevoix

EVERYTHING

In the line of

Furniture

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H. C. Cooper

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH

Come and See me before Bu

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

MBER 29. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

E JOURNAL

ublished every Thursday morning.

CHAS. J. STRANG.

ver T. D. Smith's grocery,

LEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

D AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

SINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

SHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, in Bishop Block, Charlevoix, Mich. SHANK. C. J. GRIER.

ALLEN H. Attorney at Law, East Mich. 22

BLAINE, Attorney and Counselor, Patent business promptly attended to. ET DETROIT.

KEN, Attorney and Counselor at Office in Grand State Hotel, Boyne

LAKE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix.

A. EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

VA NEAL, Attorneys at Law, Office ver's Hotel, Boyne, Mich.

T. BISSELL, Attorney and Solicitor, R, Circuit Court Commissioner.

ANKS AND BANKERS.

OF CHARLEVOIX. Capital $50,000. ed department. Depositors secured by ge on private bonds, real estate, and ades for more than above amount. tions first-class. Foreign and exchange. REYNOLDS & KNOWLTON.

CHURCHES.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at 12 m. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7 p. m. C. P. VANALSTYNE, pastor.

FIRST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. St. H. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7. J. L. DOUGLAS, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX BOAT AND READY FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursdays of each month at the hook and ladder hall. E. F. HARDY, secretary.

SICIANS AND SURGEONS.

FRANKLIN M. D., Professor of the Institute, Chicago, Ill. Diseases and surgery. Office in Dr. Dickinson and Surgeon, Office and residence in Charlevoix, Mich.

ESSMORE, M. D., Surgeon and Physician. Office at residence, Charlevoix, Mich.

EAL ESTATE AGENTS.

V. S. CLARK & CO., Notary Public, Real Estate and Insurance Agents, Charlevoix, Mich.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

Rapids Lodge No. 142, meets Saturday evening, at Grand Hall.

Lodge No. 157, meets Tuesday evening, at Grand Hall.

Rapids Lodge No. 282, meets Saturday evening, at Grand Hall.

Lodge No. 157, meets Saturday evening, at Grand Hall.

Lodge No. 282, meets Saturday evening, at Grand Hall.

STATE, President. A. E. CROUTER, Vice President.

Bank & Farmers' Bank. OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Also Telegraph and Express Office. Buys and sells exchange on all principal cities. Receives deposits, subject to check, and transacts a general banking business. W. S. HOUGHTON, Cashier.

oard by the Day or Week

AND MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Teams and Cars. Prompt attention. W. S. HOUGHTON, Prop. Near Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

dge Street House, ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor, Charlevoix, Michigan.

House is centrally located, and its accommodations are first-class. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in town.

ntain City House, Antrim County, Michigan. Proprietor. Charlevoix, Michigan.

Headquarters for the traveling public. Headquarters for the Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

ited States Hotel, Geo. W. Curtis, Proprietor. Boyne City, Michigan.

Rooms large, well furnished and refurnished.

ewing Machines CHEAP.

Machine Needles for almost any kind of Machine. Machine Oil and Lubricator. NEW MACHINE WARRANTED FOR 5 YEARS.

Notice paper and envelopes with the Charlevoix JOURNAL. O. B. Weed & Co.'s drug Lively, newsy, well-printed.—Lansing Republican.

Presents a neat mechanical appearance, and is well edited.—Traverse Bay Eagle.

Well edited and well printed.—Grand Traverse Herald.

An excellent local paper.—Ionia Sentinel. It deserves its success.—Kalkaska Leader.

Seems to grow better with each issue.—Petoskey Herald.

FOR

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

GO TO

Dr. G. W. CROUTER'S DRUG STORE.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

An Immense Line to Choose From.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by Peter Sidlowski, Mary Sidlowski, his wife, bearing date the first day of January, A. D. 1882, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix, on the twelfth (12th) day of January, A. D. 1882, at 1 o'clock p. m. in liber "C" of mortgages, on page 304. Said mortgage was duly assigned by E. M. Clark, which assignment was recorded in the register of deeds office aforesaid, for the term of 1 year from the twentieth (20th) day of July, A. D. 1883, said mortgage being assigned by E. M. Clark, which assignment was recorded in the register of deeds office aforesaid, for the term of 1 year from the twentieth (20th) day of July, A. D. 1883, at one o'clock p. m. in liber "S" of mortgages, on page 19. On which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of two hundred dollars and forty cents ($240), principal and interest, and no attorney's fee has been agreed upon or provided in the mortgage, but I am compelled to foreclose by reason of said default in the payment of said sum, as in the interest of E. M. Clark, assignee of mortgage, and state of Michigan the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale at public vendue of the premises described in said mortgage, as follows: The west half of the southwest quarter of the southeast quarter of section twenty-two (22), in township thirty-four (34) north, of range seven (7) west, containing twenty acres of land more or less, in the county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, at the front door of the court house in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 12th day of March, A. D. 1884, at one o'clock p. m. of said day, to pay the amount due on said mortgage, with interest and costs of sale. Dated this 12th day of January, A. D. 1884. E. M. CLARK, Assignee of mortgagee. CHEVALIER & GRIER, Attorneys for Assignee. 1st

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has opened in Leslie' sand Childrens

Furnishing Goods.

Latest styles in Collars & Cuffs, and will be pleased to see her friends. Also agent for a first class dressmaking establishment.

LIVERY.

The undersigned has purchased the livery formerly owned by him, and installed

Geo. Dirance, Manager.

There has been added a new stock of

Horses and Carriages

And a sensible invitation is extended to all old friends and patrons to call and see him when over they need anything in that line.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

Grand Rapids Democrat, DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Daily, by mail, $10 per year in advance; per month, 90 cents.

Weekly Democrat, one year, 75 cents; for six months, 40 cents; for three months, 25 cents. In advance. Address as above.

THE DEMOCRAT, Grand Rapids, Mich.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from nervous prostration, lost manhood, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers willing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

HALL'S Catarrh Cure

Recommended by Physicians

100 REWARD WILL BE PAID

We manufacture and sell it with positive assurance that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance. It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you are troubled with this distressing disease, ask your Druggist for it, and get it, and try it, and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Be Cheerful, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. 22

GEO. F. EDMUNDS.

Vice President Pro Tem.

Geo. F. Edmunds, the subject of our sketch this week, was re-elected president pro tem of the senate on the fourteenth inst. after Senator Anthony of Rhode Island had been elected and declined because of continued ill health.

Mr. Edmunds, of Burlington, was born at Richmond, Vermont, February 1, 1828. His education consisted only of that afforded by the public schools, after graduating from which he began the study of law and at an early age became a practitioner of considerable ability. He soon drifted into politics, and successfully, as he was elected a member of the Vermont legislature in 1854, '55, '56, '57, '58 and '59, serving three years as speaker. He was then elevated to the state senate and was its presiding officer pro tempore, in 1861 and '62. Soon after this Hon. Solomon Foote, one of the U. S. senators from Vermont died and Mr. Edmunds was appointed to fill the vacancy and he took his seat April 5, 1866.

Mr. Edmunds has since been continued in the senate, his present term, which expires March 3d, 1887 being his fourth election. He was a member of the electoral commission of 1876, and was first elected president pro tem of the senate immediately after the resignation of David Davis, last year.

Senator Edmunds is a fine parliamentarian, his rulings while in the chair being unbiassed by any political preferences he may entertain as a republican. He is well liked by all senators, and graces his position with all the dignity and ability becoming the vice president of the United States.

How the Tariff Robs Lansing Workingmen.

One principal disadvantage that the manufacturing interests of this city have to contend against is tariff taxation. It weighs down upon them with crushing effect.

The tariff enhances the cost of much of the raw material which our local manufacturers are compelled to use. The chief article that enters into the goods manufactured in this city is iron. Iron is "protected" by a heavy duty. The Lansing manufacturers are forced to pay an unjust royalty to the Pennsylvania and southern iron makers of many hundreds of dollars.

The machinery which they use is also "protected" by the tariff. So is the copper, brass, pine lumber, and a long list of other articles, which they require in their business. The effect of this tribute levied upon them by the tariff monopolists is to reduce the wages of the men employed in these Lansing establishments. There can be no doubt about that. In order to make their goods sufficiently cheap to find a ready sale, the manufacturers must keep down the cost of them. Their largest item of expense is for labor. The latter naturally comes in for the earliest and sharpest scaling down. Raw materials the manufacturers must have and they have to pay the market price for them. But labor they can make their own terms with, and hence it suffers most in the cheapening process.

Thus the workingman in Lansing is oppressed and cheated by the tariff. But this is not the worst feature of the matter. The tariff adds to the cost of nearly all of the clothing, and many other necessaries of life, which the workingman is compelled to provide for his family. The tariff, therefore, not only robs him of a just compensation for his labor, but it turns around and exacts a toll from him for the mere privilege of being cheated!

And yet there are those who talk about the tariff "elevating and dignifying" American labor! Out upon such arrant humbug-gery! Lansing Journal.

The Duty on Lumber.

If, as some of the lumbermen claim, the removal of the tariff on lumber will not effect prices, because, as they say, lumber is now sold more cheaply than Canadian lumber can be laid down in the states, there is no reason why they should object to a reduction or removal of the duty. On the other hand, if it will reduce prices, it can only do so by stimulating the destruction of the Canadian forests. If this should be the case, the result would be to give more employment to the men who wield the ax and do the laborious work. It would perhaps keep some of the Canadians at home who now annually come to Michigan during the logging season, and if they are provided at take out of this country the net proceeds of their work. This would diminish the supply of working lumbermen in Michigan, and by the necessity of the case increase the rate of wages, which, in spite of all the fine talk we sometimes hear, is now so low that a Michigan worker in the woods who has a family to support finds it hard work to make a decent living.

As consumers would not be detrimentally affected by a reduction of the duty on lumber, and as wage-workers would not possibly be, the only question to be considered is whether the millionaire lumber kings would suffer the direst disaster if their profits were, by any possibility, slightly reduced. Let any one examine a list of very working men of Michigan and he will be struck with the great proportion of them who made their fortunes in lumber and pine lands. They always obtained the highest prices they could for their land and commodities, and hired their labor as cheaply as they could find it. Their fortunes were not made by wielding the ax or skidding logs at $16 a month and board.—Free Press.

Vessel Inspection Rules.

The board of supervising inspectors of steam vessels, in session at Washington, have amended the rules so that boilers built prior to Feb. 28, 1872, may be deemed to have a tensil strength of 50,000 pounds, but not over that to the sectional square inch, whether stamped or not, and shall be tested under the provisions of section 36 of the act relating to boilers built after Feb. 28, 1872. No iron or gas pipe for steam connections shall be used that is more than two inches inside diameter. When tapped in or joined by screw joints, pipes over two inches must have flanged joints and connections.

The democratic editors of Indiana in convention assembled resolved that as it is the duty of the democratic leaders, state and local, to provide for a more extensive circulation of democratic newspapers among the masses," etc. The way to get a paper circulated among the masses is to publish a paper the masses want to read. Then it will circulate itself. If it is not that kind of a paper no leaders, not even those in the editorial columns can persuade or make people take it. As a rule the greatest newspaper failures are those party organs which depend upon party leaders to secure them subscribers and readers. If a paper is a good one the leaders are glad to help it; if it is not they are powerless to help it. Free Press.

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pure ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and see me. West side Bridge st.

ROBERT GRUEN,

Boyne Falls, Mich.,

Watch-maker

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 17

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect October, 1883.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS	No. 1.	No. 3.	No. 5.
Cincinnati	lv	8.00pm	7.40pm
Richmond	"	2.05 10.12	12.01am
Winchester	"	2.40 10.47	12.36
Fort Wayne	"	3.45 11.55	1.45
Fort Wayne	ar	7.00	2.00am
Warsaw	"	5.05	4.00 5.00am
Sevastopol	"	5.20	4.15 5.15
Leesburg	"	5.30	4.25 5.25
Milford	"	5.40	4.40 5.40
Kalmazoo	"	6.30	5.40 6.40pm
Schoolcraft	"	6.50	6.00 7.00
Grand Rapids	ar	8.30	7.40 8.40
Grand Rapids	lv	8.45	7.50 8.50
Ionia	"	9.30	8.35 9.35
Owosso	"	10.30	9.35 10.35
Big Rapids	"	10.11	9.20 10.20
Reed City	"	10.47	9.56 10.56
Cadillac	"	11.45pm	10.54 11.54
Traverse	"	1.00am	12.10am 1.10am
Kingsley	"	1.30	12.40 1.40
Walton	"	1.45	12.55 1.55
Boardman	"	2.00	1.10 2.10
Traverse City	"	2.30	1.40 2.40
Petoskey	"	4.30	3.40 4.40
Mackinaw City	"	6.30	5.40 6.40
Cheboygan	"	7.00	6.10 7.10
Wyandotte	"	2.00pm	12.10pm 2.00pm

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS	No. 2.	No. 4.	No. 6.
Mackinaw City	lv	8.00am	7.00am
Cheboygan	"	9.00	8.00
St. Johns	"	9.30	8.30
Mackinaw City	"	8.00	7.00
Petoskey	"	10.00	9.00
Traverse City	"	12.00m	11.00am
Boardman	"	12.30pm	11.30
Kingsley	"	12.45	11.45
Traverse	"	1.00	12.00m
Cadillac	"	3.05	2.05
Reed City	"	4.00	3.00
Big Rapids	"	4.45	3.45
Grand Rapids	ar	5.50	4.50
Grand Rapids	lv	6.00	5.00
Kalamazoo	ar	7.00	6.00
Schoolcraft	"	7.50	6.50
Vicksburg	"	8.05	7.05
Sturgis	"	8.30	7.30
Kenton	"	11.05	10.05
Fort Wayne	ar	11.25	10.25
Fort Wayne	lv	11.30	10.30
Hicksville	"	12.30am	11.30pm
Bryan	"	1.00	12.00
Wauseon	"	1.30	12.30
Toledo	ar	2.45	1.45
Toledo	lv	3.00am	2.00am
Fostoria	"	4.00	3.00
Findlay	"	4.30	3.30
Cincinnati	ar	7.40	6.40

C. L. LOCKWOOD, A. G. P. A. Grand Rapids, Mich.

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Car Blades, WAGON TONGUES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at his

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

The highest market price in cash paid for

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

A BOY near Pamplin copied a cook's cane paint and dyed and fixed up a dog to resemble an escaped menagerie leopard. And of course the dog crept in bed and hunched up his master and went to mauling at his heels, and the master went up a tree so quick that it absolutely astounded the dog, which sat down to wait for the old man to descend. It was a cold day; and the wind blew and the bare branches rattled, and the man shivered and swore for half an hour, till finally the dog barked.

THE amenities of political life in England are worth a little notice. Mr. Lowther, for instance, referred to Mr. Gladstone recently as a public robber of loyal subjects, whom he afterward turned over to the knife and bullet of the assassin. "Mr. Gladstone," Mr. Lowther continued, "turned round upon those whom he had robbed and driven out of the country, and those whom he had murdered or allowed to be murdered, and complained that they were not prepared, and never had, in fact, shown their desire to support the Government in the maintenance of law and order."

EVEN in these days when women are competing with men in science, in literature, in trade, and in various other forms of employment that occupy the time of the industrious, it is not often that one hears of a woman explorer. But it is doubtless true that no women and few men ever attempted such an undertaking as is now being carried out by Mrs. Fannie B. Ward, a well-known newspaper correspondent at Washington. She started last spring for a tour through Mexico alone, spent several months learning the language, and proposes to explore the country thoroughly in the interest of Frank Leslie's publications. It is appropriate that such an enterprise should be made for and under the instruction of the most successful lady publisher in the country, Mrs. Frank Leslie.

A CALIFORNIA girl is disposing of her kisses at 2 cents apiece. One week her receipts were $11.25. At regular rates she should have had $11.75, but she sold one job lot of twelve dozen at $2.50, which accounts for the difference. One devoted admirer has made a special contract. In consideration of his doing all his kissing with her, he is charged much less than the regular schedule rates. This trade has been going on for some months without the knowledge of any persons except those immediately concerned. A short time ago a young lady in the East got $1,000 for a kiss. And yet a pretty California girl is selling her kisses at 2 cents piece. It is like selling diamonds at 10 cents a bushel. Less than a beefsteak.

THE condition of the poor classes in London is pitiful. "Tens of thousands," says a correspondent, "are out of work and get nothing to do, while thousands more are working night and day on starvation wages. And all these people are compelled to pay from one-seventh to one-fourth of their earnings for about a rod in for boats, dining, noisome cellars, and rickety garrets, rooms swarming with vermin and breeding fever, in one of which a whole family will be fortunate if only doubled up." Other Things have got to sicken a price that every one admits something must be done, and that speedily." What is to be done or will be done, no one knows. The Marquis of Salisbury, the Conservative leader, has proposed that the state build houses for these poor wretches.

ABOUT thirty-three years ago a young man of Lafayette, Ind., sighing for fortune, resolved with himself as to the most economical and expeditious way of courting the fickle dame. He once had also the reports of John P. Foley, of the United States secret service, detailed by the Government "of Savoy," and practiced the art of hand to gift performances. He was observations of between ten and 50 quite as fraudulent as the worst of the operations. The referee admitted that order, and one time in Bellefontaine, more or less electrical pyramids in Ohio, having sold some worth of tickets. On the strength of handsome gifts promised, fell before the fever of the entertainment, leaving his audience a mob of howling indignation. He was not heard of again for a number of three hours they returned a verdict for years, when he was converted at a revival meeting in Madison, Ind. He became an evangelist. He served the new cause with an ardent faith in its glorious beauties and became one of the most useful workers in the fruitful field. His character was sweet and lovable. The Rev. Dr. Carruthers, who recently died at Lawisville, esteemed of all who knew him, was one time the "Fakir of Savoy."

CHARITY is represented by a correspondent as having become fashionable in New York city. Fifth avenue belles are taking to it as a diversion. In some instances it is merely a Sunday-school class that serves as a rich girl's hobby, in which case she both clothes and religiously instructs her pupils. One heiress is fond of heading a kind of procession of uniformly dressed little boys from their place in a Sunday-school room to her residence, where a luncheon is served to them. Another makes some tiny girls picturesque by putting them into costumes of Mother Hubbard cut. A third has industriously sought out bully-legged and knock-kneed youngsters of impoverished parentage, and out of her private purse they are maintained in a hospital while recovering from operations which usually result in straight wins their members.

PORTLAND Oregonian: A remarkable story comes from St. Helen, which is well vouched for. About six months ago twin brothers Alfred and Henry Grove—arrived from Kansas and settled near St. Helen. There was a very strong resemblance between them—in fact, so strong that intimate friends could scarcely tell one from the other. Henry was married, but his wife was living in Kansas. He soon made the acquaintance of the family of John Avery, living near, including their daughter, Lottie Avery, aged 19. One night, about five weeks ago, in jest, he asked her to become his wife, and, to his utter surprise, she accepted, informing her mother immediately. The mother, in a practical way, broached the subject of the date of the marriage, etc., and before Grove could recover from his surprise the details had been arranged. He immediately went to his brother Alfred, told the story, and asked for advice. Alfred volunteered to personate the brother and stand for him. The ceremony took place Oct. 21, the couple remaining at the home of the bride's parents. Alfred fell in love with the girl, and a week after the marriage told of the deception. In her indignation she ordered him from the house. She then informed her parents, and the father started after the sham-in-law with a shot-gun, and has followed Alfred to this city, where he is supposed to have fled.

A LAW case of unusual interest, not so much for the amount involved as the question at issue, was recently decided in the United States Circuit Court at Jefferson City, Mo. It was the case of Baker vs. The Rockford Ill. Insurance company. The fact were that Sunday, April 18, 1881, a cyclone passed near Jefferson City, destroying among much other property, the house of Joseph Baker, on which he had a fire and lightning policy in the Rockford Fire Insurance company for $1,000. Baker brought suit against the company to recover his insurance, alleging that cyclones are electric or lightning storms, and that the destruction of his house by a cyclone was destruction by lightning, against which the company had insured him. This raised not only a very nice legal, but a delicate and much-disputed scientific question, and it was found necessary to take the testimony and depositions of several professors well known in scientific circles to place the question properly before the jury. For the plaintiff the deposition of the late Prof. John H. Tice was taken. He inclined very strongly to the electric theory, as did Miss Mr. Edwards, of Mexico, Mo. For the defense the testimony and depositions of Col. C. Shaler Smith, Prof. Francis G. Nisbet, of Washington and Lafayette, Ind., sibling, of Ten university, St. Louis; and Prof. James C. Watson, of Washburn observatory, Madison, Wis., were introduced. In case it also the reports of John P. Foley, of the United States secret service, detailed by the Government "of Savoy," and practiced the art of hand to gift performances. He was quite as fraudulent as the worst of the operations. The referee admitted that he had not the slightest idea what Ohio, having sold some worth of tickets on the strength of handsome gifts promised, fell before the fever of the entertainment, leaving his audience a mob of howling indignation. He was not heard of again for a number of three hours they returned a verdict for years, when he was converted at a revival meeting in Madison, Ind. He became an evangelist. He served the new cause with an ardent faith in its glorious beauties and became one of the most useful workers in the fruitful field. His character was sweet and lovable. The Rev. Dr. Carruthers, who recently died at Lawisville, esteemed of all who knew him, was one time the "Fakir of Savoy."

A DELICATE MISSION.

The Young Maiden Who Had Lost Her Parents.

"Can I see the editor?"

Could she see the editor! That divine combination of yellow hair, fur, feathers, studies and illusions! Well, she editor should giggle hysterically? Had she demanded the demigod of the managing editor, the spiritual inspirator of the religious editor, the salary of the city editor, they would have been placed on the sacrificial altar before that vision.

Five genteel manipulators of public opinion looked as much as they formed to the before her, beseeching her first one make known her want.

"I am a most afraid of editors," she murmured, taking in the procession with a shy glance.

"None of these is editor enough to hurt," observed the religious editor, with an insinuating wink.

"I think you can trust me," said the managing editor, with a scowl at his associates.

"Anything in my line?" inquired the society editor, with a smile like the new moon, as he stood on one foot and buttonholed the left flank.

"If it is in the religious line of trade, you want to see me before going elsewhere," interjected the religious editor, feeling around at the corkscrew in his vest pocket.

"You are all so kind," she uttered, edging away from the religious editor in disgust. "I am not accustomed to business ways, but—" and the sensitive mouth quivered, while every editor wondered why each didn't kick the rest outdoors for having in some way disturbed the delicate chords that so faintly held in check the emotions of this fragile creature.

"We won't make this business, we will call it pleasure," cooed the city editor, in the tones that have so endeared him to the people of Brooklyn.

"Well," continued the vision, encouraged by the sympathy by which she was surrounded, "Pa is dead—"

"Ah!" moaned the procession as one mouth.

"Then I'm your man," boldly asserted the religious editor, gently taking her unresisting hand. "What you want is a beautiful obituary, for the style of such I have succeeded in making this, etc., and before Grove could recover from his surprise the details had been arranged. He immediately went to his brother Alfred, told the story, and asked for advice. Alfred volunteered to personate the brother and stand for him. The ceremony took place Oct. 21, the couple remaining at the home of the bride's parents. Alfred fell in love with the girl, and a week after the marriage told of the deception. In her indignation she ordered him from the house. She then informed her parents, and the father started after the sham-in-law with a shot-gun, and has followed Alfred to this city, where he is supposed to have fled.

"Mashers."—As an additional contribution to the now much-mooted subject as to the origin of the word masher, we would suggest that it be no more than a modern birth, but comes from a phrase in a play written by Beaumont and Fletcher, "Mashed in Love," where mashed is used as an alteration of the word meshed.

"A Tucker's Dam." The expression is in frequent used, but its meaning is known to but few. There is an explanation: A tucker's dam is a dam of dough, or other suitable material, constructed by a tucker to confine his mollusk solder to the business in hand; and, inasmuch as the tucker's business is never served its purpose it possesses little or no commercial value, the phrase has come to be the scoff of the jokers of the day, and almost universally understood as the synonym of worthlessness.

"Back to the Traces." "This slang expression corresponding in meaning to the above is a corruption of "That's the etiquette"—that's the proper mode of procedure. Et (ed) ette is the French word for ticket, and its present meaning in Englishness so from an old custom of issuing tickets, or etiquette, upon which the ceremonies to be observed at an formal proceedings were duly set forth. The modern word "programme" exactly corresponds to the old etiquette.

General Butler.

An American widow has been receiving a great deal of attention from Gen. Bingham. A friend calling to visit her asked:

"What do you do all day to kill time?"

"Well, most of my time is taken up with my daily duties."

"Gen. Butler—Why, I never heard of him. You fickle creature! What will the children say when he puts the General out on his knee?"

"I beg pardon," he said. "But isn't this Mrs. Greenleaf?"

"No sir," replied the lady, "my name is E. J. adv."

"Ah, excuse me; I must be color blind!"—Texas Siftings.

Two very different virtues may long at war with each other but the time will come when they will prove that they are sisters.

ETIQUETTE AT HOME.

It Should Not Be Reserved for Company Alone.

The ease and negligee of home induce carelessness as to the impression being that politeness and polish are only needed in company, and that carelessness of manner is appropriate to home life. All such are erroneous. There is positive comfort in politeness, and etiquette is important at home as abroad. What ingenious etiquette as the outward expression of politeness. It is to be with forms and attentions, which are external. A lady in society is treated with a certain deference which manifests itself in delicate attentions. Children in society are treated with considerate kindness, which is also considerately expressed. These rules of etiquette which relate to many little attentions and forms. Those in society are carefully observed and often rigidly enforced. These be made onerous, and so oppressive. But etiquette is clearly defined.

We do not advocate an etiquette in the home so rigid as to be burdensome. Yet it may be the means of true politeness to children. These are in instinctive politeness easily fostered with the rules of etiquette. It have not this instinct. Some are more or less rude, selfish, inconsiderate, ill-bred and impolite. To give this a lecture on the rules of good breeding politeness. It must be instilled by example than precept. And as the parents are accustomed to observe forms of politeness, its impress naturally impressed and its reasonably learned. Therefore the evidence that would be shown in society should mark intercourse at home. And if husband and wife courteous, children imbibe what is it. Example is the great relator in this line.

Beyond this courtesy exerts a decided influence on character. In to the etiquette of politeness a balance and evenness to character very inception involves self-control, conscious restraint. It is with a second nature. The habits of are acquired and the habits of grafted on. Where this is done much has been established in the line of self-control, that its influence extends to temper and habits of Such possessors are apt to be sustained in all emergencies. A man will be such under all provocations and all trials or tests. So children thus educated receive a thing more than polish. It is a thing to gracefully escort a lady dinner, or to entertain an agreeable conversation, or to show, at all times the air of good breeding; but the fruit of it all is in the traits of mind have been imparted. A clean politeness will naturally realize a elevation of feeling that attends it. Such habits formed at home are important, and the effect is apparent ranks among the first.—Philadelphia Call.

Indian Gambling.

The game began a few hours after the arrival of the Shoshones, and ding day and night, lasted without termination until to-day, when the Pinte blanket, ring hat, flannel shirt gun, and pair of boots vanished. Governor placed two poles on the ground ten feet apart and parallel with other, and then sat on the ground legged, astride the poles. The were placed on the ground between poles. Each side was furnished six or eight small sticks and four ones. Two sides of small sticks procured, and, after it was decided chance which side should the sticks, the Governor began the game accompanied by the striking of poles with the sticks, and the exclamations of the bodies of the players to and fro, and the two Indians who was then began by the side which the shells, and the two Indians who the sticks moved their hands and and changed the shells from one to the other, and finally concealed hands under their blankets and the back of the other side. Were always a short sticks were on one side the was decided, the players laying sticks between them, and both chanting and beating of the poles ceased until the sticks for another game were deposited on the and then the performance was resumed.

At the outset the games ran quite but in the course of two or three the Shoshones got the best of the and silver that appeared in the stakes of him. Ten fickle creature! What hypothecated by their guns and shirts, ponies and squaws and children. Once or twice the Pintes small winnings, and their squaws but before they could scatter any silver to their side luck turned and them again. They sent runners in directions for reenforcements, and raking and scraping everything to tribe that could possibly be collected away, they lost it all. Many old horror and beg no more for the buttonly abandoned the game.—Cheyenne Leader.

Origin of Popular Phrases.

In Fine.—The word fine, which is now found only in the construction, in fine, first gained to be Latin, and ought, if so, to be pronounced as a diphthong, after the analogy of in pace, in hoc, vivæ dic, and other Latin expressions which have been incorporated into our language. The word is, however, really English, and, therefore, not Latin. Fine is not the abbreviation of the Latin word finis, but is that word anglicized, and spelled, after the uniform English orthography, with final e silent, as in the words line, pine, which are also of Latin derivation, but root of Latin inflection. The word was once used in other constructions than the one given above. For example, Beaubelt says:

I will not do thee the harm the wrong to my king,
I will do myself outright to pay money
And the best of friends to be.

Both Shakespeare and Milton use the word fineless, where we would now say endless:

Our end is none of us, till life's end;
But ever in beauty stay.
To him that ever fears he shall expire,
He finds true death.

"The Rump of Eolus."—Eolus, the ancient god of the winds, was fabled to have his habitation on the Lipari islands, between Italy and Sicily. From him is named the harp whose sounds are called forth by the appulses of the air on strings. It is possible that an instrument of this kind was known in ancient times, for the Talmudists say that the kinnor or harp of David sounded of itself when the north wind fell upon it. But the merit of the invention, in the form it now takes, is due altogether to modern times.

The sound is peculiar; the wild and mournful melody, the gradual advances and retiring of the aerial tones can be fitly described only by the instrument itself. When the breeze which vibrates the strings of the Eolian harp, the sounds swell on the ear until they almost scream through the house; then, as the breeze lulls, the notes recede in the distance, becoming more and more delicate and tender till they can be heard no more. Sometimes as they die away like the plaintive wailing of a spirit. Thomson, in the "Castle of Indolence," gives a beautiful account of the music of the Eolian harp:

A certain knight that old romances read
Coated about it gives to transmission in ladies
Into the world, his fancy that indeed
A certain lady lov'd in secret cave:
A cool muse in the warm June wind
Now lightly dying, now the solemn wave
Seem'd now about to break; anon rebound
It rises and it falls in many a varied sound.

Sir Isaac Newton's bed was also sorely teased by a couple of too-earnest tutors. One day he had been sent out to see a regatta on the Seine.

"Well, what have you been doing?" asked his father when he returned home. "Oh, we have been ladies and gentlemen," said the boy, wearily, "and I have heard the story of Dullins over again.—Charles' Companion.

Origin of Popular Phrases.

In Fine.—The word fine, which is now found only in the construction, in fine, first gained to be Latin, and ought, if so, to be pronounced as a diphthong, after the analogy of in pace, in hoc, vivæ dic, and other Latin expressions which have been incorporated into our language. The word is, however, really English, and, therefore, not Latin. Fine is not the abbreviation of the Latin word finis, but is that word anglicized, and spelled, after the uniform English orthography, with final e silent, as in the words line, pine, which are also of Latin derivation, but root of Latin inflection. The word was once used in other constructions than the one given above. For example, Beaubelt says:

I will not do thee the harm the wrong to my king,
I will do myself outright to pay money
And the best of friends to be.

Both Shakespeare and Milton use the word fineless, where we would now say endless:

Our end is none of us, till life's end;
But ever in beauty stay.
To him that ever fears he shall expire,
He finds true death.

"The Rump of Eolus."—Eolus, the ancient god of the winds, was fabled to have his habitation on the Lipari islands, between Italy and Sicily. From him is named the harp whose sounds are called forth by the appulses of the air on strings. It is possible that an instrument of this kind was known in ancient times, for the Talmudists say that the kinnor or harp of David sounded of itself when the north wind fell upon it. But the merit of the invention, in the form it now takes, is due altogether to modern times.

The sound is peculiar; the wild and mournful melody, the gradual advances and retiring of the aerial tones can be fitly described only by the instrument itself. When the breeze which vibrates the strings of the Eolian harp;

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 31, 1884.

Business Announcements.

New goods at B. See's this week.

For good goods cheap go to B See's

Fresh canned goods of all kinds at E. M. Clark's.

Upright, Emrey & Co. received a large supply of Groceries Tuesday.

E. M. Clark has a few more Overcoats which he will close out at cost.

Buy your Baking Powder of E. M. Clark, and get a number for the entire fruit set.

For Sale.—Two or three good horses for sale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

Parties wishing anything in the line of Clothing or Boots and Shoes, will do well to call on E. M. Clark.

To all wanting anything in the line of Dry Goods, Groceries, Boots and Shoes, or Clothing, go to B. See's.

Cash! Cash! Cash! Bring your Ties, Wood, and Pools to Upright, Emrey & Co.'s and get the Cash for them.

If you are sick of old and stale groceries, give Upright, Emrey & Co. a trial. They receive fresh goods every Tuesday.

FOR SALE.—A second-hand portable saw mill, with engine and boiler complete, for sale cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

No. 13 was the number that drew the Price Fruit Set at E. M. Clark's, and Mrs. Eliz Smith was the lucky person. We have one more left.

To avoid Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, and other complaints resulting from the use of old and stale groceries, try Upright, Emrey & Co.'s new supplies.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day, for the week ending yesterday, above zero in all cases unless marked with a (-):

	7AM	2PM
Thursday	-23	3
Friday	7	19
Saturday	18	26
Sunday	29	26
Monday	21	30
Tuesday	22	36
Wednesday	27	35

Provision Market.

Retail prices to consumers, as corrected every Wednesday evening by UPRIGHT, EMREY & CO., general dealers:

FLOUR, per bbl, $6.00, $7.00, and $8.00
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $1.50.
CORN MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, $1.60.
HAY, per ton, $8@20.
OATS, per bu, 45c.
GROUND FEED, per cwt, $1.50.
APPLES, per bu, $1.0.
POTATOES, per bu, 25@30c.
ONIONS, per bu, $1.00.
BUTTER, per lb, 20@30c.
EGGS, per doz, 30@35c.
LARD, per lb, 14@15c.
HAMS, 16c; Shoulders, 12½c.
SALT PORK, 10c; Beef, 9c.
CHEESE, 18c
WATER-WHITE OIL, 25c
FARMERS' PRODUCE in good demand; oats and potatoes wanted

Fresh Meats from the Market.

MEAT, beef steak, 7@12½c; pork steak, 9@12½c; mutton, 8@12½c; sausage, 15c; hams, 14c; shoulders, 12½c.
TALLOW, 4@5c.

Local News Brevities.

B. See returned home last Saturday.

The streets were lively last Saturday.

E. M. Clark has new locals this week.

D. S. Way went to Tampa Bay, Fla., last week.

Look for B. See's announcement in another column.

The county jail at Manistique burned last Friday morning.

F. E. Wood returned home from Grand Rapids last Friday.

Nine years ago to day the editor and wife joined hands for life.

Robert O'Neil visited with O. D. Hilton, of Norwood, this week.

The state item column of the Detroit Times is daily increasing in length.

Mr. John M. Harris, of Ironton, gave the JOURNAL a brief call last Saturday.

The ladies' aid society will meet with Miss Buttars next Wednesday afternoon.

E. H. Green and two children returned home from their eastern trip yesterday.

Born—On Jan. 29th, to Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cruickshank, a daughter, 11¾ pounds.

Will Rogers and John Marks, of East Jordan, gave the Journal a call on Tuesday.

Just before going to press we are informed that Mrs. Minnie Bedford is quite sick and under the care of Dr. Lewis, at the Fountain City house.

Rev. J. T. Iddings will preach at Black's school house next Sunday, at 2 o'clock p. m.

Rev. N. L. Otis, a former resident of this place, has filed a bill for divorce from his wife.

Mrs. C. J. Grier is recovering from her recent illness, and hopes to be out again in a few days.

The Shakespearean club will meet with Miss Essie Buttars one week from next Monday evening.

The new type for the Enterprise has arrived, and the boys will get out their paper as soon as possible.

The Petoskey Record figures up $152,797 in improvements and new buildings for their town in 1883.

O. D. Wood, wife, and child, started on their western trip on Monday, and will be absent about three weeks.

Mr. Henry Bennett, father of Mrs. O. D. Wood, will return to Charlevoix in April, and make this his future home.

Don't forget the masquerade to be given by the fire department on the 22d. Be ready to give the boys a benefit.

Wonder if an overdose of Lydia Pinkham's compound will cause her ghost to arise and disturb one's dreams?

You'll have a jolly time at the masquerade to be given by the fire department on the 22d, "and don't you forget it."

James O'Brian has returned from his lumbering operations at South Arm and expects to remain at home the balance of the season.

Notwithstanding the extreme cold of last Thursday there was open water on Lake Michigan, plainly visible from our office window.

A large amount of local matter has again made it necessary to change the make up of the JOURNAL, and this time it will be continued indefinitely.

Will See will be out of town for two weeks, and those desiring to pay their taxes before his return can be accommodated by calling at George Miller's.

The woman's christian temperance union will meet at the home of Mrs. H. Berdan, on Friday, Feb. 1st, at 2. The ladies are cordially invited to be present.

J. Milo Eaton and Geo. A. Leonard returned home from Grand Rapids last Saturday. Their new machine will be delivered and set up about April 1st.

It is said that a steamboat line is to be established between Petoskey and Manistique. When we get a railroad we shall have a steamboat line to Escanaba.

Messers. J. W. Hays and family and D. J. Hays have gone to Plainfield, Ills., and other points west, on a visit to friends and to look after business interests.

The cold was excessive all over Michigan last Thursday morning. Reed City reported 32° below, Walton 40, Muscelona 35, Fife Lake 36, Traverse City 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Guyles and Mrs. Meech, of Norwood, and Mrs. Mears, of Banks, were in attendance at the meeting of the historical society last Tuesday evening.

An old gentleman by the name of Harris, father of Mrs. Ball, of Barnard, died at that place last Saturday. His funeral was held on Monday. Rev. Mr. Morgan officiating.

F. C. Wells, traveling agent for W. B. Kilborn, of Petoskey, made the JOURNAL a brief call on Tuesday. He visited Charlevoix in the interest of Kilborn's patent sleigh brace.

The compiled laws of Michigan state that any physician prescribing medicine while intoxicated shall be liable to one year's imprisonment and a fine not exceeding $500. Ex.

O. B. Weed & Co. have ordered a quantity of St. Jacob's Oil almanacs, mentioned in the JOURNAL a few weeks ago. After they arrive, if you want something rich, call and get one.

Last Sunday evening while Mrs. Eaton was coming out of the school house, she slipped and fell. The injuries were not as serious as they might have been, but the slippery places should be looked after and ice should be removed or sprinkled with salt or ashes.

The meetings at Barnard are closed for the present. While they were in progress, the attendance was good, and the net results quite satisfactory. Fifteen persons united with the church last Sunday.

A party of young gentlemen are organizing a series of select parties, to be held at the Bridge Street house every two weeks. A preliminary party was held last Wednesday evening, and was a very pleasant affair.

Congressman J. A. Anderson, of Kansas, well known here as a popular resorter, is a worker in congress if one may judge by the number of bills he introduces and advocates, which find mention in the daily press.

W. R. Kilborn, of Petoskey, gave the JOURNAL a pleasant call on Tuesday. He is pushing the sale of his machinery in this section, and reports business on the increase. He finds Charlevoix county a profitable field of operations.

L. D. Bartholomew writes from Dartow, Fla., having stopped there a few days, on the way to Tampa Bay. Henry Aldrich has gone to Fort Orange, where E. Carpenter and family are located. Mr. Bartholomew will visit them there soon.

Mr. J. A. Voght, at Nettleton's wagon shop, is making a pattern of "chick bill," said to beat anything of the kind in this region. He claims it will take hold and let go better than any other made, and he is making them of the very best material.

For the present, it is announced, here will be in the M. E. church, an emphasis of the regular services. This being the case, the character of the preaching may be easily surmised. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present who can and enjoy the services.

By the exercise of considerable patience and good judgment, Miss Esther Buttars kept a calla lily blossom over fifteen days, and forced another bud so that she had two fine blossoms for the members of the historical society to admire last Tuesday evening.

The Detroit Free Press has improved and enlarged its state news department until it is now a pleasure to look it over, and much easier to find what you want, because it is always in the same place. Its item column for the past few days beats any other daily we get.

T. D. Smith is pushing the wood, tie, and post business up Pine lake. He has 14 teams drawing wood from Bear lake to Pine lake, and has an agent buying ties and posts at Boyne. He has been negotiating for agencies at other points on the lake, and evidently intends to get all he can.

A prominent gentleman of Boyne, who had been reading the Charlevoix papers and Vennor's almanac, armed himself with a linen duster and started for Charlevoix, arriving here just in time to meet the cold wave last Wednesday night. Henceforth he loses his faith in Charlevoix papers as weather indicators.

From W. H. Edwards, of Lansing, we have received a handsome specimen of printing, being an invitation issued by the Grand River Boat Club for their first annual reception at the Lansing House January, 30th. The work indicates patience and skill in manipulating the latest designs of typographic ornaments.

The young folks of Norwood had a "candy pull" at Edwin Cook's last week, which was well attended and furnished plenty of amusement. The only accident to mar the pleasure of the occasion, was on the return home, when the cutter containing the teacher of the Hilton school tipped over, breaking the cutter, and compelling the occupants to walk two miles.

Rev. James M. Barkley, pastor of Hillsdale Presbyterian church, has the following to say of Frank W. Smith's lecture, "In and out Ont of Andersonville": "For the charity with which you treated the subject, I wish to thank you. Southerner though I am, yet I could hardly have dealt with it so kindly as you did. Yet I am thankful you did so. It was the spirit of Him who said: 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you.'" I was glad of another thing, viz: that where there was so much to sicken the heart, you found something to cheer. In fact you almost made it the "Bright side of Andersonville prison." Think your audience hardly knew whether to laugh or cry. I shall never forget the "Spoon Drill," "The Champion Stutterers," and the "Charge of the Mule Brigade."

W. F. Lance writes from Orlando, Orange county, Florida, Jan. 21, that "Florida people say it is cold for Florida; it is about the same as the coolest days in Charlevoix in the summer. It is pleasant here. This town is three years old, and is as large as Charlevoix. It is the county seat, and has a railroad."

The ladies of the Congregational society desire to thank Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller, of the Bridge street house, for the use of the house for their supper last Friday evening, and the kind attention given them during the evening. Also to those who took part in the exercises, and helped to make the evening pleasant and profitable. The net receipts of the supper were $29.28.

A dispatch from Washington says that Col. Stockbridge has interested himself in procuring the necessary papers to press upon the secretary of war the advantage of permitting a race course to be established at Mackinac Island. The matter does not require legislation, but under the law making Mackinac a national park all subjects relating to the island are left to the discretion of the secretary of war.

We have received a communication from a gentleman in Boyne City, commending the JOURNAL for its clean, business-like appearance, and its straightforward course in presenting the questions of the hour. They are encouraging words, and we appreciate them. They bid us continue our hope for the future, and give renewed strength for the work to come. With the gentleman's permission the communication will find a place in our next issue.

Rev. C. F. Van Anken has been doing a little missionary work at the Ross school house for some months past, giving them a sermon once a fortnight when circumstances permitted. Last Sunday, without previous notice, he gave an invitation to all who desired the prayers of the church and intended to make a start in Christian work, to rise, and nine persons replied by rising at once, and without any special effort on the part of the pastor.

Mr. W. B. Kilborn, of Petoskey, has secured patents on a brace for lumber sleighs, which will prevent the racking of sleighs and breaking or splitting of beams and runners, and save in repairs and lost time many times their cost. They can be attached to any one-beam sleigh, and increases the strength and durability of the sleigh in every respect. Mr. W. J. Stevenson has the exclusive shop right for Charlevoix, and will attend promptly to all who come.

We call attention this week to the card of Mr. O. W. Smith, electro plater and manufacturing jeweler, to be found in another column. Mr. Smith is pushing his work this winter, getting as much of his stone work ready for summer trade as he can. He expresses great faith in the value of "precious stones" as an attraction to the average resorter, and believes that many people make the hunting of agates one of the chief objects of their summer visit. To cultivate and satisfy this desire, Mr. Smith is manufacturing some very fine charms, ring sets, etc., from stock on hand, which he will have on sale. His efforts should be crowned with success.

Business men at least, if not everybody, should have their envelopes sent by mail printed with a request to return if not called for, or at least the address of the sender, for if for any reason the letter should not reach the person ad ressed, it will be returned to the writer after the time designated by the request; or, if merely the address is on the envelope without a request to return, it will be returned to the writer at the end of thirty days after it has reached the office addressed. Otherwise it lies in the office thirty days uncalled for, is then advertised, lies in the office thirty days, and then goes to the dead letter office, when, after it has taken its turn of examination, is returned to the only if it contains something of Last week a Greenville bus received a letter containing for $24.31 which was mailed at ville over two months ago. been held at Detroit sixty then went to the dead letter The writer directed is to Detr he should have addressed it to Greenville Independent.

F. D. Waldron, general the Michigan Mutual and urers Mutual Fire Insurance Grand Rapids' has been in the purpose of appointing agent and working up the The Michigan Mutual after ting to a severe test, has been ized by the commissioner of to do business all over the liability of each member of pany is limited to his actual and the profit of the compa divided annually among the gives them the benefit of prime cost. The officers of igan: Mutual are well known men of Grand Rapids and the under the most favorable Mr. G. S. Thomas will be for this village and vicinity.

Foxism vs. Progress

Harbor Springs and Petos engaged in a struggle for cial supremacy, and at this from surface indications as in the newspapers, it looks as Petoskey will come out ahead recollect of hearing a story effect that San Francisco was built up by business energy not by natural advantages. the bay was as fine a harbor cation for a city as there was whole western country and the of the property recognized its tages. They felt that that spot become a great city, its local advantages were such that it has been delivering this has gained an enviable and he is greeted with full wherever he goes. This seems well known here that seats rapidly reserved in advance. a desirable seat it will be to buy your ticket as soon of any of the members: seats of Robert Millor, at the post house. The following will indicate some of the tas of the lecture and the which it was received and in other cities:

Rick" held his audience for as easily as most speakers five minutes. The boys seemed to be charmed for were rested from first to as ex-prisoner of war. Not the general "make up" of prison life referred to with power and pathos, but the pictures and positions where character made itself manibrought out in such a way easily encourage every profesall the necessaries for basket of all present on the side country, without the outlay of lar for dock or harbor. Wig the folly of expending those honest dollars for an artificial and dock within a few miles Petoskey says, we are been propose to stay, without pay bute to a small community advantage of every opportu draw from us our legitimate We shall build our own dock it be possible to get a governpropriation for a breakwater, have that too. Petoskey has rich commerce to build upon, city we have taken for illus but if her courage and enter not, the principle will work in in that way.

Cannot Charlevoix profit by perience, and take advantage present uncertainty? We have an excellent natural harbor, unsurpassed location and seings for a city. In our resorts hardwood timber and agree have something to build upon, bine with these a progressive generosity, and seek to build and we will also build our own book as well as a monument memory. If a man comes to lot with a declared intention ing a manufactory, make sure with him, but don't let him go all you can for your property don't for a moment think "Charlevoix" come here anyway, and I want away my chance to make some If you lose him, and he goes months several members Post, G. A. R., have been to secure Mr. Frank W. Smith for the benefit of the post. have at last succeeded. The d is Tuesday evening, Feb. the subject, "In and out of ville." In the short time has been delivering this he has gained an enviable and he is greeted with full wherever he goes. This seems well known here that seats rapidly reserved in advance. a desirable seat it will be to buy your ticket as soon of any of the members: seats of Robert Millor, at the post house. The following will indicate some of the tas of the lecture and the which it was received and in other cities:

Out of Andersonville."

Rick" held his audience for as easily as most speakers five minutes. The boys seemed to be charmed for were rested from first to as ex-prisoner of war. Not the general "make up" of prison life referred to with power and pathos, but the pictures and positions where character made itself manibrought out in such a way easily encourage every profesall the necessaries for basket of all present on the side country, without the outlay of lar for dock or harbor. Wig the folly of expending those honest dollars for an artificial and dock within a few miles Petoskey says, we are been propose to stay, without pay bute to a small community advantage of every opportu draw from us our legitimate We shall build our own dock it be possible to get a governpropriation for a breakwater, have that too. Petoskey has rich commerce to build upon, city we have taken for illus but if her courage and enter not, the principle will work in in that way.

Cannot Charlevoix profit by perience, and take advantage present uncertainty? We have an excellent natural harbor, unsurpassed location and seings for a city. In our resorts hardwood timber and agree have something to build upon, bine with these a progressive generosity, and seek to build and we will also build our own book as well as a monument memory. If a man comes to lot with a declared intention ing a manufactory, make sure with him, but don't let him go all you can for your property don't for a moment think "Charlevoix" come here anyway, and I want away my chance to make some If you lose him, and he goes Alloona Morning Tribune, 1883.

Smith gave a history of his his military life, the way he prisoner and his incarcera- horrible den Andersonville, description of prison life and to with rapt attention. much light upon the subject. see he gave the comic side, aroused the audience with then he would turn suddenly serious, and express himself feeling and pathos, show ing powers of oratory.—Ypsilanti Commercial Review, Nov. 23, 1883.

Smith's lecture of two hours and twenty minutes held the audience in tension, as he portrayed pictur- thrilling incidents which her his torice, and the experi- the "Boys in Blue" while the Boys who wore the Gray. pictures drawn with chalk blackboard elicited hearty from the audience. Plans of men, places about it, and of escape were all illus- the board. Bellefonte Nov. 8, 1883.

Rev. Black's Lecture.

has been called to account and Butly, for not mentioning Black's lecture in last week's Though we are not wholly to No previous announcement seems had been furnished and we knew nothing of it, hall was lighted and assembled. Other engage- prevented any arrange- getting a full report. If societies giving public en- tertainments will manifest sufficient interest to give us notice in the issue previous to the date of entertainment, we will try to provide for getting a report though we may not be able to attend personally. Concerning Mr. Blacks lecture, the following has been handed us by one who was in attendance:

To the Editor of the JOURNAL:

Last Monday night I had the pleasure of listening to a fine lecture by Mr. William Black, of Marion, read before the Liberal Club of Charlevoix, at Bartholomews opera house. * * * The subject of the lecture was "education" the lecturer starting out with the old trite saying that "Knowledge is power," gave a very clear argument, divesting the subject into some four parts,—the physical, medical, industrial and ethical,—all of which were handled in a masterly manner. After the lecture concluded, music was again furnished by the ladies band; after which commenced an attack by the members of the club on the speaker's arguments. As the names were called out by president Robert Miller, some attacked fiercely the ideas of the speaker, while others as positively agreed with him. It was a sit ange medley of many things, and yet in the most perfect order. Charlevoix may well feel proud of her Liberal Club. To one unacquainted with its workings, it might seem odd at first; but when once understood, it would seem to have its foundations laid deep,—having a grand chance to be a social club. The house was well filled, and "when musicians with its voluptuous swell, soft eyes looked love to eyes which spoke again, and all went merry as a marriage bell."

Historical Society.

This society met last Tuesday evening at the parlors of Hon. A. Buttars, about 70 members being present. The exercises opened with a piano duet by Mrs. G. S. Thomas and Miss Abbie Bennet. Mr. R. W. Kane read a humorous selection from the Ingolds- by Legends, which gave satisfaction in both the excellence of reading and the moral drawn. Mrs. Mears and Mr. W. A. Smith sang the "Italian Serenade." In the absence of the regular historical reading, Mrs. Oscar Upright read a well-prepared paper containing good-natured hits on members of the society and others of our citizens, and quite a complete history of the society since its organization. After intermission, W. A. Smith sang "When the tide comes in." Ed. Parmelee gave a declamation entitled "The clown's story," which contained many suggestions that strike home to the heart. H. Lee Iddings read in an able manner a difficult selection from Hiawatha. Al. Washburn gave evidence of fine conceptions of declamation in his rendering of "The Last Hymn," which has been pronounced one of the best rendered exercises of the evening. Next Tuesday evening having been selected by the G. A. R. for their lecture, the society will meet one week later at the residence of Byron See.

Ironton.

The furnace is in full blast. Last week it run out 314 tons of pig iron, the largest amount it ever made in one week.

R. M. Cherry, president of the Pine Lake Iron Co., arrived last Friday night, to remain a few days.

Sleighing is good, and company teams draw six cords to a load of wood three miles. A total of 112 cords a day is put into the yard.

W. C. Mears, of Banks, registered at the Pioneer House on Sunday. He reports business good in that town.

The mumps have disappeared for lack of victims.

Ironton is to have a brewery. Cannot say whether it will add much to the piety of the place.

A. B. Noyes, who has been confined to the house for th past ten days, is out again.

Our general health is good. No doctors in town.

Henry Hammond's boy who broke his leg recently, has recovered sufficiently to go to school on crutches.

The town board of Eveline met at Schoffen's hall last Saturday, to grant an extension of time 30 days for the collection of taxes.

Our population is increased every few days by the arrival of men with their families to work for the iron company. Every house is full that can be rented.

AKORN.

South Arm.

The "oldest inhabitant" reports the weather colder at Intermediate on Jan. 24th., than at any time in the recollections of the past. The thermometer registered 34 degrees below in the morning and 26 in the evening. At South Arm it registered 40.

About 50 of the South Arm school visited the spelling school at Intermediate on the 15th. They report a splendid time.

Mr. Davis made nearly a fatal mistake recently, by taking sugar of lead for something else. He is recovering.

Mrs. Webb fell recently and broke three ribs.

South Arm reports 57 pupils enrolled, and East Jordan about 100.

F. B. Shaw is visiting old friends in this vicinity.

S. G. Isaman has sore eyes.

D. Isaman has a new waterbury watch, and feels as pleased as a boy with a new whistle.

The prayer meeting at H. Olney's on Thursday evening, was well attended notwithstanding the cool weather.

Hon. Richard Knight's son Will, of Banks, is drawing logs with his $1000 team.

F. S. Meech, of Norwood, passed through this town recently.

F. A. N.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by CUSHMAN BROS., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Jan. 29, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

J. T. Dotson and W. S. Court to Charlotte Weir 53 acres, in ptf Evangeline, $80.

Geo. G. Hurlbut and wife to John and Thos. Curtiss, in w ¼ and w ¼ of n e ¼, 29-34 E, $600.

Thomas Beasley and wife to Wescott & Quinlan, pt of w ½ 5-29-5 E, $50.

Peter Hesselgrave and wife to Arthur Meigs et al, pt No 1, 2-32-6, $600.

Wilbur L. Strong to Emma A. Strong, 320 acres, 13-32-8, $1,200.

Mary A. Chamberlin to Philo Chrysler, 160 acres, 14-33-8, $1,000.

When a cure is guaranteed why will you refuse to be relieved of that cough which is liable to become seated on your lungs and because you many a suffering day and sleepless night? Your children are liable to be taken with Croup and die before a doctor can be summoned. Be wise and obtain a remedy that will not fail to give relief from Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, and all other lung difficulties. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will do all this and costs but a trifle. Price 25 and 50 cents a bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Beware! Coughs, colds, and slight Throat Diseases often develop into fatal colds, Seated Cough, Consumption, etc., and should have immediate attention and be removed in the first stages. Not only public speakers, but all, are liable to throat troubles, and to obtain relief should use Hamilton's Cough Tea-bes, which relieve Coughs and Hoarseness, making the articulation clear. Warranted to give satisfaction Price 25c per box. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Secure admiration. Who can help admiring a lovely face, a clear, smooth, beautiful complexion? These can be easily obtained by the use of Hamilton's Oriental Balm. It will surely remove Freckles, Tan, Pimples, and Blemishes of every sort and is in no way injurious to the skin, but is the most harmless and elegant preparation of its kind. Price 50c per bottle Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

TOOTHACHE.—Money is a great cure for aching hearts, but a twenty dollar gold piece placed on an aching tooth don't seem to have the least effect. In fact, nothing is sure but Hamilton's Toothache Drops, which are warranted to cure in one minute. Price only 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and keep up the system you will find Parmelee's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds 25 cts. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co. 8-60

O. W. SMITH,
ELECTRO-PLATER,
Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.
Electro-plating in gold and silver. Any article of jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order. 39

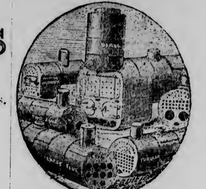
C. R. BELLINGER
carries the largest and finest stock of
JEWELRY,
Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best time-piece ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges

PIMPLES.
I will mail, Free the recipe for a simple remedy, FACE BALM that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and blotches, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also directions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing a 3c. stamp, PROF. VANCE & CO., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

G. W. JEFFERIES,
Dealer in
Fresh and Cured Meat
Fresh and Salt Fish,
AND VEGETABLES.
Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.
West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

New Goods.
At Cost
FOR CASH
For the Next 30 Days.
MISS L. SPAULDING,
Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

O. B. WEED & CO.
Are headquarters for
DRUGS
CHEMICALS,
Patent Medicines, all Kinds.
Imported and Domestic Perfumery.
Toilet Articles,
AND FANCY GOODS.
None but Pure Medicines
Kept in stock.
Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Hamilton's new block
Opera Block

Joseph Hyland,
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.


Boiler Maker,
Sheet-Iron Worker,
and manufacturer of
Hyland's Patent Fireman.
Dealer in all kinds of
SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.
Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of boilers promptly attended to.

Advance Lumber Company
Are now prepared to do
CUSTOM SAWING
Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.
GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.
ADVANCE, MICH.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,
DEALER IN
Hardware,
FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.
Charlevoix, Mich.

GEO. W. MILLER,
DEALER IN
Clothing
Gents' Furnishing Goods,
Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels,
GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.
Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST!
All kinds of
Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods.
The Finest Line of
French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear
Ever brought to Charlevoix.
Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoes.
They have no Superior.
CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY,
And Satisfaction Guaranteed.
L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House
CHARLEVOIX.

Overcoats!
AND SUITINGS
Gents' Overcoats.
Youths' Overcoats.
Boys' Overcoats.
Gents' Suits.
Youths' Suits.
Boys' Suits.
I have just received a large assortment of the above goods, bought at reduced rates. I am selling these goods for less than they are actually worth at wholesale. I have a line of Overcoats I am closing out at $2.00. Big bonanza for the money. Call and examine these goods and judge for yourself.
E. M. Clark.
Charlevoix, Nov., 1883

SEVEN TIMES ONE.

BY JEAN INGELOW.

There's no dew left on the daisies and clover,
There's no rain left in heaven,
I've said my "seven times" over and over,
Seven times one are seven.

I am old, so old, I can write a letter;
My birthday lessons are done;
The lambs play always, they know no better;
They are only one times one.

O moon! in the night I have seen you sailing
And stilling a cloud and a lake below;
You were to little ado, but just your light is failing—
You are nothing now but a bow.

You moon, have you done something wrong in heaven
That God has bidden your face?
I hope it will grow you'll soon be forgiven,
And shine again in your place.

O velvet bee, you're a dusty fellow,
You've powdered your legs with gold!
O brave marsh marybuds, rich and yellow,
Give me your money to fold.

O columbine, open your folded wrapper,
Where I am hid to watch the bees,
O cuckoo-pint, toll me the purple clapper
That hangs in your inmost ease.

And show my nest with the young ones in it;
I will not steal them away;
I am old! you may trust me, linnet, linnet—
I am seven times one to-day.

CASTLES IN THE AIR.

BY MAY FORREST.

Oh, visions that haunt me, waking,
How sadly do we greet!
Like a ship in over a lakelet
Or a shadow across a street.
Ye dance, and gleam, and glitter—
Through fleeting, wondrous light—
I would dwell in your cloud-built palaces,
My castles in the air.

I would stand on your golden towers
And gaze at the gleaming west,
Or list with delight the music
Of my beloved chantress;
And through the purple shadows
I should find a sunlit land
And my soul should drink the music
Of the far-off spirit-band.

RUNNING THE FORTS.

Alex W. Pearson, of Vineland, N. J., writes a story of Admiral Porter run by Vicksburg. Mr. Pearson was paymaster on the steamer Red Rover, attached to the Mississippi squadron. He tells how the gauntlet was run in this manner:

The ironclads were anchored in the Mississippi, just below the mouth of the Yazoo, in the order of procession they were to take in passing the blockade. All seemed ready, and everybody was on the qui vive for the start. Past 10 o'clock that night we heard the deep tone of the boat-swain's mate, of the Louisville the had a voice like a lion calling: "All hands! Up anchor." "There! They are off," was the word, and we hurried on deck to get a partial glimpse of our "forlorn hope." We breathlessly listened to the rattle of the chain cables as they came in, and could distinguish the dark outlines of the iron-clads as they swung in the stream. Then there was a signal from the flagship, and again we heard the boat-swain: "Let go anchor." The cables rattled out again, and all was still. We drew a long breath. "They're not going to-night," "Something has happened;" So all hands turned in.

Then, upon successive nights, was the fleet practiced in the preliminaries of departure, until all became so used to the performance that the movement was as mechanical as any other drill, and spectators ceased to regard it with especial interest.

Meanwhile the three transports which were to go below were getting ready. It was decided to economize life by removing the crews from these steamers, leaving only two pilots at the wheel and two engineers to handle the engines. The duty of guiding these large and defenseless steamers through the fleet of fire they were destined to traverse seemed extra hazardous. The post of the gallant party, perched up in the sky-parlor, was uncomfortably isolated and distinguished when 100 pounder shell and 8 inch were flying about regardless of consequences. The loveliness in itself was kind of "poker-ish." Danger, like misery, loves company.

To avoid the disagreeable responsibility of ordering seven individuals to accompany them on this trip, Captain Conrad Porter called for volunteer pilots. Every pilot in the squadron volunteered! Even the gallant old Nestors who presided at the wheel of the Red Rover got me to write an application requesting that they might be "permitted to have the pleasure of taking one of the steam transports past Vicksburg.

THE PILOTS OF THE MISSISSIPPI.

Here was another difficulty. All were so eager for the post of honor that it was a delicate matter to make selection. I cannot forbear digressing here to place on record my humble tribute of respect and admiration for the pilots of the Mississippi river. Taken as a class, their salaries, services compared, are the highest to be found; and long seldom emergencies, I refer to decide and act instantly, when upon such action hangs depend the safety of hundreds, and nothing in the realm of human ken can peril it should it proceed, into a current which he does not approve, are seeing responsible messengers not more regardless, but from a personal standpoint of valor and in the performance of what they understand to be its plainest duty, I verily believe the pilot of the Mississippi and Ohio would have value served to take the lead of steamers over Niagara Falls.

Those who were so fortunate as to be regarded the pleasure" requested to report at the office of the commander of the squadron, that gentleman's private secretary announced to them the decision of the admiral, that the pilot-house, which shelters the wheel on the lofty decks of these Western steamers, removed, leaving the wheel and themselves exposed. This settled the splinter business, except such as might come from a shot striking the spokes of the wheel. One of the pilots remarked to me when inspecting his post of duty and honor, "They'll have to take center shots to 'raise' the hair on us now!" Still, there was an unusual nakedness about the elevation calculated to make one feel as I once felt when jumping out a tall hay tuck in the midst of a vindictive thunder-storm. I was "dead center" just then, and felt so.

A CONSIDERATE ADMIRAL.

When Admiral Porter was ready to start on his expedition past Vicksburg we learned it on the hospital ship. Porter always had a fatherly care for and interest in the comfort and satisfaction of those of his comrades who had suffered by the fortune of war. He knew that the poor wounded and helpless heroes languishing in the wards of the Red Rover felt a keen sympathy with him and with those he would like with him in this desperate undertaking, and he knew that all eagerly wished to see what might be seen of a spectacle which promised to be one of tremendous import and excitement. One day he intimated to Dr. Pickney that he might take the Rover down to the bend above Vicksburg to-wait coming and to anchor there for the night. We knew what that meant. And all the weary sufferers on board soon knew it, too. It was better than a dose of quinine. There is no tonic like seeing interaction, or seeing your friend go in.

At sunset we weighed anchor and stood down the river and took "orchestra seats" as spectators and auditors of a drama which would be lit by the lurid blaze of artillery and accompanied by the music of its thunder. It was a clear and splendid evening, but as the shades of night closed in the sky, though starlit, became hazy, and a gloom settled over the river, which rendered almost undistinguishable the outlines of its shores. As the darkness thickened I heard the remark often repeated among our invalid boarders: "It is just the night for us."

It was touching to see wounded veterans who that morning would have thought it impossible to leave their cots, straining their crippled sinews to clamber up to the hurricane deck, where they might have the best view of the scene to be enacted. There was little conversation on board that evening. Anticipation was too busy for words. We were pervaded with that sense of expectancy of something undefined and fearful which engrosses the attention and renders language mute. The time seemed interminable. We thought the devoted squadron would never appear. We strained our sight to pierce the thickening shadows, and held our breath to listen for the pantings of the steam. At last we tired of watching and waiting. Midnight was on. "All right, by G—d!" they shouted back, and on they went.

The passing of Vicksburg took not many minutes, but they were eventful, and had a good deal crowded into them. We lost one of the transports (the Henry Clay) and had another so disabled that she had to be towed out of range. Otherwise the damage was less serious than had been expected. Most of the enemy's shot were thrown away. Accuracy in shooting on the wing with 100-pounders when all hands are in a hurry is not easy. Soon the glare of the conflagrations faded again into darkness; the last echoes of artillery thunders rolled away over the Warrenton hills; the quiet of a summer midnight descended once more upon the troubled bosom of the river, and we knew that the gauntlet of Vicksburg defenses had been run.—Philadelphia Times.

The Wrong Man Baptized.

Stammering or stuttering is one of the most unpleasant things at times that a man can be afflicted with. A man may be troubled with almost any other malady and be cured or helped, but a man who stutters, though he may at times be free from the habit, never has confidence in his talking utensils. They may run all right for a time, but just as he expects the road from his vocal organs, and wants to do his best, they go back on him, and he commences to stammer around, and express his thoughts to save himself. A stutterer is usually the best-natured man in the world. It seems as though nature picked out the jolliest fellow as a watch case to put her vocal works into, so that she won't be any kicking. There is a gentleman living in this State who stutters just when he don't want to, but who can talk right along all right when there is nothing particular to be said. If he gets excited or interested and wants to orate, he gets stuck and has time to walk around the block before he can get things in working order. He was out in Iowa recently, and at a hotel where he was stopping, the traveling men got to playing a game of cards Sunday to go to a town a few miles distant, when a campmeeting was in progress, and where there was going to be a number of converts baptized, and they invited our friend, the stutterer, to go along.

"Not mum-much," said he, as he worked at untangling a fish line, while they brought the steamboat can full of angle-worms. "If I know my own heart, I don't go to no k-k-k-campmeeting where they k-k-k-baptize. I'm afr-r-raid I'll get baptizing wr-wrong and my k-k-k-profiles have not got dr-d-d-dry yet."

"What was the matter?" said a drummer for a Chicago grocery-house. "Didn't fall in the water did you?"

"N-n-no," said the stutterer, as he stuffed a wad of paper down on top of the angle-worms to keep them from crawling out, "I didn't f-f-f-fall in, but I got in all the s-s-s-same. It was sus-sus-snatched in. I'll tell you about it, you can, I will t-t-t-tell you about it."

The boys swore they would never get it away, and the stutterer began:

"Well, about twenty years ago I was editing a pr-pr-pap-rin Wisk-k-consin, and there was a big r-r-rush of people winter, and in the spring they advertised to b-b-b-baptize all of the k-k-k-k-converts. Every body went, and I went down to the k-k-k-creek to see them s-ssssnak. They had a presiding elder, a m-m-minister in one, br-d-d-dark the beginning, and when they had dipped s-f-f-few, I noticed the older looked as sweet on girl, tired when he pushed the last woman asleep, and I th-th-thought he wanted to c-me out of the w-w-water, so I reached out my left hand to help him up the b-b-bank. Do you know, he thought I was a k-k-k-candidate for baptism, and he took hold of my hand and I was p-p-pulled in on the back of the elder, don't p-p-p-" and before I could say any m-m-more he said, 'Have no fear, my young friend, and he put his arm around me and was pulling me right in. I wasn't as s-s-bad-strong as I am now, and I made a g-g-grip like a prize fighter, and before I knew what he was about he was saying, 'I-b-b-baptize thee in the name of the Father, S-son, and Holy G-g-ghost,' and I was as weak as a k-k-cat. I tried to get away from him, and tried to get hold of the w-w-wash the feller, and that I had m-m-never been converted, but the naturally pious look on my face betrayed me, and I went out on the bank and shook myself. You may talk about m-m-ministers not joking, but they are some. I shall n-n-always think that the elder was joking. I was no k-k-k-christian. It was a picnic for the crowd, and they laugh at me to this day. Say, you fellers d-d-don't tell the camp-meeting, for I shouldn't feel fair-treated by them, and the stuttering man took his tobacco and pocket-book and went down toward the pond, while the interview was sent to the campmeeting.—Peck's Sun.

Oats putty can be removed without injury to the sash or glass by passing a hot soldering iron over it. The heat of the iron softens it readily, and permits its removal with a knife or chisel without much trouble.

A TRAVELER thinks no one his superior who does him an injury; for he loses it then in his power to make himself superior to the other by forgiving it.—Pope.

The Unfinished Manuscript.

Literary men have, sometimes, received a kind of social black eye; that is, no one believes that they are quite as good husbands or as good fathers as they should be; and, from the observatory of a casual view, this is correct. Few people know to what extremities literary men are reduced. Few, very few indeed, know how they court for so-called muse of inclination. The man who handles the drawing-knife or plane can, if he be in good physical condition, do his work creditably; but the literary man, though he be in robust health, and though he may not have an ache or a pain, is frequently unable to do acceptable work. This is a curious freak which no student of metaphysics can explain, for the mind of man, although it is constantly becoming clearer and more capable of comprehension, is still something which a Newton cannot define, nor a Bacon perfectly explore. A man's mind seems to have but little to do with his affections, for, although his heart may be warm, his words are sometimes cold.

"I want you to go to bed," said Mr. Mecklamore, the well-known novelist, to his little girl. "Every night when I sit down to work you persist in snorting around. Go to bed; I've got work to do."

"She can't understand you," said Mrs. Mecklamore; "I don't think that she is well."

"She's always ill when I want to work. She seems to study the time. What do you want to snort that way for? You are enough to drive a man crazy?"

"Robert, I don't think the little girl can help it," the wife replied. "She is too young to know anything about the importance of your work."

"Well it's time she was learning," the author exclaimed, turning, with an angry air. "Other people can work without interruption. I don't see why I should be supposed on. I'll go down town. I can write there without interruption," and he gathered up his paper and left the house.

Quietly, and without interruption, he worked for several hours. Occasionally, when his mind was deep in the building of a character, he could see a little anxious face, and hear an exclamation of gladness; but he waved aside the vision and worked on. He made a night a love came with a note. The message ran:

"I am very uneasy about Dora; I think she has the diphtheria."

"My work is done for to-night," he mused; and, arranging his papers with a discontented air, he went home. He found the doctor there. The little sufferer smiled at him when he entered, but her tones to say something, but "papa's coming," was all he could understand. An unfinished manuscript stared at him.

"Is it a very violent attack?" he asked of the physician.

"Yes, very."

The latter sat on the edge of the bed. The father approached. He could not see the lines of the manuscript now. The little girl choked, and they lifter her up. The father put his arm under her head. The unfinished manuscript was dim.

"She has been ailing for several days," said the mother, "but we did not think there was anything serious the matter with her. She has been so gay and so full of frolic that we didn't think anything could ail her.

The author looked at her father and tried to speak, but failing, she put her hand into his and smiled. The unfinished manuscript was dim. With a struggle she said:

"Am I bad?"

"No, angel," whispered the father.

"Do you want me to go to bed?"

"No darling." The unfinished manuscript was fading more and more.

"She is past all help," the doctor said.

The mother hid her face in the window curtain. The author bent his head across his arms. She looked at him and was dead. The unfinished manuscript had faded.—Texas Siftings.

Photographing Dogs and Babies.

The artist was a heavy-eyed man; his hair was unkempt, his beard was disarranged, and his coat-sleeves were turned up. He looked weary.

"I have just been attempting to fix a baby's attention," he said, in an explanatory tone, "by throwing handsprings behind the camera. When I showed the negative to the mother she made the inevitable observation that the face looked expression. Can you get expression on the surface of a lump of lamp putty?"

"Is it easier to photograph dogs than babies?"

"Oh, at the usual times. You can fix a dog's attention and hold it for a time with a bone, but a baby's fingers and toes are nauseous and expressive.

"Some of them has the look of stupidity that the average baby wears except the pug. Pug dogs, by the way, are the easiest to take. All you have to do is to put them in front of the camera and they look perfectly intelligent. The most difficult I ever struggled with was an Italian greyhound. I was a delicate and exquisitely sensitive little creature, and endowed with almost human intelligence. It couldn't keep its shadowy legs still for a second to save its life. We worked half a day, and succeeded at length in making a picture that was half satisfactory.

"Do you photograph many dogs?"

"About 20 a year. The work is done in a few spells. The big plunger rather won't bother with dogs.—New York sun.

THERE is less and less epicurism endhussism over venison every year.

HUMOR.

A TAILOR'S GOOSE—The cloth.

A FRAME of mind—The side.

THE weigh of all flesh—Ounces to the pound.

LIGHT-HOUSES, from a theatrical point of view, always indicate low comedy.

"WHAT does 'lux' mean?" asked Brown. "'Lux' means light," said Smith. "That's what I thought," said Brown. "But I wasn't certain, and I didn't like to show my luck's light, however."

A DIFFERENCE: A friend of ours, when told of the death of a neighboring stock dealer, replied: "Why, he's off than I am. I'm dead broke, but a dead broker."

"WHAT are you laughing at?" asked Mrs. Jones of her husband, who was chuckling over his newspaper. "Something I saw here," he replied, "but it's hardly funny enough to—"

ONE of the greatest mysteries in physiological mysteries is why a man can handle lobsters a boy's height short time, while a baseball makes him dodge doors. Another is why a boy can walk seventeen miles in the hot sun on a new shoes, without becoming excited in the least, and yet that boy will groan like a horse with the colic if he is asked to fetch a glass of water from an adjoining room.—Bingo.

A BEAUFORT bachelor proposed the other day in which his intended preferred coffee that he proposed was accepted, only to find coffee was made by the lady.—Texas Siftings.

Marlowe.

Do we not too much neglect in our reading, of late years, Landis's selections published in the original works of the free and plain? Marlowe was the first Shakspeare's time wonderful writer, and the world has never known a more brilliant and gifted man. He was poet, dramatist, soldier, and statesman, and he knew how to use his pen as well as his sword. He was a master of the English language, and his writings are full of the richest gems of thought and expression. Marlowe was born in 1564, and died in 1593, when in his thirtieth year. Shakspeare had not yet begun his plays. Those who have not read Marlowe have been deprived of a treat. Conversing before the world while Shakspeare, who was then unknown, was in his cradle, he left a brilliant school of literature which he may have influenced, but which he could not have surpassed. Many of his poems are evidently many years—Chief.

Bonanza in California.

Cal.—Mr. Thomas P. Ford, of the Monterey Tribune, of this town that the great pain-exterminator, Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine, is the best remedy he would not be without it. Among all the people St. Jacobs Oil is the most popular medicine ever that Western and Southern afraid of being thought old, Eastern girls are anxious not ght young and fresh.

HUMOR.

A TAILOR'S GOOSE—The cloth.

A FRAME of mind—The side.

THE weigh of all flesh—Ounces to the pound.

LIGHT-HOUSES, from a theatrical point of view, always indicate low comedy.

"WHAT does 'lux' mean?" asked Brown. "'Lux' means light," said Smith. "That's what I thought," said Brown. "But I wasn't certain, and I didn't like to show my luck's light, however."

A DIFFERENCE: A friend of ours, when told of the death of a neighboring stock dealer, replied: "Why, he's off than I am. I'm dead broke, but a dead broker."

"WHAT are you laughing at?" asked Mrs. Jones of her husband, who was chuckling over his newspaper. "Something I saw here," he replied, "but it's hardly funny enough to—"

ONE of the greatest mysteries in physiological mysteries is why a man can handle lobsters a boy's height short time, while a baseball makes him dodge doors. Another is why a boy can walk seventeen miles in the hot sun on a new shoes, without becoming excited in the least, and yet that boy will groan like a horse with the colic if he is asked to fetch a glass of water from an adjoining room.—Bingo.

Corn-lines.

The winter wheat is corn and cold. Yet summer has I - harvest gold; And the baldness head that ever was seen Can be covered well with a furniture.

Cured Clergymen.

Rev. L. S. Coulton, of Circleville, Kas., says: Dr. Warner, your White Wine of Tar Syrup has been in my family and found to be all and even more than you claim of it. I can sincerely say for all Throat and Lung diseases.

For several years I was troubled with Catarrh; have tried many remedies. Ely's Cream Balm has proved the article desired. I believe it is the only cure.—L. S. Coulton, Hardware Merchant, Towanda, Pa. (See advertisement.)

Pure Cod-Liver Oil, made from selected livers on the seashore, by CAWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in market.

I had suffered from Catarrh for ten years; the pain would be so severe that I was obliged to send for a doctor. I had entirely lost my sense of smell. Ely's Cream Balm has worked a miracle.—C. S. HALLEN, Binghamton, N.Y.

CHAPPED Hands, Face, Pimples, and rough Skin, cured by using DERBY'S TAR SOAP, made by CAWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

NOT a costly medicine—25 doses Piso's Cure for Consumption for 25 cents.

"Rough on Rats" clears out Rats, Mice. 15c.

Mother Swan's Worm Syrup, tasteless. 25c.

"Rough on Coughs" Troches, 15c; Liquid, 50c.

WELLS' May Apple (Liver) Pills. 10c.

"Rough on Toothache," in-tant relief. 15c.

"Rough on Corns," for Corns, Warts, Bunions. 15c.

WELLS' Health Renewer cures Dyspepsia, Impotence.

The "Rough on" Tooth Powder, elegant. 15c.

An eminent physician first prescribed Piso's Cure for Consumption.

Regularity Brings Vigor.

Local irregularities produce weakness of the entire system. In order, therefore, to reestablish health and strength upon a sure basis, these irregularities must be permanently overcome. Many persons endeavor to reform them by remedies which address themselves merely to the symptoms, without affecting the cause. It such individuals were to use Joseph Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, they would speedily experience the difference between the medicine which palliates, and one which entirely removes physical disability. That prime regulator of bodily disturbances re-stores the derelict organs to an uninterrupted and healthy performance of their various duties, whereby alone the system can recover its lost tone and vigor. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are a tonic medicine, but they are a tonic which regulates are they do within the system.

Why is a leaky tub like a poor ruler? Because it doesn't hold good.

Their Name is Legion.

Legions of people have had their lives made miserable by Piles. This painful disease is often induced and always aggravated by constipation. Kidney-Wort is the great remedy for all affections of this kind. It acts as a gentle cathartic, promotes a healthy action of the bowels, and soothes and heals the inflamed surfaces. It has cured hundreds of cases where all other remedies and applications have failed. Sold by all druggists.

The husband is called the head of the family only by those young writers who haven't had any experience in married life

Dairymen Getting Rich.

Progressive dairymen who are only satisfied with the best results, are adding to their wealth and conferring a benefit on society, by the rapid improvements they are making in the art of butter-making. This class use Wells, Richardson & Co.'s Improved Butter Color, and know by actual test that it fills every claim made for it.

A MARRIED woman can write better poetry than a single one, because a poet is born, not made.

"Don't Feed it to the Season.—Doctors, coughs, sore throats, and all ailments can be colored successfully with the Diamond Dyes. Fashionable colors. Only 10c. at druggists. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

Why is a leaky tub like a poor ruler? Because it won't hold good.

"You claim too much for Samaritan Nervine," said a skeptic. Its patrons say just the opposite.

The dark age: A woman between 25 and 30.

"Dr. Richmond's Samaritan Nervine cured me of Epilepsy."—Jacob Sauer, St. Joseph, Mo.

How SIMILAR that a baby's 1st 2ds should come 1th.

The Doctor's Indorsement.

Dr. W. D. Wright, Cincinnati, O., sends the subjoined professional indorsement: I have prescribed Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs in a great number of cases, and always with success, the case in particular was where a gentleman who had been confined in her constitution with myself. The doctor had all the symptoms of confirmed consumption—cold night sweats, hectic fever, incessant cough, etc. He commenced his medicine to get better, and was soon restored to his usual health. I found Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs the most valuable expectorant for breaking up distressing coughs and colds.

Indorsed by the Clergy.

We take pleasure in recommending Dr. Warner's White Wine of Tar syrup to any public speaker that may be troubled with throat or lung disease.

Rev. M. A. Gault, pastor Presbyterian church, Reading, Mich.; Rev. J. T. Inlings, Albion, Mich.; Rev. V. L. Lockwood, Ann Arbor, Mich.

"Put up" at the Gault House.

The business man or tourist will find first-class accommodations at from $2 per day and $2.50 per day at the Gault House, Chicago, corner Clinton and Madison streets. This fair-famed hotel is located in the center of the city, only one block from the Union Depot. Reduced to all specimens Rates.

H. W. HOYT, Proprietor.

Curiosities.

The winter wheat is corn and cold. Yet summer has I - harvest gold; And the baldness head that ever was seen Can be covered well with a furniture.

Cured Clergymen.

Rev. L. S. Coulton, of Circleville, Kas., says: Dr. Warner, your White Wine of Tar Syrup has been in my family and found to be all and even more than you claim of it. I can sincerely say for all Throat and Lung diseases.

For several years I was troubled with Catarrh; have tried many remedies. Ely's Cream Balm has proved the article desired. I believe it is the only cure.—L. S. Coulton, Hardware Merchant, Towanda, Pa. (See advertisement.)

Pure Cod-Liver Oil, made from selected livers on the seashore, by CAWELL, HAZARD & Co., New York. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in market.

I had suffered from Catarrh for ten years; the pain would be so severe that I was obliged to send for a doctor. I had entirely lost my sense of smell. Ely's Cream Balm has worked a miracle.—C. S. HALLEN, Binghamton, N.Y.

CHAPPED Hands, Face, Pimples, and rough Skin, cured by using DERBY'S TAR SOAP, made by CAWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

NOT a costly medicine—25 doses Piso's Cure for Consumption for 25 cents.

"Rough on Rats" clears out Rats, Mice. 15c.

Mother Swan's Worm Syrup, tasteless. 25c.

"Rough on Coughs" Troches, 15c; Liquid, 50c.

WELLS' May Apple (Liver) Pills. 10c.

"Rough on Toothache," in-tant relief. 15c.

"Rough on Corns," for Corns, Warts, Bunions. 15c.

WELLS' Health Renewer cures Dyspepsia, Impotence.

The "Rough on" Tooth Powder, elegant. 15c.

An eminent physician first prescribed Piso's Cure for Consumption.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

Delivers and cures RHEUMATISM, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, BACKACHE, HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE, SORE THROAT, QUINSY, SWELLINGS, SPRAINS, Soreness, Cuts, Bruises, FROSTBITES, BURNS, SCALDS, And all other bodily aches and pains.

FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co. (Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

BIG PAY to sell our rubber hand stamps. Terms free. Taylor Bros. & Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

$60 A WEEK AT HOME. $5 OUTFIT FREE. Address H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Maine.

FREE. By return mail. Full Specimen of a New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. Send 6 cts. to Address: DAVIES, Baltimore, Md.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Mrs. M. A. HANSON, 163 State street, Chicago.

Bicycle For Business at the Oldest & Best Practical College. Catalogue free. Address: DAVIS, Baltimore, Md.

Young Men WANTED to learn telegraphy here and Counties. Address: VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

A GENTS WANTED for the best and fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. National Publishing Co., Chicago, Ill.

THE law of the business, particularly as to notes, etc., is fully explained in my new and enlarged edition of Pocket Manual of Business Forms, Laws and Usages. Mailed free. Address P. CROSBY, Publisher, Chicago, Ill.

LARGEST Publishing House in the world. N. Y. WEEKLY NEWS, 52 editions. One Dollar a year. Best Paper for the Money. Sample copies, Send 2 cents to Address, DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, 17 East 14th St., New York.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the Automatic Shuttle Sewing Machine. Price $18. Machine Co., 862 Broadway, New York.

CONSUMPTION. Dr. T. A. SLOCUM, 96 Pearl St., New York.

TO SPECULATORS. R. LINDBLOM & CO., 50 Broadway, Chicago.

N.G. MILLER & CO., 50 Broadway, New York.

GRAIN & PROVISION BROKERS. Members of all prominent Produce Exchanges. New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee. We have exclusive private wires between Chicago and New York. Will execute orders on our Chicago and New York Boards of Trade. Send for particulars. Address HORTON'S SYSTEM CO., Canton, Ohio.

KIDNEY-WORT

THE SURE CURE FOR KIDNEY DISEASES, LIVER COMPLAINTS, CONSTIPATION, PILES, AND BLOOD DISEASES.

PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT HEARTILY.

"Kidney-Wort is the most successful remedy I ever used." Dr. P. C. Dalton, Monkton, Vt.

"Kidney-Wort has done more for me than all else." H. A. Cook, Ex. Herr, Vt.

"Kidney-Wort has cured me after three years suffering." Mrs. M. C. Spencer, Akron, O.

IN THOUSANDS OF CASES

it has proved its great value when all else failed. It will not disappoint you. BUILDS UP THE ACTIVE ORGANS to healthful action.

It Relieves the Blood and Strengthens and gives New Life to it in the important organs of the body. The natural action of the Kidneys is restored. The Liver is cleansed of all disease, and the Bowels move freely and healthfully. In this way the worst diseases are eradicated from the system.

PRICE, $1.00. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

They can be sent by mail.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO. Burlington Vt.

KIDNEY-WORT

This person prefers to smoke the Federal Leader, considering the virtue of hops with Virginia leaves and rice.

HOP PLASTER

LAME BACK

Is the best pain, Lung and Liver Remedy ever discovered. Sold by druggists and country stores. Joy Brand. Sugars.

Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM

CATARRH HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM

When applied by the nostrils it spreads over the whole inner surface and is absorbed. Gives relief at once. It opens the head, allays pain and inflammation, protects the membrane from additional colds, completely heals the sores, restores the senses of taste and smell. A thorough treatment will cure. Not drying. Not painful. Not offensive. OF A LIQUID or POWDER. No ammonia or other injurious drug. Agreeable to use. Price 50 cents by mail or at Druggists. ELY BROTHERS, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

For Two Generations

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

SAMARITAN NEVER FAILS. NERVINE

"You claim too much for SAMARITAN NERVINE," says a skeptic. "How can one medicine be a specific for Epilepsy, Dyspepsia, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Rheumatism, Nervousness and Kidney complaints?" We claim it a specific, simply because the virtues of all diseases arise from the blood. Its Nervine, Restorative, Alterative and Laxative properties are all the curatives herein referred to. It's known world-wide as

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

It vitalizes and conquers the poisoned blood by the introduction of opiates and drastic cathartics, but by the restoration of activity to the sunken and nervous system, whereby the brain is relieved of morbid faculty, which are created by the causes above referred to.

To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all those whose sedentary employment causes nervous prostration, irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or kidneys or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, SAMARITAN NERVINE is invaluable. Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system. $1.50. Sold by all Druggists. (10)

For testimonials and other proof write to DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

CATARRH SURE CURE

$50,000 GIVEN AWAY BY THE POPULAR MONTHLY.

Every Subscriber to Receive a Present.

NO BLANKS.

THIS OFFER GOOD UNTIL MARCH 14, 1884.

A PRESENT AND A SPLENDID ILLUSTRATED MAGAZINE, One Year, for only $1.50.

Desiring to increase the circulation of our already well known magazine to 100,000 copies we have decided to present subscribers (in addition to the literary matter they have paid to receive, and in every instance will be delivered to the full value represented) the following valuable and well known articles, and in having been arranged for that purpose.

FOR $1.50

We will send The Chicago Illustrated POPULAR MONTHLY Magazine one year to our address and to each person forwarding us $1.50 a printed receipt, numbered in duplicate from one thousand upward, which will entitle the holder to one of the following presents to be given away March 14th, 1884:

PARTIAL LIST OF PRESENTS TO BE GIVEN AWAY.

1 capital present, CASH	$50,000	200 Fine Gold Watches, EACH	$1,000
1 grand present, CASH	4,000	300 Pocket Rifles, EACH 10 cents	3,000
1 grand present, CASH	2,000	1 Tow Buggy	250
100 presents, each valued at $10	1,000	1,000 Gold Rings, Rockers, $1 each	1,000
100 presents, each valued at $5	500	15 U. S. Greenbacks, EACH $10	150
1 Grand Piano	1,000	1 Silver Service	125
1 Family Sewing Machine, EACH $65	65	1 Set Silver Knives, EACH $5	125
1 Family Carriage	500	2 Sewing Machines, $75 EACH	150
1 Family Gentleman's Horse	250	1 Breech-Loading Shot-Gun, each $75	75
1 Lady's Gentleman's Horse	250	2 Sewing Machines, EACH $60	120
1 organ	300	2 Farm Wagons, EACH $80	160
1 Set Silver Knives, EACH $5	125	1 Set Silver Watches, EACH	250
50 U. S. Greenbacks, $1 EACH	50	50 U. S. Greenbacks, $1 EACH	50
1 Family Sewing Machine, EACH	65	1 Gold Chain Bracelet	250
1 Surgeon's Case	25	250 Engraving Premium Receipts	500
1 Set Silver Knives, EACH $10	250	and 67,387 other presents, valued at from
1 Family Rifle, EACH $20	150	10 cents to $1 EACH, which make a grand total
10 Family Rifles, EACH 15	150	of 100,000 presents, this guaranteeing a present to all who send us $1.50, as directed.

ALL PRESENTS—Will be awarded in a fair and impartial manner by a committee of disinterested persons to be chosen by the Distributing, March 14th. We pledge our reputation that every subscriber will have a fair and equal show. After the committee's report is made public all will be invited to be in attendance on the day of the Distribution, at 1 o'clock in the forenoon, whether the subscriber be present or not. As we only charge $1.50 for our regular prices, you understand that we give away these 100,000 presents without charge.

Remember one or back numbers of our magazine will be mailed to any addresses for 15 cents, which amount may be sent in postage stamps. Postmasters are authorized to receive subscriptions. Remit by registered letter or money order. Address all letters to

THE POPULAR MONTHLY,
58 Dearborn Street, CHICAGO, ILLS.

ALLEN'S Lung Balsam!

A GOOD FAMILY REMEDY!

—THAT WILL CURE—

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP,

CONSUMPTION.

Mr. Wm. Graham, A. Co., Wis., writes: April 6, 1883: "I take pleasure in saying that the Lung Balsam I purchased of you a short time ago has done me more good than a number of dollars worth of other medicine. I was troubled with a severe cough, which would keep me awake nights, and after using one bottle of Allen's Lung Balsam I was entirely relieved. It was effectual in breaking up the cough, and I would recommend it to all who are afflicted with a cough, cold or lung trouble."

Mrs. A. Graham, A. Co., Wis., writes: April 6, 1883: "I take pleasure in saying that the Lung Balsam I purchased of you a short time ago has done me more good than a number of dollars worth of other medicine. I was troubled with a severe cough, which would keep me awake nights, and after using one bottle of Allen's Lung Balsam I was entirely relieved. It was effectual in breaking up the cough, and I would recommend it to all who are afflicted with a cough, cold or lung trouble."

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM

Is harmless to the most delicate child! It contains no Opium in any form!

Recommended by Physicians, Ministers and Nurses. In fact by everybody who has given it a good trial. It never fails to bring relief.

As an Expectorant it has no Equal.

SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE DEALERS.

Delicate and Feeble Ladies

Those languid, tiresome sensations causing you to feel somevely able to lie on your feet that constant drain that is taking from your system all its nourishment every day, driving the bloom from your cheeks, that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and all obstructions of your system are relieved at once; while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. Nerve weakness so much to-day, and none are so distressed, should make known such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

Feels Young Again.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy, lassitude condition of the whole system; head ache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physician or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters with such good effect that the neuralgia and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think them, as do other neighbors who use them in the family."—A lady, in Providence.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1877.

DR. HARRIMAN, Dear Sir:—I have been suffering ten years and I tried your Hop Bitters and think they are more good than all the doctors. Miss S. S. BROWN.

Baby Saved!

We are so thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted complaint and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by the mother, which she commenced using before he was a month old. We think it saved his life.—Providence Reporter.

DISCOVERY FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. BEST COUGH SYRUP. TASTES GOOD. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION.

C.N.U. No. 3-84.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Jan. 31, 1884.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

The congressional atmosphere is rising in temperature just at present, and there is no telling just how far up the thermometric scale the mercury will be driven, or just how much certain government officials will suffer from the metaphorical hot weather threatening the department of justice, the dignity of Brewster's "coat of arms," a Mr. Cameron surnamed "Brewster," and a dozen or more of an alleged "ring" that have been feeding on fat fees and whiskey punches paid by the government.

$107,286 FOR WHAT?

This is the amount. Secretary Folger says, the government paid for counsel and detective fees in the second star route trial. Brewster, the attorney general, with a salary of $12,500, drew $5,000 additional for services already paid for by his salary. George Bliss made more money out of the government than did several of the star route theives he was trying to convict. Up to the present time he has been paid $78,000 for two years services, and his account the first quarter for the third year, reaching nearly $10,000, is now pending for allowance. Mr. Kerr complacently pocketed $21,877 for his services on the second trial, and Mr. Merrick nearly $20,000, or at the rate of $170 per day. Pinkerton, the detectives, and a special assistant by the name of Gibson, drew $13,000 for "shadowing" the defendants, their attorneys, the jury, and many prominent personages supposed to have been interested in the defense. The saloons of Washington reaped their share of the swag by the patronage of the detectives, who would follow the supposed conspirators into these places to overhear their conversation. The name of every prominent saloon in Washington figures in these detective's expense reports, and they evidently spent enough money to have kept themselves drunk the whole year round.

"DIAMOND CUT DIAMONDS."

Brewster and Bliss, the two "B's," created a hive of industry for unemployed detectives. They began to suspect that these detectives who had been at work for them some time had failed to bring in any evidence that would strengthen the government's case had been bought off by the star routers, so they conceived and executed the brilliant idea of employing an other force to "shadow" the first one; and for months this disgraceful farce was fostered by the department of justice.

MR. SPRINGER'S COMMITTEE will now proceed to investigate other expenditures in Brewster's bureau, and some extremely scandalous exposures are promised. The cases may properly be recorded in the annals of congressional investigations as "Justice versus Justice," and the country will have to witness the spectacle of a strongly odorous green spot on the robes of the present administration.

RANDALL'S LITTLE CANADA.

Speaker Carlisle's private secretary is also the Washington correspondent for the Boston Post, and was the author of the statement in that paper last week that Mr. Randall and his Pennsylvania colleagues had agreed with the republican minority to aid in the defeat of any reduction of the present tariff. The article was a canard on its face, and Mr. Randall called upon Speaker Carlisle to know whether his secretary had official permission to engage in the eavesdropping of members of the house. Mr. Carlisle reprimanded his secretary, and in the future the Boston paper will have to look elsewhere for its sensational correspondence. But this tariff question promises to be upon which the democrats in the house are in peril of dividing a large number of the leaders favor the springing of the issue at this session, in order that the democratic party may go before the country during the presidential campaign upon its true tariff principles. "I talked on the subject with Hon. Benton McMillin of Tennessee, a prominent leader on democratic side, and a true representative of his party. Mr. McMillin said to me:

A DANGEROUS ROCK

"That the present tariff needs modification and reduction every man who is not a protectionist for protection's sake must admit. I know it is said 'the industries of the country will be frightened.' Will they be less subject to fright one or two years hence? We should attempt nothing but what is just, and no individual or corporation has a right to take fright at justice. We should deal with the question from a patriotic, rather than a political standpoint, if the time comes when the two do not coincide. But even from a political point of view the democracy has more to fear from inaction and cowering, than from taking and maintaining a judicious but firm stand in favor of reforming the outrageous enormities and deformities of the present tariff.

If we do this we clearly define our policy ourselves and go into the contest on our own grounds. If we do nothing our opponents define it for us and charge more than we desire to accomplish in the way of ultra legislation. It is vain to try to smother on the tariff issue. The democratic majority of the 45th and 46th congresses declined to act and the people sent them to the minority. The republicans of the 47th congress improved some things a little, but the people became disgusted with their dallying and have sent to congress about seventy democratic majority. We now know what the people expect of us and if we do not place the failure to accomplish a revision of the tariff upon the republican senate our present majority will drop to a minority when the people again get their ballot box. If we leave the tariff as it is they now are we will have a surplus in the treasury in January last of $70,000,000 after paying all bonds due up to that date. That will make $9 for every man woman and child in the U. S. locked up in the vaults. What will be the result?

PECUNIARY APPROPRIATIONS.

a lobby that will linger around it, it vultures around a carcass, devising every means from larceny to legislative robbery to get their hands into it. Besides so much money would be diverted from the legitimate channels of trade that stringency, panics and ruin would follow. This must be averted and can only be done by reducing taxes."

"What are some of the unjust discriminations of the present tariff, Mr. McMillin?"

"Why sir, the more luxuriant and non essential the article the lower the duty in most instances. To illustrate: On cut diamonds the duty is only 10 per cent, while upon mechanic's tools and agricultural implements it is 50 to 90 per cent. Uncut diamonds are free, but the raw materials entering into articles of every day use are taxed from 40 to 100 per cent. Fine laces come in at 25 per cent while the coarse cotton goods used by the poor are subject to from 50 to 100 per cent duty. Silk velvet is dutied 25 per cent, but on coarse woolen knit goods the poor have to pay from 60 to 85 per cent. The last congress reduced the tax on playing cards to 10 per cent, but left it keeping an embargo on the Word of God. So with hundreds of articles I could name. This democratic congress will reform these things or be sent to their homes and men returned who will."

25 PER CENT ON BIBLES,

I give Mr. McMillin's views at length because they are an able reflection of Speaker Carlisle and his follower's inclinations on the tariff question. On the other hand, Ex Speaker Randall said to me yesterday in answer to a question as to what course he and his supporters would follow:

"I have been interrogated about that a hundred times in ten days past and I have paid little attention to the questions, because these newspaper correspondents report me incorrectly. Now you may say for me explicitly, that I think the democratic party will lose five northern states this year if a reduction of the tariff is attempted this session, and believing this, it must be inferred that I, and all who coincide with my view will act accordingly. That is all I have to say at present."

There are about 125 members in congress who will support Mr. McMillin's views, while Mr. Randall's position will not obtain over 60 democratic adherents, through the 118 republicans would vote with the latter and thus prevent the passage of any reform bill.

How the Tariff on Salt Operates.

Mr. Horr himself, in his most extravagant claims, does not place the wages paid at Saginaw any higher than 25 per cent more than those paid at Goderich. Conceding that claim to be just, although it is in fact ridiculous, let us see how much protection Saginaw would need to pay the enormous sum of $4.42 per day to its laborer at the salt block. On Horr's estimate the wages at Goderich is $3.13 per day, or 29 cents less than at Saginaw. If the laborer at Goderich, therefore, made precisely the same amount of salt per day as his rival at Saginaw 2,240 pounds which he does not begin to do, the employer at Saginaw would need a tariff of 29 cents on 2,240 pounds. He gets $1.80, or $4.51 more than he needs by his own showing.

The Saginaw salt manufacturer gets in protection more than six times the alleged difference between the cost of labor in Canada and Saginaw, which difference is the only reason on which he claims protection.

He pays 29 cents more than his Canadian rival for labor, and he gets $1.80 for it in tariff.

If the tariff really acts as he claims, as an offset to the difference in the price of labor, he had no right of it to $1.81 51 cents for the wages of his [illegible] the duties of the manufacturers of Saginaw on the assurance of the [illegible]

The [illegible] is now becoming cheaper than Canadian salt always, because every cent that no assistance is needed for any reason whatsoever that in spite of whatever difference in the price of labor may exist, there are other advantages which enable the home industry to compete with and even beat the foreign. Jackson Patriot.

Are You Insured?

At the present time, when so many towns without adequate fire protection are being visited by fire, a particularly pertinent question naturally arises in the question of insurance. It has been said, and well said, that a business not worth insuring better be abandoned; and in view of the losses that have lately fallen on both jobbers and retailers, the statement would appear to be irrefutable. A dealer who buys on credit has no right to imperil the property of his creditors, unless he has ample capital to make them good, in case of a loss by fire. It is too frequently the case that the destruction of an uninsured stock falls as heavily on the jobber as on the retailer, the latter forcing his creditors to accept a compromise nine times out of ten. So frequent have been instances of the latter of late that a number of wholesalers of this market have resolved not to extend credit to any considerable amount hereafter to any dealer who neglects to carry an insurance equivalent to his liabilities, in case he would be insolvent should a loss occur. And one house proposed to print the inquiry, "Are You Insured?" at the top of all billheads used, insisting upon this precaution on the part of customers. The mercantile agencies are influenced in no inconsiderable degree, in their classification of ratings, by the amount of insurance carried, and frequently rate an uninsured dealer two grades lower than they would otherwise, especially if he would not be solvent in case of a loss. Aside from the above reasons why a dealer should protect his creditors and seek to keep his credit good, there are abundant reasons why he should protect himself, and not by himself open to the charge of disregarding sound business methods not the least important of which is insurance against fire. Tradesman.

Thousands are living proof of CATARRH every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure, but no doctors had given up and said we could not cure. 75 cents a bottle. Sold by Dr. Crouter

J. MILO EATO

DEALER IN REAL ESTA

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for S

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED F

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Not

Represents the

Best Insurance Compan

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED I

EVERYTHIN

In the line of

Furnitur

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H. C Coope

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CAS

Come and See me before B

THIS IS THE SAM

OLD FO

OF BY-GONE YEARS,

And he is this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hunt him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances a

The Old Reliable Establishment in C

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assort

DRESS GOODS, CLOTH

Boots and Shoes

Hats and Caps, Gents' G

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Car

Groceries, Provisions, Flour &

And you can't guess anything we haven't g

FRESH

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same [illegible] and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private h and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisf

COME AND SEE

Yours,

AMOS F

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 30. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

Is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

BUCKINGHAM & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Rutters' Block, Charlevoix, Mich. A. B. CHRICKSHANK. C. J. GRIER.

[illegible] & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich. 22

[illegible] W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor, Real Estate business promptly attended to. MONEY TO LOAN.

[illegible] A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

[illegible] W. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

[illegible] & KEAT, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne, Mich.

[illegible] F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX.—Capital $50,000. Savings department. Deposits secured by pledge of government bonds, real estate, and approved notes for more than above amount. Money to loan on first mortgages. For sale and exchange. REYNOLDS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7. In the school house. C. F. VANAKEN, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7. A. T. DANIELS, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX HOOGH AND READY FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

A. CHRISTEIN, M. D. Office at the Ingleside.

LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Smith's block, Charlevoix, Mich.

M. PRESTON, M. D., surgeon and physician. Public Physician, Charlevoix, Mich. 10

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

HORACE S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. E.—Border Post No. 113, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

O. E. T.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 357, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

O. G. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293 meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Smith's.

A. BUTLER, President. A. R. TURQUIST, Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money loan on approved paper at reasonable rates. Deposits received. Collections given careful attention and remittances made promptly.

W. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

WARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.

Prices reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON.

Op. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public, and headquarters for the Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CHILDS, Proprietor,

Boyne City, Michigan.

House thoroughly refitted and refurnished.

Grand Rapids Democrat,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 76 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Daily Democrat—By mail, $8.00 per year in advance; postage paid.

Weekly Democrat—$1.50 per year; 75 cents for 6 months; 40 cents for three months—invariably in advance.

THE DEMOCRAT,

Grand Rapids, Mich.

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.

PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed by Peter Sallegood, Mary Sallegood his wife, joining to bar her dower rights in the premises, mortgagee, to Lemuel D. Bartlett, now, mortgagee, bearing date the eleventh (11th) day of January, A. D. 1882, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix, on the twelfth (12th) day of January, A. D. 1882, at 4 o'clock p. m., in liber "4" of mortgages, on page 88. That upon the thirteenth (13th) day of July, A. D. 1883, said mortgage was duly assigned to E. M. Clark, which assignment was recorded in the office of the register of deeds for the county of Charlevoix, on the fourteenth (14th) day of July, A. D. 1883, at nine (9) o'clock a. m., in liber "3" of mortgages, on page 106. On which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of fifty one dollars and forty cents ($51.40), principal and interest, and an attorney fee of twenty-five dollars ($25) provided therein, should any proceeding be had to foreclose the same. And no proceeding at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the sum secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale therein contained, I will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, the premises described in said mortgage, on Saturday, the ninth day of February, A. D. 1884, at ten (10) o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front entrance of Lewis Hall, in the village of Charlevoix, county of Charlevoix, and state of Michigan, the said Lewis Hall being the place for the holding of the circuit court within the said county of Charlevoix. The premises to be sold are described in said mortgage as follows: The north one-half (½) of the southwest one quarter (¼) of the southeast one quarter (¼) of section twenty-eight (28), in township thirty-four (34) north, range seven (7) west, containing twenty acres of land according to the United States survey.

Dated November 14, A. D. 1883.

E. M. CLARK,
Assignee of mortgagee.

CHURCHMAN & CHEEK,
Attorneys for assignee of mortgagee. 18-20

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has purchased the

Ladies' and Children's

Furnishing Goods,

lately owned by Fisher & Inwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and gain as many more as possible. Call and see my stock.

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and see me. West side Bridge St.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best time-piece ever offered for the money. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges.

ROBERT GRUEN,

Boyne Falls, Mich.,

Watch-maker

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry Repaired. 17

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

A few fine sewing machines for sale at ten dollars each. Call soon and have your pick.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED

D. S. WAY.

HALL'S

Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD $100 A CASE IS PAID FOR A CASE WE CURE!

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you are troubled with this distressing disease, ask your Druggist for it, and accept no imitation or substitute. If he has not got it, send to us and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Dr. CROUTER, Agt., Charlevoix. 23

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple vegetable balm that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful, also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing 2c. stamp, Mrs. LAURA A. CO., 12 Bleecker St., N. Y.

O. W. SMITH,

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.

Electro-plating in gold and silver. Any article of jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order. 29

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish,

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at his

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

The highest market price in cash paid for

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

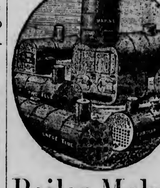
Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades,

WAGON TONGUES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,



Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

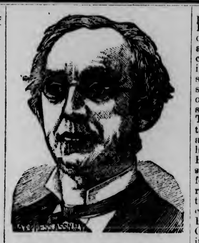
Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds and repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

Buy note paper and envelopes with a view of Charlevoix, at C. R. Wood & Co.'s drug store.



HENRY B. PAYNE,

SENATOR ELECT FROM OHIO.

Henry B. Payne was born November 20, 1810, in Madison county N. Y. and was the son of Judge Elisha Payne, one of the early settlers of that part of the state. He graduated in 1831 at Hamilton theological seminary which his father founded, and afterwards read law with Judge Field formerly of the Virginia court of appeals, and John C. Spencer of Canandaigua. He removed to Cleveland in 1833, and finishing his law studies with the late Sherlock Andrews, was admitted to the bar the next year, and practiced law until 1846. Since that time he has been engaged in various extensive business enterprises, and not long ago was a stockholder and director in eighteen corporations, embracing coal, iron, manufacturing and banking interests.

Mr. Payne was a presidential elector on the Cass ticket in 1848, and the next year was elected to the Ohio senate. In 1851 he was the democratic caucus nominee for U. S. senator, but was defeated by Benjamin F. Wade by a majority of one.

In 1856 Mr. Payne was the democratic candidate for governor of Ohio against Salmon P. Chase, and was defeated by a small majority. He was a warm friend of Stephen A. Douglass and stood by him in the Cincinnati convention of 1856, and again at Charleston in 1860. During the war he was an active and consistent union man. At the Baltimore convention of 1872 he favored the nomination of Horace Greeley.

In 1874 he was elected to congress from the Cleveland district by a majority of 2,500 over Col. R. C. Parsons, of the Golyer contract fame. Mr. Payne was the first democrat from that district and entered congress just in time to take part in the Tilden-Hayes contest. He was chairman of the house committee on the electoral vote, a strong advocate of the electoral commission bill and a member of the commission itself. He was also a member of the committee on banking and currency and the author of the bill for the gradual resumption of specie payments, which was adopted by the democratic caucus, but never enacted.

Mr. Payne will take his seat in the senate March 4th, 1885, concurrent with the inauguration of the next president.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

There are many interesting facts developing in the land grant subsidies that makes very interesting reading, and I shall devote the greater part of the letter to the enlightenment of your readers on the subject. Very few people know the

HISTORY OF THE TEXAS PACIFIC GRANT,

of which there has been lately so much said and written. Away back in '70 the Texas Pacific company secured a grant, which had they built the road would have secured for them nearly 14,000,000 acres of land. But they abandoned the work after petitioning aid in vain from congress, their chief argument before the congressional committee being that there ought to be a southern route to compete with the Union and Central Pacific. C. P. Huntington, the president of the Southern Pacific opposed any aid being given, assuring the committeemen that his was a competing road, and would be built without subsidy. He engendered an anti-subsidy sentiment in the south in order to make it difficult for the southern members to vote for the Texas Pacific subsidy. He insisted that the Texas Pacific grant had already lapsed, and acting upon that basis he pushed forward the Southern Pacific, and built it on what he considered the abandoned grant of the former. If the Texas Pacific was really then alive, he must have been trespassing on other grants. The claim he set up that the Southern Pacific was a competing line to the Central Pacific was a gross fraud, but it sufficed to influence the votes of members against the Texas Pacific subsidy, and the latter company went down while the Southern Pacific pushed on over its ruins.

COLONEL TOM SCOTT

was then at the head of the Texas Pacific, and he made a heroic effort to construct the road on its merits after the government had refused aid, but after several years sustained operations his health gave way and he sold out to Jay Gould. It was then predicted the road would be pushed to rapid completion, but the enterprising Gould had only an eye to speculation, and he in turn sold to Mr. Huntington, for whatever profit he could make, the land grant to which he had no more title than Satan had to the real estate once offered by him from the top of a high mountain.

SOW COMES HUNTINGTON

who slaughtered the Texas Pacific, and who, as long ago as 1876, scouted the idea that it had any rights, and insists that its forfeited estates are his and that the government must claim its own. He holds Jay Gould's order on the government for the 14,000,000 acres, but Huntington begins to see that Gould's order for land is not as good as Gould's check for money.

A SUMMARY OF LAND GRANTS.

There are some queer things about the following list of land grants, the order being just as the house committee on public lands intend to consider the various forfeitures. I give the list in full:

Texas Pacific: grant, 14,309,760 acres; miles of road built, none; land forfeitable all.

Oregon Central: grant, 3,701,700 acres; miles of road built, 197; land earned, 2,000,000 acres; forfeitable, 1,701,700 acres.

Ontonagon and State line; grant, 232,000 acres; miles of road constructed, none; land earned, none; forfeitable all.

California and Oregon: grant, 2,126,526 acres; miles of road built, 197; land earned, 1,454,000 acres; forfeitable, 661,926 acres.

Northern Pacific: grant, 48,215,640 acres; miles of road constructed, at 20 sections per mile, 228; at 40 sections per mile, 197 miles; total, 425 miles; land earned, 10,675,200 acres; forfeitable, 37,539,840 acres.

Atlantic and Pacific: grant, 40,690,650 acres; miles of road built at 20 sections per mile, 80; at 40 sections per mile, 36; total built, 125 miles; land earned, 2,060,800; land forfeitable 38,029,760 acres.

Southern Pacific: grant, 5,511,264 acres, miles of road built, 232; land earned, 2,449,450 acres; forfeitable, 2,061,814 acres.

New Orleans Pacific: grant, 903,218 acres but found to contain 1,500,000 acres; no road built; land all forfeitable.

Atlantic, Gulf and West India Transit Company: grant, 1,170,200 acres; miles of road constructed, 155; land earned 600,000 acres; forfeitable, 571,200 acres.

Pensacola and Georgia: grant 1,178,880 acres; no road constructed; all forfeitable.

Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central: grant, 226,560 acres; no road built and all forfeitable.

Mobile and Girard: grant, 858,644 acres; no road constructed; all forfeitable.

Selma, Rome and Dalton; grant, 611,281 acres; miles of road built, 100; land earned 400,000 acres; forfeitable 211,281 acres.

Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas: grant, 725,760 acres; miles of road constructed, 94; land earned, 360,000 acres; forfeitable, 365,760 acres.

Sioux City and St. Paul: grant, 487,240 acres; miles of road built, 56; lands earned, 316,760 acres; forfeitable 170,540 acres.

From the above it will be seen there are 120,000,000 acres of land granted, of which only 21,000,000 acres have been earned, leaving 100,000,000 acres forfeited. Of this 100,000,000 acres of land 80,000,000 are claimed by three corporations, two of which are in possession and are selling and mortgaging the land

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

THE days of fat silver rates of interest in California seem to be past. The savings banks in San Francisco are lending money on mortgages at 6 per cent, and paying the mort gage tax, and yet they cannot find a market for more than a third of their money.

PENNY people over in St. Louis who have obtained intense enjoyment through the practice of gaying their friends by telephone, will be obliged hereafterth to desist from that amusement. Some victim of a practical joke perpetrated by the use of the wire failed to appreciate its exermcating wit, and instituted suit for damages. Investigation brings to light a law which subjects the sender of a willfully fraudulent or unauthorized telephonic message to the liability of a good round fine in addition to a possible suit for damages sustained.

A WESTERNER correspondent has discovered that President Arthur is passionately fond of the music of the handorgan. If Mr. Arthur is cultivating the handorgan under the impression that he is popularit, will be increased thereby, he is in error. It is not the handorgan, but the cabinet organ which is the distinctively American instrument. Let the President set up a nice, shiny cabinet organ in his parlor, then let him learn, "We shall gather at the river," and "Peek a boo," it he wishes to make himself solid with the masses.

IN 1876 the Empress Eugenie lost a valuable diamond bracelet. It was found in a dirt heap by Cadet, who, without knowing to whom it belonged, carried it to police headquarters. The next morning he was astonished by the receipt of an order to present himself at the Tuileries, and when he did so was still more astonished to receive the public thanks of his sovereign and the promise of a life pension of 600 francs. After one lost her crown the Empress is entitled to put this pension to College out of her private purse, and says that he's dead she is reported as having determined to continue it to his successor in seniority among the stage-drivers.

JUDGE A. W. TOURGEE recently lectured in New York on "The Messiah of the Dudes," in which he said: "The dude was a product of American snobbery. His mission was the aping after aristocratic foreign models, and the general tendency to forget republican principles. It is not enough," this lecturer said, "that an American destines to be a citizen, should go up to the polls and vote. He should live his life through as an American citizen, be ready at any moment and in all seasons to do his political duty without fear or favor. Some people think it enough if they go and deposit a ballot on election day, and then they sit down and let the country take care of itself. This is the dude class, the ornamental but useless class, that let the thieves break in and ruin the government."

FARMER GREENSTEIN, of Fishkill N Y., thinking to play a joke on the village doctor, sent for him in great haste. As the doctor's carriage wheeled into the farmer's yard he asked him to be so kind as to diagnose the patient. The joker led him to the poultry-house, and pointed out a goose with a broken leg. The doctor, without a word, immediately set the leg, but when the directions for the care of the fowl, and, saying he would call again in the morning, stepped into his carriage and drove home. He kept up his attendance until the goose could walk as well as before the accident. In the mean time the farmer was having lots of fun telling his neighbors of the joke. But to cross it possible when the doctor's case is a good round fill. At first the farmer refused to pay the bill, but finally proceeded to the doctor's satisfaction.

MISS FANNY ZIEGLER was a star in the Bellmore troupe, and was supposed to be the favorite of the manager. Miss Ziegler was a pretty girl, and Bellmore took occasion to pay her many attentions to her. Then he suddenly switched off and began to pay attentions to Miss Lillie Lingard, a rival star. Miss Ziegler was furious, and declared that Bellmore should marry her or pay dearly for his conduct. Bellmore refused to do either, and Miss Ziegler sued him for breach of promise. The case was tried in Cincinnati last week, and the jury awarded Miss Ziegler $5,000 damages. Bellmore refused to pay, and Miss Ziegler has issued an execution against his property.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

The Rain.

"I wish it would rain," said Farmer Gray,
As he wiped the sweat from his brow away;
"The corn, ye know, the grass and grain,
Would all be better for rain!" Then
The thrush continues, the crops are spoiled,
And all my labor, my plans are foiled!"
The springs are failing, the brooks run dry—
Well! there still is hope in the by-and-by."

"How I long for rain!" the maiden said,
As she tenderly watched by her brother's bed.
"The fever is burning that blood so rare,
The very cooling drink would be sweet to his lips,
Soon all pallid and still with heat and thirst,
And oh—I plead the cause as a gentle maid,
What I might have cared indeed and joy,
Brought only pain to the fevered boy."

Kind Heaven, send rain, for the thirsty corn
From the forest shows blighter and blighter,
The brook is sadly, it is sorely ailing fast,
And every moment may prove its last,
Of our home's crops and of everything
May be consumed by the fire-king.
And the care-worn husbandman looked to land,
While a silent prayer in our heart also said:

At last it came; the refreshing rain,—
And the withered plants revived again,
The glad birds sang, and the patient boy
In thankful murmurs expressed his joy,
The grain swelled out, the grasses waved,
And the hard-earned home in the woods was saved.
But the end is a murmured that rainy day,
Because they were kept from their outdoor play.
—Kate Lawrence, in Youth's Companion.

Soap-Bubble Secrets.

Probably there is not a reader of Young People who has not at some time amused himself by blowing a pipe and a bowl of soap-suds. Few, however, know all that a bubble can afford in the way of amusement, at a slight outlay. Does my reader know how to make a giant bubble? Has he learned how to employ soap-bubbles as magic-lantern slides? Has he ever seen them used as parlor ornaments? or is a soap-bubble in harness an every-day thing with him? If such is the case, the readers of the bubble described in the present article, and I would add that the experiments will prove interesting and beautiful to oldas well as young.

We must learn how to make the giant bubble. For the king of bubbles—the largest, the longest-lived, and the most beautiful. If you can imagine a bubble two or even three feet in diameter, as it certainly can be measured by hours instead of seconds, glowing with colors five times as gorgeous as those of the rainbow, that bubble, you have just such a one in your mind's eye as you can make for yourself by carefully following directions.

Procure two ounces of palmoil or Castile soap; the former is preferable, if you can get it. Cut it in pieces, and place them in a bottle of water, with a pint of rain water. Shake vigorously until the water has taken up as much soap as it will hold. Your water now what is called a saturated solution of soap. Place it aside, and leave it from twenty-four to thirty hours, until it has settled, either perfectly clear or of a very light pearl-color. If, after that period has elapsed, the solution remains clouded, pour off a little of the water and add more. This time it will soon clear. Next, take a large clay pipe, such as is used by the workmen employed in the sewers. Carefully pour all, straining through flannel, and half a pint of pure glycerine. Cork the bottle, and let it stand for a week or more, that the two liquids may thoroughly mingle; you are now ready to blow a giant bubble.

To blow the very largest bubbles it is necessary to have a larger pipe than is the clay pipe commonly used, though even a pipe will produce large bubbles. A glass funnel five or six inches in diameter, fitted with a piece of rubber tubing, produces enormous bubbles. There is a very inexpensive apparatus used, which admits of putting the finger within the pipe itself. By this means fresh soap solution may be smeared within the pipe, affording renewed nourishment to the bubble, and enabling a single bubble to blow it to an incredible size.

These bubbles are distinguished not only for their large size, but for their beauty and durability. A few bubbles have made by this method to last three or four hours in the open air, and from twenty-four to thirty-six under due precaution being taken that the air of the room be pure, and that no person touch or destroy their fragile lives. But soon let us find out how we may examine the bubble with a far greater ease than that afforded by the naked eye.

Procure a piece of pine board about three inches square. In the middle of the board place a stout wire (free from grit, twenty inches in length, with about six inches distance from the board bend the wire into a circle, the plane of which is parallel with that of the board, and with a diameter of five inches. Bind a bubble of six or seven inches in diameter, and apply the end of the ring; it will not break, and let the pipe go; the pipe you may free it from the bubble. Then placed the board shown on the corners to prevent its falling. Now observe the bubble in its own throat, preferring not to do by means in its helpless entanglement. This bubble had evidently been in the drift some forty-eight hours when found.

The Last Reply.

"Sue here," said an editorial writer, calling the editor-in-chief, "that fellow on the Bayville Scoop has produced an argument that I can not answer. What shall I do with him?"

"Let me see," mused the editor, looking over the argument. "I reckon I'll call him a liar and drop the matter. That's the last reply I have left in my entire array."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Conductor's Reminiscence.

"Yes, sir," continued the "we railroad men have some ventures with the tramps Nearly all of those who beat have money, and prefer to incident to stealing a ride their fare. In an incident ago a beat was killed who person over $500 and pass him to be the proprietor of a ble in California. It is remarkpersistent some can be secretel themselves in the of a 'dead' engine that was in the middle of the freight when discovered refused to and told the conductor that like to see him crawl in there out. A better plan suggself, that of pulling the the tank and drowning them captivation, when about an ice-cold water had been seand all came forth like drowwith the exception of a leg which could not force himself the hole until he had removed ing and the engineer had lubricated with black oil.

"The engineers on a Western were compelled to blow the out quite frequently, owing to water. This is done by opening that lets the water and steam rectly under the cab. While express trains was rushing at night, the engineer found it to 'blow him out,' and up sprang a most unearthly scream with under his feet. Jumping a brake and reversing the engine was quickly stopped, hands rushed back to see the meaning of that unusual cry. the track, torn to pieces by and scalded beyond recognithe remains of a man who stealing a ride on the tank of engine tank, so as to be near of the fire box, and had received a charge of steam and fire by express. Baby is right—I mustn't let these Eastern millionaires get away with me on style."

"Boatloads that are up-to-date never pay fares. They wait train is under headway, and side a car, catch on the ends, leaving themselves comfortable position on a brake; they while away the time by yards and sleeping, and enjoy selves fully as well as those

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

Wring Out, Wild Belles.

Wring out, wild belles, ere it is night,
Or else your hopes in your will are blighted;
Who for the ice will languish,
Wring out, wild belles, with all your might.

Wring on the grease, wring out the stains,
Wring, do try to be, across your path,
While your fair sisters hand in hands,
Wring out, wild belles, and I see more pants.

Wring out the comber of last year,
Reserved in my cranberry wool,
Be careful of its in when you pull,
Wring out, wild belles, the sky be clear

Wring out the socks, wring out the shirt,
Wring out the dye in my best hose,
Wring out my summer underclothes,
Wring out, wild belles, my botanical shirt.

Wring out the plaids, wring out the flannels,
Wring, merry belles, the sponge is clean,
The fence is high, you are in a merry way,
Wring out, wild belles, and on them go more.

* * * * * * *

The wash is done, and on the line
The clothes are bounding, shirt and shark,
Where they will hang long after dark,
While the wild belles softly recline

Upon the sofa rich with plush,
And little of this would I've raised,
They do not keep the social hush,
As through the cushies it makes a rush.

Their friends at last have said "adieu,"
And fled in behalter the clothes in
That some tramp before them had been,
And left the sofa and took the sun.

The Women of Spain.

A correspondent of the Globe Democrat, writing from Spain, speaks of the women of that country as follows: "Beautiful? A man whose blood runs red within his veins must see beauty elsewhere, but he has never felt the perfect charm of woman's womanliness until he has met face to face with the melting brightness of those matchless orbs which none but Spain's 'dark-glancing' maidens bear."

Wished She Had Been Born in India.

"Oh, dear," sighed Vereker, as he laid down the paper; "how I wish I had been born in India."

"Why?" said Mrs. Vereker.

"Because I should have been a Hindoo, and, in the nature of things, you would have been a Hindoo, too."

"Oh, you're sorry you didn't marry a Hindoo, are you?" snapped the lady.

"Very well, so am I; and you may go off to India, or Halifax, for aught I care, and find you one, Hindoo, indeed!" and she sniffed indignantly.

"I didn't mean that, my dear," said Mr. Vereker submissively. "I want no wife but you. I wish you had happened to be a Hindoo lady, that's all."

"So that I might go and burn myself on your funeral pyre when you died? Not much and don't you feel yourself.

"I've a plan worth two of that," and Mrs. Vereker pursed up her lips and looked unutterable things.

"Well, can't you tell me what you do mean?—that is, if you know yourself, which I very much doubt."

Without a word of retort, patient Mr. Vereker took up the paper he had had down and read from it as follows:

"A single piece of linen or silk cloth, from five to six yards in length and a yard and a half wide, forms the whole dress of the women in India." Here Mr. Vereker lowered the paper and looked at his wife.

"That's just like your stinginess, Mr. Vereker," said she, as soon as she got breath enough to answer him. "You'd like to see me going round in a pocket handkerchief, I suppose, so you'd have more money for pipes and things—but I wouldn't dress in one piece of goods like that for any man—unless," she added, suddenly, "the material were camel's hair."—The Judge.

Two Kinds of Girls, and the Lesson Therefrom.

"What we need," said a gentleman in private conversation, "is concentration and the right application of it in the right direction." The person who says so is a manufacturer of art furniture, and it was by mere accident that he took as an illustration the example of his fore woman in the embroidery room.

"She is a stout German-American girl, with a heavy face and a dimple from which always attends to business. I have known her ever since she was a young girl doing coarse work for an art embroidery concern. We use it to send her pieces to do, and she finally came to us altogether, because we could be better served. She has been in demand, personally sought after by employers ever since she began, for she spends her whole strength in her work. Her dress is a tremply plain, and she does not care for gayeties. In fact, she manifests little or no interest to prevent her from attending to the matters of first importance.

"On the other hand," he continued, "we have, off and on, in our embroidery room a pretty girl who will never amount to anything. Her ideas of life are misshapen. She is a clever enough embroideress, but she works halfheartedly, and only when she feels like it. She won't undertake this piece and says she can't do that. She is always asking favors and doing little fancy gallantries that are harmless enough, but distracting to business. Her conduction is dress. She really is, in her way, a dyke person. She is neat and clothes herself in good taste, with no display, but in a style far above her condition in life. Not a lady does she see in the street but she looks at her dress and manners, and even listens to her speech, to see what she can pick up to improve herself. The result is, the poor girl has cultivated sensibilities which make it unlikely that she will ever be contented with any home that might be offered her, and she has no strong-minded inspirations to independent prosperity. Reducing her energy to unproductive channels, the girl has made herself useless and unhappy. She is not thinking of how he work appears, but of how she herself appears, and tries to gain admiration and ingratiate herself personally when what we want from her is not pretty manners, but a good piece of embroidery."—Boston Courier.

Corsets and Age.

Why have women persisted for generations in wearing an instrument of torture theoretically condemned by the wisdom of ages? To listen to male and female sages one might suppose that hundreds of years ago women had suddenly been seized with a desire to emulate the wasp in form, and had save more or less successfully been, by dint of ligatures, endeavoring to merely cut herself in two.

With all due deference to the rational and hygienic in dress, I would suggest that the rule is more methied in the nadness of the light-hearing woman than this. If anybody will take the trouble to examine the corset of a fashionable staymaker, such as are odd in first-rate houses for the modest sum of £5, the inquirer will find that, saving perhaps a some what exaggeratedly slender waist, this article of dress follows precisely closely the beautifully rounded form of a young woman of from 20 to 25.

Now it very frequently happens that at the time when a fashionable girl is expected to make her debut in society nature has, for various reasons, denied her the various items necessary to make up that indispensable requisite for a ball-room, a presence. A pretty figure. The fashionable corset is, therefore, had recourse to, and with this useful foundation to build upon an artistic dress-maker can do wonders to supplement nature.

Later on, when the delicate girl has developed into the finished matron, with flaccid muscles and a decided tendency to infinistraction of outline, what so useful to the well-made corset into which the somewhat dilapidated figure is run as into the mold? Torture it may be, but she has her reward. Be not her friends say of her, "How wonderfully Mrs. Smith keeps her figure?"

It is useless to hope that the present generation of society women will tear off their corsets and exhibit themselves to a wondering world; our hope lies in the future. While Lady Harberton has been crying in the wilderness, the leading female lawn-tennis players have dressed for themselves a dress—pretty, feminine, graceful, and healthy. Those who have watched the free and graceful movements of young English girls on the tennis-lawn may hope that the time may come when the best of them will no longer, like Meredith's delightful little Cornish tomboy, sigh, "I'm afraid I'm a girl. I used to keep hoping I wasn't;" but will be content with being happier but in an age when beating, swimming and tennis will have so beautified and developed their figures as to enable them to laugh at and discard the aid of Messrs. Worth & Co. To quote once more from Meredith, "The subsequent immense distinction between boys and girls is less one of sex than education. They are drilled into being hypocrites."—New London Times.

England's Bad Weather.

You learn in England to realize the force of the Shakespearean quotation: "For the rain it raineth every day." Meteorologically the weather is always suggesting that strings are at very loose ends in the upper regions. It rains one hour, then ceases, and seems to brood for the next, as if considering how to bring down more moisture at any moment. Then it will rain hard for two hours, stop one and rain the next. This it does week in and week out. Then the clouds will soft for days. They will not let the sun shine, but will shed a drop. What they want is to catch you out of doors without your umbrella. But you are not to be caught. You take your umbrella and find it a useless incumbrance. No Englishman goes out without his umbrella.

But the American gets out of patience. So, without his umbrella, he will venture and be caught. An ugly black mass of cloud takes up a position directly over his head. The sky begins to pleach does not seem more than forty-five feet high. These clouds do not pour themselves all out at once. What they want is to entice you a long way from home. They send down a patter of a drizzle for a minute or two. The drops seem to say: "Oh, come on; you did not know you were out without your umbrella. But don't go home, we shall soon be through." So they delude you with the impression that they will stop directly. They keep you indoored with the idea until they are well understood and then all the windows in heaven over England are opened and it pours. Just before you get home, not to the sun, and your heels churning muddy water out of your boots at every step, the shower is all at once tone down into the mildest of drizzles. The clouds break away and their red-faced tormentor-looking English sun bursts through.—Providence Journal.

Genius.

Alexander Hamilton once said to an intimate friend: "Men give me some credit for genius. All the genius I have is just this: when I have a subject on hand I study it profoundly. Day and night it is before me. I exhaust it in all its bearings. My mind becomes pervaded with it. Then the effort which I make is what the people call the fruit of genius. It is the fruit of labor and thought."

The Capital Fifty Years Ago.

A resident of Sterling, Ill., has sent to the Lancaster Pa Intelligencer the copy of a letter, as follows, addressed to his father by the Hon. William Hiester, once a Keystone statesman in Congress from Lancaster county:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15, 1832. MR. GABRIEL HIESTER—Dear Sir: As was anticipated, and as you have, of course, been advised through the public papers, the removal of the deposits has already elicited the attention of both branches of Congress. From the skirmishing that has already taken place we have reason to expect hard fighting in the chief encounter. Notwithstanding the opposition to the President and his Secretary of the Treasury's course toward the bank includes by far the greatest weight of talent in both houses, yet I am of opinion that there is a majority, at least in our House, ready to say that the President has done right, and that the bank must be put down. You have no idea how the two members are drilled into the ranks by the dunkers and Van Buren drill sergeants.

During last week we had an amusing farce with Col. David Crockett. It was announced at the particular request of Davy. Mr. Hackett would appear on the boards in his favorite character of Nimrod Wildfire in the play called "The Kentuckian; or, a Trip to New York." This brought out a house full to overflowing. At 7 o'clock the Colonel was escorted by the manager through the crowd to a front seat reserved for him. As soon as he was recognized by the audience they made the very house shake with huraahs for Col. Crockett: "Go ahead!" "I wish I may be shot." Music, but as have Crockett's March." After some time the curtain rose, and Hackett appeared in a hat covered with a wild-cat skin and long tail attached, who, after bowing to the audience, turned toward Crockett and bowed repeatedly. The compliment was reciprocated by the Colonel, to the no small amusement, noise and gratification of the spectators. The play then went on, through the whole of which were used the phrases attributed to the Colonel: "I am a full team," "I can whip my weight in wildcats," "I am half horse, half steamboat," etc. Really, it was the greatest farce imaginable to see a grave Congressman the buffoon of such an audience, and he appeared to enjoy the sport very much. I have not yet got acquainted with him, but his appearance and good conduct in the House are good and altogether correct. In haste, I am, sir, yours truly,

WILLIAM HIESTER.

A Stage Story.

Boucicault tells a good story which has never yet appeared in print. The following incident occurred at Jacksonville, Fla., and the cowboy actor-manager says it suggested an entirely new idea in dramatic construction, which he proposes to avail himself of some day. The curtain had just gone down on the third act of "The Colleen Bawn" when a tall, professorlike individual advanced to the front of one of the boxes, and propounded the following unlooked-for conundrum to the audience:

"Ladies and gentlemen, sir, is it that Shakspeare is the only real dramatist the world ever produced?"

As nobody replied, the tall man went on earnestly:

"Is it because of his marvelous knowledge of human nature, or his wonderful command of language and expression? Not at all. Other writers have equaled him in these respects, but the immortal bard is the only dramatist who recognized the evident fact that in real life vice is not punished and virtue is not rewarded, as the sickly, sentimental playwrights of to-day would have us believe. There is no last act mukeup all around everbody getmarried business in his plays. Look at 'Othello.' That's the way matters wind up in real life. Look at 'Romeo and Juliet.' No happy denouement about them. My advice to the public, therefore, is to never sit a play out. Always leave before the last act, just when the trouble, villainy and heart-breaking is at its worst, and you will get the real realism and naturalness."

"Go out! Go on!" said the audience, which seemed to be profoundly impressed with his reasoning.

"I have nothing more to say," continued the critic, putting on his hat, "except that the curtain will be rung up in a minute. I move that we now adjourn."

And Boucicault says that when the curtain went up he was disinfounded to observe that there was not a soul left in the house.—San Francisco Post.

Too Many Dogs Spoil the Coat.

The instinct of Newfoundland dogs to save a drowning person has been something painfully tested by an unlucky Frenchman. He was walking in the country with a friend who possessed a magnificent Newfoundland, and incautiously questioned the truth of the animal's sagacity. The dog's master, vexed at the slur cast on his favorite, gave his friend a push and knocked him into a shallow river. Turk immediately sprang in, and, seizing one of the tails of the innocent man's coat, commenced to swim for land. The hurt made another Newfoundland trot by, and along the other side of the river saw the affair, and also came to the rescue. Dog number two seized the other tail of the coat and wish it to swim back to his master. Turk held fast and struggled for his side, and the owner of the coat cried in vain for help. At last the coat gave way and each Newfoundland swam proudly home with a piece of cloth in his mouth, so that Turk's master was obliged to plunge in himself to save his friend.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Feb. 7, 1884.

Business Announcements.

The Eagle Clothing Store.

I have got the Eagle, a genuine North American, measuring seven feet from tip to tip. Come one, come all, and see him; and while you are in the store don't forget to price my stock. Overcoats, Heavy Underwear, Mackinaws and all other winter goods closing out at cost, and as my stock of clothing is getting low in a good many styles, I am closing them out, getting ready to put in a large stock this spring. Don't forget, while in town, to call and see the great North American Eagle, and anything you may need in my line, be price F, for I know I can save you money. CHARLES W. MILLER.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of J. MILO EATON.

To avoid Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, and other complaints resulting from the use of old and stale groceries, try Upright, Emrey & Co's new supplies.

If you are sick of old and stale groceries, give Upright, Emrey & Co. a trial. They receive fresh goods every Tuesday.

FOR SALE. A second hand portable saw mill, with engine and boiler complete, for sale cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

Cash! Cash! Cash! Bring your Tow, Wool, and Produce to Upright, Emrey & Co.'s and get the Cash for them.

For Sale. Two or three good horses for sale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

Attention Comrades! Baxter Post No. 10 meets next Monday evening. Turn out.

Upright, Emrey & Co. received a large supply of Groceries Tuesday.

One hundred and fifty suits of clothes at wholesale, at E. M. Clark's.

Headquarters for Yarns, Germantowns, etc., at E. M. Clark's.

For bargains in Gloves and Mittens, go to E. M. Clark's.

The best 50-cent Tea in town will be found at H. See's.

Ladies' Ulsters and Circulars, at E. M. Clark's.

E. M. Clark is bound to undersell them all.

Fifty Overcoats at wholesale, at E. M. Clark's.

Dry goods—a fresh assortment at H. See's.

A genuine article in Butter at H. See's.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day, for the week ending yesterday. Above zero in all cases unless marked with a (-).

	7 A.M.	2 P.M.
Thursday	15	30
Friday	8	23
Saturday	18	14
Sunday	6	12
Monday	9	17
Tuesday	7	24
Wednesday	11	18

Provision Market.

Retail prices in consumers' ox, corrected every Wednesday evening by UPRIGHT, EMREY & CO., general dealers:

FLOUR, per bbl, $6.00, $7.00, and $8.00.
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $4.50.
CORN MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, $1.80.
HAY, per ton, $8@9.
OATS, per bu, 30c.
GROUND FEED, per cwt, $1.50.
APPLES, per bu, $1.25.
POTATOES, per bu, 40@50c.
ONIONS, per bu, 80c.
BUTTER, per lb, 28@30c.
EGGS, per doz, 30@35c.
LARD, per lb, 12@15c.
HAMS, per. Shoulders, 12½c.
SALT PORK, per. Beef, 8c.
CHEESE 20c.
WATER WHITE OIL, 25c.
FARMERS' PRODUCE in good demand; oats and potato's wanted.

Fresh Meats from the Market.

MEAT, beef steak, 20@25c; pork steak, 20c; 12 cts; mutton, 8@12c; sausage, 12c; hams, 12c; shoulders, 12c.
TALLOW, 4@5c.

Local News Brevities.

Additional locals on eighth page.

A. R. Upright is quite disposed to day.

Valentines, a fine display at Dr. Crouter's.

When you have a little spare change remember the printer.

Don't fail to read Crouter's new card on the first page.

Numerous school children are suffering with chicken pox.

"For heaven's sake, keep mum until after the JOURNAL comes out."

A slight change in time was recently made on the G. R. & I. road.

Extensive repairs are being made to the schooner Sea Gem this winter.

Two cords of green block wood is too much for one small horse to draw.

H. B. Chapman, of Bay Springs, gave the JOURNAL a brief call on Monday.

Archy Dougherty, of Elk Rapids, visited friends in Charlevoix this week.

Rev. Mr. Morgan intends to hold a series of meetings at the church in Atwood.

E. W. Fuller, of Cheboygan, made himself visible on our streets last Saturday.

Mrs. J. T. Iddings started last Thursday afternoon for a visit to friends in Albion.

Ten names added to our subscription list in four days last week. And still there's room for more.

A little child of Mr. Geo. Wrisley has been quite sick for a week past, but hopes are entertained of its recovery.

There are numerous complaints that the Weekly Free Press failed to reach its readers in this vicinity last week.

W. F. Palmiter of the Enterprise, gave the JOURNAL a call yesterday. He says the paper will be out next week.

H. B. Chapman's new 16-rod duck at Bay Springs will be built entirely of cedar. He intends it shall be built to stay.

A social wherein gentlemen will be the entertainers, is one of the attractions of the M. E. church in the near future.

It has been decided to locate the new Barnard church on the land of Geo. Anderson, opposite Wm. Clark's residence.

An old horse took a tumble on Bridge street last Friday, and for a time it looked as if she would have to be dragged off.

If any of our readers know of a man wanting a first class farm we can't their attention to one advertised in another column.

Members of the G. A. R. should not forget the regular meeting of the post next Monday evening. A full attendance is desired.

Have you seen Upright, Emrey & Co's new oyster advertisement? It's daisy. If you don't see it anywhere, ask them to show it to you.

The meeting at Black's school house last Sunday is reported as pleasant and profitable. Preaching next Sunday at 2 o'clock. Turn out.

"Eagle Clothing House" is the trade mark adopted by Gen. Miller, the popular clothier. See his announcement in another column.

H. B. Chapman will build a sixteen-rod duck in front of his Bay Springs property, to accommodate the increasing shipments from that live little town.

Joseph Pappin's cow broke through the ice near Nicholls' mill last Monday, and was drowned before she could be rescued. It will be a serious loss to Mr. Pappin.

The Ironton correspondence contains items of importance to the business interests of that burg. They evidently mean to do something up there next summer.

J. G. Peterson, of Ironton, passed through Charlevoix on Tuesday with a load of new goods. The iron company evidently don't sell all the supplies for that vicinity.

The enterprising Elk Rapids Progress gives names and a brief description of the character represented by those in attendance at a masquerade given in that place recently.

Charlevoix is at present without a photograph gallery. A good workman would get the trade which now goes to Petoskey and other towns outside. Who will establish one here.

The Algonah will not attempt to cross the straits again this winter. In fact she will have to be taken to Detroit for repairs before she runs at all, as she is now in the ice, helpless, with her machinery broken.

C. R. Bellinger has erected the necessary machinery to cut and polish agates, jaspers, and other stones, and preparing as fast as possible for the summer trade. This seems to be a growing industry here.

An oyster supper and donation was held by Banks last Friday evening, several Charlevoix people being in attendance. The profits of the party were about $42, which were given to the Rev. Mr. Morgan.

We devoted a few minutes on Tuesday to a visit to the primary department of the school. Miss Severance has the management of 50 to 60 little folks, some but little more than babies and yet she maintains good order. Many of them are progressing rapidly in their studies

J. Milo Eaton lost a valuable horse last Monday in the death of one of the cream colored matched team. It had been sick several days with some manner of throat disease, and remedies applied failed to give relief.

In Geo. Millers clothing store is a fine specimen of our representative bird, the American Eagle, mounted by Mr. E. B. Beauvois. It was caught in a fox trap by Mr. B. and measured 7½ feet from tip to tip of the wings.

We have received from E. S. Bartholomew, Westfield, N. Y., circulars advertising new varieties of early and late potatoes, said to be very productive, and having excellent qualities for home use or for market. Price list sent on application.

The Sunday evening service at the school house will commence at 7 o'clock hereafter instead of 6:30 as in the past. This change is made to accommodate those whose regular supper hour interferes with the prompt attendance at service.

It is reported that a 32 calibre bullet has been found in the person of young Bennett who was murdered in Chandler recently. This would indicate the use of some other firearms than the one which carried buckshot, and may upset the theory of suicide.

To answer the many questions concerning the latest revised engraving of Charlevoix, we will state that the work is completed and the electrotypes are duly expected to arrive. We have on our books quite a number of orders for printing waiting for them.

That was a fine trout M. J. Stockman brought to the JOURNAL last Friday, saying, "See here; see what Iddings sent you." It weighed nearly nine pounds, and was can ght with a spear in their fish-house on Round Lake. Thanks, gentlemen; the favor will be remembered.

"Kyle's mammoth opt graphicon" consisting of lectures, canvas views, music, etc., is advertised for three exhibitions at the opera house next week, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings. It is under the auspices of the Good Templars lodge, and for their interest should be well patronized.

The Badger State Banner published at Black River Falls, Wis., comes to hand enlarged to 56 columns, and in better form and make up than heretofore. Its county news and correspondence shows that it is appreciated outside of its own town. On the whole it is an excellent local and family newspaper.

M. J. Stockman is credited with being the most successful winter fisherman in Charlevoix. The trout brought to this office last Friday shows proficiency in the art of spearing, for it was speared within two inches of the gills, two times of the spear passing entirely through the body, one each side of the back bone.

"Box socials" are having a big run around Newport and Flat Rock. One young lady's lunch at the latter place was bid off at $5. Evening News. Cannot the managers of church socials in Charlevoix get up something of this kind, to aid in raising funds for the church or Sunday school? It would be new to a large number who are spending their first winter here.

The report of the Ironton schools in another column shows the condition of that school under the superintendency of Mr. J. M. Harris. It is expected that this report will continue from month to month, and it will then be possible to see who makes the most progress. If any other schools in the county desire to make a similar report, the space will be granted.

The lecture of F. W. Smith on Tuesday evening was interesting, especially to those who know the facts from experience. The house was crowded, and the attention of every person was fixed on the speaker. Many of his illustrations and stories were laughable. The G.A.R. may feel proud of the lecture, and especially the fact that it netted them about $25.

A letter from Jas. C. Hambleton, now in Manitou, Colo., says that 6 degrees below is the coldest weather they have had. He is in a region where soda and iron springs are plentiful, he says, and it is an excellent place for the seeker after health. Notwithstanding the natural attractions of the place, Mr. H. still finds a desirable to have the JOURNAL with him regularly.

"The meetings being held at the M. E. church are a simple effort to emphasize the regular services; and so far there has been a pleasant realization of the desire of all. The Sabbath School is a very pleasant part of the work and the laborers are experiencing fair success. The sermons for the few weeks to come may be anticipated. All who can come, will be welcome."

The T. T. F. F. club have organized and elected the necessary officers, and will give a select party at the Bridge Street house every two weeks, the next one being to morrow evening. The following are the officers: President, Dr. Preston; vice president, D. M. Chambers; secretary, A. F. Draper; treasurer, Fred Smith; executive committee, D. M. Chambers, Fred Smith, and Ben Weaver.

Mr. Robert Bowls was arrested and confined last Saturday on a charge of forging his brother's name to a note of $40 and selling the same to R. S. Hubbard, of Boyne. It is reported that other parties in Bay Springs, Petoskey and Charlevoix hold similar paper. He is a young man of fine appearance, and has an education and capacity to honor any legitimate calling if he chose to use it.

L. D. Bartholomew writes from Tampa Bay, Fla., that he does not like the place, but will soon go to Orlando, and afterward to Port Ornage. He was in one fishing party where they were compelled to camp out all night, and where alligators were numerous. At Bartow he bought a lot, and sold his chance for $50 before the papers were executed. Thermometer, 80° in the shade.

Support home industries. Some do it by getting trusted at home and sending out of town to other dealers the little cash they can raise. Others do it by sending abroad for machinery or material that can be manufactured just as cheap at home. Leading business men of Charlevoix are guilty of the latter, and yet they assert they are doing all they can to build up the town. Home talent in all cases should be given the preference, especially if the cost be no greater.

Be careful how your children handle green cards. Our little Mabel swallowed enough poison from one she had put in her mouth, to make her seriously ill for a few hours Tuesday evening, and not from any in one of the Detroit papers stated that a child in Reading was almost fatally poisoned by drinking some milk in which a green colored milk ticket had remained a few hours. In our case, Dr. Carlstein rendered prompt assistance, and prevented serious results.

Mr. Harmon Wilson, manager of O. D. Wood's farm, 3 miles from Norwood, gave the JOURNAL a call on Monday. He has the care of 15 horses, 36 head of cattle, and 125 sheep, besides the exercising of a $1000 stallion, and a four-year-old colt that trots a mile inside of four minutes. Mr. Wood has 300 acres in one tract, said to be the best equipped with buildings, implements, etc., of any farm in Antrim county. Its provisions for watering and caring for stock is as complete as a man could wish.

A few weeks ago, in a conversation with a business man of this county, the question of the value of advertising was brought up. The b. m. said he had little faith in advertising; it did not pay in my such proportion as some represented, and he had almost determined to take his cards out of all newspapers. A few minutes later he admitted the value of advertising by denouncing in strong terms the policy of local newspapers in accepting all vertisements from a rival town. The well worded enticing announcements of Petoskey deniers draws away from Charlevoix a trade that legitimately belongs to the latter and thereby works an injustice to the home dealer, he says. Now does not this benefit the Petoskey advertiser? Would he advertise if it did not pay him? And Charlevoix dealers have a remedy. Give them back the same courtesies. If you have an article you can sell cheap, say so; and when you get a customer who legitimately belongs to Petoskey make prices to him that will bring him again, as well as his neighbors. To claim to fear such a competition is to admit your own weakness. To characterize advertising as a useless expense, or a charity to the printer, is to prove that you are not progressive, or that you are slow and don't want to be disturbed. A few live men have found that it pays to advertise.

An enterprise of great interest to the people of this section has been undertaken by the well known publishing firm of H. R. Page & Co., of Chicago. They contemplate bringing out a large and elegantly bound work, entitled "The Traverse Region Historical and Descriptive." The work will give the history of this region from the earliest days and will be profusely illustrated with views sketched by artists employed for the purpose. The history of this county, its towns, villages, churches, schools, industries, general progress, and graphical sketches etc., will constitute a part of the work. Gentlemen are engaged upon this work will visit various portions of the county, gathering information and attending to the general interest of the enterprise. Mr. Geo. B. Pratt, one of the gentlemen engaged upon the work is now in this village, looking after its interests. It is an enterprise that should receive general cooperation, that the village and county may be properly represented.

Mr. E. S. Bartholomew, who will be remembered by many of our citizens as trying to establish a canning factory here last summer, has by means lost faith in our village, that he is still unable to purchase the land he desires to transform into a small fruit and vegetable farm. We have seen a letter recently, written in a vein of disappointment at not being able to get a foothold here. He wishes to bring a small colony of farmers and gardeners with him and settle permanently. His product will not enter into competition with any industry ready established here, for he intends to erect the necessary buildings and machinery to prepare his goods for the wholesale market, thus creating a better market for those products we now have. He is willing to pay a fair price for any land that will suit him and a good price for the right location. If there are parties in Charlevoix, or anywhere on Pine Lake with ten acres or upwards of land suitable for the purpose, they may find a ready purchaser by addressing E. S. Bartholomew, Westfield, N. Y. Come of Charlevoix, here is a chance for a new industry to our business interests. Will you have it here? If so you sell land at a price to permit it to come and settle and establish a colony of farmers and fruit growers.

Encouraging Words.

When a man is struggling against odds in defense of what he believes to be right, truth, and justice, and when the surroundings and prospects not always the brightest, it is then like the following give hope and inspire newed strength to continue the struggle, they cheer the laborer, and show him that his labors are appreciated. The tendency of the masses is in the right direction indicated, and we shall endeavor to do our part well until victory shall be won.

Editor Charlevoix Journal:

The JOURNAL comes to a number of us Boyne City people, and we like it. We like it for its principles, for its straightforward manly course, for it for its courage and hope, and to battle for human rights and liberty in this village, looking after its interests. It is an enterprise that should receive general cooperation, that the village and county may be properly represented.

Ironton.

Four loads of the youth of Charlevoix registered at the Pioneer House on Sunday.

A large supply of new goods at the company store last Saturday. Business good under the management of Geo. Jones and his force of clerks.

The Pine Lake Iron Co. will erect another stack the coming spring, of a capacity equal to the present, after which the weekly product will be 600 tons.

Mr. Noyes, proprietor of the Pioneer House, is mentioned in connection with the management of the new hotel to be built here this season.

Store keeper Jones, of the iron company, has recovered from his recent illness.

Jas. Fried has gone to Cheboygan to procure men and teams for the iron company.

Mrs. A. B. Noyes, of the Pioneer house, has returned from her visit to friends in Norwood.

Professor Harris, of the educational bureau, made a flying trip to Charlevoix Sunday evening, to attend church, we understood him to say. We admire his religious zeal, but your correspondent has doubts whether that was the only motive the professor had in scouring the town here for the most fiery steed. ARGUS.

Hayes.

Splendid winter weather.

During the past week, was the cold est weather experienced here for quite a number of years.

A surprise party at Rev. B. W. Whitman's last Monday evening.

Several cases of diptheria in the township.

Mrs. N. Liddle has been very sick the past week; but is now recovered.

The people of Fair Grove contemplate holding an exhibition soon, the proceeds to be used for church purposes.

Rev. C. F. Van Auken is holding a revival meeting at Lake View.

Mrs. Walker, of Barnard, was visiting her sister, Mrs. Mary Baker, last Sunday.

Mr. Albert Norman's mother is very sick with congestion of the lungs.

Our farmers are about all engaged in getting out logs, wood, etc. Every thing is passing off quietly in Hayes, and plans are being laid for the spring work. ZERE.

Ironton School.

Report of the senior department of the Ironton school for the month ending January 31, 1884:

NAMES.	ARITHMETIC	GEOGRAPHY	GRAMMAR	HISTORY	ORTHOGRAPHY	WRITING	GENERAL AV.
Lettering Bay	100	100	90	100	95	100	97
Nellie Noyes	78	87	92	88	90	100	89
Geneva Bay	100	100	98	93	90	100	97
Kittie Smith	96	95	91	78	85	97	90
Anna Masterclear	76	90	92	69	85	75	81
Frank Manney	88	98	91	72	85	98	88
Frank Hammond	80	85	75	75	80	85	80
Eddie Bird	90	95	90	75	95	90	90
Clara Shivery	90	78	98	75	90	85	86
Harvey Woodier	95	99	95	85	93	95	93
Phebe Hoffman	95	85	90	75	90	85	87
Nellie King	100	100	97	95	98	97	98
Hiram Brock	85	90	90	78	90	95	88
Maria Vought	90	100	97	80	95	90	93
Essie Kees	90	75	80	75	90	90	83
Eddie Jackson	70	90	85	60	85	75	77
Lucy McIntyre	95	80	92	75	90	90	87
Bewail Hammond	100	88	95	75	90	85	89
Freddie Hammond	91	90	90	75	90	85	87
Katie Bonner	69	78	80	67	75	85	76
Amos Bay	70	80	90	60	85	90	79
Frank Williams	84	90	90	70	90	85	85
Mary Bird	90	95	90	75	90	85	87
Warren Woodier	100	100	97	90	95	95	96
Lizzie Goldsmith	90	95	90	75	90	85	87
Nettie Woodier	85	98	90	80	95	90	90
Walter Bird	80	85	85	70	85	90	83
Jennie Meginnes	95	90	90	80	90	85	88
Nellie Hammond	95	70	90	80	85	90	85
Caroline Bulsk	90	95	90	85	90	90	90

J. M. HARRIS, Teacher.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the JOURNAL by EMMETT BROS., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Feb. 5th, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

George L. Williams and wife to Amelia L. Stokes, lots 1, 26 22 7, $800.

Oliver P. Stone and wife to Isabel Lyness to e ½ 2 33 4, $1500.

Eliza Wheat and Martha Carr to D. C. Nettleton, lot 3, 13 34 8, $700.

Jane Morgan to William T. Addis, s ½ of n w ¼ 10 32 5, $1000.

Notes and News.

Speaker Carlisle is a total abstainer, and Mrs. Carlisle is a strong advocate of temperance.

The Grand Rapids Leader is making a warm fight against the ale by butchers and others of stuffeven poultry. It specimens of poultry lying for hours and days in the market, much of the time in a temperature above freezing, and also the hoosy air cooling entrails and full crops at 12 to 15 cents per pound. Kalamazoo Telegraph.

That wonderful panacea for all the ills of the working class of this country, effectionately called protection, failure keep feed the promises of its friends, that it shall keep the wheels of our great industries unclogged and the wages of the operatives in them at a high figure. The facts in the case show that it neither opens the mills nor the shops. Manufacturing concerns are closing down by the wholesale, and wages of laborers are being cut down from 10 to 25 per cent all over the country. Elk Rapids Progress.

Secretary Chandler has made an official report to the senate which shows that up to date last past, there were 92 vessels in our navy. Of these 36 were built before the war, and 41 since the close of hostilities. The original cost of the 92 vessels amounted to $80,886,612.92 while the repairs on the same 36 since 1865 amounted to $41,288,822.71 making the total cost of our navy amount to $87,175,435.63. This is a big sum to pay for a navy that even democratic rule would fear. About $50,000,000 of the above sum went into the pockets of Roosevelt and Beach and their allies.

When the republicans, some years since, found a treasury so overflowing and taxation so burdensome, they did not scream, mercy, cry aloud, but set to work to reform the abuses, to effect a horizontal reduction of fifty per cent in the tariff schedule. The reduction in the tariff effected by the recent change made in accordance with the report of the tariff commission, does not exceed five per cent. The democratic house can, therefore, go five per cent further and not "disturb the business interests" of the country as greatly as a protectionist republican congress did without compunction. Free Press.

There is nothing like a supreme court decision to upset the established order of things. The supreme court of Indiana has just decided that a mortgage given by husband and wife on real estate owned jointly to secure the husband's notes given for borrowed money is null and void. The decision holds that the wife cannot become a surety for her husband, and that a husband cannot encumber an estate in land in which his wife is joint owner. The effect of the decision, it is said, will be to annul a large proportion of all mortgages executed in Indiana since sept. 28, 1881, the date of the law the court has just reversed. Chicago Herald.

"I am not anxious to have the duty taken off lumber," said Congressman Julius Rosenzweig of Grand Rapids; "I am interested in the lumber business, and I suppose the natural desire of everyone is to protect his own. Frankly, however, I shall not oppose any bill placing lumber on the free list. I don't think it would ruin my business, and as I owe no preference to the tariff reform issue I feel bound to stand on that platform. How can I ask to have the duty removed from other things and keep on keeping it on lumber? It would be very inconsistent. One argument made in favor of placing lumber on the free list is that we are producing our supply too fast, and great quantities of lumber are being cut now at a loss, simply to keep up appearances. I don't believe that one single stick of timber has been cut in Michigan and sold by any firm at a loss during the last ten years. If there was no money in it they would drop it quick. I know I should. After all, I don't think it will make much difference to my business, or in the trade generally, if lumber is placed on the free list, and I shall vote in favor of it."

In a recent interview Congressman Rousseau, of Grand Rapids, said: "Conkling once said, 'Anybody can carry Michigan,' meaning a Republican; but that time has passed. Anybody cannot carry Michigan now. Certainly the Republicans cannot do it on a high protection platform. I think that the Democratic cyclone that swept over the state last fall has come to stay. I look to see our party holding its own and making increased gains next fall. Of course, if nothing is done in congress to reduce the tariff it will lose very much. I think we will have a tariff bill very soon, however—a bill that will please the people of Michigan."

When republicans boast of the immense surplus in the treasury and of the rapidity with which the national debt has been paid they are simply bragging of the outrageous manner in which they are taxing the people of this country, and no one can dispute that the dominant party has been ingenious and relentless in devising unconstitutional methods for squeezing taxes out of the people. The methods prevailing at Washington are copied in this state. The surplus in the state treasury at Lansing frequently exceeds $1,500,000 and yet the party constantly demands more. Our state, county and city are out of debt, yet our taxes approach confiscation. Business men in Ionia pay from $600 to $2000 taxes and Ionia farmers from $50 to $200. It is time, low we returned to the simplicity and economy in governmental affairs that were common before the war. The first step to this end is to stop raising money faster than it is needed. A full treasury invites extravagance, but an empty one compels economy. An empty treasury at Washington or Lansing may not be a thing to be prized of, but it is a good deal more comfortable than an empty pocket at home. W. E. Kibbi in Ionia Standard.

Judge A. W. Tongee, author and lecturer, whose republicanism is unquestioned, has the following to say of Ben. Butler and the possibilities of next fall's campaign: "The nomination of Ben Butler and his entrance into the fight are apt to mix matters. Should he be nominated early in the spring by labor organizations he will enter the democratic convention armed with a pretty large club. They will have to hesitate before they ignore his claims. A man who can get 187,000 votes in Massachusetts against the republican candidate is not to be passed by without due consideration. Butler has quite a large personal following in the country, and much of it is outside of what people are apt to call the dangerous classes. Not long ago I heard a workingman say for him as well as the honest-handed son of toil. He is a factor that must form part of all calculations. The south will have in the democratic convention 83 per cent of the delegates necessary to nominate a candidate, supposing that a majority is needed. Usually it has required two thirds to nominate in democratic conventions. Now, people suppose the south will be solid against Butler, but they may be mistaken. They want the man who can win, a man's not mind his name may be. And if Butler should be nominated, those who think he would lose southern states will find they are mistaken. They are going to vote the democratic ticket.

The Cheboygan Democrat prefaces an announcement of the marriage of a couple in that town with the following: "One more unfortunate weeper and troubled; ruddy impediment, gone and got doubled. It pays to be advertised. We were mortally certain that if the old bachelors whom we recently mused did not take to the woods they were gone."

FARM FOR SALE.

Consisting of 11 acres, six miles from Charlevoix, on main road. Soil, clay loam. A good frame house, and new frame brick barn. About 30 acres cleared, balance good beech and maple timber. About 250 fruit trees beginning to bear. One and one half from school and saw mill. Terms easy. Inquire of seven hundred dollars, or more than two thousand dollars; balance to suit purchaser. For further particulars call on or address DAVID B. FRANCIS, Charlevoix, Mich.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect January, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv			7 45pm	7 45pm
Richmond	2 25pm	10 22	9 55
Winchester	3 54	11 52	11 00
Portland	4 11	12 12	11 23
Fort Wayne, ar	6 12	2 25pm	1 53pm
Fort Wayne, lv	2 15	2 30	8 05pm	12 30pm
Kendallville	3 55	3 52	9 47	2 17
Ligonier	4 34	4 31	10 29	2 59
Wolcottville	4 51	4 48	10 48	3 18
Lagrange, ar	4 57	4 55	11 2pm	3 30
Lagrange, lv	5 07	5 05	11 12	3 40
Howe	5 20	5 18	11 25	3 53
Orland	5 30	5 28	11 35	4 03
Pleasant Lake	5 40	5 38	11 45	4 13
Angola	5 51	5 49	11 56	4 24
Fremont	6 17	6 15	12 22am	4 50
Clear Lake	6 25	6 23	12 30	4 58
Orland Junction	6 33	6 31	12 38	5 06
Hamilton	6 40	6 38	12 45	5 13
Pokagon	6 47	6 45	12 52	5 20
Metz	6 55	6 53	1 00	5 28
Millgrove	7 03	7 01	1 08	5 36
Salem	7 10	7 08	1 15	5 43
Lima	7 17	7 15	1 22	5 50
Stockbridge	7 25	7 23	1 30	5 58
Chelsea	7 35	7 33	1 40	6 08
Dexter	7 45	7 43	1 50	6 18
Scio	7 55	7 53	2 00	6 28
Ann Arbor, ar	8 10	8 08	2 15	6 43
Ann Arbor, lv	8 15	8 13	2 20	6 48
Ypsilanti	8 30	8 28	2 35	7 03
Wayne Junction	8 40	8 38	2 45	7 13
Detroit, ar	9 00	8 55	3 00	7 30

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv			5 15pm	7 30am
Marquette			6 00	8 00
Big Bay			7 00	9 00
Mackinaw City			6 30	9 45pm
Harbor Springs			7 00	10 20
Petoskey, lv			7 38	11 35
Boyne Falls			8 15	12 25am
Manoelend			9 08	2 41
Kalkaska			9 31	3 04
Traverse City, lv			9 45am
Cadillac, ar			11 55	5 30
Cadillac, lv		3 30pm	11 45	5 50
Reed City		4 29	1 04pm	7 16
Elk Rapids		5 32	1 41	7 49
Howard City		6 08	2 35	8 37
Big Rapids		7 25	3 48	10 05
Mecosta		7 46	4 05	10 25
Grand Rapids, ar	6 35pm		1 32	12 50am
Kalamazoo, ar	8 32		6 02	2 24
Kalamazoo, lv	8 37		6 52	2 29
Vicksburg	9 07		7 22	3 00
Sturgis	10 01		8 16	4 12
Kendallville	11 18		9 55	5 51
Fort Wayne, ar	12 20pm		10 59	6 42
Fort Wayne, lv	12 35	5 57am	12 02pm
Bellefontaine	3 09	7 36	2 33
Winchester	4 28	8 46	3 55
Richmond, ar	4 57	9 17	4 30
Cincinnati, ar	7 00pm	12 00pm	7 30am

C. L. HOCKWOOD, Asst'G'l P. Agt., Grand Rapids, Mich.

THIS SPACE BELONGS TO

E. M. Clark.

Please notice the change next week

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO. ADVANCE, MICH.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware,

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

GEO. W. MILLER,

DEALER IN

Clothing

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

Hats and Caps, Trunks and Satchels,

GLOVES MITTENS, ETC.

Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST!

All Kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods.

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear

Brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoes.

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY,

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House CHARLEVOIX.

EVERYTHING

In the line of

Furniture

AND

Undertakers' Goods

Can be found at the old reliable house of

H.C. Cooper,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH.

Come and See me before Buying

THE ECONOMICAL DINNER PARTY.

BY E. V. LUCAS.

A maiden fair,
Whose name I pass in the Vill.,
Did once determine recently to give a dinner,
For seven, or eight,
I don't or recollect with me,
And small could tell for me I'm a sinner."

With pipe, pen, and ink,
Each man down at think,
Which is a right and fair way to be:
The heathen Welsh, who dwells
In mountainous fastnesses,
The Leopold and the Lamb, by blood united.

The Mr. Fox, the shrewd—
No beast is not good—
And Madam Duck, with sober step and steady;
And Mr. Dog, serene,
Lover of Charlie green,
Who scuttled late, but I trow himself steadily.

Sir Cotesville, content,
Ten inflations send;
The day was calm—his guests were all assembled;
They heeded that some gulp
Lurked in his ample snuffle;
Each on the other looked, and somewhat trembled.

A laughty thus they said;
Their hunger was a grief,
And all the host in consternation dallies;
At last, the fat Sir Ted,
With covered dishes to feed,
An I—at, in haste, the hungry party sallies.

But when the covers raised—
On empty plates they gazed,
Each on the other looked with dire intention;
Mr. Dog first set off,
And Mr. Fox was second,
She nearly swallowed it in, and made no mention.

Till Mr. Fox precedes
A shriek to his re cavey,
Some pudding that is due for this transgression,
He pulled her up by knee;
Then, made to his disease,
To Mr. Duck was taken by possession.

The Well, we leave a pause—
as quite to in and clause—
Let nothing of the kind to tell the story;
The Leopold, all irate,
At their inhumanity,
Made in room at all that sudden hours unsavory.

The Lion was slightly head—
"Since I am king," he said,
"It till befits the king to back his dinner."
Then in the Leopard sprang
With neck of claw and fang,
And made a meal upon that spotted sinner.

Then sank in sudden fear
Sir Cotesville drew near,
And found him gone, and feelings of distraction,
"Since all of you have eaten,
We'll waited to your manners,
You sinners, and as for you, be off with you!"

And so, a deal of gall
Is had in his small hall;
And he was his dinner by boarding like best wise,
Between you with me—
I relish not sadly,
And I am glad to see there's nothing wasted."

THE CRUISE OF THE JEMIMA.

Charlie, my young brother, had been jagging at his studies; I had just passed the R. C. S. E., and was proportionately elate. We had earned our summer holiday, we thought; and nothing loth was I when Charlie, with a nap in his hand, pointed out a spot on the Cadiness coast and exclaimed:

"There we are! There we go! What say you, Frank?"

"Very good choice. Plenty of ozone, fishing, and boating; fashion at a discount. Where's the timetable?"

A primitive fishing village—call it Cashiabal—was quickly fixed upon; and after the usual delights of a railway traveling we found ourselves in a place richly endowed by nature, but mum in min.

A Highland cottage, however, proved a comfortable enough shelter, and after a night's rest and a hearty fish breakfast, we strolled off toward the sea.

In the one straggling street of Clanhead were yellow-haired children who stood in wide-eyed, innocent wonder and stared at us. Perhaps they were over one by the sight of our trousers (town sensibilities; if I might have been that they were bewitched by Charlie's handsome face.

Charlie is the Adonis of our family; and I well, I am an ugly young man with a marvelously wise mouth, eyesight so near that I cannot pick up a sixpence without the help of my glasses, and an expression, to say the least of it, surred.

Such as we were, we stood the lads' and the lasses' scrutiny unabashed, plodding on till we perceived a middle-aged man leaning on a gate, in I imagined, a debee fay nicete condition.

He turned, however, and moved toward us.

"Will ye no' be takin' a sail the morn-in', gentlemen?"

"Just what we want," cried Charlie.

"Aweel, tak ye the first turn to the east, an' it'll bring ye to the head o' the hill. Some way back ye'll see the openin' to a ravine. Gang away through the gap, an' ye'll soon be where the sea washes the cliff foot. Be ye canny, for the tide's high the noo, and the skull-bowet vather there may drown ye. In five minutes I'll be comin' round wi' my boat an' my mate at your service."

The boatman toppled his cap and nooced off; we made for the ravine, passed down it, and came suddenly upon the most magnificent expanse of cliff-set water that our eyes had ever met with here.

A cliff-cove I suppose some half-mile wide and far in, the sea sleeping in its little craft the dominion, with her sails spread and her master at the helm, while Donald, his mate, kept watch at the bow.

With a "Ho-hoy! Steady! Ye how!" we were brought to," and in scarce I time or more were aboadine.

We were scarcely seated before, swaying from the ravine, rolling on with the help of a cantering horse and carriage, came a girl with a sweet but very sad face. Evidently she was a stranger in Cashiabal.

"Ech, Bonny! Bonny!" said our boatman, with a softened intonation. "Ye shouldna ael coe, my dear."

When our gentlemen have the decima they chuna expect to tak her master's family aboard. Gang awa hame again, Mavis!"

"Oh, be all means, take your friend aboard, Mr ——"

"Ben is my name, sir, an' I thank ye for your kindness. Come, then, baira; an' look ye, dinna try it to veer cretch when ye step aboard. Should the boat lull, it may slip frae under ye. Let me lay it doon at the stern, an' gie me your hand. Now, steady, an' in ye are."

Ben guided the boat off, then turned to the girl again. "Eh, my bairnie, not see mickle as a speck o' heal gear; an' they bits o' fadial clothing dyin' about ye. Tell each your health ye mann hae my jacket on. Mebbe, sir, ye'll be so kind as to hand the tiller whiles I dress her coop? There, now, Mannie, ye're no warmly buskit?

Oh we were before the wind, our swelling mainsail hiding the man at the bow. The grand sea and sky threw Charlie and myself into ecstasies; Ben, used to such scenes, was quiet, and, I thought, sad, while the lassie looked decidedly sleepy.

"Eh, my doo," said Ben, "ye were oop wi' the birds; I marked ye weenin' your way to the cliff by the first glint o' the sun. Yes liken to a wraith, my deario! Ye're wanderin'. Aweel, lay doon your head a while on my shoulder, and be takin' a wee bit nap the noo."

With his disengaged arm Ben supported the frail little body, and soon his charge was dozing as restfully as my weary child.

As she slept I espied a wedding-ring on her finger; and even in repose her face told a tale of mental and bodily suffering. Some heavy calamity, I thought, must have fallen upon her. Her child-like confidence in Ben and his tenderness toward her were pathetic; and, altogether, my sympathy was won.

Presently I ventured to ask if she were not an invalid; and returned Ben,

"Oo, yes, sir; m' she is my only bairn. Pretty dear! She married over early. An' a week after, Tam, her husband, sailed forth wi' his crew for the Behin'. Three months he passed sin' the wofu' day, but nae word can we get o' boat or men."

"Ship, you talk the vessel——"

"Went doun, sir, is what ye mean? There is nae doot about it; for, miles awa along the coost, a piece of her sail was washed ashore. But my lassie knowsna that; an' sae, fstead o' puttin' on widow's weeds, she gave says we're lanind to find Jimy an' she hatches the sea, an' questions every fisherman she meets, till it's just pitiful to hear her."

"She is nearly distraught, I fear."

Then I gave Ben a warning note regarding the imperative need of trying to divert her mind from one train of Also I proffered a word of advice about her lameness, which, it appeared, rose from some recent injury done to the muscles, and which, I gathered, had been treated in anything but a scientific manner.

Ben was delighted to find that I was a doctor, and most grateful for my interest in him. Indeed, he was so earnest in pouring out his tale of troubles that I volunteered to take Mannie's case in hand while I was at Clanhead, that the man at the bow as bend forward to become an absorbed and sympathetic listener; for Mannie and he had been playmates, and he felt rather deeply interested, Ben told me, when Tam carried her off.

Deeply our subject, and entirely free from apprehension, we scudded pleasantly along. One moment all our world was asleep—the sighing; the next—crack! crash! crash! over our head, under our feet, everywhere!

A swift glance at the mainsail, a wrench at the tiller, and a tremendous shout from Ben——

"Row, there, how! Are ye sleepin', noo?"

The warning was too late. A large vessel was down upon us; our mainsail was pierced through by her bowsprit; our timbers were shivering under her lams. I heard steaming on the deck above me. I saw a man leap from the vessel's side; I saw Mannie swept from an agony of terror, and throw her arms round her father's neck; I heard Ben say, "Now, dinna mind me, but stick to ye on an' trust." I knew we were all in the water, for I saw Ben supporting his child as he swam vigorously toward the man who had leaped over. I saw Charlie going down neither he nor I was a swimmer; I checked at him fruitlessly; then came confused cries of, "Keep your heads up." "Here's a life-belt." "Over this rope" and Ben's voice, "Ye're all right, sir." But soon the voices sounded far away and indistinguishable. I knew that my watch was in my pockets and mouth; there was singing in my ears, roaring in my head; I felt a mad impulse to rise. I did rise; again for a moment only. I heard a cry voices near me, and caught a glimpse of the oil-nits that were being made to save us. In the agony I was in I can't keep my senses. I was fatile. Then hiss! hiss! swish! through my very brain; after that, dark—a vicious darkness—a roar and scent in my head that lasted of death to me, a cry to my mamma and to Heaven, and a strange, deep calm.

The sun was going down in a flood of crimson glory. I lay upon a well-sanded deck all alone. Where had I been? Where was I going? What had happened? I raised myself and felt the pain, so I was still in the flesh. I tried my voice. "mi! hillos! somebody!"

No one came. I sat up and took a spectator's survey. The vessel was fast and trim, and she smelled of timber, but she was not of British build. As I reasoned rather weakly, I must come on a footstep sounded on the deck, and a long-haired, red-bearded man, a seaman, tar and blue-vested; he made his way to me and looked smilingly down.

"What ship is this?" queried I.

A shake of the head.

"Are you a German?"

Two shakes of the head.

"Speak, man, in some tongue or other, will you?"

The word "speak" he understood, and obeyed with energy. But no word of any language could I pick out from his strange jabber.

Feeling, no doubt, that my understanding wanted arousing, he went away and shortly returned with six other men; some strong, fair, and blue-eyed, like himself, the rest shorter, darker, but powerfully built, and all chattering the most unintelligible jargon.

As they bent their energies to make me understand something or other, I tried hard to discover their nationalities, for certainly they were not all of one nation, when—happy thought—came flitting through my brain the words:

And then the Schoolmaster Sureman took down the name of the god.

"You are from Norway," bawled I. "And you," to the darker men, "you are Swedes. Am I right?"

"Ha! Norroway! Norge! Norge! Ha! ha! Norrike! Ha! ha!"

The words were taken up like a refrain with boisterous satisfaction. Had I only raised my eyes to the vessel's mast, I might have seen at first that she was called the Darl Halton. But just then my wits were scattered. Time began, however, to disentangle themselves, and thoughts of Charlie, Ben, and the rest crowded upon me. Where were they? Where was the lame girl, and where the Jemima?

It was useless to question, so I rose up and with rather unsteady step walked forward, and found my way to the Captain's cabin.

On one side lay Ben, with pain in every line of his face; in the Captain's berth, looking absolutely dead, was Mannie, stretched out on a rug lay my brother. He, however, managed to moan out "Bravo!" when he saw me.

I went to the girl's side and felt her pulse. Then, "Where's the Captain?" said I to Ben's careless mate, Donald, who was standing close by, the picture of helpless distress.

"Here," came a ready answer from a mellow voice behind me.

I turned. There stood a portly, grave-looking man with a trustworthy face. He spoke English; this was worth something just then.

"Have you a wife—a child—on board, sir, who will carry out my instructions respecting this patient?"

"Are you a physician?"

"I am a member of the College of Surgeons, and am anxious to do my best in this case now and terrible influence.—Youth's Companion.

Charlie walked without her regrets before I left Cashiabal; and Ben's hope was doing famously. I was in high spirits at my success as surgeon on my own account. I had gained friendship, stanch and leal. Said Tam at parting:

"Ye's gien me a bonny wife for a sickly one, an' I'll never thank ye enow, sir."

"All right, Tam; you shall see little when you leaped from the Darl Halton you know, so we're more than quits. And look here, lad, if you ever want a friend, send to me."

"Sae I will, sir; and will ye no' need an auld sea hand wi' faithin' se vice ye'll send to me."

That compact was an honest one, and it will stand.—Cassell's Magazine.

Shoeing of Horses.

At the last meeting of the American Street Railway association, the following was reported on the above subject: The hoof of the horse in its natural state is adapted only to the soft and yielding soil; and so when we undertake to put them to practical use upon common roads and paved streets, it becomes necessary to protect the foot from the unnatural wear they become subjected to. The practice of protecting the hoof in some manner dates back for centuries, and from the rude devices then used we have come down to the present day, in which many forms of shoe are made, all of which have their claims to superiority. In selecting the shoe the kind of foot should be considered; but as a rule, in our judgment, a flat shoe that will leave the foot in the most natural state, allowing the frog to receive a portion of the weight or blow, is preferable, particularly for the forward foot; the natural formation of the frog being of a soft, spongy growth with elastic properties, would seem to be made for that purpose. As a rule, horses coming fresh from the pasture have sound and healthy feet, with broad frogs, and we should so adapt the shoe as to retain the natural formation as near as possible. To this end care cannot be used in preparing the foot for the shoe. The frog should never be pared; the shell requires more or less cutting. The shoe should always be fitted to the foot and not the foot to the shoe, as is often done. Corns, the most prevailing disease we have to contend with, appear in the angle of the foot near the heel, and are caused by the shoe not being properly calked enough, or allowing them to remain too long enough for the shoe to become imbedded into the heel, and is often the result of unskilful shoeing. Moisture we believe to be caused at to the preceding cause of heat. The railroad horse stands on the floor about twenty hours of the twenty-four, and consequently the feet are very dry; therefore we would recommend the application of water frequently, not only to supply the natural moisture but for cleanliness also. In describing the horse the workman should bear in mind that he is protecting the foot from the unnatural wear, and that it is only for that purpose; therefore all prejudices as to opinion of how it should be done should be laid aside. The horse commences life with sound feet, but too many of them are ruined by unskilful shoeing, and it is beyond the power of the veterinary surgeon to make a perfect cure in the case of a confirmed cripple. There is no remedy for a contracted foot.

Some Noted Sayings.

A letter to an English paper from a grandson of one of Nelson's sailors, the battle of Trafalgar, gives the origin of his famous order to his men.

The Admiral gave the order telegraph to the whole fleet, "Nelson expects every man to do his duty." It was found that the word "to" would require six sets of flags, displayed in succession.

Time passed. A Lieut. Rose looking over the code-book, found the "England" could be sent by one flag, and suggested that the word should run, "England expects every man to do his duty," to which Nelson heartily consented. Hence the frequent touch which thrilled all hearts to the heart, was due to a defect in the signal-code.

Many of the finest sayings recorded of great men owe their origin to accident. Goethe's dying words, "More light!" are said only to have referred to the opening of a window, and to the sunlight streaming in by the way. Napoleon's dying words, "Tête d'armée," called forth a burst of admiration from all the world. Webster's emphatic "I still live!" in the light of after events, seems to have been prophetic of the hospitals, rendering admiring, and effective service.

Great seemed the danger at one time for the American Minister to England, when a terrible hurricane set in, and the ship's crew were about to abandon her. But when Webster was informed of the peril, he merely said, "Give him the medicine at a dose, if he still lived." It was at once given, and the danger past. He used the words so long associated and memorable as his last.

Some famous sayings which belong rallying cry for defenders of the Union during the civil war originated in jokes. On the next day, however, the words were seriously accepted by the public demonstration on Washington's birthday, issued invitations for a state banquet on the anniversary of Jefferson.

Gen. Andrew Jackson, on one of his invitations, dryly remarked that the opportunity was thereby afforded to celebrate not the memory of Jefferson alone, but the glory of Calhoun and his doctrine of nullification. "If liked," added, chuckling, "to send a toast to him." After a moment's thought he filled his pipe, he wrote a few curt terms note of refusal, and begged him according to custom, to send a toast in honor of the United Union. It was and shall be preserved."

The toast having been sent to President, could not be ignored. It was read, and the shouts of applause with which it was received, and laughter from those who appreciated the President's grim joke, fixed in the memory of the public, he who was made a household word, and a civil war gave to new and terrible influence.—Youth's Companion.

The Population of China.

Many persons entert ain doubts the accuracy of the figures for the population of China. Four hundred millions seem incredibly large. A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial makes some statements which ought to remove doubt. The Chinese Government has a census system under which, at irregular periods, obtains an enumeration for many purposes of the male members of the empire between the ages of 16 and 60. Multiplying this number by five to allow for those under 16 and over 60, the census of 1850, on the same system gave in round numbers 60,000,000 as the male population. The female population had fled from the ravages of the years. This reasonable rate of increase which is less than one-fifth of our own would bring the Chinese figures to a better method of testing the first by comparing the number of people to the square mile with the number in other parts of the world. China has an area of 7,250,000 square miles at 400,000,000, for all the density of population is supposed to be greater than in any other country. Now, in Germany there are 200 to the square mile, and in France 180. In Belgium there are 480 to the square mile, and in England and Wales 440. It is well known that China is a densely populated country; even its writers warn each other against the dangers of overcrowding. Canton has counted heads, on which families have been taxed, and though the Tartar conquest and the Taiping rebellion, in the course of the last two centuries have swept away millions of people are so thick in the rest of the country that 85 persons to the square mile is believed to be below rather than above the truth.—Exchange.

Eye-Water and Lonesomeness.

"Sometimes my dear," remonstrated Mrs. Partington, "you say things that are quite unbecoming a lady. You just sighted an auful mean pipe at camp at Lake Ontwanna, in the Adirondacks. Why, good gracious, only think, A man kin never get that fellow, nor if he's got any of the feelin's of a man, will he ever get a chance to come home. Why, he'd ought to be ashamed at the public demonstration on Washington's birthday, issued invitations for a state banquet on the anniversary of Jefferson.

Gen. Andrew Jackson, on one of his invitations, dryly remarked that the opportunity was thereby afforded to celebrate not the memory of Jefferson alone, but the glory of Calhoun and his doctrine of nullification. "If liked," added, chuckling, "to send a toast to him." After a moment's thought he filled his pipe, he wrote a few curt terms note of refusal, and begged leave according to custom, to send a toast in honor of the United Union. It was and shall be preserved."

The toast having been sent to President, could not be ignored. It was read, and the shouts of applause with which it was received, and laughter from those who appreciated the President's grim joke, fixed in the memory of the public, he who was made a household word, and a civil war gave to new and terrible influence.—Youth's Companion.

The Meadows of Maryland.

BRISTOL, PRINCE GEORGE'S Co., Md. Charles G. Addison, of the above place, was troubled with a severe pain in his side, accompanied with a severe suffering, and the pain for several weeks. I found no remedy that would relieve me until I used one bottle of Hunt's Remedy. I have been entirely cured by the use of this medicine, and I feel it my duty to say to you that the same has been of great benefit to my family. I have used it in cases of Dysentery, Diarrhœa, and Cholera Infantum, and always found it to be a safe and speedy remedy. I have also used it in cases of Fever and Ague, and have also

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Additional Local.

Mr. Slater, one of the carpenters injured at Chapman's hotel last fall, is able to do a little work.

Miss Annie Cooper has charge of the higher department and Miss Taff, of Lansing, the primary department of the Boyne City schools.

The advertising patronage of the Grand Rapids Tradesman has increased so that a full page supplement is necessary. That looks like success.

The Farm, Field and Fireside this year is larger and better than ever before, and claims to offer more good wholesome matter for one dollar than any paper in the world.

The Farm, Field and Fireside is a handsome monthly of 28 large pages, clear print, and finely illustrated. One dollar per year, and a prize to every subscriber. W. V. R. Povis, publisher, Chicago.

F. J. Smith, our mail contractor, will put a steamer on the route between Petoskey and Manistique next season, calling at different points on the line. We understand he will also put a boat on Pine Lake to run between here and Charlevoix.—Statesman.

A profile map of the G. R. & I. railroad, shows the contour of the land over which the road passes, and the elevation of every point between Grand Rapids and Mackinaw above the level of the water at Mackinaw. Grand Rapids is the lowest point on the map, 30 feet above the level.

It may be unnecessary to discuss the merits of so-called standard groceries, but in the question of baking powder, after trying various new brands, our domestic relations have become much more peaceful and satisfactory since going back to the old reliable "Royal;" no other will equal it

The Farm Field and Fireside is one of the leading papers of its kind in the world, pure in tone, with large and legible print, and with large sums of money spent for illustrations and good reading matter. It gives reliable agricultural news, from every quarter of the United States, adapted for north, east, south and west.

Teamsters hauling shipping wood into town are trying the capacity of their horses. Each is endeavoring to beat the other hauling the largest number of cords before the completion of the contract, and one would think each load would fill the hold of an ordinary schooner. In this case good roads and plenty of oats are "what makes the mare go."—Statesman.

Hello! the telephone is a fixed fact. The stock is all taken, and J. J. Atkins let the contract for putting up the lines on Monday night to Mr. Chas. R. Brown, who will arrive from St. Ignace with his assistants on Monday next and begin operations at once. It will take about ten days to put up the lines already subscribed for, but probably the list will be largely increased when the practical working of the line is seen. Subscribers who order a line this week will come in on the charter rate of $1.75 per month. All coming in after this week will be required to pay a rental of $2.00 per month for their service.—Record.

We regret to say that the white fish eggs have been removed from the hatchery here to Detroit to complete the hatching. Owing to the bad season of 1883 and the consequent scarcity of spawn the fish commissioners are anxious that every egg may be saved, and Supt. Marks determined that the fifteen million eggs must be transferred to the Detroit hatchery to save them. The reason for his opinion is as follows: While we always supposed the water pumped from the water works to be buy water filtered through a bank of clean gravel, investigation has just proved that the water supply comes mainly from veins upon the land side, and that it is wanting in some of the most marked characteristics of the buy water, and the mineral constituents held in suspension. As it is important to hatch the eggs and rear the fry in their native element, Mr. Marks does not care to run the risk of an experiment with our well water, and therefore the removal. Next summer it will be necessary to put a crib in the bay and run a pipe out to it, to furnish not only the hatchery but the city with the water we have up to this time supposed we were having, viz., the pure bay water. While everyone will regret the removal of this first batch of eggs, we will have arrangements made so that with an ordinary fishing season the hatchery can stock up with its full complument of 45 millions of eggs next fall.—Record.

William White, formerly of Essex county, Ont, but more recently of South Arm, has formed a copartnership with R. E. Newville, well known here, and as a firm have leased the Boyne City mill and will go extensively into the business of manufacturing broom handles, it being their intention to put in what other machinery may be necessary to make it complete as a broom-handle factory. This is an enterprise which will assist materially in the building up of our town, and Messrs. Newville & White will undoubtedly find it a paying business. Mr. White arrived Thursday with his family and now occupies the rooms recently vacated by H. A. Sinclair.—Statesman.

Notes and News.

In nineteen opinions recently delivered by the Supreme Court, Justice Sherwood dissented four times and Justice Champlin once.—Free Press.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by druggists, 75c.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and tone up the system you will find Parmelee's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold for O. B. Weed & Co. 2-49

Congressman Belford has discovered a method of disposing of a portion of the surplus revenue in the treasury. He has offered to introduce a resolution allowing members an extra salary of $1,200, for each representation in congress.

Traverse City sent to Chicago in 1883, 22,548,000 feet of lumber, and 6,102,000 shingles. Charlevoix shipped 9,803,000 feet of lumber; Frankfort, 8,344,000 feet of lumber and 15,600,000 shingles; Mackinaw City, 10,839,000 feet of lumber.—Free Press.

TOOTHACHE.—Money is a great cure for aching hearts, but a twenty dollar gold piece placed on an aching tooth don't seem to have the least effect. In fact, nothing is sure but Hamilton's Toothache Drops, which are warranted to cure in one minute. Price only 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Secure admiration. Who can help admiring a lovely face, a clear, smooth, beautiful complexion? These can be easily obtained by the use of Hamilton's Oriental Balm. It will surely remove Freckles, Tan, Pimples, and Blemishes of every sort and is in no way injurious to the skin, but is the most harmless and elegant preparation of its kind. Price 50c per bottle Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Beware! Coughs, colds, and slight Throat Diseases often develop into Bronchitis, Seated Cough, Consumption, etc., and should have immediate attention and be removed in the first stages. Not only public speakers, but all, are liable to throat troubles, and to obtain relief should use Hamilton's Cough Troches, which relieve Coughs and Hoarseness, making the articulation clear. Warranted to give satisfaction Price 25c per box. Sold O. B. Weed & Co.

In an interview Gerald Massey said: I think the laboring classes in all countries are benefited by free trade. Certain industries may suffer pro tem., but the masses of the people will be benefited. I cannot see how the working classes can favor your protection laws. If the workingmen will only wake up to a thorough understanding of the real merits of the question they can't help seeing that it is manifestly for their interest to have free trade in this country.

When a cure is guaranteed why will you refuse to be relieved of that cough which is liable to become seated on your lungs and to cause you many a suffering day and sleepless night? Your children are liable to be taken with Croup and die before a doctor can be summoned. Be wise and obtain a remedy that will not fail to give relief from Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, and other lung difficulties. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will do all this and costs but a trifle. Price 25 and 50 cents a bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

It is a humiliating confession—for the republicans—that the Chicago Tribune makes when it says: "There is great danger that the country may attach too much importance to the apparent demoralization of the bobbles in Washington and draw from it hopes of a political millennium of reform that will be most cruelly disappointed. Though the "agents and attorneys" of the Huntingtons and Goulds, Reads, the sugar monopoly, and all the other vested wrongs that have so much to fear if the abuses of the people with regard to their protection could be carried out, acknowledge that they are whipped in entrance and will retire, it is an open secret that their apparent submission is not a rout. They wish to beguile the people with a show of withdrawal while they are betaking themselves to a new line of defenses. These monopolists have one sure refuge—the senate. There they expect to thwart all the plans for bringing them to book."

Some of our fault finding contemporaries are accusing the Republican of inconsistency for advocating the prohibition of intoxicants on the state fair grounds, and not favoring a prohibitory law in the state. The friends of temperance must capture the outposts before they can take the citadel of the rum power. There is public sentiment to exclude the sale of intoxicants from the state fair grounds, but in many places in this state there is no sentiment to enforce a prohibitory law. The Republican favors heavy taxation because it has reduced the number of saloons in our commonwealth nearly one-half since it first went into effect, and because there are nearly 100 less towns and villages in Michigan to-day with saloons than in 1875, when the tax law was first enacted. The temperance advocate who falls into the error of believing that law makes public sentiment is a dead weight to the advancement of a righteous cause. We care not whether a man is a prohibitionist or a friend of taxation, so long as he recognizes the fact that public sentiment makes and enforces law. The friend of temperance who reaches this frame of mind is in a condition to work for favorable practical results. One such worker is worth a thousand of the political prohibition Utopians who have been making Rome howl about "licensing an evil." The Michigan tax law was framed for the express purpose of regulating and crushing out the great curse, and has been much more effective in this regard than its most ardent friends had reason to expect. Our supreme court has declared the tax law no license, and we say stick to taxation so long as it will restrict, prohibit, and crush out. When it is no longer effective in this direction then take up the next best weapon which public sentiment will accept. But over and beyond all this stands the education of our children in the home circle and educational institutions. From childhood to manhood and womanhood they should be taught the soul and body destroying power of all alcoholic stimulants.—Lansing Republican.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure, that the doctors had given up and said could not be cured. 75 cents a bottle. Sold by Dr. Crouter

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, free of charge, with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure CURE for CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, and all throat and lung affections. Parties wishing the prescription will please address Rev. E. A. WILSON, 194 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

LIVERY.

The undersigned has purchased the livery formerly owned by him, and installed

Geo. Durance, Manager.

There has been added a new stock of

Horses and Carriages

And a cordial invitation is extended to all old friends and patrons to call and see him when ever they need anything in that line.

GOOD SADDLE HORSES A SPECIALTY WITH THIS STABLE.

J. MILO EATON.

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS,

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery,

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and will fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us, we will use you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's new

Opera Block

FOR SALE.—A second-hand portable saw mill, with engine and boiler complete, for sale cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

J. MILO EATON,

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 1875.

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS,

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run to keep up with him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charlevoix

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHING

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goods

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets,

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Feed

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a year ago, and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our establishment.

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses or homes, and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction.

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX.

THE MOST USEFUL BOOK EVER PUBLISHED!

A Book that should be in Every House.

The press, teachers, and professional people throughout the country pronounce it to be the BOOK OF BOOKS. It contains upwards of 50,000 WORDS, with their definitions and pronunciation, according to Webster and other recognized authorities; a large number of additional words and definitions in general use. It contains a mine of information for everybody. This handsomely bound in cloth, containing 643 pages, Profusely Illustrated. We propose to present you one of these valuable books, by mail, all postage charges prepaid, to any address, on receipt of only ONE DOLLAR.

Address M. STOLZ & CO.,

26 Park Place, New York.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL

A Progressive Local and Family Newspaper.

Published Every Thursday, at $1.50 a Year.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 31. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

...RICKSMANN & GRIEB, Attorneys at Law, ...in Bulkley Block, Charlevoix, Mich. ...RICKSMANN. C. G. GRIEB.

...ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East ...ngan, Mich. 22

...W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor, ...Real Estate business promptly attended to. ...MONEY TO LOAN.

...A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at ...w, office in United States Hotel, Boyne ...ty, Mich.

...L. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, ...gan.

...MUD EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

...SON & KEAT, Attorneys at Law. Office ...posite U. S. Hotel, Boyne, Mich.

...AR F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, ...ef U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

...K OF CHARLEVOIX.—Capital $50,000; ...neral exchange business transacted. Deposits ...ceived subject to draft at sight. Collections ...de on all points in the United States and Canada. ...Interest allowed on time deposits. Drafts ...wn on the principal cities of Europe. ...Money to loan on first mortgages. Foreign and ...domestic exchange. REYNOLDS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

...ST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Sunday ...rvices at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday ...hool hour. Sunday school at close of ...orning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7 o'clock in the school house. ...ENJ. F. VANARSDALE, pastor.

...ETHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—Sunday ...rvices at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer ...eeting Thursday evening at 7. J. T. DOBSON, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

...ARLEVOIX HOOK AND LADDER AND READY FIRE ...OMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall. ...H. E. BISHOP, Secretary.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

...A. GERSTEIN, M. D. Office at the Bridgside.

...LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in the Lewis block, Charlevoix, Mich.

...J. FRENCH, M. D., Surgeon and Homœopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

...RAVES & MARSHALL, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

...A. E.—Exalted Port No. 128, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

...O. G. T.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 327, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

...O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets every Wednesday evening, in Herb' hall.

...O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

...ENSING.—Castaway Lodge No. 282, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over ...dge.

A. E. BITTNER, President. A. E. LUNDIN, Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money loaned on personal paper at reasonable rates. Deposits received. Collections given prompt attention and remittances made promptly. ...ANSING S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

WARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.

Prices reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON, On Bridge St., House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public. Large sample rooms for the Peckey and Elk Rapids stages.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CURLIS, Proprietor,

Boyne City, Michigan.

Has been thoroughly refitted and refurnished.

Grand Rapids Democrat,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Daily Democrat—By mail, $6.00 per year in advance; postage paid.

Weekly Democrat—$1.50 per year; 75 cents for six months; 40 cents for three months. Invariably in advance.

Address

THE DEMOCRAT,

Grand Rapids, Mich.

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.

PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County.

EVERYTHING

IN THE LINE OF

Furniture and Undertakers' Goods

CAN BE FOUND AT THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE OF

HENRY C. COOPER, CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH.

Come and See Me Before Buying.

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.

ADVANCE, MICH.

O. W. SMITH,

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.

Electro-plating in Gold and Silver. Any article of jewelry can be made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order. 29

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

A few fine sewing machines for sale at low prices for cash. Call and see me. Work done reasonable.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED

D. S. WAY.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, free of charge, with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure CURE for CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, and all throat and lung affections. Parties wishing the prescription will please address Rev. E. A. WILSON, 194 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

HALL'S

Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE IT WILL NOT CURE!

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you are troubled with this distressing disease, ask your Druggist for it, and accept no imitation or substitute. If he has not got it, send to us and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

The Cheapest Ad's Charlevoix 23

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

Has now in stock a full line of

Ladies' and Children's

Furnishing Goods

Latch-sewed by Elsie & Boyssel, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and add as many more as possible, call and see my stock

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and see me. Work side Bridge St.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the Largest and Best stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best time pieces ever made. All goods sold for cash, and warranted for six months are subject to sale for charges.

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades,

WAGON TONGUES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

ROBERT TODD LINCOLN,

Secretary of War.

Robert Todd Lincoln secretary of war, is the oldest and only surviving son of Abraham Lincoln and was born at Springfield, Illinois, August 13, 1843. He received a good education in the common schools of that city but completed his preparatory course at Exeter, N. H. He entered Harvard college from which he graduated in 1864. After his graduation he received a commission as captain, and saw considerable service in the field, but because of his youth he was kept a close companion to his father at the white house the greater part of the time.

After the exciting scenes of his father's assassination he settled in Chicago, where he studied law, and in a few years admitted to the bar. He then began the practice of his profession in that city and secured the management of several large estates and many eastern insurance companies who loaned large sums of money on Chicago real estate. In attending to these trusts Mr. Lincoln developed superior executive ability. He married the only daughter of ex secretary James Harlan.

During the Chicago convention Mr. Lincoln was an ardent advocate of the nomination of General Grant, and presided at the immense Grant meeting held in Chicago a few days before the nomination for the presidency was made. Before that period his only active efforts in politics had been as a member of a citizens' committee formed in Chicago to effect a reform and purification in local political affairs.

President Garfield's selection of Mr. Lincoln for secretary of war was due to a determination to honor the name of our great war president, and no satisfactory was his administration of the war department during President Garfield's incumbency that President Arthur retained Mr. Lincoln in the cabinet, and now finds him prominently mentioned as a presidential candidate. Mr. Lincoln disclaims any ambition for further political preferment, but his modest, unassuming manner only induces his admirers to more earnestly advance his claims.

Secretary Lincoln is one of the most popular officials that the war department has ever been under, and in social and political circles, regardless of his party affiliations, he is a universal favorite. In form and feature Mr. Lincoln has no resemblance whatever to his illustrious father, but in executive ability and an intuitive comprehension of public affairs he has certainly inherited the sterling characteristics of Abraham Lincoln.

From the National Capitol.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

Within the last few days special attention has been directed to the shipping bills, and the business interests involved are actively engaged in watching legislation. In this matter two antagonistic influences are at work, one urging subsidy as a panacea for our depressed shipping, and the other a "free trade" policy in ships whereby our merchants can avail themselves of the cheap vessels of foreign builders.

THE LAND FOR THE PEOPLE.

There is no longer any doubt as to the fate of the land grant grabbers. Mr. Holman's sweeping resolution declaring that all grants are forfeited where the railroad companies have failed to comply with the terms, passed the house with only 18 dissenting votes. Each particular grant will now be declared forfeited as was the Texas Pacific the other day, and the one hundred millions of acres will revert to the people.

HUNTINGTON'S APPEARANCE

before the committee on public lands defending his interests only prompts feel this coup de etat and the California magistrate left the capitol in disgust, threatening to appeal to the courts against "this high-handed usurpation of power by congress."

A NEW CABINET OFFICE.

The indications now are that the department of agriculture will be erected into a cabinet office. The committee on agriculture having reported the bill to the house favorably. The present condition of the department is not conducive to the passage of the measure and experts soon to become one of President Arthur's advisers. The Oleomargarine men have a large "grange" element in it and they rightly consider that the agricultural interests of the land are of sufficient magnitude to admit their having to the cabinet circle. The question has been agitated for several years and will now become a law.

EXETER IS BITTER IN A CORNER.

General Keifer is in ill luck. The committee on accounts which has been investigating his appointments made at the close of the last session called Mr. Keifer before it and asked him if it was true that he had demanded one Tyson, a stenographer to resign in order that he, Mr. Keifer could appoint his nephew, Gates, to the vacancy. Mr. Keifer stated to the committee that Tyson resigned of his own accord. Mr. Tyson was then called in and made oath to the statement that ex-speaker Keifer came to him just before the close of the last session and demanded his resignation to which Tyson objected, but finally complied upon pain of dismissal. The question now is has Keifer sworn to a lie or is Tyson seeking revenge? Other appointments are being investigated and the report of the committee is looked forward to with absorbing interest.

SENATORIAL CLERKS.

The senate has virtually decided to allow more than fifty-five of the lazy who are at present employed as committees a private clerk with a salary of $6 per day during the session. These senators claim that their public expenditures is so large that they are compelled to spend half their salaries in supplying clerks while the chairmen of committees use the committee clerks for their private work. This step on the part of the senate will in all probability be followed by the house, adding about 100 to the present clerical force of congress.

COST OF RIVERS AND HARBORS.

Some time ago the house requested the secretary of war to make a detail statement of the expenditures of the government on rivers and harbors from March 4th, 1789, to June 30th, 1882. This statement will be of interest to your readers: There was spent on the northern and middle states, $47,540,000; on western states and Louisiana, $8,923,000; on southern states, $14,632,000; miscellaneous, mostly Mississippi river, $38,240,000; repairs $1,850,000; surveys, $3,000,000; dredging machines, $1,115,000; grand total $115,300,000.

NEW BUSINESS.

John C New, Folger's special assistant secretary, has resigned his position and gossip runs high as to the impelling cause. It has been a well-known fact Mr. New and Mr. French of the first assistant secretary, have not been in sweet accord for a year or more and especially since the investigation of Architect Hill, of which committee Mr. New was chairman. This investigation revealed the presence in the machinist's employ of Secretary French's young son as a sculptor at an enormous compensation. It is said that Mr. New ingrafted in his report severe reflections upon this imposition and that the report was finally toned down before given to the public against Mr. New's protest. Mr. New announced then his resign, but sufficient influence was brought to bear to prevent his resignation at that time. Mr. New now quietly steps out and says "private business compels him to do so."

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure, that the doctors had given up and said could not be cured. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Sold by Dr. Crouter

Jesup Scott, of Detroit, frames up a scheme to erect a $750,000 summer hotel on Mackinaw Island. Railroads and other transportation companies are pushing the matter.

Secure admiration. Who can help admiring a lovely face, a clear, smooth, beautiful complexion? These can be easily obtained by the use of Hamilton's Oriental Balm. It will surely remove Freckles, Tan, Pimples, and Blemishes of every sort and is in no way injurious to the skin, but is the most harmless and elegant preparation of its kind. Price 50c per bottle Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

The Dimondale Sun is a new paper in Eaton county, the first number being issued Feb. 2. It starts with a good local page, and a fair advertising patronage.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

Mr. P. P. Bensin now carries 12 cords of cordwood.

Mr. Bensin now carries 12 cords of cordwood.

Mr. P. P. Bensin now carries 12 cords of cordwood.

Mr. P. P. Bensin now carries 12 cords of cordwood.

Mr. P. P

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Feb. 14, 1884.

Business Announcements.

Miller & Miller, Cow Dentists. Tightening Cows Teeth a specialty. 24? N. H.

—Wanted—A smart, active boy to act as assistant and learn the trade. One who must husband love to clean up a mess who has been established around the horn by a furious cow preferred.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

Pickles! Pickles! Pickles!
Onions! Onions! Onions!
Green Apples! Green Apples! Green Apples!
At Upright, Emrey & Co's.

Go to Connor's if you want your rubber goods repaired neatly with cement, and not nailed on.

Ten pounds of Granulated Sugar for $1.00, at E. M. Clark's.

500 bushels of Oats; and 300 bushels of Potatoes wanted at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

FOR SALE.—A second hand portable saw mill, with engine and belt complete, for sale cheap. Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

Eleven pounds C Sugar for $1.00, at E. M. Clark's.

Foy's Fat Family Oysters, at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

For Sale.—Two or three good horses for sale cheap for cash or good security. J. MILO EATON.

Cloaks and Dolmans at cost, at E. M. Clark's.

Upright, Emrey & Co. received a large supply of Groceries Tuesday.

A genuine article in Butter at B. Stock.

Who is selling Scotch Caps at 50 cent each? E. M. Clark.

Upright, Emrey & Co. want to see you at their store.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day, for the week ending yesterday, above zero in all cases unless marked with a (-).

	7AM	2PM
Thursday	7	12
Friday	16	28
Saturday	11	16
Sunday	2@	15
Monday	4	16
Tuesday	14	17
Wednesday	9	15

Provision Market.

Retail prices in consumers, as corrected every Wednesday evening by UPRIGHT, EMREY & Co., general dealers:

FLOUR, per bbl, $5.00, $5.50, and $6.00.
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $1.50.
CORN MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2@; unbolted, $1.80.
HAY, per ton, $8@.
OATS, per bu, 35c.
GROUND FEED, per cwt, $1.50.
APPLES, per bu, $1.00.
POTATOES, per bu, 40@50c.
ONIONS, per bu, $1.00.
BUTTER, per lb, 28@30c.
EGGS, per doz, 30@35c.
LARD, per lb, 14@15c.
HAMS, 16c. Shoulders, 12c@.
SALT PORK, 10c; Beef, 5c.
CHEESE, 20c.
WATER-WHITE OIL, 25c.
FARMERS' PRODUCE in good demand; oats and potatoes wanted.

Fresh Meats from the Market.

MEAT, beef steak, 20@12c; pork steak, 8@12c; mutton, 8@12c; sausage, 12c; hams, 14c; shoulders, 12c@.
TALLOW, 6@8c.

Local News Brevities.

More snow this week.

The business card of B. Suffield will be found in this issue.

Ask Mike Litney how he likes a winter bath in Round Lake.

Jeff Weikle, of East Jordan, gave the JOURNAL a call on Monday.

M. J. Stockman speared five large trout in two hours last Thursday.

J. A. Cameron, of Boyne City, gave the JOURNAL a call on Wednesday.

Three dances for the benefit of Charlevoix people last Friday evening.

Mrs. C. F. Van Auken has gone to Eaton county for a brief visit with friends.

James O'Connor, of Ironton, spent Sunday in Charlevoix, the guest of Dr. Preston.

Rev. C. F. Van Auken goes to Northport to day, to be absent about ten days.

Jeff Brown broke through the ice on Round Lake last Friday, and got wet to the waist.

The event of the season, - the "mum supper" at the Bridge street house to-morrow evening.

Mr. I. A. De Lamarter, of the firm of E. T. Brown & Co., Grand Rapids, gave the JOURNAL a call last Saturday.

Tickets for the "mum supper" 25 cents, for sale at the door, at the Bridge street house to-morrow evening.

Lewis Reynolds went to Detroit on Tuesday, to attend the meeting of the grand encampment, in session this week.

G. W. Crouter went to Detroit on Tuesday. He will be in attendance at the meeting of the grand lodge I. O. O. F. next week.

L. W. Skinner, now in the employ of Dexter & Noble, at Elk Rapids, has an offer to take charge of a furnace in Alabama.

The party given by the T. T. F. F. club at the Bridge street house last Friday evening was a success, socially and financially.

Rev. W. H. Mc Cartney, of Banks, occupied the M. E. pulpit last Sunday morning and evening and the congregation were well pleased.

Last Friday while drawing a load of ties, one of Alex Miesolys's horses fell down sick, but afterwards recovered sufficient to be led away.

Our Ironton correspondent calls attention to the need of more wood choppers by the iron company, in order to keep the furnace running.

Rev. G. W. Puddifoot, general missionary of the Congregational church, will preach at the school house next Sunday morning and evening.

The ladies of the M. E. church purpose to have some fun. If you don't believe it go to the "mum supper" at the Bridge street house to-morrow evening.

Our readers will not fail to find Geo. Miller's new card. George has inaugurated a new era in the clothing business here, and deserves the success he hits.

Railroads are built where they are wanted, and the actions of the communities in all the companies have to judge from as to whether there is any desire for them.

Rev. C. F. Van Auken has closed his meetings in Fairgrove. Over fifty have made a start in religion life and work since the inauguration of the meetings.

The pastor of the M. E. church had a rest last Sunday, and his congregation and friends will find him at his post of duty and may expect a vigor ous sermon next Sunday.

The annual hand-book of the Charlevoix Summer Resort Association has been delayed somewhat, in order to give extra railroad information. It will soon be issued. Ex.

Frank Wood announces that h barber shop will be closed on Sunda mornings, until further notice, so you want a clean face for church yo must get it Saturday night.

The Lansing pleasure associati which owns a summer resort at Ha bor Point, has sold 400 fee square thereon to the government a lighthouse site. Price $2,500, spo cash.

A fire was started under a stove i Schank's store at Boyne City on Tues day, and for a time threatened to de stroy all connecting buildings but by prompt action on the part of the citi zens, it was put out.

We request our correspondents not to write any offensive personals, or "insinuations" against anyone. An item reported in good humor will hurt no one, but we shall prune everything of an offensive nature.

Mrs. A. S. Benjamin will address the people of Charlevoix on the subject of temperance, on Thursday evening, Feb. 21st. Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock, in Bartholomew's opera hall. She comes highly recommended; turn out and hear her.

The committee of management of the "mum supper" expect to present a tableau during the evening, entitled "constraint." We presume there are others like ourself who do not know what sort of a show it is, but it must be a fine thing, judging from the whis perings going on.

Wm. M. Miller, Joseph Cooper, and Wm. Withers have formed a co partnership for the purpose of erecting and operating a sawmill in Jno Ward's neighborhood, township of Marion. The machinery was purchased of E. T. Brown & Co., of Grand Rapids, through Mr. I. A. DeLamarter, one of the firm. This firm is selling considerable new machinery in this county, and have the credit of selling first-class goods at fair prices.

The young people of Norwood had a candy pull at C. Wells, last Wednesday evening, and all seemed to enjoy themselves. Of course O. D. Hilton was there to add his share of the sport. It has been intimated that Norwood takes the lead in this class of entertainments.

Mrs. John Beattie, a former resident of Charlevoix, now in New Orleans, writes that they are doing well. Their interest in Charlevoix is such that they want a Charlevoix paper to keep them posted. They expect to visit here during the coming summer.

Last Saturday afternoon Chas. Mason cut a gash in his left leg 6½ inches long on the outside of the leg, the axe passing through the leg, splitting a piece off the bone, and making a gash three inches long on the inside of the leg. It will lay him up some time. Dr. Lewis is attending the wound, and says it is doing well for so large and ugly a gash.

There was an interesting and successful surprise party and dance at Leonard Whitmore's, last Friday evening, attended by numerous Charlevoix people. Twenty-seven couples joined the dance. The only interruption of the fun was when someone's baby exercised its lungs, and all the ladies rushed into the room where it was to see if it was their own "little darling."

"The Lansing, Alma Mt. Pleasant & Northern railroad company was organized Tuesday evening, and the first five per cent payment of stock subscribed was made. The directors elected are: A. W. Wright, president; Wm. N. Brown, James Gargett, F. X. Shepherd, W. S. Turck, John A. Harris and Geo. D. Farton." With but little variation from a straight line this road could be made to strike Charlevoix, and pass through a large section of country not otherwise provided with a road.

H. B. Chapman, proprietor of Chapman's hotel, Bay Springs, Charlevoix county, never tires of extolling the virtues of that blessed region as a health resort. He has a location 10 miles up Pine lake above Charlevoix where one can look down over Charlevoix, Round lake and Pine lake, and he will give 10 acres of good land to the association that will build thereon 10 good cottages and paint them with two coats of paint. Free will baptists, congregationalists or universalists have the preference. News.

The Charlevoix Sentinel thinks that the advent of a railroad would make that a great ice shipping point. We got the impression from Bro. Strang, of the JOURNAL, that it was never cold enough up there to make ice. May be we are mistaken. —Cedar Springs Mail. You should read the JOURNAL more carefully. While it is cold enough here to make clear thick ice, we have not had such extremely cold and windy weather as some of our southern neighbors have complained of. And another thing, while several of our exchanges from southern Michigan say that sleighing is gone, our January thaw only settled the snow and made sleighing better.

In a communication to the Kalkaskian, A. G. Drake asked the following question: "Is it not time that we awoke to the necessity of making an effort to draw the attention of one of the two railroads, which are projected to Mount Pleasant, to the advantage of the country from that point through here as the most profitable route, and to Charlevoix as the most desirable lake port for a terminus?" Discussing the same subject, the editor of the Kalkaskian says: "As we cannot build a road alone, we would like to hear from other villages and sections of country through which it will pass if it decides to make Charlevoix its terminus, which it surely will, if the people along the line will do even half what they are able to do. The attention of the managers might easily be attracted if a few of the county seats and other prosperous towns which will be touched by the road would hold meetings, get up a little feeling in the matter, form estimates of what their citizens will do by way of assistance and then let them know the result. And, although the road will not be located for some time yet, the sooner they are made acquainted with the unsurpassed advantages of this route, the better will be our prospect for getting it."

The supreme court has taken the very first opportunity it had to declare the bankrupt law of 1883 unconstitutional. This law provided that securities given and conveyances made by persons who were insolvent should be void if within four months thereafter the insolvent debtor should make an assignment of his property for the benefit of his creditors, or provided two of the creditors whose debts equaled $200 should petition the court and have a receiver appointed within 90 days after the securities may have been given. This decision, however, does not effect the rules governing common law assignments which have been on our statute books since the revision of 1846, but may have a bearing on some of the many assignments made recently.

"Kyhs optographicun" consists of views of persons and places in different parts of Ireland and China, with a few comic pictures for variety. These pictures are made by photography, and are as nearly perfect as a picture can be made. The operator uses a Drummond light, which is excelled in power only by the electric light, and with his well constructed instruments is enabled to place the views on the canvass in a most satisfactory manner. Some of the "dissolving views" are quite lan chable. These entertainments are of interest and value to young people, especially to those studying the history of either of the countries named. A portion of the views were in colors, and when shown on the canvas had all the appearance and richness of the finest paintings—they were real works of art.

Most of our readers have doubtless read the story of the dog which threw himself under a moving train of cars with all the appearance of a case of suicide, because he was superseded in the affections of the family by a younger and handsomer canine, but it was left for a Charlevoix dog to attempt the most common method of suicide,—that of drowning. It seems that a family of motherless children have been living in humble quarters a little out of town, with only such care as a poor father and charitable neighbors could give them, and it having been decided to break up the family and had homes for the children among our good-hearted citizens, they were brought to the house of a prominent gentleman on the north side, to be cleaned up and dressed in a manner suitable for entrance into the new homes. Of course there was more or less grief and sorrow among the members of the family, but the saddest of all was the poor dog. He seemed to realize the full magnitude of the proceedings, and every remedy or soothing, failed to assuage the poor canine's grief. At length he took advantage of an unguarded moment of watching and ran and jumped into the well, as the surest and quickest relief from his mental troubles. Every effort was made to rescue him, but at the end of three hours, when his body was brought up, poor dog, like many a human sufferer, was glad to be restored to life and usefulness.

East Jordan.

Our hotel registers show a large increase in transient trade.

M. J. C. Gleason is back from the southern part of the state.

Our new paper will probably make its appearance Thursday, Feb. 14.

Another voter for East Jordan. This time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ramsdell, Feb. 9th.

Stoepel & Co. have already began to make preparations for next season sawing, by way of extensive repairs and improvements in their machinery and engine room.

John Chamberlain has removed to his rooms over his new store, and those vacated by him will be re-arranged and occupied by the I. O. G. T.s, for a lodge room.

Our town is being quite thoroughly "canvassed" by traveling salesmen, from all parts of the country, who persist in saying that business will soon begin to "boom."

Regular pay day at Stoepel & Co's. last Friday. Result: a lot of happy boys, —some of them so lndly affected that they could hardly walk, after being down town a little while.

The band gave a sleigh ride and dance at Boyne Falls, Tuesday evening, Feb. 8th, and judging from the reports of those in attendance, it was the most enjoyable event. The weather and sleighing were both perfect. They were joined by quite a large and jolly party from Boyne City.

A first-class play is being prepared by first class amateurs of East Jordan, and will probably be put on the boards in a few weeks. Look out! Do you hear anything drop?

Mr. Wilber Sweet, of the firm of W. Sweet & Son. has returned from the southern part of the state, where he has been visiting for four or five weeks; the new Mrs. Sweet did not come with him.

The Odd Fellows are recovering rapidly from their recent loss by fire, and are already quite well established in their new hall, at the Jordan River house. They report the lodge in a very healthy condition.

The Silver family gave their musical concert at the Hulbert house on Wednesday evening, after which they furnished music for the Leap leap party gotten up by the ladies of East Jordan, making the whole a grand success.

Before Justice Stone, Feb. 9th, Alfred G. Little vs. William S. Hall, assault and battery, resulted in judgment of five dollars and costs for the plaintiff. The case was ably conducted by Fogg & Aldrich for the plaintiff, and Norton & Keat for the defendant. A lively interest in the case was manifested by the people living in the vicinity where the affray took place.

South Arm.

The Echo school has again commenced.

The bankrupt sale at Mrs. Moore's draws crowds of customers.

Thermometer registered 5° below zero on Thursday morning.

Mrs. Blake was seriously ill on Saturday last, but is getting better.

Alfred Wilson, of Echo, buried his young son and Will Lanway a daughter.

Rev. R. Tyndall still continues his religious work at Echo with some success.

James A. Keat, Esq., school inspector, has been visiting the schools in the township recently.

John Gillispie's sale was a success. About 100 persons were present. He intends starting for Canada soon for a short visit.

The prayer meetings in the Xenia district are not very well attended, for some reason. The innocent fun and merriment of "tripping the light fantastic toe" interferes with religious duties.

A donation was held in Hiptown district for Elder May, on Friday evening. Rev. P. Blake preached two forcible sermons last week, besides preaching at the Intermediate school house on Saturday evening.

Two gentlemen from Charlevoix came up to South Arm recently, visiting calls at Ironton, Thorp's Mills, etc. Editor, please do not "give us away," as the storm at home may be fiercer than these worthies expect to bear.

The saloons on both sides of Round lake seem to be in prosperous condition. Coarse language and fighting seem to be the order of things on the streets, especially on Saturday nights. An enforcement of the law would be a move some of the disgrace from our villages.

F. A.

Ironton.

Mr. John Otis, of the Manistique furnace, is in town.

The iron company have 25 men constantly at work drawing wood to supply the kilns.

Henry Sheldon's mother died suddenly last week, of apoplexy, following the third stroke.

The Ironton brewery has commenced a halt, until Mr. Box's mill can get more lumber for it.

Mr. Box has had a force of men repairing his saw mill and commenced running again Monday morning.

Mr. John Goss, a machinist from Charlevoix, has earned many commendations by a recent job of work for the iron company.

The iron company want more wood choppers. James Pried went to Petoskey last week, and again this week to try to engage men.

J. J. Connor, bookkeeper and telegraph operator for the iron company, has been indisposed for the past few days, and has gone to Charlevoix for medical treatment by Dr. Preston.

Notes and News.

The Detroit Evening Journal is dead opposed to prize fighting.

The Chicago Tribune defends the Edmunds anti-bill as a fair, conservative measure to guard general and commercial freedom, while it does not go far enough in that direction.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, which opposed the defeat of Senator Pendleton and the election of Mr. Payne, sneers at the Morrison bill as a "cheese-paring" measure, and declares that before the Mortill tariff of 1861 the rate of protection is only about that established by the late tariff commission. Duties were made up with dr dyed in the wool protectionists—the vigorous kicking on the part of these protection gentlemen seems to be with any particular justification. They ought to congratulate themselves; for it is probable only because of the hopeless prospect of getting any more thorough reform bill through the Republican senate and safely past the presidential veto that they expect Mr. Morrison to let them off so easily. The Morrison bill does not go quite so far in the reduction of duties as the Democratic platform would, but it is a step in the right direction, and, if the bill passes the house by a practically unanimous democratic vote will set the party squarely facing toward that commercial freedom which is not because the policy of the country to free its industries and trade, both domestic and foreign, can be pressed on a people in usually prosperous basis.—N. H. Democrat.

The proposition to give a clerk to each member of congress not a chairman of a committee is, when stripped naked of the subterfuges by which it is surrounded, merely a scheme to add $1,000 a year to members' salaries. It is a selfish grab—nothing more or less. When Belford said a majority were in favor of it but dared not vote for it, he may have been right; but he might as well have charged his colleagues with being thieves, who were deterred from stealing only by fear. If the bill passed, each member would simply transfer to the government in the shape of new bills all of the public money he now bears himself, of supporting some worthless son, nephew or other relative. News.

When the Forty-fifth Congress passed the act cutting the duty off quinine the dealers threatened that the price should not be reduced, and for years an effort was made to retain, through a business combination, the charges which legislation had interfered with. The monopoly was successful for a time, but has now come to grief, owing to the copious supply of the drug which has become too large for control. Prices, in the consideration has been followed by a drop in the wholesale price of the drug about fifty per cent, and still further reductions are looked for. As quinine in some parts of the country may be said to rank next to food in necessity, and as it is everywhere indispensable as one of the most valued remedies, this failure to rent a 2-cent article and keep its price as a source of profit is gratifying.—Washington Star.

Mr. Hobson, the great economist of the house, has at last got his system so perfected that it will soon be ready. He means to abolish the system of hiring stenographers by the year to act as stenographers of committees. There are several of these gentlemen in the employ of the house, and they have about as soft a thing to do as a favorite pickle can be. The highest annual salary is $2,000 and the lowest $1,600

THE GROCER.

The grocer boy's a cheering sight,
As I write in the dairy;
He's so red in the cheek and merry-hing,
And sich, 'Tol Soup-de-hay.'

And strak, came to here in the vent,
He knock two eggs,
Exclamation: 'Ah, I know tall well,
That's how the thing comes!'

The milk was very kind, and said
That cheese was good,
And butter, too, if a remarked
What I thought it.

And so on, grocer, such intimate,
As I dare to say I know,
Because he is spoken of marriage, said,
'Some one of these days.'

The grocer's wife I'm glad to state,
He is not a man I dislike;
Called on Thursday,
We have interviewed.

Yes—she is—certainly engaged
Just to be married soon;
Fixed—only the date remains
To be arranged.

Just one thing more—I did not see
Her ring—because
Of course, I'm not the sort of man
To make remarks.

But one thing I do know—I'm sure
She'll love no one more
Than she will love the grocer boy
Who brings the eggs.

THE BURGLAR'S STORY.

When I became 18 years of age my father, a distinguished begging-letter impostor, said to me: "Reginald, I think it is time that you began to think about choosing a profession."

These were ominous words. Since I left Eaton, nearly a year before, I had seen my time very pleasantly and very idly, and I was sorry to see my long holiday drawing to a close. My father had hoped to have sent me to Cambridge (Cambridge was a tradition in our family), but business had been very depressed of late, and a sentence of six months' hard labor had considerably straitened my poor father's resources.

It was necessary—highly necessary—that I should choose a calling. With a single reservation I submitted as much.

"If you like," said my father, I will talk you in hand and teach you my profession, and in a few years, perhaps, I may take you into partnership; but, as I said with cool, I doubt whether it is a satisfactory calling for an athletic young fellow like you."

"I don't seem to care about it particularly," said I.

"I'm glad to hear it," said my father; "it's a poor calling for a young man of spirit. Besides, you have to grow gray in the service before people will listen to you. It's all very well for a refugee in old age, but a young fellow is likely to make but a poor hand at it. Now, I should like to consult your wishes in so important a matter as the choice of a profession. What do you say? The army?"

"No, I didn't care for the army."

"Diggery? The bar? Cornish wrecking?"

"Father," said I, "I should like to be a lawyer, but I write such an infernal hand."

"A regular Eton hand," said he. "Not plastic enough for forgery; but you could have a writing master."

"It's as much as I can do to forge my own name. I don't believe I should ever be able to forge anybody else's."

"Anybody's else," you should say, not anybody else's. It's a dreadful barbarism. Eton English."

"No," said I, "I should never make a fortune at it. As to wrecking—why, you know how seasick I am."

"You might get over that. Besides, you would deal with wrecks ashore, not weeks at sea."

"Most of it done in small boats, I'm told. A deal of small boat work. No, I won't be a wrecker. I think I should like to be a burglar.

"Yes," said my father, considering the subject. "Yes, it's a fine, manly profession, but it's dangerous—highly dangerous."

"Just dangerous enough to be exciting, no more."

"Well," said my father, "if you're a distinct taste for burglary, I'll see what can be done."

My dear father was always prompt with pen and ink. That evening he wrote to his old friend Ferdinand Stonehaigh, a burglar of the very highest professional standing, and in a week I was duly and formally articled to him, with a view to ultimate partnership.

I had to work hard under Mr. Stonehaigh.

"Burglary is a jealous mistress," said he, "and will tolerate no rivals. She exacts the undivided devotion of her worshippers."

And so I found it. Every morning at 10 o'clock I had to present myself at Stonehaigh's chambers in New square, Lincoln's Inn, and until 12 I assisted him with the correspondence. At 12 I had to go out prospecting with Stonehaigh, and from 2 to 4 I had to devote to finding out all particulars necessary to a scientific burglar in any given house. At first I did this merely for practice, and with no view to an actual attempt. He would tell me of a house of which he knew well all the particulars, and order me to ascertain all about that house and its inmates—their coming and going, the number of their servants, whether they slept in the basement or not, and other details necessary to be known before a burglary could be safely attempted. Then he would compare my information with his own facts and compliment or rebuke me, as I might deserve. He was a strict master, but always kind, just, and courteous, a heaving a highly cold bed gentleman of the old school. He was one of the last men who habitually wore breeches.

After a year's probation I accompanied him on several expeditions, and had the happiness to be told that I was of some little use to him. I also him eventually in the shrewd advice which he gave me touching the disposal of the booty which we were breaking. I had indeed no slight hankering, and to desire the actual plume. His dying wish was that his compliments might be conveyed to me.

I now set up on my own account and engaged in a very profitable business. I took a house in the suburbs, and lived genteel. Stonehaigh left me family. His money—about £12,000, invested for the benefit part in American railways—he left to the Society for Providing Choir Bishops, and his ledgers, day-books, memoranda, and papers generally he bequeathed to me.

As the climax is required I will bring I hoot no time in commencing my professional career. I established myself in a convenient house in Bayswater, and found the following attractive entry:

Thirdly Squares—No. 13.
Bonnes—Medium.
Occupants—Jews Davis; bachelor.
Occupation—Dodger of Bodies.
Appraised.

Physical Peculiarities—Very feeble eyesight; dislikes early rising; snores.

Servants—Two house-maids, one cook, page, all female.

Particulars of Servants—Pretty housemaid called Rachel Jewess, open to attentions, economical; no followers; snores. Ugly housemaid called Sarah Presbyterian, open to attentions; snores. Elderly cook; Primitive Methodist, open to attentions; snores. Footman—Charles Jackson; street door chain, and bolts. Dare to allow myself to wince. Positively approach from the ground floor, which is shuttered and barred for the bar has no catch and can be raised with tab-shaker.

Valuable contents of House—Presentation plate from grateful citizens, solid repeaters, Multready envelopes, Two diamond rings, complete edition of "Bradshaw" from 1839 to present time, 58 vols., bound limp calf.

General—Mr. Davis sleeps second floor front; servants on third floor. Dress goes to bed at 10. Never on Sunday. Snores on account of late suppers; otherwise excellent house for purposes.

This seemed to me to be a capital house to try single-handed. At 12 o'clock that very night I packed two crowbars, a bunch of skeleton keys, a dark lantern, a life-preserver, a few silent matches, some putty, a life-preserver and a knife, and set off at once to Davis' Square.

It was a bitterly cold night, and the snow two feet deep on the ground. It would be sure to attract attention. I might possibly get a cab and drive for a wager, but who would believe me?

I grew very cold.

I looked out of the window, and presently I saw the bull's-eye of a policeman who was wearily plodding through the snow. I felt that my only course was to surrender to him.

"Policeman," said I from the window, "one word."

"Anything wrong, sir?" said he.

"I have been a-omitting a burglary in this house, and I shall feel deeply obliged to you if you will kindly take me into custody."

"Nonsense, sir," said he; "you'd better go to bed."

"There is nothing I should like better, but I live in Lincoln's Inn, and I have nothing on but my night-shirt and an almost frozen. Pray take me into custody."

"The street door's open," said he.

"Yes," said I. "Come in."

He came in. I explained the circumstances to him, and with great difficulty I convinced him that I was in earnest. The good fellow put his own great coat over me and lent me his own handcuffs. In ten minutes I was being brought in at Walton Street Police Station. In ten days I was convicted at the Old Bailey. In ten years I returned from penal servitude.

I found that poor Mr. Davis had gone to his long home—consumption, I believe.

For many years I never passed the house without a shudder at the terrible hours I spent in it as a burglar. I have often tried to forget the incident I have been relating, and for a long time I tried in vain. Perseverance, however, met with its reward. I recommenced try. Gradually one detail after another slipped from my recollection, and one hour I found myself, to my great and intense delight, that I had absolutely forgotten all about it.—R. S. Gilbert.

The Earliest Woman's Rights.

Margaret Brent, said John L. Thomas in a lecture before the Maryland Historical society, was the first woman in America to claim the right to vote. She landed in St. Mary's City, on the St. Mary's river, in 1638. She was connected with Lord Baltimore either by blood or marriage. Leonard Calvert, Lord Baltimore's brother, suddenly prostrated on his deathbed, and not having time to make his will, called Margaret Brent: "Take all and pay all." Then he called for a private conference with her, and she received his dying words. She took the lieutenant's home and lived in it. As Leonard Calvert was also governor of the colony, she claimed control of all pardons, seals and profits of Lord Baltimore. The court refused her in this position. She claimed that she had the right to vote in the Assembly as the representative of Leonard Calvert, and also of Lord Baltimore. On Jan. 21, 1648, when the Legislature assembled at Fort St. Johns, she demanded her right to vote as a member of the General Assembly of the State of Maryland. It was denied her.

Taming a Horse.

During Dr. Dio Lewis' "Gypsying in the Sierras," he became much interested in Prof. Tapp, of San Francisco, who tamed wild and vicious horses without violence or drugs. Showing the doctor a herd of wild horses from the mountains, the Professor said, "I will may pick out any horse from this herd, and in two hours I will drive him before a buggy, and when going down hill will let the buggy bounce on his heels, without the least risk." The Doctor selected the largest horse, the leader of the herd. It took an hour to separate him from his fellows and drive him into the Professor's private corral, which was about the size of a circus ring, with rated six inches deep, and secured by a six-rail plank fence, twelve feet high. By this he meant himself in the corral alone, where he saw what he thes doer below.

First Tapp entered the corral, having in his hand a whip with a short stock and a long, heavy lash.

In his left hand was a rope, which he threw over the head of the horse, passing it through the ring of the headstall.

He tried to back, and sat down in the sand. He sprang to his feet, again backed, and sat down in the sand.

"Pretty soon," said the Professor, "he will switch his tail from side to side; that means he gives up."

Within eight minutes, the horse moved his tail from side to side. "Now he's done," said the Professor.

He knelt down by the horse's hind legs, untied the rope, unbuckled the straps, walked behind him, put his hands upon the horse's hind legs, shook his head between them, patted his head and led him about the corral.

I was obliged to leave, but I learned that he harnessed the horse, and let the buggy strike his heels while going down hill.

Cured His Dump.

As the passengers were leaving one of the ferry-boats a gentleman who stood beside a colonel was overheard:

"What I saw a poor fellow like that I am consoled for not being rich."

"What?"

"Why, that man with the dump on his back, had rather pass through life days than be deformed and have millions of money."

"I can cure him in about five minutes —come and see," replied the officer, as he walked toward the unfortunate and invited him to pass up stairs. There was a kick, but he had to go, and three or four minutes' time sufficed to remove Calvert on one hand and Lord Baltimore, she claimed control of all pardons, seals and profits of Lord Baltimore. The court refused her in this position. She claimed that she had the right to vote in the Assembly as the representative of Leonard Calvert, and also of Lord Baltimore. On Jan. 21, 1648, when the Legislature assembled at Fort St. Johns, she demanded her right to vote as a member of the General Assembly of the State of Maryland. It was denied her.

HUMOR.

[From Puck's Sun.]

An exchange says that "Hilliary Tex., has a beer drinking dog. If is a four-legged variety the peculiar of the animal is indeed worthy of record.

Professor Newton publishes these interesting information that "the east receives about three billion of meteors every year, but they only increase in size of the earth one inch in one hundred years." That, of course, will include the number of meteors a man sees dashing through space after he has stepped on an orange peel and one is deftly and suddenly laid the back of his head on a stone sidewalk. No man has yet been able to count those.

A correspondent of the English sparrow says "the legislature, in many towns, is composed largely of lawyers, politicians, contractors, and that its unanimous resolution for belligerency." It is never before been known what on really all the sparrow, but if that is so the sparrow should be killed before the same amount of nonsense general. There is danger of poison who to spread over the country, and consistent that the sparrow will be allowed to go with the same complaint. If that case should I read on in Chicago, by instance, I would be dangerous to be sighting the street lights at night to the sparrow.

[From the Burlington Hawkeye.]

A New York paper declares that are over 40,000 unbiassed people in that city. Happy people! they don't have to pay any rent.

A Nebraska woman only 16 years old has twenty-one children. She is not one thousand, but that is one and two hundred.

It is well enough to embosie "Good Night" on sleepy colors on a pillow-sham, but when the bolster is stuffed with prairie hay and the mattress is preparing to celebrate it golden wedding, the laughable wish is to sarcastic to be pleasant.

Julia Ward Howe says: "Corporate property can be kept out of good society. No, but they can be made most awfully uncomfortable while they are in.

The system of "student government," which has just been adopted in Bowdoin, has been in successful operation at Amherst for several years. The Amherst Argonaut says: "Under this system the discipline of the college is administered entirely by the students, and the faculty can, and on occasion has, exchanged with itself than the faculty can, and on occasion has successfully refused to take cases of the faculty also.

There are a lot of camels now running wild, and multiplying and rapidly, in the great American desert, which used to belong to the Government and were used in the army. A British tourist, who gorges himself upon its hump and takes home its hide, under the impression that he has "bagged a blooming buffalo that he mailed his sons, you know," but he says this incidental slaughter, the camels not entirely destroyed. So if you are looking for a couple of camels to drive tandem, go West and scout about the Gila valley for a while.

[From the Mexican Traveler.]

How odd is a tree when it reaches the full-age.

Some people are not too fool for utterance.

The latter will average about one dose of quinine.

A man may not want to buy the cotton, but he runs it out of the pasty, he becomes a purr-chaser.

When a drove of cattle get to bellowing you can't get so far away from them that they will not be herd.

"Hit it with a brick," said a slangfast young man to a sharp girl. "All right, sir; I'll just throw you at it."

One thousand botanists per cupita is the average wealth of the United States, and we have a detective out looking for the man at our door.

"I won't go to the station-house with you, I'm sleepy and cold," said a man he's about to be arrested. "Then you'll rap you up," and he cracked him one with his billy.

"You're a thief and a liar," said a candidate to an editor. "What's that? You're a thief and a liar." "Pshaw! what's the use of your disappointing a man that way? I thought you had something to tell me I hadn't heard before. I want news and not matter ten or a dozen years old."

Pistols and Matrimony.

The daughter of an English Baronet fell in love with a poor lawyer nearly 100 years ago. She challenged him to fight a duel, which he was forced to accept. She appeared masked, and gave him his choice of either fighting her or marrying her. His second, who was also unaware of the woman's identity or the cause of her strange conduct advised his principal to marry her. After the ceremony, during which she still wore the mask, they drove to her rich home, and, after withdrawing for a few moments, she returned and captured her husband by her beauty and tasteful dress.

Great humiliations rarely console us; we forget them. Sublime thoughts come from the soul. To say now things is easier than to reconcile those that have been said. Language and intellect have bounds. Truth is infinite. Avarice is the last and the most tyrannical of passions.—Vauvenargues.

Reason should not regulate, but supplement virtue.—Vauvenargues.

Lincoln as a Wrestler.

Of the many stories and incidents told and written illustrative of the character and career of Abraham Lincoln, his abilities as a wrestler have never been brought to light. Lincoln really prided himself upon being a good wrestler, as evidenced by a story the writer heard often related by Maj. Welker, of Lewiston, Ill.:

"I was a member of the Illinois Legislature says Walker in 1836, at which time the State capital was located at Vandalia. One day while Lincoln (who was also a member) and I were sitting together engaged in friendly banter and conversation relative to our athletic accomplishments, Abe boastfully said, as he struck his knee with his clenched fist: 'Walker, I can throw down any one in the Legislature.' I replied: 'Abe Lincoln, you can't do it. I am not much of a man myself, but I will wager both of champagne that my colleague Jonas Bavail, can down you so quick that it will make your head swim.'

"'Done,' said Lincoln, eagerly. Bavail was informed of the wager; arrangements were made, and the next day Jonas Bavail, Abraham Lincoln and myself walked out upon the open prairie east of Vandalia, and preparations were made to test their physical powers. Bavail was a powerfully built man, but Lincoln eyed him closely, as they stripped, like school boys, for the contest, and informed him, with a merry twinkle in his eye, that he was going to 'down him.' After having thrown off their coats and vests, the word was given and they clinched. For a few moments there were interesting evolutions performed by both parties, at the end of which time the long legs of Lincoln described a half circle above the head of Bavail, and he was thrown heavily to the ground. She shortly scrambled to his feet, straightened up his pantaloons, and, again grasped Bavail by the waist, thinking to overpower him by sheer strength. The manœuvre was of short duration, however, for Bavail was again thrown heavily to the ground, and before he could regain his feet Lincoln was astride his chest, with his knees pressing his shoulders to the ground. 'Now, sir,' said Lincoln, 'I will release you, but you must acknowledge that I can throw you.' Bavail was compelled to acknowledge the corn, and Lincoln released him. Bavail then arose, and, extending his hand to Lincoln, said: 'Mr. Lincoln, you are the strongest man I ever met in my life, and I will pay the champagne with pleasure.' Lincoln replied: 'Mr. Bavail, I am glad to make your acquaintance, but I don't want your champagne. I have won a reputation as a wrestler, which is sufficient for me.' Bavail and I then had a hearty laugh at Lincoln's expense, and the latter joined in the laugh himself."

HYPOCHONDRIA.

The Mysterious Element in the Mind that Arouses Vague Apprehensions—What Actually Causes It.

The narrative below, by a prominent scientist, touches a subject of universal importance. Few people are free from the distressing fears which by melancholia beings. They come at all times and are fed by the very cause which they themselves start. They are a dread of coming derangement caused by present disorder, and bring about more suicides than any other one thing. Their first approach should be carefully guarded.

Editor Herald: It is seldom I appear in print, but I should not do my self justice to myself in possession of truths, the revelation of which may prove of priceless value to many who may see these lines. Nine tenths of the people suffer, for many years I was conscious of a lack of a want of nerve tone. My mind seemed sluggish, and I felt a certain failing of in my memory—a certain loss of intellectuousness, mentality and vigor. I presume this is the same way in which an innumerable number of people feel, who, like myself, are not physically below par; but, like thousands of others, I paid no attention to these annoying troubles, attributing them to overwork, and resorting to a glass of beer or a milk punch, which would for the time invigorate and relieve my weariness.

After awhile the stimulant commenced to disagree with my stomach, my weariness increased, and I was compelled to resort to other means to find relief. It a physician is suffering for a fee, he will prescribe for him, as he cannot see himself as he sees others, so I called a physician and he advised me to try a little exercise, food, or a beer or two drops of bitters. I took two or three bottles of the aforesaid tonic with no apparent benefit. My insomnia and indigestion seemed to increase, my fears of ruin, I suffered from miserable pains in different parts of my body, my muscles became sore, my bowels were constipated, and my prospects for recovery were not very flattering. I called my case to another physician, and he advised me to take to bed in charge of Magendie's calomel morphine, two or three times a day, for the weakness and distress in my stomach, and a blue pill every other night to relieve me generally. The morphine produced such a deathly nausea that I could not keep it down, and the blue pill failed to relieve my constipation.

In this condition I passed nearly a year, wholly unfit for business, when the effort to think was irksome and painful. My mind became enfeebled, and I suffered from incapacity, with an appalling sense of misery and general apprehensiveness. I would have passed sleepless nights and was troubled with a peculiar action of the heart, a nervous feverish condition and the most excruciating pulsations in my stomach, living for days on rice water and gruel, until, worn out, the digestive functions seemed to be entirely destroyed.

It was natural that while in this condition I should become hypochondriac, and fearful consequences of self-destruction constantly presented themselves. I experienced an indescribable desire for suicide, and was getting well awake for a long time nonplussed, troubled with dreams, and when at last I did fall into an unconscious state of short intervals I was disturbed by horrid dreams, in this condition I determined to visit my home in Europe, but in spite of all the attractions of good living and a change of scene and climate I did not improve and so returned home while scarcely free from the terrible desire to leave the house.

Among the numerous friends that rejoiced on me was one who had been afflicted somewhat similarly to myself, but who had been restored to perfect health. I pen her every consideration I began the same treatment by taking a dose of Warner's safe cure, which benefited. At first I experienced little, if any, relief from its use, except that it did not sicken my stomach as other remedies or even food had done, however, and generally repelled, but after the third bottle could see a marked change for the better, and soon after the fifteenth bottle I was happy to state that I was entirely free from all my professional troubles. I sleep well, my digestion is perfect, I go from day to day without a feeling of weariness or pain; indeed I am well man, and shortly through the instrumentality of Warner's safe cure. I recommend this remedy as taking the highest possible rank in the treatment of all diseases marked by debility, loss of appetite, and all other symptoms of stomach and digestive disorders. It is overwhelmingly superior to the many bitters, and dyspepsia cures of the day, and I certainly have no hesitation in saying that it is the most valuable remedy before the public universally. Thousands of people to-day are suffering in precisely the way I was, and should they consult the physicians, that I have above described, they will be told to do exactly as I did, but let your go through this ordeal, or a bottle of Hop bitters, I feel certain will make you a healthy man.

Yours truly,
Rev. Wm. Mehl.

Sworn to before me this 20th day of December, 1880.
Peter Schenck, Notary Public.

ARE DREAMS PROPHETIC?

Some Instances in Point—How Prediction May Be Anticipated.

[New N. Y. Times.]

Two days after the death of Lincoln I met "the President" by deal in the White House, "called by the hand of Death." When his wife heard of the sad event she exclaimed, "All dreams are true now." The majority of dreams however, are true but filled—they are not "analogous or the reverse to contrary events. Dreams are often a mere cast of the idea that the soul is asleep. They find themselves the subject of strange incidents. They know they are not what they were, and as they appear to remember, they are quite sane. They will not be long or early. They impress one as much as the result of an evening's dissipation, but then can be cleared off by prompt and thorough measures. We could tell very many that we can be prevented, and that the decks are cleared for action. Before these the importance of many sets may promptly be given to the wind.

Judge William Mont, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., was highly respected. Two years ago were plagued by a dream that he was about to die. He was not sick, but was troubled with pains in various parts of his body, and suffered much mental anxiety. He felt he was very soon to leave his family, and finally he became so low spirited that he could not attend to business. He was induced to try Warner's safe kidney and liver cure. He procured a bottle and commenced its use. Before he had taken half of it he was entirely relieved of his pains, and in a few days was restored to perfect health. He says he will never be without Warner's safe cure.

Judge Mont is well known in Wilkesbarre, and his case is one of great interest.

Mr. Wm. Mehl, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., was troubled with dreams. He says: "I was troubled with dreams. He says: "I was troubled with dreams. He says: "I

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, · · MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

The Veteran, published at Lansing is the only official organ of the G. A. R. order in the state, and it is good one too.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

It is reported that Cadillac is recovering from her unfortunate financial difficulties, and times in that city are becoming much improved.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and tone up the system you will find Pratt's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by O. R. Weed & Co. 8-29

The only possible way to revive American commerce is to permit Americans to buy their ships where they please.—New York Times.

TOOTHACHE.—Money is a great cure for aching hearts, but a twenty dollar gold piece placed on an aching tooth don't seem to have the least effect. In fact, nothing is sure but Hamilton's Toothache Drops, which are warranted to cure in one minute. Price only 25 cents. Sold by O. R. Weed & Co.

Mr. Morrison accordingly steps squarely upon Mr. Morrill's platform of 1861, and compels extremities either to admit that his measure is tolerable, or else that the industries of the country are more in need of protection to-day than they were twenty three years ago. The dilemma is obvious. —St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Beware! Coughs, colds, and slight Throat Diseases often develop into Bronchitis, Seated Cough, Consumption, etc., and should have immediate attention and be removed in the first stages. Not only public speakers, but all, are liable to throat troubles, and to obtain relief should use Hamilton's Cough Troches, which relieve Coughs and Hoarseness, making the articulation clear. Warranted to give satisfaction Price 25c per box. Sold O. R. Weed & Co.

Mr. Hawley offered a resolution, which was agreed to, directing the committee on public printing to inquire into the economy and feasibility of the publication of an official gazette of the United States, to contain the advertisements or proposals for contracts—the general orders of heads of executive departments, the more important appointments, and such other subjects as are now published by government advertisements and in special official sheets.

When a cure is guaranteed why will you refuse to be relieved of that cough which is liable to become seated on your lungs and to cause you many a suffering day and sleepless night? Your children are liable to be taken with Croup and the before a doctor can be summoned. Be wise and obtain a remedy that will not fail to give relief from Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, and all other lung difficulties. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will do all this and costs but a trifle. Price 25 and 50 cents a bottle. Sold by O. R. Weed & Co.

For a great many years sugar has been protected by a considerable duty, yet its production in the United States has decreased. Of late years Louisiana has averaged a crop of only about 530,000,000 pounds yearly, while thirty years ago it reached over 395,000,000 pounds. The fact indicates that it is one of those articles so poorly adapted for production in this country, as compared with others, that protection can do little for it.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Cincinnati Enquirer makes light of the Chicago Herald's demand that a senatorial committee shall be sent to Ohio to investigate the lawlessness everywhere rampant in the state, but The Herald rests its case on the telegraphic dispatches. Murders, lynchings, threats by masked bands, terrorism, assaults, and whippings make up the record. There has been nothing in Virginia to equal it since the retreat of Lee from Petersburg. Mr. Arthur should see to it that that state be given a republican form of government.

Rules of the School.

There have been numerous complaints concerning the government of the school, and further the benefit of those who do not know the rules now in force, we give them a place this week:

Section 1. No pupil shall be admitted to any department of the School under five years of age. Pupils are required to commence attendance promptly at the beginning of each term, to be regular and punctual, to conform to the regulations, and to yield prompt obedience to all directions of teachers.

Sec. 2. Each pupil shall be required to pursue at least three of the regular studies, and no pupil shall take extra studies or discontinue any in which he is engaged, without special permission from the Principal.

Sec. 3. Any pupil who is habitually tardy, or truant, or guilty of open disobedience or insubordination, or who indulges in the use of profane or improper language, or makes use of tobacco in any form during school hours, or whose general conduct is injurious, may be suspended by the Principal, and re-admitted only by permission of the Board.

Sec. 4. Any pupil who shall injure or deface any school property, shall pay all damages or be suspended, and re-admitted only by permission of the Board.

Sec. 5. Every pupil who shall be absent in the Grammar and Intermediate Departments four half days, and in the Primary Department six half days in four consecutive weeks without satisfactory excuses from the parent or guardian, either in person or by letter, that the absences were caused by sickness of the pupil or in the pupil's family, shall forfeit his or her seat in the school, and the teacher shall immediately notify the parent and the Principal that the pupil is suspended. Pupils thus suspended shall not be restored unless the parent or guardian shall give to the Principal satisfactory assurance that the pupil's attendance in the future shall be regular and punctual.

In application of this rule, two tardinesses, two dismissals, or leaving school without permission during school hours, shall be regarded equivalent to one absence.

Absence or dismissal for religious instruction, or during days held sacred by parents, shall be exempt from the above discipline at the written request of the spiritual adviser of the family, sent to the Principal.

Sec. 6. Concerted absence or truancy from school, or from any regular exercise, may be punished by suspension, at the discretion of the Principal.

Sec. 7. Each pupil must be supplied with books, slate, and other utensils required by the class of which he is a member, and no pupil without such necessary supplies shall retain connection with any grade after reasonable notice by the teacher. Indigent pupils, in cases of necessity, may be provided for by application to the Board.

Sec. 8. Each class shall have its regular course of study for each term, as prescribed by the Board, which each member shall be required to pursues the Principal may, in case of necessity, on application of parent or guardian, excuse a pupil for a time from a study or studies; all the studies of a course, however, must be completed before graduation.

Sec. 9. All non-resident pupils shall pay tuition at the rate of $3.00 per term, in advance, and no non-resident pupil shall be received by the teacher, except on presentation of receipt for tuition for ensuing term.

Morrison's Entering Wedge.

There are a good many people who will not be satisfied with the Morrison tariff bill. It will not please the extreme free traders. It will not be even a popular large and intelligent class of statesmen and students who have exposed the glaring inequalities of the present tariff act, for it retains most of them. It will not suit the protectionists, who look upon any reduction of the monopoly bounties paid them as ruinous, and who would oppose the slightest interference with their tariff enriched interests as strenuously as they would a proposition to wipe out the entire iniquitous system. It will satisfy the country of one thing, however. Its presentation and consistent advocacy on the floor of the house will be an emphatic notice that the intelligent and progressive element in the democratic party is determined that taxes shall come down; that the government shall not take from the people annually millions of money for which it has no legitimate use; that the monstrous wrong of imposing burdens on one class and another and much less numer ous class may be pampered into wealth shall be done away with, and that as speedily as possible the laws which have destroyed our merchant marine, fostered monopolies, and impoverished millions shall be repealed. Doubtless Mr. Morrison's only object at this time is to give the country an earnest and fair trial and many others of like reasoning among the leaders of his party would do if they had the power.

It would be a mere waste of time and labor with congress as at present constituted to propose a bill which would correct all the evils of the existing tariff laws. Their name is legion. Such a measure might not pass the house. It certainly would fail in the senate. The bill prepared by Mr. Morrison, proposing a horizontal reduction of 20 per cent in the duties levied, will be opposed with as much vigor as a more elaborate one would be. It may pass the house, but it can go no further, for it will be confronted by a senate and a president committed to the maintenance of war taxes. Having run its course it may be dropped, but the issue which it will have created will live. That is the object of the present bill, and as such it will be accepted by tariff reformers everywhere as the entering wedge which in time must rend asunder the system of deception and wrong known as protection. It makes the issue plain and forcible. It is a step, albeit a short one, in the direction of right. It recognizes the necessity of action to the end that the people may be relieved of taxes which they have long borne uncomplainingly and for the levying of which there is now no further need, and in the most expeditious manner possible it provides for their reduction. It will do to begin with. The finishing touches, the lopping off of this or that overfed monopoly, may be attended to later. The discussion of this question cannot fail to be beneficial to the country. It will infuse new life in politics, send brainless demagogues to the rear, eliminate the bloody-shirt sectionalism, and raise the statesmanship of the country above the level of the Mahones and Keifers and Eliza Pinkstons. Whether the Morrison bill meets its death in the house, in the senate, or at the hands of the president, will now make little difference. The democratic party must stand or fall by the demand that taxes shall be reduced; that they shall be so imposed as to rest equitably upon all, and that the delusive idea of a tariff for protection shall be renounced once for all.—Chicago Herald.

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

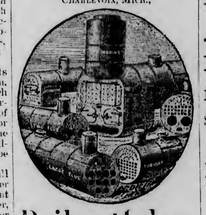
For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,



Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Repairing of all kinds, and Repairing on Boilers promptly attended to.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect January, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv		7 40am	7 15pm
Richmond	2 37pm	10 32	9 52
Winchester	3 04	11 37	11 00
Ridgeville	4 11	11 57	11 21
Fort Wayne, ar	6 42	12 55pm	1 53am
Fort Wayne, lv		2 47	2 50	8 05pm
Fort Wayne, lv		2 55	2 52	9 17
Kendallville		3 31	3 31	10 35
Sturgis		4 11	4 14	10 35
Vicksburg		4 31	4 34	11 29
Kalamazoo, ar		6 52	6 52	12 25pm
Kalamazoo, lv		7 02	7 12	1 52
Gd Rapids, ar		9 02	9 22	3 57
Gd Rapids, lv	7 15am		9 30	4 15
Big Rapids	9 41		10 47	5 45
Reed City	10 17		11 20	6 27
Cadillac, ar	11 25		12 18pm	7 27
Cadillac, lv			1 12	8 18
Traverse City, ar			4 25	9 30
Kalkaska, lv			1 47	12 00am
Manchester			1 49	12 55
Boone Falls			2 07	2 29
Petoskey, ar			6 24	6 44
Harbor Springs			7 15	9 45
Mackinaw City			8 30	6 05
St. Ignace			10 00	8 50
Marquette			7 00pm	7 50pm
Negaunee, ar			9 12	7 08

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv			5 15pm	7 30am
Marquette			9 00	8 30
St. Ignace			5 30am	6 15pm
Mackinaw City			6 40	9 15
Harbor Springs			8 10	10 45
Petoskey, lv			7 00	1 20
Boyne Falls			7 18	11 33
Manchester			8 15	12 27am
Kalkaska			9 51	2 58
Traverse City, lv			9 55am
Cadillac, ar			11 37	5 30
Cadillac, lv		3 30pm	11 45	5 50
Reed City		4 30	1 12pm	7 16
Big Rapids		5 12	1 41	7 49
Howard City		6 08	2 35	8 47
Belding		6 27	2 48	9 05
Gd Rapids, ar		7 40	3 05	10 25
Gd Rapids, lv	6 32am		4 25	12 30pm
Kalamazoo, ar	8 32		6 52	2 24
Kalamazoo, lv	8 37		6 52	2 29
Vicksburg	9 07		7 22	3 00
Sturgis	10 01		8 16	4 12
Kendallville	11 18		9 35	5 31
Fort Wayne, ar	12 32pm		10 52	6 42
Fort Wayne, lv	12 52	5 55am	12 02am
Ridgeville	3 09	7 56	2 33
Winchester	3 28	8 16	2 55
Richmond	4 27	9 17	4 00
Cincinnati, ar	7 05pm	12 50pm	7 35am

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Ag't, Pass. Agt.,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

J. MILO EATON,

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 1875

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware,

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoe

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY,

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House
CHARLEVOIX

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS.

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run to overtake him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all.

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charlevoix

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHING

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goods

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets.

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Feed

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a year ago, and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our establishment.

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses or residences, and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction.

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 32. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, MICH. AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

BUCKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Rittiers Block, Charlevoix, Mich. A. B. CHUCKSHANK. C. J. GRIER.

BOOG & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich. 22

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor. Real Estate business promptly attended to. MONEY TO LOAN.

T. A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

NORTON & KEAT, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne, Mich.

OSCAR F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX.—Capital $50,000. Exchange department. Depositors secured by pledge of government bonds, real estate, and mortgage notes for more than above amount. Loans to loan on first mortgages. Foreign and domestic exchange. REYNOLDS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting evening at 7 in the school house. C. F. VANAKEN, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer and praise meeting Thursday evening at 7. J. T. BOONIS, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX HOOK AND READY FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall. R. F. RISDEN, Secretary.

HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACY.

H. SUFFIELD, Homeopathic Medicines, Books, Domestic Cases, etc., Charlevoix, Mich.

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D. Office at the Ingleside.

J. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office for the present at the Ingleside.

W. B. PRESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Homeopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich. 19-

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

HORACE S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

F. & A. Masons' Hall No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

O. E. T., Charlevoix Lodge No. 327, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 220, meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

I. O. L.—True Blues No. 457, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

MANISTEE.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 326, meets every Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Bank.

A. BITTNER, President. A. E. UPHOFF, Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general Banking business transacted. Money on loan on approved paper at reasonable rates. Deposits received. Collections given careful attention and remittances made promptly.

G. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

WARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.

Prices reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON.

Op. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COMPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public. Good headquarters for the Pelonkey and Elk Lake trade.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CHILDS, Proprietor,

Boyne City, Michigan.

House thoroughly refitted and refurnished.

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has purchased the

Ladies' and Children's

Furnishing Goods,

Lately owned by Fisher & Linwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and add as many as possible. Call and see her stock

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.
PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County.

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and see me. West side Bridge St.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best timepiece ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges.

O. W. SMITH,

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.

Electro-plating in Gold and Silver. Any article of Jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order. 29

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect January, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv		7 40am	7 15pm
Richmond	2 37pm	10 32	9 52
Winchester	3 04	11 37	11 00
Ridgeville	4 11	11 57	11 21
Fort Wayne, ar	6 42	12 55pm	1 53am
Fort Wayne, lv		2 47	2 50	8 05pm
Kendallville		3 25	3 32	9 17
Sturgis		4 13	4 14	10 35
Vicksburg		4 31	4 34	11 29
Kalamazoo, ar		6 52	6 52	12 25pm
Kalamazoo, lv		7 02	7 12	1 52
Gd Rapids, ar		9 02	9 22	3 57
Gd Rapids, lv	7 15am		9 30	4 15
Big Rapids	9 41		10 47	5 45
Reed City	10 17		11 20	6 27
Cadillac, ar	11 25		12 18pm	7 27
Cadillac, lv			1 12	8 18
Traverse City, ar			4 25	9 30
Kalkaska, lv			1 47	12 00am
Manchester			1 49	12 55
Boone Falls			2 07	2 29
Petoskey, ar			6 24	6 44
Harbor Springs			7 15	9 45
Mackinaw City			8 30	6 05
St. Ignace			10 00	8 50
Marquette			7 00pm	7 50pm
Negaunee, ar			9 12	7 08

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv			5 15pm	7 30am
Marquette			9 00	8 30
St. Ignace			5 30am	6 15pm
Mackinaw City			6 40	9 15
Harbor Springs			8 10	10 45
Petoskey, lv			7 00	1 20
Boyne Falls			7 18	11 33
Manchester			8 15	12 27am
Kalkaska			9 51	2 58
Traverse City, lv			9 55am
Cadillac, ar			11 37	5 30
Cadillac, lv		3 30pm	11 45	5 50
Reed City		4 30	1 12pm	7 16
Big Rapids		5 12	1 41	7 49
Howard City		6 08	2 35	8 47
Belding		6 27	2 48	9 05
Gd Rapids, ar		7 40	3 05	10 25
Gd Rapids, lv	6 32am		4 25	12 30pm
Kalamazoo, ar	8 32		6 52	2 24
Kalamazoo, lv	8 37		6 52	2 29
Vicksburg	9 07		7 22	3 00
Sturgis	10 01		8 16	4 12
Kendallville	11 18		9 35	5 31
Fort Wayne, ar	12 32pm		10 52	6 42
Fort Wayne, lv	12 52	5 55am	12 02am
Ridgeville	3 09	7 56	2 33
Winchester	3 28	8 16	2 55
Richmond	4 27	9 17	4 00
Cincinnati, ar	7 05pm	12 50pm	7 35am

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Ag't, Pass. Agt.,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

HALL'S Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE IN FIVE YEARS THAT IT FAILS TO CURE!

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you are troubled with this distressing disease, ask your Druggist for it, and ACCEPT NO IMITATION OR SUBSTITUTE. If he has not got it, send to us and we will forward immediately. Circulars free. Address

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

DR. CROUTER, Agt., Charlevoix. 28

Buy note paper and envelopes with a view of Charlevoix, at O. R. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

WENDELL PHILLIPS,

THE GREAT AGITATOR AND REFORMER.

With the death of Wendell Phillips, the last of the great pioneers and original apostles of abolitionism in the United States is gathered to his reward. He was born in Boston on the 29th of November, 1811. At the age of nineteen he graduated from Harvard College, began at once the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in 1834.

His sympathies were strongly aroused by the persecution of the early abolitionists, more particularly during the Boston mob in October, 1835, when Garrison, the leader of the abolitionists narrowly escaped with his life. The following year Phillips gave up the practice of law because he was unwilling to act under an oath of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States, and publicly joined the abolitionists. In 1865 he succeeded William Lloyd Garrison as president of the anti-slavery society, which position he held until the dissolution of the organization in 1870.

In his time Wendell Phillips espoused many causes, such as prohibition, abolition of interest on money, communism, agrarianism, greenback fiat money, the election of Gen. Butler to the presidency, woman's rights, the abolition of government and all penal laws, the restriction of rullians and criminals by the power of love only, the abolition of slavery and of the American constitution as "a covenant with death and a league with hell." He opposed bitterly the formation of the anti-slavery political party. He was candidate for governor of Massachusetts at one time but he received only a small vote. During the war he dropped all his views of no government and non-political action against slavery, and became an advocate of the most extreme measures for its suppression. Thus twenty-five of the best years of his life devoted to the agitation of an anti-slavery sentiment, culminated in success with the issue of the emancipation proclamation and amidst a mighty shock of arms.

With the extinguishment of slavery the activities of Mr. Phillips' mind sought new directions, and whatever subject he discussed, the magnetic eloquence, the never-failing courage, the splendid intellectual powers, the fierce defiance of public sentiments, if against him, are fresh in the country's recollection. His sympathies with humanity were unbounded, his hatred of oppression in all its forms, and of shams in all their phases intense, his grasp of the future possibilities of American civilization far-reaching, and the world, in spite of any mistakes that he may have made was the better for his living.

In personal appearance Mr. Phillips was a man of fine and commanding presence. He was a delightful the most complete and polished orator on the American platform. Although the associate of the cultured and aristocratic, he was a man of the simplest habits and the least ostentation. He lived for forty years in a modest two-story brick house built by himself in Boston and which he vacated most unwillingly in 1882, the property having been "condemned" for street improvement. In the death of Mr. Phillips the little band of surviving original abolitionists loses its most heroic and striking figure. Doctor Furness and Robert Purvis, of Washington and the veteran poet Whittier of Massachusetts, and a few others of less note still survive to mourn the death of their silver-tongued leader, but the ranks of the heroic men and women who faced obloquy and persecution for the sake of the friendless black man are growing thinner each year.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

The last week in the national capital has been one of considerable sensation, though rather subdued in tone and lacking that intensity which is necessary to create in a man's countenance an "ain't it awful" look. The most prominent theme of conversation has been and the ex-speaker from Ohio, is certainly the "worsted" man in the fracas. Col. Boynton, the Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, whom Mr. Keifer charges with having approached him (Keifer) with an offer or intimation that if Keifer would lend his official recognition to the passage of the famous land scrip bill "there would be millions in it," is an old journalist of the highest character, enjoying a reputation of strict honesty and truthfulness, which alone gives his word more weight than Keifer's sworn testimony. General Keifer is certainly in a bad position and will be retired from congress at the expiration of his present term if the exposures made will have their proper effect on his constituency. These investigations are still in progress and are developing some ugly characteristics of the ex-speaker.

THE KEIFER-BOYNTON IMBROGLIO,

A FLUTTER AMONG THE MORMONS.

Private advices received here from Utah state that Senator Edmund's bill for the suppression of polygamy reported the other day by Mr. Hoar from his committee and recommended to be passed by the senate, has caused great excitement in Salt Lake City. If enacted in its present force and sternly enforced, it is hard to see how the evil of polygamy can longer exist. The provisions of the bill are so many and lengthy that I can not include its scope in a miscellaneous letter, but should it pass will send you for publication its full text.

THE GOVERNOR OF UTAH.

Eli Murray, is under a hot fire from various sources charging him with dishonesty while U. S. marshall of Kentucky. These charges, it is claimed are resurrected at the present time by polygamous influences in order to secure Murray's removal as governor of Utah, or to prevent his re-appointment next June, as Gov. Murray is one of the strongest antipolygamists in the country and has caused the mormons all the trouble he possible could in his official capacity.

PENDLETON STILL ALIVE.

Senator Pendleton has lost none of his reform civil service ideas by reason of his failure to be returned to the senate. He has just introduced a bill proposing such an amendment of the constitution of the United States as will provide for the election by the people of postmasters, marshals and district attorneys, thus abridging the president's appointing power and removing the possibility of using this vast patronage for political prestige. Mr. Pendleton has confidence that the resolution will yet become a law, but I have not found a single senator who would vote for its passage. The senator, in speaking of his late contest with Payne in Ohio, says that his party will suffer more than himself individually because the action was virtually an endorsement by the Ohio democracy of the spoils system that the democracy at large will not endorse. When asked what he thought of Payne as a presidential candidate he replied with a laugh: "Should Mr. Payne be nominated the democratic party would suffer the greatest defeat in all its history. But there is not the remotest danger of his selection."

"HIS EXCELLENCY."

Considerable discussion has existed in official circles here as to the proper manner of addressing a communication to the president. Thinking to enlighten the general public on this point of etiquette I looked over the records of the first congress and found that one of the first subjects it took up was, "what style in titles it will be proper to annex to the office of the president of the United States." It was referred to a joint committee who reported in favor of addressing the president as "his excellency," but this was rejected in the senate. A conference committee then reported in favor of "His Highness, the president of the United States of America, and protector of their liberties." This smacked to much of autocracy, and a resolution in favor of the plain address: "To the president of the United States," was adopted, and that remains in force. There is therefore no legal authority for the custom often indulged in of addressing the president as "his excellency."

FRED. DOUGLASS AND HIS BRIDE.

There are quiet rumors flying around in the city that Fred Douglass is having an unpleasant honeymoon. Mr. Douglass is the father of a daughter but a few years the junior of his new wife, and it is said the daughter will not be reconciled in having a white step mother. Miss Douglass is employed in her father's office, Mr. Douglass being recorder of deeds for Washington. What termination the affair will have it is hard to tell.

SENSATION IN REAL ESTATE CIRCLES.

Hon. Lorin Blodget of Philadelphia made things lively among real estate owners in this city last Tuesday by filing a suit for possession of nearly the whole of the northern portion of Washington. Mr. Blodget is the trustee of the late Samuel Blodget, of this city, who came here from Boston, where he was an East India merchant in 1791, and paid $200,000 in solid silver for about five hundred acres of land known as the "Jamaica" tract, the greater portion of which was and now is included within the limits of the city of Washington. There are over seventy-five blocks or squares of private residences now on this tract for which possession is sought. The ground was given to our government in trust, the conditions being that it should be devoted to the purpose of founding a capitol city before 1810. The violation of this condition is the ground of suit, and among the defendants are General Grant, W. W. Corcoran, Senator Don Cameron, ex-Postmaster General Creswell and many other prominent and wealthy men who own expensive residences and rental property on the disputed tract. The case will be hotly contested, but Mr. Corcoran laughes at the whole affair and calls it a "blackmail scheme."

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

THE committee appointed to investigate the Ischia earthquake fixes the number of persons killed at 2,313, and of the seriously wounded at 762. Seven hundred barracks of wood covered with corrugated iron, housing 9,500 persons, have been constructed by the Government provisionally. It has been decided that the most promising means of providing against the recurrence of similar catastrophes will be found in constructing all edifices, public and private, on a frame-work of stout chestnut timber; and all other constructions will be prohibited.

FREDDY GERHARDT is out in the cold. He is left. After all his persistence the poor fellow deserved a better fate. He improvades his optics as if all women are not just the same—they'll lead a fellow on till he's made a fool of himself and then throw him overboard." He likes the reputation he has had, but cannot fling off the air of a disappointed man. But he is not heart-broken—oh, no! He will shake himself together again after a while. As for Mrs. Langtry, she laughs merrily and plays her play, and affirms that she has never been in "Peril" before.

MISS MOLLIE WILLIAMS, a young lady living near St. Joseph, Mo., has just finished making a silk quilt, the blocks of which are filled in with pieces of the dresses of more or less distinguished women throughout the country. The pieces in the quilt go up into the thousands. Among the ladies who kindly furnished her specimens are: Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Sartoris, Mrs. Gov. Knott, Mrs. Langtry, Fanny Davenport, Ellen Terry, Clara Morris, Mag. Mitchell, Kellogg, Bernhardt, Lotta, Anna Dickinson, Mrs. Hendricks, Phebe Cousins, Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Modjil, Mrs. Story, Thos. C. Fletcher, Mrs. Carlisle, Mrs. Watterson, and Mrs. Crittenden.

THE late Joseph Arnold, who was for many years cashier of the Birmingham (Ct.) bank, had a prodigious memory. The Sentinel, of Ansonia, says that after he had heard Mrs. Kimberly read "Hiawatha" he repeated the entire poem. He lost his temper to the point of profanity just once: A farmer had called to deposit some money. Mr. Arnold counted it, and found it $5 short. The farmer persisted, and the cashier counted it again, with the same result. "Well, there was that sum when you took it?" the farmer broke out. The cashier stopped, looked his customer square in the eye, and retorted, "Do you suppose, sir, that I would be such a blanked fool as to steal $5 when I could step right back there pointing to the vault and steal $100,000?"

Detroit Free Press: Mr. Stanley Matthews gave a dinner to the President the other night, and a Washington paper prints the bill of fare, every line of which is in French. This seems to be a wholly useless piece of affectation. Some dishes being French in origin their names cannot, perhaps, be translated into intelligible English. Even this must not be a very frequent difficulty. But when it comes to oysters on the shell, lettuce, roast beef, partridges, cake, coffee, it is perfectly absurd to print them in anything but English. The French never print, when they can help it, the name of English dishes. In fact they do not eat many. It is a sign of servitude to the French art of cookery that so many dishes are designated in French, but when so English a dish as roast beef, so American dishes as oysters on the shell and ice-cream are put into French, even the American eagle has a right to show its claws and scream out a protest.

THOMAS H. WILLIAMS, Jr., of Stockton, Cal., having begun to lay cats with the purpose of exterminating the gophers that are laying waste the fields of alfalfa on Union Island, the Sacramento Union tells a pertinent eat story. Shortly after the discovery of the Comstock mine an old gentleman was unable to meet a mortgage of $15,500 on his place on Mormon Island. A stranger, stopping at his door, saw several pretty kittens playing in the yard. He said: "Those cats, if you had them on the Comstock, would bring you $20 apiece." The old man saddled his horse, and for the next fortnight rode from house to house, farm to farm, and village to village, begging and buying cats. He got 500 and sold them on the Comstock mine, and after he paid off his mortgage and put in bank $5000 clear he told his neighbors why he wanted cats. They no longer deemed him crazy on cats.

A BOSTON paper is responsible for the following, which is an illustration of the prevailing ignorance in regard to the new postal law: We saw, one day this week, three whole sheets of the long-familiar green stamps, 300 stamps in all, pasted up on the wall in a certain country store not twenty-five miles from Boston. In answer to our query, "Why is this?" the storekeeper replied: "Well, I got kinder stuck on those; I didn't know the law was going to be changed, and I took those stamps at face value from a cigar peddler six weeks ago. Now they ain't worth anything, and our postmaster will not change them for 2 cents, so I've stuck them up there to remind me what a fool I am." We fully coincided with him in his conclusion, but were at some pains to convince him that the process by which he reached it was wrong, and we finally left him trying to soak his $3 worth of stamps off the wall by means of a wet sponge.

A BURGLARY roost was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. James Guthrie, of Denver, recently, in a gulch near Webster, Colo. Returning from a visit to their daughter, whose home is at Grant station, they lost their way. They travelled until after nightfall before they found a cabin. In it was a rude table, some chairs, a large open stove and a good supply of food, and on a shelf were six loaded revolvers, several cartridge belts filled with ammunition and three pair of spurs. Mr. Guthrie stabled his horses in the dark, and reentered the cabin and fastened the heavy door with a huge bolt that fitted into slots in the logs. At about midnight Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie were awakened by sounds outside. "Listen," said: "I wonder who in — is there! Shall we force the door?" The answer was: "Taint no use; that door will stand as long as the cabin itself." Then the voices faded away. Mr. Guthrie lay until long after daybreak ere he ventured out. Then, on going to harness his horses by daylight, he found in the barn six mail bags that had been opened, and other evidences of highwaymen's operations. The Rocky Mountain News says that United States officials are searching for the robbers.

THE following report of Chief Nimmo, of the Bureau of Statistics, covers about 97 per cent. of the immigration of the whole country:

TWELVE MONTHS ENDED DEC. 31.

Customs Districts.	1881.	1882.
Baltimore	36,836	36,859
Boston	11,753	12,670
Detroit	21,959	23,746
Huron	2,272	1,908
Minnesota	3,113	1,598
New Orleans	3,401	3,601
New York	58,205	172,958
Passamaquoddy	1	5,603
Philadelphia	23,475	34,231
San Francisco	1,587	2,719
Total	50,036	312,541

The great falling off at San Francisco was caused by the exclusion of Chinese. The returns from Huron indicate the number of Canadian emigrants through that port. This table gives the number of aliens by nationalities:

TWELVE MONTHS ENDED DEC. 31.

Countries.	1881.	1882.
England	7,603	27,725
Ireland	5,436	29,461
Scotland	1,341	6,264
Wales	102	1,586
Germany	7,380	24,487
Switzerland	1,750	3,737
Holland	1,102	2,782
Dominion of Canada	42,248	58,538
All other countries	6,231	16,961

The inflow of English and Scotch largely exceeds the Irish at present, but the German newcomers surpass the whole number of immigrants from England, Ireland and Scotland.

Artificial Oysters in Paris.

Artificial oysters are now manufactured in large quantities by several oyster factories recently established in the neighborhood of Dunkirk. This new product, the making of which is kept a secret from the uninitiated, imitates the real oyster very perfectly in point of appearance, and the main difficulty of the business, the fixing of the spat-born product to the oyster shell, upon which it takes the place vacated by its prototype, is said to have recently been got over with perfect success. It is urged that all who eat the real oysters should carry away and destroy their shells, thus preventing them from being pressed into the service of this new alimentary fraud. To imitate oyster shells would be too costly a process, and if all the shells of the favorite bivalves could be kept out of reach of the oyster-makers the dishonest trade would receive its death blow. But as that is an exceedingly difficult matter, it is to be feared that lovers of oysters have an uncomfortable prospect before them.—Montreal Herald.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Baby's Letter.

Here in this casket you may look
Something more precious to me than gold,
For it's crumpled scrap of paper is me,
Inclosing a lock of soft, bright hair.
And pencilled over so commonplace
Is the new governess's letter to you,
Where not in vain did this Babyhood
Struggle to make itself in letters stood.

A world of colors, on a light, and song,
Such as to infancy belong.
Seem part of this letter; for, don't you see,
He is just as sure to a lady can be,
To think the orange you needn't bunch—
Barked lines like this as a year and a half,
With his head cocked on it for crumpled knot,
And sent them to me—on to Bayard.

His words—still few, he scarce has use
The fitting one for his purpose yes,
But the love in his all-loving bosom,
Beyond expression, is here expressed.
Those crooked cracks and awkward angles,
And twisted lines, like thread in tangles,
Are riddles—riddles that grandma guesses
To be stories of chickies or of cows.

And what was ever more plain than this Circle his mother labels, "A kiss"
A puppet of his new consonance,
Bringing the old to remembrance.
This letter shows clear as a day-spot ray
The angel-side of our mortal way.
And (cookie), I behold my grandpa stand
On the small o' summit of Bayland.
B. ow. Lewis.

Purpose, and No Purpose.

"Look here, Alf, I've got something to amuse you. Don't bother any longer with that tiresome stuff!"

"Thank you, Mark, but I'm interested in this thing, and I want to finish the job this afternoon."

"O, come on! To-morrow'll do just as well. I've got a box of dominos. Let's have a quiet little game. The cards is of no account, any way."

It was a very fair description of business that the two boys—Alfred Reed and Mark Prince—were talking about. The scene was the basement of the dry goods jobbing house of Wigan, Domett & Co. Alfred had just opened a bale of Russian crash, and was proceeding to "take the yards" for comparison with the number charged in the invoice. It was a rainy afternoon in the dull season. The senior partners were the only member of the firm about the premises, and he was reading the paper in his office upstairs. The other clerks and salesmen were lounging here and there, or making pretexts of business in the other departments of the establishment. Mark flourished his box of dominos in Alfred's face; but the boy was firm, and continued to roll off the yardage to himself with provoking monotony. At length he hastily jotted down some figures upon a bill of paper and compared them with the invoice. A shade of annoyance appeared upon his face. He turned to his comrade:

"Now, Mark, you have badgered me into a blunder. Please leave me alone for the present. If you like, I will come to your house this evening and try a hand at dominos, or whale you at billiards. But just now I have some business on hand that must be done."

At this appeal Mark turned away, muttering to himself what a solemn old stick Alf Reed was.

And here, let us look at this point a minute and see what sort of a "stick" Alf might truly be called. The two boys were fair samples of two sorts of clerks that may be found in almost any commercial house. Under the roof in the employ of Wigan, Domett & Co., about six months before this date, Mark Prince, then "new" or junior clerk. The task of sweeping out the store, dusting the counters and tills, arranging the goods, was divided between the two—the dregs going to the woolens falling to the charge of Mark, and the white goods and domestics to Alfred. It did not take long for young Reed to discover that Mark was a thorough shirk. He had a busting and obstructive influence in the presence of his employers, but when out of their sight he did as little as possible.

On the contrary, Alfred loved the story, as he said, to work, and to learn the business. Consequently, he never wasted a minute, but did all his duties promptly and thoroughly. He already held his position many weeks when Mark progressed, as he should do the work offered him. By way of rivalry, too, Mark offered him one-half of his perquisites, which in those days yielded quite a handsome amount of pocket money to the boys. Alfred accepted the offer, and thereafter made his appearance at the store one hour sooner than before, while Mark lounged in just in season to escape detection by his superiors.

The members of the firm had not failed to notice the superiority of the new lad over his predecessor, and but a short time previous to this date had shown him a special mark of confidence. He was permitted to take the store keys to his own home at night, whereas shirkless Mark had been compelled to make a long journey out of his way to leave them at the house of the junior partner.

Now to return to the two-hundrum matter of the crash. It was required of the boys, that in opening packages of goods they should examine the contents and compare them with the invoices. Mark had always looked upon crash as a special bore. To begin with, the pieces were clubbed with mysterious symbols, which denoted Russian measure of length; these had to be translated into English yards, and so mark'd on the goods. This being accomplished, Mark had fallen into the lazy habit of counting by eye, and comparing them with the invoices. A shade of annoyance appeared upon his face. He turned to his comrade:

"Now, Mark, you have badgered me into a blunder. Please leave me alone for the present. If you like, I will come to your house this evening and try a hand at dominos, or whale you at billiards. But just now I have some business on hand that must be done."

At this appeal Mark turned away, muttering to himself what a solemn old stick Alf Reed was.

And here, let us look at this point a minute and see what sort of a "stick" Alf might truly be called. The two boys were fair samples of two sorts of clerks that may be found in almost any commercial house. Under the roof in the employ of Wigan, Domett & Co., about six months before this date, Mark Prince, then "new" or junior clerk. The task of sweeping out the store, dusting the counters and tills, arranging the goods, was divided between the two—the dregs going to the woolens falling to the charge of Mark, and the white goods and domestics to Alfred. It did not take long for young Reed to discover that Mark was a thorough shirk. He had a busting and obstructive influence in the presence of his employers, but when out of their sight he did as little as possible.

On the contrary, Alfred loved the story, as he said, to work, and to learn the business. Consequently, he never wasted a minute, but did all his duties promptly and thoroughly. He already held his position many weeks when Mark progressed, as he should do the work offered him. By way of rivalry, too, Mark offered him one-half of his perquisites, which in those days yielded quite a handsome amount of pocket money to the boys. Alfred accepted the offer, and thereafter made his appearance at the store one hour sooner than before, while Mark lounged in just in season to escape detection by his superiors.

The members of the firm had not failed to notice the superiority of the new lad over his predecessor, and but a short time previous to this date had shown him a special mark of confidence. He was permitted to take the store keys to his own home at night, whereas shirkless Mark had been compelled to make a long journey out of his way to leave them at the house of the junior partner.

Now to return to the two-hundrum matter of the crash. It was required of the boys, that in opening packages of goods they should examine the contents and compare them with the invoices. Mark had always looked upon crash as a special bore. To begin with, the pieces were clubbed with mysterious symbols, which denoted Russian measure of length; these had to be translated into English yards, and so marked

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Payne's Weakness.

Mr. Payne, the Senator-elect from Ohio, is not a member of the Standard Oil Company, neither is he the attorney of that great monopoly. The confusion on this point arises from the fact that Mr. Payne's son, Colonel Payne, naturally an ardent supporter of his father, is one of the leading spirits and beneficiaries of that concern. The charge has been freely that Mr. Payne owes his recent election to the corrupt use of money. In many quarters, republican and democratic, this charge is believed to be true. But it has not been proven, and fairminded persons are inclined to believe it. Still, it has gained so much currency that it must militate against Mr. Payne's success as a presidential candidate, a post for which his friends are now pushing him. The Sun is on the right when it says: "Nothing has become clear from these accusations and from the discussion they have occasioned; Mr. Payne cannot in any event now be available as the democratic candidate for president." Chicago Herald.

Senator Blair's ...

Senator Blair reported from the committee on education a bill securing the benefits of common-school education to all children in the U. S. and providing that there shall be appropriated annually for ten years a sum of money beginning with $15,000,000 and diminished by $1,000,000 in each succeeding year, which sum shall be paid out to the states and territories in proportion to their illiterate population. This measure will provoke one of the liveliest debates in the senate this session as there are several of the leading senators preparing speeches for and against it. The south would derive the largest share of the money under the provisions of the bill.

Notes and News.

The Kalamazoo Telegraph has 21 carriers. Most of our city dailies have more than 20 on the carpet of unbound magazines and 10 or more paper carriers.—Exchange.

Mr. Will. Clary Co., editor El Dorado, of the Lower South, "could not come aboard" his paper has been, the ice was "simply impassable" and other hindrances, and of course, soon have a new paper.

A fire in free press room of the Detroit Free Press in Thursday morning nearly destroyed the large building in which the paper is issued. By the quick action of the Detroit Tribune rooms in the Free Press were put on their press.

There are three times as many standpatters as there are free traders in Ohio, says the Herald of that city. About nine-tenths of these stand-patters will, I expect, vote for the reprehensible bill, because, in the language of the lord-campaigner, "it means plenty of work and high wages."

We have just received from the office of the New York Sun one of the finest colored lithograph advertisements for this paper we have seen this year. It was a combination of 24 distinct chromo lithograph views, showing that free paper circulates and who reads it. The Sun has a circulation of 150,000 papers a week, over a million a week. It reads among the cheapest and best.

Kansas papers claim that prohibition in that state does prohibit. The secretary of the kansas temperance union gave figures to show that of 500 saloons in operation when the law took effect in 1881, there remain but 40 now in operation, a fact proving the law to be worth the trouble it has cost. Prediction has often been made of the speedy death of prohibition in Kansas, but the opposition has never succeeded in doing more than to cause its temporary suspension in a few large cities. Prosecutions are vigorously conducted now.

Beware! Coughs, colds, and slight throat troubles often lead to consumption. Shiloh's Cure will break up a cough, relieve the throat, and prevent consumption if taken in time. Sold by druggists on a guarantee. 25 cts., 50 cts., and $1.00. ...

When a man is ... he will ... when a man ... he will ...

Notice of Sale by Mortgage.

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed by ... dated ... and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, in liber ... of mortgages, on page ..., which mortgage was duly assigned by ... to ..., by assignment dated ... and recorded in said register's office on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, in liber ... of mortgages, on page ..., on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of ... dollars and ... cents, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, to-wit: ... at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the ... door of the court house in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, at ... o'clock in the forenoon of that day, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit: ... Dated ... A. D. 1884. ... Assignee of Mortgage.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix. In chancery. Between ... Complainant, and ... Defendants. Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the county of Charlevoix, in chancery, at the city of Charlevoix, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884. Notice is hereby given that in pursuance and by virtue of a decree of said court, made and entered in the above entitled cause on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, the undersigned, the circuit judge of said court, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, at the ... door of the court house in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, at ... o'clock in the forenoon of that day, the premises described in said decree as follows, to-wit: ... Dated ... A. D. 1884. ... Circuit Judge.

Notice of Sale by Mortgage.

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed by ... dated ... and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, in liber ... of mortgages, on page ..., which mortgage was duly assigned by ... to ..., by assignment dated ... and recorded in said register's office on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, in liber ... of mortgages, on page ..., on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of ... dollars and ... cents, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, to-wit: ... at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the ... door of the court house in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, at ... o'clock in the forenoon of that day, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit: ... Dated ... A. D. 1884. ... Assignee of Mortgage.

Notice of Sale by Mortgage.

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed by ... dated ... and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, in liber ... of mortgages, on page ..., which mortgage was duly assigned by ... to ..., by assignment dated ... and recorded in said register's office on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, in liber ... of mortgages, on page ..., on which mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of ... dollars and ... cents, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, to-wit: ... at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the ... door of the court house in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on the ... day of ... A. D. 1884, at ... o'clock in the forenoon of that day, which premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to-wit: ... Dated ... A. D. 1884. ... Assignee of Mortgage.

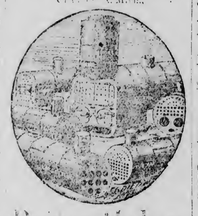
C. W. MILLER,

Buttars Block,

CHARLEVOIX.

Joseph Hyland,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.



Boiler Maker,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

Second-hand Machinery.

MACHINE WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Wholesale agents for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS.

Patent Medicines, all Kinds.

Imported and Domestic Stationery.

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

Kept in Stock.

Opera Block

John Nicholls

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Car Blades,

WAGON BOXES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at the

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

PIMPLES.

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Hurt Shoe.

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY.

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. Hotel,

CHARLEVOIX

IMMENSE CUT IN PRICES

—OF—

All-Wool Goods,

Overcoats and Suitings,

Boots and Shoes

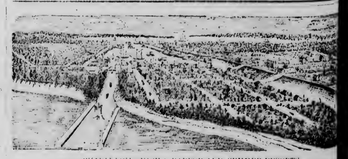
Always have on hand Rubber Goods and Shoes which I will close out at cost as I wish to make room for spring goods. All my goods I will warrant

First-Class,

And will be pleased to show them to all visitors whether they intend to purchase or not. I have inserted these prices from actual cost, and they are

Big Bargains.

E. M. Clark



CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: HARBOR AND SUMMER RESORTS.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL

A Progressive Local and Family Newspaper.

Published Every Thursday, at $1.50 a Year

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing, in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York City.

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meats,

Fresh and Salt Fish

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

Sewing Machines

A few fine sewing machines for sale very cheap. Call soon and have your choice.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED.

D. S.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Feb. 21, 1884.

Business Announcements.

Upright Emrey & Co., will have a carload of groceries arrive by special stage from Petoskey this week.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

100 cords of good dry birch and ... block wood for sale. Good inducements. Call and see me before buying elsewhere.

J. MILO EATON.

Pickles! Pickles! Pickles!

Celery, Onions, Cranberries, Green Apples, Green Apples! Green Apples! Upright Emrey & Co's.

200 bushels of Oats; and 200 bushels of Potatoes wanted at J. Speight, Emrey & Co's.

FOR SALE.—A second hand portable saw mill, with engine and boiler complete; in use when ... Call soon. J. MILO EATON.

Fox's Fat Family Oysters, at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

For Sale.—Two or three good cows for sale cheap for cash or good security.

J. MILO EATON.

Upright, Emrey & Co. received a fine supply of oysters on Tuesday.

A genuine article in Butter at B. ...

Upright, Emrey & Co. want to see all their ...

Fresh oysters again at Upright Emrey & Co's.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day, for the week ending to-day, as shown there in all cases unless marked with a ...

	7 A.M.	2 P.M.
Thursday	6	10
Friday	+10	21
Saturday	26	30
Sunday	22	44
Monday	31	40
Tuesday	42	50
Wednesday	6	16

Provision Market.

Retail prices to consumers, as corrected every Wednesday evening by UPRIGHT, EMREY & CO., general dealers.

FLOUR, per bbl, $4.00, $5.00, and $6.00.
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt., $4.50.
CORN MEAL, per cwt., bolted $2.00, unbolted, $1.90.

HAY, per ton, $9.00.
OATS, per bu, 25c.
BUCKWHEAT, per cwt., $1.50.
APPLES, per bu, $1.00.
POTATOES, per bu, 40@50c.
ONIONS, per bu, 40c.
BUTTER, per lb, 20@25c.
EGGS, per doz, 20@25c.
LARD, per lb, 12@15c.
HAMS, 16c; Shoulders, 12c.
SALT PORK, 10c, Beef, 5c.
CHEESE, 20c.
WATER WHITE OIL, 25c.
FARMERS' PRODUCE in small quantities, not specified, is wanted.

Fresh Meats from the Markets.

BEAT, best steak, 15@17c; pork steak, 20c; ... mutton, 6@7c; sausage, 10c; hams, 12c; shoulders, 10c.
TALLOW, 6@8c.

Local News Brevities.

"Mostacrt." Did you see it?

Mosspennals to-morrow evening. Give the fire department a benefit.

G. W. Jefferies went to Clare on Monday.

Mrs. Ruth Bedford returned home from Traverse city this week.

J. Milo Eaton's fine lot of plants were nipped by the frost Tuesday night.

The Boyne Stateman says that the Paxton will run there regularly next summer.

Remember the lecture of Mrs. A. S. Benjamin at the opera house this evening.

Remember the masquerade at the opera house. The fire department deserve support.

Mrs. Wm. Tower, of Charlotte, arrived on Tuesday, for a visit with her daughter, Mrs. C. J. Grier.

The Barnard church was crowded last Sunday evening, and Rev. Mr. Morgan gave an excellent sermon.

There will be preaching at Black's school house, by Rev. J. T. Giddings, next Sunday afternoon, at 2 o'clock.

Among the entertainments contemplated by the ladies of the M. E. church is a full dress Chinese wedding, to be given in the near future.

It is probable that a railroad meeting will be held at Kalkaska in a few weeks, and delegates invited to attend from Antrim and Charlevoix counties. —Breeze.

A "mum social" is under way in Charlevoix, of which the gentlemen are expected to do the cooking, and the ladies, poor things, to eat the stuff with which the tables are to be set forth. Herald. The social was held according to appointment, and the tables were provided with plenty of something good, too.

The rutabagas brought to this office last week by Mr. Edwin Case, proves that this vegetable can be grown in this county as large, solid, and sweet as elsewhere in Michigan.

The fire department filled the boiler for the pumping engine on Tuesday, and this was started on Wednesday morning. Mr. See expresses the opinion that they will be ready for business about April 1st.

The "mum social" at the Bridge street house last Friday evening was a success, netting the ladies about $30. The gentlemen waiters were very attentive, and seemed to vie with each other as to who would remain the most tickets.

Long before the hour of assembling Sunday morning your evening, the school house was crowded to its utmost, and many were unable to get inside. There seemed to be a great desire to hear Rev. Pashilford and these fortunate enough to get seats give an excellent report of the services.

C. R. Bellinger has just finished a ring for O. D. Hilton, with an agate set, which is certainly the handsomest we have seen for some time. The stone was found by the boarders of Lake Michigan. Mr. B. is gentleman and skilful workman, and one of the first class, and Mr. Hilton may well be much pleased with the specimen of his skill.

M. Wright, proprietor of the photographic car, was well pleased with Petoskey that he abides strongly of engaging in business there and making this place his home. He is a genial, out-spoking man, and would make a good citizen. Petoskey Democrat. He expressed a similar opinion of Charlevoix and his intention to be here.—Breeze.

Good fishing and collecting are of weather this winter continued last Tuesday afternoon and evening. At 2 o'clock Tuesday the thermometer indicated 50°, at 8:30 it was down to 20°, and at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning it indicated zero. At 4 o'clock Tuesday the wind and snow storm was so severe that it was almost impossible for a person to walk on the street.

Boyne City will have the largest ice crop it ever yet knew of in its history. Four or five inches of ice are already to be cleared, and as many more hollowed out, leaving from the many new ponds, to build which preparations are now being made. There these is the railroad. A standard gauge branch from the main line of the G. R. & I. will be built early in summer. Statesman.

While the papers in the different towns throughout northern Michigan are complaining of hard times, Boyne City is flourishing. There is lots of business and wages are good. We are led to quote the words of Mr. A. M. Pullen, who has been absent for some time, that the town will soon cease to have room in order to make room for the wood, logs, &c., being hauled to the bench.—Statesman.

The Western Transportation Company, having sold its fleet of propellers, among which are the Belvidere and Fountain City, which ply between Lake Michigan. Mr. Ed

OVERWORKED.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

Up with the birds in the early morning—
The dewdrop glows like a precious gem;
Beautiful tints in the skies are dawning.
But she's never a moment to look at them.
The men are wanting their breakfast early;
She must not be longer, she must not wait;
For woe is that any scamp and lazzy
Are what the men give when the meals are late.

Oh, glorious colors the clouds are painting,
If she would but look on her hill, and trees;
But how are the lords to be served and waited,
If she minding things such as these?

The wee things always need yield to these.
The world is filled with the wine of beauty,
If she could but pause and drink it in;
But pleasure, she says, must wait for duty—
Needless work is committed sin.

The day grows hot, and her hands grow weary;
Oh, for an hour to rest her head,
Out with the birds and winds on heavery!
But the noon and dinner must make her bread.
The busy men in the fields are working,
Would call her lazy, and call it sinful,
And she never could make them and remind
They do not know that she labors with her heart
Hungers for beauty and things sublime,
They only know that they want their dinner,
Plenty of it, and just "on time" at that.
And after the sweeping, under-dusting, and baking,
And dinner all ready and put by,
She sits and sews, though her head is aching,
For time for rest she "hasn't a how" times over.

Her boy, at school must look like others,
She says, so she watches their frocks and hose,
For the soul is replete with petty matters
For the head neglect of their children's clothes.

Her husband comes from his field to labor,
He grows by nature to be coarse with wife;
She's done no more than as her neighbor;
They're most of them country life.

But after the strife and wear and toil—
With life's duties done, and she is as tool,
The master's hand and hand and mine—
Her sons and daughters shall call her blest,
And I think, the sweetest joys of heaven,
The rapt bliss of even at life,
And the interest known of all will be given
Unto her who wears laborer's wife.

THE TWO MRS. TUCKERS.

BY ROSE TERRY COOKE.

"You can make the fire while I put the hoss out," said Amasa Tucker, as he opened the back door of a grey house, set on top of a treeless hill, tracked here and there with paths the geese had made in their daily journeys to the pond below, and only approached at the back by a lane to the great red barn, and a rickety board gate set between two posts of the rail fence.

This was wealthy Ann Tucker's housekeeping. She had married Amasa that morning, and her father-in-law in Stanton, a little village twenty miles away from Pest's Mills, the town within whose wide limits lay the Tucker farm, and had come home with him this early spring afternoon in the old wagon behind the lazy hoss, and she had ridden every s mile by hawks, owls, weasels, and foxes, to say nothing of the chickens on whose heads crows and cats worked their will if they dared to straw the and the ruinous old cuttage, home for flies, and all inventive genius out of sticks and stones.

Add to all this the cooking, washing, baking and scouring, the unintelligent supply of pork, potatoes and tough pies, the "piled dishers" always standing up in the vegetables, and more than the small square of fat pork cooked with them, of which Amasa invariably took the largest share; these accumulating and never ceasing labors all were day by day on the vitality of Mrs. Tucker, and when to these were added an annual baby, life became a terror and a burden to the poor woman.

But what did Amasa care? He took words from no man.

He farmed in the hard old fashion, with rude implements and no knowledge.

"My father done it afore me, so I am again to do it now, no use talkin'." One by one the wailing new-born children were laid away in the little yard on a rising of the sandhill, where the old Tuckers and their half-clown infants lay already; and the hard-featured mother, bore the shocks and thistles, overran with low blackberry vines and surrounded by a rail fence. It had been much handier for the Tuckers to have a grave-yard close by than to travel five miles to the Mills with every baby that died, and there was driven by public opinion in regard to monuments; they all lay there like the others that perish, with but one small gray stone to tell where the first ceremony set foot his tired bones. Two children of Wealthy's survived. Amasa and Laurana, the oldest and youngest of seven.

Amasa, a consumptive, intelligent boy, who thought much and said little, and Laurana, or "Lury" as her name was generally given, a mischievous, self-willed little imp, the delight and torment of her little unresponsive mother. Young Amasa was a boy quite beyond his father's understanding; as soon as he was old enough to help her she gave her mother in every way he could devise, and when he was at the village school he was very fond of her, and would bring her the trapped squirrels and gathered nuts enough to earn him money and subscription for an arithmetic, which he studied every week till its contents were thoroughly stored in his head. Then began that "getting discontent" which the philosophers praise.

The elder man had no peace in his old-world ways; the sloppy waste of the barnyard was an eyesore to this "book-learned fellow," as his father derisively called him. And the ashes of the wood fire were saved and shoveled like precious dust, instead of being thrown in a big heap to edify the wandering hens. The desolate garden was plowed, fertilized and set in order at last, and the great ragged orchard manured, the apple trees trimmed and trimmed, and sulkenness thick over the old mossy sod. Now those things were done in a day or a year, but as the boy grew older and more able to cope with his father's self-content more was done annually, not without much opposition and many hard words, but still done.

Wealthy said no more; they made a supper of biscuit and beef, for the pie also was ordered "just by."

She was used to economy, but not to stinginess, and she exensed this extreme thrift in her husband more easily, for the reason that she had always been poor, and she knew very well that he was not rich, to say the least. But it was only the beginning.

Hard as Wealthy had worked at her uncle's, here she found harder burdens; she had to draw and fetch all the water she used from an old-fashioned well, with a heavy sweep, pictures pe to see, but wearisome to use; wood was scarce, for though enough grew on the hundred acres that Amasa owned, he grudged its use.

"I shan't cut down more than is really needful," he said, when she urged him to fetch her a load; "wood's affers a growin' when ye don't cut it, and a makin' for lumber; and lumber is better to sell, at slight, than curd wood. To must git along somehow with brush; another need her burn next to nothin'."

She did not remind him that his mother was a handsome with chestnut, and died of the fifth attack of pneumonia. Wealthy never wasted words.

Then there were eight rows to milk, the milk to strain, set, skim, churn or make into cheese, and nothing but the simplest utensils to do with. A cloth held over the edge of the pail served for a strainer; the pails themselves were heavy wood, the pans old and some of them leaky, the holes stopped with bits of rag, often to be renewed; the milkroom was in the shed, built against the chimney that it might not freeze there in the winter, only aired by one small slatted window; the churn was an old wooden one with a dasher, and even the "spaddle" with which she worked her butter was whittled out of a maple knot by Amasa himself, and was heavy and rough.

Then belonged to her the feeding of the pigs—gaunt, lean animals with sharp snouts, ridgy backs, long legs and thin flanks, deepset eyes, that gleamed with malice and never-satisfied hunger. Wealthy grew almost afraid of them when they clambered up on the rails of the pen in their fury for food, and clapped their pointed ears at her, signalling and lighting for the scant fare she had brought. For Amasa underied and overworked everything that belonged to him.

Then there were hens to look after—the cobble-stone nests and "sreepers," who wanted food, too, and yet could not for themselves in great measure, and must be shut in the barn and vouchsafed a want of their own ears, and if not duce meal every s soon by hawks, owls, weasels and foxes, to say nothing of the chickens on whose heads crows and cats worked their will if they dared to straw the and the ruinous old cuttage, home for flies, and all inventive genius out of sticks and stones.

Then came a heavy blow. Laurana, a girl of 15, fresh and pretty as a wild rose, and fired of the pinching economy, the monotonous work, and grinding life of the farm, ran away with a tin peddler and broke her mother's heart; not in the physical sense that hearts are sometimes broken, but the weary woman's soul was set on this bright, winsome child, and the blow fell at all its scant saucer when the bright face and clear young voice left her forever.

"I don't blame her none, Amasa," she sobbed out to her lord, now a stout fellow of 22, raging at his sister's folly. "I can't feel to blame her none. I know this mayn't a girl can bear to live this way. I've lied to, but it's been dreadful hard—dreadful hard. I've wished more'n once I could have died along with the little babies out there on the hill, so's to rest a spell; but there was you and Lury wanted me, and so my time hadn't come.

"Amasy, you're a man grown now, and if you should get married, and I suppose you will, you lolks seem to think it's needful, whether or no, do kinder make it easy for her, poor critter! don't do it."

"Mother, I never will," answered the boy, as gorgeously and solemnly as if he were taking his vows.

But Wealthy was nearer to her rest than she knew; the energy that lurks in dirt, neglect, poor food, constant drudgery, and the want of every wholesome and pleasurable excitement to make life happy, and when least expected sweeps down and does its fatal errand in the isolated farmhouse no less than in the crowded city dens the scourge of New England, typhoid fever, broke out in the Tucker homestead.

Wealthy, turning away from her weekly baking one Saturday morning just as the last pie was set on the pantry shelf, and fainted on the kitchen floor, where Amasa the younger found her an hour after, muttering, delirious and cold.

What he could do then, or the village doctor, or an old woman who called herself a nurse, was all useless; but the best skill of any kind would have been equally futile; she was never conscious again for a week, then her eyes seemed to see what was about her once more, and she looked up at her husband with a cheek on her hand, smiled—and died.

Hardly had her wasted shape been put away in the ground than the hard back when her husband came in from the harshest smitten with the same plague; but he was a stronger man, and three weeks of alternate burning, freezing, raving and chills endured at last in the grim and grim repose of death for him, and another grass-grown mound above on the old house on the hill.

It has not to be supposed that in all these years Amasa Tucker was entirely blind to the charms of the other sex; he had not "been with" every girl who went to singing school or spelling met at singing school or spelling matches, or who smiled at him from their Sunday bonnets; he even went "held up his end" in the village choir.

He had been faithful always to the shy, silent, overworked little girl who was his school sweetheart, and when he was to Mary Peet he listened to ask her to share his life and home. He had intended to take a farm somewhere the next summer, and work his way slowly upward to a place of his own; now he had this little house and the land, and no surprise, he found $3,000 laid up in the bank at Peet's Mills, the slow savings of his father-in-law's fifty years. He began at once to set his house in order; he longed to build a new one, but Mary's mother was dead, and she had lived so best with this; the cellar he cleaned and whitewashed with his own hands; he repaired the roof, mended the windows and set two more, so that it was sweet light; the house was scrubbed from one end to the other, and the parlor made of the old dirty comfortables and rubbish; the kitchen repainted a soft yellow, and with new paper glasses set in place of the dingy old sashes; the whole house was filled with dry wood and good coal, pine cones and chopped brush and kindling, for the frosts were early, built but a little way from the back door, over a tiny brook that ran down the hill and into the pond below, and under the slatted floor kept up a cool draught of fresh air, a covered passage connected the house with the barn, and a door into the old milk-room made of that a convenient pantry, while the removal of the old cow path from the front door gave to that apartment more room, air, and light. A new stove, with a set kettle, filled up the hearth of the old fireplace, but further improvements Amasa left for Mary.

A different housewarming from his mother's she had indeed, on just such a spring day as Wealthy came there, the Tucker hens shone clean and bright, a load of pink apple blossoms made its atmosphere freshly sweet and the fire was just ready for her to light, the shining kettle filled, and the pantry held such stores as Amasa's masculine knowledge of household wants could suggest; fresh butter, eggs, sugar, all were in abundance, and no feast of royalty ever gave more pleasure to its most honored guest than the bridegroom had in showing Mary made and baked for their supper, the stewed dried apples, the rich old cheese and the "riz" biscuit which Amasa this happy evening. Next day they took their wedding trip to Peet's Mills in the new and sensible farm wagon Amasa had just bought, with a strong, spirited horse to draw it.

It was you should look around, Mary," he had said the night before, "and see what is needed here. I expect most everything is wanting, and we can't lay out for finery. But first of all get what'll make your work easy. Your wedd'in' present will come along tomorrow; to-day we'll buy necessities."

Mrs. Peet had not sent her only girl empty-handed to the new house. A good mattress, two pairs of blankets, fresh, light comfortables, and some cheap, neat, white spreads; a set of gay crockery, a clock, and a roll of bright ingrain carpeting had all come to the farmhouse soon after the bride's arrival; her ample supply of sheets and pillow cases, strong towels and a few tablecloths had been sent the day before, so this sort of thing was not needed; but there was a new churn bought, and altogether new furnishings for the dairy, several modern inventions to make the work of a woman easier, a set of chairs, a table, and an easy lounge for the parlor, some cretonne covered with apple blossoms and white thread clusters, and pails, brooms and tinware that would have made Wealthy a happy woman, crowded the over-full wagon before they turned homeward.

The old house began to smile and blossom under this new dispensation, and the new mistress smiled too.

Amasa milked the cows for her, and lifted the heavy pails of milk to strain into the bright new pans; he filled the woodbox by the stove twice a day, put a patent pump into the old well, and, as it stood above the house, ran a pipe down into a sink set in the wood-shed, and so put an end to the drawing and carrying of water.

The fat, round, placid pigs that now enjoyed themselves in the new pen he became also of myself.

"Ain't work for women folks," he said. "You've got enough to do, Mary; there's the garden you'll have an eye on, and the chickens, if you're a mind to; I'm going to build a hen-house and a yard to it right off, that'll be good enough for you as well as the chickens, and I want you to promise if any time the work gets a mite heavy and worries you, you'll speak right out. I can afford to have everything else worn out rather than my wife."

Mary smiled.

"I will, Amasy. It does pay, my masculine friends, to give my woman a kindly word now and then. If you had done it oftener, or your father had in the past, the rights of women and men would have augured or bored you as they do now, or nuzzled and made the house uncomfortable. Mary, however, was not a woman who called herself a nurse, was all useless; but the best skill of any kind would have been equally futile; she was never conscious again for a week, then her eyes seemed to see what was about her once more, and she looked up at her husband with a cheek on her hand, smiled—and died.

Hardly had her wasted shape been put away in the ground than the hard back when her husband came in from the harshest smitten with the same plague; but he was a stronger man, and three weeks of alternate burning, freezing, raving and chills endured at last in the grim and grim repose of death for him, and another grass-grown mound above on the old house on the hill.

It has not to be supposed that in all these years Amasa Tucker was entirely blind to the charms of the other sex; he had not "been with" every girl who went to singing school or spelling met at singing school or spelling matches, or who smiled at him from their Sunday bonnets; he even went "held up his end" in the village choir.

He had been faithful always to the shy, silent, overworked little girl who was his school sweetheart, and when he was to Mary Peet he listened to ask her to share his life and home. He had intended to take a farm somewhere the next summer, and work his way slowly upward to a place of his own; now he had this little house and the land, and no surprise, he found $3,000 laid up in the bank at Peet's Mills, the slow savings of his father-in-law's fifty years. He began at once to set his house in order; he longed to build a new one, but Mary's mother was dead, and she had lived so best with this; the cellar he cleaned and whitewashed with his own hands; he repaired the roof, mended the windows and set two more, so that it was sweet light; the house was scrubbed from one end to the other, and the parlor made of the old dirty comfortables and rubbish; the kitchen repainted a soft yellow, and with new paper glasses set in place of the dingy old sashes; the whole house was filled with dry wood and good coal, pine cones and chopped brush and kindling, for the frosts were early, built but a little way from the back door, over a tiny brook that ran down the hill and into the pond below, and under the slatted floor kept up a cool draught of fresh air, a covered passage connected the house with the barn, and a door into the old milk-room made of that a convenient pantry, while the removal of the old cow path from the front door gave to that apartment more room, air, and light. A new stove, with a set kettle, filled up the hearth of the old fireplace, but further improvements Amasa left for Mary.

A different housewarming from his mother's she had indeed, on just such a spring day as Wealthy came there, the Tucker hens shone clean and bright, a load of pink apple blossoms made its atmosphere freshly sweet and the fire was just ready for her to light, the shining kettle filled, and the pantry held such stores as Amasa's masculine knowledge of household wants could suggest; fresh butter, eggs, sugar, all were in abundance, and no feast of royalty ever gave more pleasure to its most honored guest than the bridegroom had in showing Mary made and baked for their supper, the stewed dried apples, the rich old cheese and the "riz" biscuit which Amasa this happy evening. Next day they took their wedding trip to Peet's Mills in the new and sensible farm wagon Amasa had just bought, with a strong, spirited horse to draw it.

"I want

PLAT OF

J. Milo Eaton's Addition

TO THE Village of Charlevoix.

Lots 1 to 20, inclusive, have a frontage of 69 to 73 feet on the street. Lots 21 to 40 and 45 to 50, inclusive, contain one acre each. Lots 41 to 44, inclusive, contain one-half acre each. There is a terrace about 20 feet high, on the line of the lots between Lake and Terrace streets, and another about 20 feet high on the west side of Terrace street.

This Addition is situnted on the shores of Pine Lake, just south of the Kalamazoo Resort, and is finely located with reference to the Resort and the village proper. May street is a main thoroughfare from Stover's Mill near the cemetery to the new planing mill, and shortens the distance to a five-minute walk from the addition to the postoffice, most of the way over a fine sidewalk. The lots are all cleared and in grass, and most of them perfectly level. Anyone wishing to get a lot large enough for a residence and garden cannot find a better pla locate than this addition. For terms, address the prop

J. MILO EATON, Charlevoix, M

J. MILO EATON,

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies,

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 1875.

EVERYTHING

IN THE LINE OF

Furniture and Undertakers' Goods

CAN BE FOUND AT THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE OF

HENRY C. COOPER, CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

CHEAP FOR CASH.

Come and See Me Before Buying.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—Judge Folk, of Brownsville, Tenn., has invented a spiral windmill, which will run street and railway cars.

—A Suspension Bridge inventor is at work on a boat with which the ascension of the whirlpool rapids of the Niagara is to be made.—N. Y. Times.

—An Atlanta (Ga.) man has invented a wheel for wagons in which, if a spoke breaks, neither tire nor rim is removed to put in a new one. The invention has been patented.

—Up to 1876 the standard capacity of freight cars was 20,000 pounds. In 1877 a few were built to carry 30,000, and since 1879 the standard cars, both of the East and West, have been built to carry 40,000.

—Soda springs have been found at the head of Ahtanum Valley, twenty-six miles from Yakima City, Washington Territory. Good bread has been made by simply mixing flour with water from the springs, using no other ingredient but salt.—Denver Tribune.

—A correspondent of the British Medical Journal states that he has found the application of a strong solution of chromic acid three or four times by means of a camel's hair pencil to be the most efficient and easy method of removing warts. They become black and soon fall off.

—It has been ascertained by Mr. C. O. Bonelle that the magnesium light, as used by the United States Coast Surver, is an effective night signal for distances as great as forty-five to seventy miles. Even the ordinary student lamp with a parabolic reflector may be seen as much as forty miles away.

—Mr. R. H. Wadlow, a Brooklyn (Ga.) man, after three years' hard work and study, has finally invented and patented a new method of making shoes. The entire uppers of these shoes are of one piece, with no seams that touch the foot. They are made with an adjustable instep, and fastened with buckles of his own invention.

—The London Lancet tells how to cure a bone felon. As soon as it is felt put directly over the spot a fly blister the size of your thumb nail. Let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time directly under the surface of the blister may be seen the felon, which can instantly be taken out with the point of a needle.

—Pine sawdust, highly compressed, has been successfully used to make up center frames of carriage wheels. It is said to be so solid that it will bear a pressure equal to twenty-three tons per square inch. As sawdust has also been used for partitions and bricks, its application to the production of complex carvings and mouldings does not seem to be far off. This opens up quite a new market for sawdust, which has hitherto been a comparatively waste product.—Boston Post.

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS,

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run as him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charlev

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHIN

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Good

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets,

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Fe

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a yea and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our establis

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses or and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction.

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 33. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

Is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, MICH., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

BUCKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Rutter Block, Charlevoix, Mich. BUCKSHANK. C. J. GRIER.

PARK & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich. 22

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor. Real Estate business promptly attended to. MONEY TO LOAN.

C. A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILO EATON, Attorney at law, Charlevoix, Mich.

NORTON, KEAT & MARTIN, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

SCALE P. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX.—Capital $50,000. Savings department. Deposits secured by pledge of government bonds, real estate, and personal notes for more than above amount. Loans on loan on first mortgages. For loan and exchange. RUSSELL & BOYNE.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Sabbath services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sabbath school lecture. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7:30 the school lecture. C. P. VANAKEN, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sabbath school at close of morning service. Class and prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7. A. J. HOUNES, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX HOUGH AND READY FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall. E. F. DIXIE, Secretary.

HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACY.

J. SUTFELD, Homeopathic Medicines, Books, Domestic specties, Charlevoix, Mich.

LIVERY STABLE.

MILO EATON, Proprietor, Gen. Dealer in Horses. Only first-class Horses and 20 Open Top Good Saddle Horses always on hand.

PHYSICIANS.

A. T. CHESTERS, M. D. Office at the Bridge-side.

LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in the Lewis block, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. R. PRESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Homeopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich. 19

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

ISAAC S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Ryder Post No. 113, meets second Monday in each month, at 1351 Fellows' Hall.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 296, meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

I. O. G. T.—Pine Times No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC—Charlevoix Lodge No. 297, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Bodeker.

A. BUTTARS, President. A. H. UPHOUT, Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money loaned on approved paper at reasonable rates. Drafts received. Collections given careful attention and remittances made promptly.

O. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

WARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.

Rates reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON.

On Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public. Headquarters for the Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CHILDS, Proprietor,

Boyne City, Michigan.

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.
PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County.

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and see him. West side Bridge St.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best time-piece ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges.

O. W. SMITH,

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.

Electroplating in Gold and Silver. Any article of jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card to take effect January, 1st.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv		7 00pm	7 45pm
Richmond	2 37am	10 22	9 52
Winchester	3 01	11 02	11 00
Ridgeville	4 11	11 57	11 21
Fort Wayne, ar	6 42	2 20pm	1 55pm
Fort Wayne, lv		2 47	2 50	8 05am
Kendallville		3 35	3 52	9 17
Sturgis		5 13	5 14	10 35
Cassopolis		6 11	6 14	11 48
Kalamazoo, ar		6 52	6 52	12 25pm
Kalamazoo, lv		7 05	7 05	1 05
Grand Rapids, ar		9 02	9 00	3 07
Grand Rapids, lv	7 35am		9 20	3 45
Ionia (U. & Cross)	8 47		10 32	5 07
Howard City	9 47		11 26	6 07
Big Rapids	10 15		12 04pm	6 37
Reed City	10 47		1 12	8 18
Cadillac, ar	11 25		2 00	9 00
Cadillac, lv			2 30	9 50
Traverse City, ar			4 55
Kalkaska, lv			4 17	12 00am
Manistee			4 42	12 25
Boone Falls			5 47	2 20
Petoskey, ar			6 24	3 14
Harbor Springs			7 15	9 45
Mackinaw City			8 00	4 00
St. Ignace			10 00	5 50
Marquette			2 00pm	5 50pm
Negaunee, ar			9 12	7 08

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv			5 15pm	7 30am
St. Ignace			9 00	11 30
Mackinaw City			6 10pm	4 15pm
Harbor Springs			8 10	6 15
Petoskey			9 00	7 20
Boyne Falls			8 15	12 25am
Manistee			9 11	1 11
Kalkaska			9 51	2 58
Traverse City, lv			9 10pm
Cadillac, ar			11 37	5 20
Cadillac, lv		3 30pm	11 55	5 50
Reed City		4 59	1 10pm	7 46
Big Rapids		5 47	1 47	8 40
Howard City		6 08	2 35	9 47
Ionia (U. & Cross)		7 01	3 48	10 05
Grand Rapids, ar		7 40	4 05	10 25
Grand Rapids, lv	6 25am		4 32	12 30pm
Kalamazoo, ar	8 32		6 32	2 24
Kalamazoo, lv	8 52		6 52	2 39
Vicksburg	9 07		7 22	3 06
Sturgis	10 04		8 16	4 12
Kendallville	11 37		9 35	5 31
Fort Wayne, ar	12 50pm		10 52	6 42
Fort Wayne, lv	12 52	5 30am	12 02am
Ridgeville	3 09	7 56	2 33
Winchester	3 38	8 16	2 55
Richmond, ar	4 27	9 17	3 50
Cincinnati, ar	7 05pm	12 50pm	7 25am

C. L. COCKBURN, Gen'l Pass. Agt., Grand Rapids, Mich.

HALL'S Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE IT FAILS TO CURE.

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you are troubling with this distressing disease, ask your Druggist for it, and DON'T BE IMPOSED ON SUBSTITUTES. If he can not get it, send to us and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

DR. CROUTER, Agt., Charlevoix. 33

Buy note paper and envelopes with a box of Charleston, at G. W. Wood & Co.'s drug store.

J. C. S. BLACKBURN,

THE COMING SENATOR FROM KENTUCKY.

Hon. Joseph C. S. Blackburn, who will succeed Senator Williams of Kentucky, March 4, 1885, is in the 46th year of his age, having been born in Woolford county, Ky., October 1st, 1838. Mr. Blackburn commenced the practice of law at Lexington, Ky., in 1858, but in a few months moved to Chicago. In 1860 he returned to Kentucky, and at the breaking out of the war entered the confederate army as a private. He afterwards joined the staff of Gen. William Preston, as aid-de-camp, and distinguished himself for daring and bravery in several engagements.

At the close of the war Mr. Blackburn settled in Arkansas, but, in 1868, returned to his native state and county, where he engaged in farming, and also the practice of law. He was elected to the state legislature in 1871 and 1873, was then elected to the 45th, 46th, and 47th congresses and was re elected to the 48th congress as a democrat, receiving 16,790 votes against 5,624 votes for Hord, republican.

Mr. Blackburn has been conspicuous figure on the floor of the house, being recognized as one of the strongest and readiest debaters in that body. He had announced himself as a candidate for the speakership of the present house, but withdrew in favor of his colleague, Mr. Carlisle, and threw his influence in that gentleman's favor. Mr. Blackburn now represents the Kentucky district represented in bygone days by Henry Clay, John J. Crittenden and John C. Breckenridge. He entered the late senatorial contest in his state with but twelve votes pledged to him, whilst Senator Williams had fifty. Blackburn increased to forty-five, never lost a vote, and finally succeeded in carrying off the prize. He will continue to serve as a representative until March, 1885.

The Democratic Position.

There can be no question but that the advocacy of a "tariff for revenue only" commits the democratic party to an endorsement of the doctrine of free trade. There is not any doubt about that. The country understands that it is the ultimate design of the democracy to make international trade perfectly free. No true tariff reformer will deny that.

But the country should also be made to understand that the only object of the democracy is not to tear down. It desires rather to build up. It will therefore not undertake to make sudden and radical innovations in the industrial system and commercial regulations of the United States. Its efforts will be directed to attaining the desired end by gradual and easy reductions of tariff as the circumstances of the case may seem to require or warrant. It will seek first to cut down the immense surplus which is now rapidly accumulating in the treasury to invite the despoiling hands of the jobbers and the subsidy lobby. It proposes to curtail the princely revenues of the government and compel a return to the simple and economical methods of the early statesmen of the republic.

The great labor-employing industries of the nation will not be disturbed by the democratic policy. But gradually freed from the restrictions of the tariff, and infused with the quickening impulses of liberated trade, they will grow and expand until they shall make America the work shop of the world.—Chebaygan Democrat.

A Voice From The Kitchen.

While farmers' wives and farm hands are talking about woman's work, it is in order for somebody to say a word for hired girls' of whom I am which." A housekeeper can order her work, if she has any brains at all, so as to favor herself Sundays and get time to rest and go to church, but a girl has to do as she is told by the powers that be, and if they order a good dinner Sundays, and most of them do, Bridget must get it and do all the work that good dinners make, whether it is a broiling hot day in summer when it is all a body wants to do to keep still and breathe, or a short day in winter, when it gets dark before the work is half done up. Now I will tell you a little story. Where I was working once on a time, it happened one Saturday morning I was busy in a room next to one where the lady of the house and a caller were talking. I wouldn't have you think for a moment that I was eaves dropping, but I couldn't very well put my fingers in my ears and keep at work, too, so what could I do but hear? Says the caller: "I'm boiling a piece of ham to-day, so as to have cold meat for dinner to-morrow. I always plan to have something for dinner Sunday, that will make just as little work as possible." Says my lady with a toss of her head: "It makes little difference to me what I have for dinner, so that it's something good. I don't have to get it." Do you know what happened?

It was real curious, for I'm as stout as an ox generally, but it wasn't two days before I felt so bad I had to go home, and I never got well enough to get back either. It was too bad, for Mrs. ——— expected company that very week from outside, summer visitors to stay a month, and girls were awful scarce that season, but, "it made little difference to me, I didn't have the work to do." Hateful was I? Maybe, but then hired girls do have feelings, just the same as folks, and there isn't any lady perfect you know.

A HIRED GIRL.

When a cure is guaranteed why all you refuse to be relieved of that cough which is liable to become seated on your lungs and to cause you many a suffering day and sleepless night? Your children are liable to be taken with Croup, and the before a doctor can be summoned. Be wise and obtain a remedy that will not fail to give relief from Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Croup, and all other lung difficulties. Hamilton's Cough Balsam will do all this and costs but a trifle. Price 25 and 50 cents a bottle. Sold by G. R. Wood & Co.

The "Free Thinkers," so called, have been holding a convention ostensibly to defend that freedom of thought which so far from being threatened is upheld by every religious thinker of the age. To expand every energy to maintain freedom of thought to-day is entirely superfluous. As one of our contemporaries remarks: "Too much that is complacently called free-thinking by the men and women that indulge in it is simply loose thinking, or cold thinking, or reckless thinking or vague thinking. It certainly differs from the common run of thinking, but not because of its greater freedom." The real substance of free thinking, according to those persons, is in their opposition to the Bible, and is indicated by a resolution of this convention which states that "Free Thinkers" aim by criticism and argument to weaken the confidence of our fellow-citizens in the Bible as purely an inspired revelation from heaven." Here we have in a word the whole doctine and purpose of "Free Thinkers. They seek simply to overthrow the faith of those who believe in a divine revelation.—Messenger.

Beware! Coughs, colds, and slight Throat Diseases often develop into bronchitis, Scaled Cough, Consumption, etc., and should have immediate attention and be removed in the first stages. Not only public speakers, but all, are liable to throat troubles, and no obtain relief should use Hamilton's Cough Troches, which relieve Coughs and Hoarseness, curing Throat Irritation Cold. Warrant to give satisfaction Price 25c per box. Sold by G. R. Wood & Co.

Every woman, whether she needs to enter a profession or not, should be so trained that she can enter one, or at least preform some useful service for which society will remunerate her. Every girl should know that she can support herself if she desires to do so. If this were the case, women would have greater independence and freedom in choosing their husbands than they now have, and the knowledge that there is an alternative open to them would cause them to enter married life on a footing of greater equality than is now accorded to them. There would then be fewer of those unhappy marriages into which young women allow themselves to be hurried for fear of falling a burden upon their father or their brothers; fewer of those cases in which a woman says "yes" at the alter when her whole soul means "no." Selected.

Secure admiration. Who can help admiring a lovely complexion, smooth, beautiful and pure? This can be easily obtained by the use of Hamilton's Wonderful Balm. It will remove Freckles, Tan, Pimples, and all blotches from the soul and in no way injure the skin, but is the most harmless and perfect preparation of its kind. Price 50c per bottle Sold by G. R. Wood & Co.

An important Michigan industry is the business of getting out cedar lumber, which is used almost exclusively for telegraph poles. The chief advantage of cedar for this use is it remarkable durability, there being now lines of poles in this state which have been in service for thirty years and are still in good condition. Other merits are its lightness, which render it easy of transportation, and its softness, makes the pulleys and safe for the line men to climb. Michigan cedar is in demand for this purpose in many states, especially west, and the demand steadily increases.—Herald.

TOOTHACHE.—Money is a great cure for aching hearts, but a twenty dollar gold piece placed on an aching tooth don't seem to have the effect. In fact nothing is sure but Hamilton's Toothache Drops, which are warranted to cure in one minute. Price only 25 cents. Sold by G. R. Wood & Co.

Two boys aged about 16, giving their names as Walter Rooke and Chauncey Ruby, were arrested, at Niagra Falls, on suspicion. They arrived by the Grand Trunk Atlantic express from the west, and believed they were in the United States. They had loaded revolvers, a supply of ammunition, and a book, "Adventures and Exploits of Frank and Jesse James" were found in their possession; the same money which they acknowledged having stolen at Berlin, where a deliberate was arrested.

Testimonials are being cured CATARRH every year with Hall's Catarrh that the doctors had given up and said could be cured. 75 cents a bottle. Sold by Dr. Cr

Spurgeon, in preaching on "confession," said: "Having search the Bible through, I can only find man mentioned who ever com that is, Judas Iscariot, and you remember, my brethren, that he immediately went out and hung himself."

Now is the time your horses cattle need attention. To prevent dis tone up the system you will find Parm Powders invaluable. Full pound sold by G. R. Wood & Co.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

It is from cen ated to pay $26,250 for the privilege of selling goods at two racing meetings in Kentucky, how much clemee is there for the man who puts his money in the box?

A JAPANESE correspondent of the London Daily News having assumed that the Mikado was unpopular because he received no cheers while passing through the streets in state on his birthday, a Japanese gentleman writes to explain that cheering would be regarded there as disorderly. He further explains that the act of a young lady who wrapped up a piece of cake and put it in her sleeve at the Foreign Minister's reception, is quite "good form," and is accepted as an indication of a high satisfaction which she wishes to enable those at home to share.

IMMIGRATION depends greatly upon national prosperity. British and Irish emigration is now seeking Australian fields. In 1882 we took 181,3?1 from the United Kingdom. In 1883 we took thence 192,010. In 1884 Australia took but 22,682 from the United Kingdom, but in 1885 the number rose to 71,325. But for this increase in Irish emigration in 1885 there would have been a great falling off in the emigration from the United Kingdom to the United States. The increase of emigration thence to Australia is said to be caused by the present prosperity of those colonies.

THE scene of the battle of Pittsburg Landing was visited the other day by a correspondent of the Call, of Peoria, Ill. He says that farmers still gather lead and iron in the field, and that one merchant shipped over 3,000 pounds of bullets last year. The other day a child found a shell that exploded after it had been buried for twenty-one years. Of the 57,000 soldiers whose remains lie in the cemetery, 2,251 were unrecognized. Two large iron cannon serve as columns at the gate of the cemetery. The grave nearest them is that of the "Drummer Boy of Shiloh." Albert Sidney Johnson died under a large tree that stood near by; but of the tree there is only the stump remaining, and the spot is marked by a young evergreen.

THE prize of $5,000 offered by the French Academy of Medicine for a cure for diphtheria was demanded at their last meeting by all sorts of people, among whom were a glass-maker, a machinist, an iron-founder, a hotel-keeper and a Justice of the Peace. Two women applied for it—one a lawyer's wife and the other the wife of a veterinary surgeon. One man proposed that the patient be beaten until he expelled the membrane, and another that he be exposed to scarlatina as a counter-irritant. There were several who wanted their expenses paid in advance, that they might explain their methods of cure, and a large number who refused to disclose the secret before receiving the $5,000. No one had found the infallible remedy.

SENATOR VANCE tells this story: When Judge Tourgee was on the bench in North Carolina an old chum of his was brought before him on some trifling charge. During the trial the prisoner said something that highly displeased his Honor. "Do you mean, sternly said the Judge, "to bring this court into contempt?" The prisoner smiled and said: "Judge, you have known me for many years, and we have been friends, haven't we?" "That is a fact," said the Judge. "You would do me a favor within reason, even now, would you not?" "Very likely," responded his Honor, all graciousness and good-humor; "but what is it?" "Well," retorted the scamp, "do not press me too hard on the point of contempt this morning."

THE last recent authority on white elephants, Mr. Carl Bock, tells us that the sanctity of a white elephant dates from the earliest period of Buddhist history. One of the proudest titles of the King of Siam is "Lord of the White Elephant." Not very long ago a real white elephant, who excelled all his fellows in beauty, was brought into Bangkok with all the pomp and ceremony of an emperor. According to Mr. Bock, he was quite an albino, the whole body being of a pale reddish-brown color, with a few white hairs on the back. The feet of the eye, the color of which is said to be a good test of an albino, was a pale Naples yellow. He was blessed and baptized in the presence of the King and the nobility. One of the high priests presented him with a piece of sugar cane, on which was written the elephant's name in full, and which he very readily ate. The following is a translation of his description, painted on a red tablet, hung over one of the pillars of his stall: "An elephant of beautiful color; hair, nails and eyes are white. Perfection in form, with all signs of regularity of the high family. The color of the skin is that of lotus. A descendant of the angels of the Brahmins. Acquired as property by the power and glory of the King for his service. Is equal to the crystal of the highest value. Is of the highest family of all in existence. A source of power of attraction of rain. It is as pure as the purest crystal of the highest value in the world." The elephant has for a companion a white monkey.

THOSE who have never seen the much talked of dynamite explosive will be interested to know that it looks very much like moist brown sugar. Nitroglycerine, which is formed by the action of nitric acid upon glycerine, at a low temperature, is the active agent in dynamite, but is mixed with some absorbent substance to render it safer to handle than the liquid glycerine. The absorbent material thus used is a siliceous earth—a fine white powder composed of the remains of infusoria, and resembling powdered chalk; this takes up two or three times its weight of the nitro-glycerine, without becoming pasty, and the ingredients are easily mixed, leaden vessels and wooden spoons being used to avoid dangerous friction. When flame is applied to this mass it burns with a strong flame, without any explosion; but when ignited by a detonating fuse, or even by a sudden blow, its explosive force is tremendous.

BISHOP HUNTINGTON is out in an indictment of the public school system, on the score of its alleged inability, as things are managed now, to impart to the rising generation anything like moral education. "The supreme individual and national good," says the Bishop, "is character. Character includes elements that are moral and religious, as well as the intellectual; it includes conscience, affection, and will. Morality, as well as religion, gives way before the idolatry of the brain, and we are thus brought to confront the vast defect of our public school system." As to Sunday schools, the Bishop has but little respect for them as moral agents, while as to parents, "they are not moral themselves, or they lack the care, skill, and ability to discharge this chief parental trust." The conclusion arrived at is that the Christian idea is inseparable from Christian dogma, and that religious freedom does not mean freedom from religion.

SOME official tables, which have just been printed, says the New York Sun, set forth in a striking form the steady increase of demands for legislation in Congress. Among them is the interesting statement of the number of bills and joint resolutions introduced into the House of Representatives for the Thirty-eighth Congress to the Forty-seventh, inclusive:

Congress.	Bills.	Res.	Total.
Thirty-eighth	1,?61	85	1,?46
Thirty-ninth	2,?00	100	2,?00
Fortieth	2,?03	76	2,?79
Forty-first	3,???	102	3,?99
Forty-second	4,?4	203	4,?77
Forty-third	5,???	113	5,?90
Forty-fourth	6,???	180	6,?80
Forty-fifth	7,???	159	7,???
Forty-sixth	9,???	170	9,???
Forty-seventh	10,???	156	10,???

This, it must be noted, is the record of the House alone. A like increase in Senate bills and resolutions brought the aggregate for the last Congress to more than 20,000; but for the present purposes, that of showing the degree of increase, the statistics of the House are sufficient. But while the number of bills and resolutions introduced into Congress, the number of petitions and remonstrances favoring or opposing them, and the number of reports of committees have so greatly increased in twenty years, it strangely happens that not only that the relative number of bills passed has diminished, but even the absolute number has of late fallen from the earlier period of Buddhist history. One of the proudest titles of the King of Siam is "Lord of the White Elephant." Not very long ago a real white elephant, who excelled all his fellows in beauty, was brought into Bangkok with all the pomp and ceremony of an emperor. According to Mr. Bock, he was quite an albino, the whole body being of a pale reddish-brown color, with a few white hairs on the back. The feet of the eye, the color of which is said to be a good test of an albino, was a pale Naples yellow. He was blessed and baptized in the presence of the King and the nobility. One of the high priests presented him with a piece of sugar cane, on which was written the elephant's name in full, and which he very readily ate. The following is a translation of his description, painted on a red tablet, hung over one of the pillars of his stall: "An elephant of beautiful color; hair, nails and eyes are white. Perfection in form, with all signs of regularity of the high family. The color of the skin is that of lotus. A descendant of the angels of the Brahmins. Acquired as property by the power and glory of the King for his service. Is equal to the crystal of the highest value. Is of the highest family of all in existence. A source of power of attraction of rain. It is as pure as the purest crystal of the highest value in the world." The elephant has for a companion a white monkey.

THOSE who have never seen the much talked of dynamite explosive will be interested to know that it looks very much like moist brown sugar. Nitro-glycerine, which is formed by the action of nitric acid upon glycerine, at a low temperature, is the active agent in dynamite, but is mixed with some absorbent substance to render it safer to handle than the liquid glycerine. The absorbent material thus used is a siliceous earth—a fine white powder composed of the remains of infusoria, and resembling powdered chalk; this takes up two or three times its weight of the nitro-glycerine, without becoming pasty, and the ingredients are easily mixed, leaden vessels and wooden spoons being used to avoid dangerous friction. When flame is applied to this mass it burns with a strong flame, without any explosion; but when ignited by a detonating fuse, or even by a sudden blow, its explosive force is tremendous.

BISHOP HUNTINGTON is out in an indictment of the public school system, on the score of its alleged inability, as things are managed now, to impart to the rising generation anything like moral education. "The supreme individual and national good," says the Bishop, "is character. Character includes elements that are moral and religious, as well as the intellectual; it includes conscience, affection, and will. Morality, as well as religion, gives way before the idolatry of the brain, and we are thus brought to confront the vast defect of our public school system." As to Sunday schools, the Bishop has but little respect for them as moral agents, while as to parents, "they are not moral themselves, or they lack the care, skill, and ability to discharge this chief parental trust." The conclusion arrived at is that the Christian idea is inseparable from Christian dogma, and that religious freedom does not mean freedom from religion.

SOME official tables, which have just been printed, says the New York Sun, set forth in a striking form the steady increase of demands for legislation in Congress. Among them is the interesting statement of the number of bills and joint resolutions introduced into the House of Representatives for the Thirty-eighth Congress to the Forty-seventh, inclusive:

Congress.	Bills.	Res.	Total.
Thirty-eighth	1,?61	85	1,?46
Thirty-ninth	2,?00	100	2,?00
Fortieth	2,?03	76	2,?79
Forty-first	3,???	102	3,?99
Forty-second	4,?4	203	4,?77
Forty-third	5,???	113	5,?90
Forty-fourth	6,???	180	6,?80
Forty-fifth	7,???	159	7,???
Forty-sixth	9,???	170	9,???
Forty-seventh	10,???	156	10,???

This, it must be noted, is the record of the House alone. A like increase in Senate bills and resolutions brought the aggregate for the last Congress to more than 20,000; but for the present purposes, that of showing the degree of increase, the statistics of the House are sufficient. But while the number of bills and resolutions introduced into Congress, the number of petitions and remonstrances favoring or opposing them, and the number of reports of committees have so greatly increased in twenty years, it strangely happens that not only that the relative number of bills passed has diminished, but even the absolute number has of late fallen from the earlier period of Buddhist history. One of the proudest titles of the King of Siam is "Lord of the White Elephant." Not very long ago a real white elephant, who excelled all his fellows in beauty, was brought into Bangkok with all the pomp and ceremony of an emperor. According to Mr. Bock, he was quite an albino, the whole body being of a pale reddish-brown color, with a few white hairs on the back. The feet of the eye, the color of which is said to be a good test of an albino, was a pale Naples yellow. He was blessed and baptized in the presence of the King and the nobility. One of the high priests presented him with a piece of sugar cane, on which was written the elephant's name in full, and which he very readily ate. The following is a translation of his description, painted on a red tablet, hung over one of the pillars of his stall: "An elephant of beautiful color; hair, nails and eyes are white. Perfection in form, with all signs of regularity of the high family. The color of the skin is that of lotus. A descendant of the angels of the Brahmins. Acquired as property by the power and glory of the King for his service. Is equal to the crystal of the highest value. Is of the highest family of all in existence. A source of power of attraction of rain. It is as pure as the purest crystal of the highest value in the world." The elephant has for a companion a white monkey.

THOSE who have never seen the much talked of dynamite explosive will be interested to know that it looks very much like moist brown sugar. Nitro-glycerine, which is formed by the action of nitric acid upon glycerine, at a low temperature, is the active agent in dynamite, but is mixed with some absorbent substance to render it safer to handle than the liquid glycerine. The absorbent material thus used is a siliceous earth—a fine white powder composed of the remains of infusoria, and resembling powdered chalk; this takes up two or three times its weight of the nitro-glycerine, without becoming pasty, and the ingredients are easily mixed, leaden vessels and wooden spoons being used to avoid dangerous friction. When flame is applied to this mass it burns with a strong flame, without any explosion; but when ignited by a detonating fuse, or even by a sudden blow, its explosive force is tremendous.

BISHOP HUNTINGTON is out in an indictment of the public school system, on the score of its alleged inability, as things are managed now, to impart to the rising generation anything like moral education. "The supreme individual and national good," says the Bishop, "is character. Character includes elements that are moral and religious, as well as the intellectual; it includes conscience, affection, and will. Morality, as well as religion, gives way before the idolatry of the brain, and we are thus brought to confront the vast defect of our public school system." As to Sunday schools, the Bishop has but little respect for them as moral agents, while as to parents, "they are not moral themselves, or they lack the care, skill, and ability to discharge this chief parental trust." The conclusion arrived at is that the Christian idea is inseparable from Christian dogma, and that religious freedom does not mean freedom from religion.

SOME official tables, which have just been printed, says the New York Sun, set forth in a striking form the steady increase of demands for legislation in Congress. Among them is the interesting statement of the number of bills and joint resolutions introduced into the House of Representatives for the Thirty-eighth Congress to the Forty-seventh, inclusive:

Congress.	Bills.	Res.	Total.
Thirty-eighth	1,?61	85	1,?46
Thirty-ninth	2,?00	100	2,?00
Fortieth	2,?03	76	2,?79
Forty-first	3,???	102	3,?99
Forty-second	4,?4	203	4,?77
Forty-third	5,???	113	5,?90
Forty-fourth	6,???	180	6,?80
Forty-fifth	7,???	159	7,???
Forty-sixth	9,???	170	9,???
Forty-seventh	10,???	156	10,???

This, it must be noted, is the record of the House alone. A like increase in Senate bills and resolutions brought the aggregate for the last Congress to more than 20,000; but for the present purposes, that of showing the degree of increase, the statistics of the House are sufficient. But while the number of bills and resolutions introduced into Congress, the number of petitions and remonstrances favoring or opposing them, and the number of reports of committees have so greatly increased in twenty years, it strangely happens that not only that the relative number of bills passed has diminished, but even the absolute number has of late fallen from the earlier period of Buddhist history. One of the proudest titles of the King of Siam is "Lord of the White Elephant." Not very long ago a real white elephant, who excelled all his fellows in beauty, was brought into Bangkok with all the pomp and ceremony of an emperor. According to Mr. Bock, he was quite an albino, the whole body being of a pale reddish-brown color, with a few white hairs on the back. The feet of the eye, the color of which is said to be a good test of an albino, was a pale Naples yellow. He was blessed and baptized in the presence of the King and the nobility. One of the high priests presented him with a piece of sugar cane, on which was written the elephant's name in full, and which he very readily ate. The following is a translation of his description, painted on a red tablet, hung over one of the pillars of his stall: "An elephant of beautiful color; hair, nails and eyes are white. Perfection in form, with all signs of regularity of the high family. The color of the skin is that of lotus. A descendant of the angels of the Brahmins. Acquired as property by the power and glory of the King for his service. Is equal to the crystal of the highest value. Is of the highest family of all in existence. A source of power of attraction of rain. It is as pure as the purest crystal of the highest value in the world." The elephant has for a companion a white monkey.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Two Roses.

Two roses grew upon a bush,
Where tender was the air;
Alike were these two beauteous blooms,
Though buds, yet both were fair.
But one stretched out toward the light,
And caught the glowing sun,
And all its petals ripening swelled
Before the other one.

The other one within the shade
Contentedly remained—
Its bloom was paler, but within
A richer sweetness gained.
And when the shower's closer fell
The hand from out the west
The tender rose the petals sought
That lay upon her breast.

Ah, like these roses twain were they—
Two girls that once I knew—
Two buds that drank upon a farm,
Near by a river blue.
No later maiden ever lived
Than lovely stream beside.
They were their mother's [illegible] elder care,
Their honest father's pride.

But Annie was the sprightlier girl,
With blue and laughing eyes,
And Mollie, though no whit less fair,
Was more demure and wise.
Fair Annie grew to be in time
The belle of all the place,
While Mollie stayed at home and toiled,
With bright and cheerful grace.

Two wooers came to seek these maids,
The one a careless youth,
To ways of city fashion bred,—
The other plain in truth,
But still a man of sterling soul,
As true and tried as steel;
He worked upon the father's farm,
And worked with honest zeal.

Sweet Annie's gay and lively ways
The city man did please,
She learned from him to strive for style
And scorned of the farm.
He wooed her, and their sons were wed
One brilliant summer day,
And went away into the town
To live in grand display.

But Mollie would not from her home
At fashion's bidding stir;
And there, beside the dear old hearth,
Her lover came to her,
For her pretty maiden hand,
No wedding fine and grand;
A simple life she led with him
To whom she gave her hand.

The story of the roses' twain
Was prophecy and true;
The city belle of fortune, ever safe,
Neared ruin on the way,
There came a storm-wind in the town,
No merchant stood secure,
And Annie's husband failed and died,
And left her widowed, poor.

Back to the dear old home she came,
Her father long was dead,
And Mollie's husband, once a "hand,"
Now owned the farm instead.
And there, with [illegible] simple home,
Dear Annie found a rest—
As faded rose, she came to lie
Upon her sister's breast.
—L. K. Mouldilroek, in Good Cheer.

Practical Forestry.

My information on the subject is not very extensive, to be sure, but I know that every man, woman or child who plants a tree in the right place is a benefit to the country. I was taking a walk one day in summer under the grand old elms that make the streets of New Haven look like the aisles of a great, grand cathedral, when I saw three boys curiously watching an old gentleman who was filling a large hole with earth. I came up just in time to hear the old man ask the boys to finish filling the hole for him, as his back was too lame. It was tiresome for one of his age. They were bright-looking, good-mannered fellows, and they soon carried the bag filled to the mouth to the bench where the tired old gentleman had taken a seat. As they put it by his side, one of them asked what he wanted of such worthless stuff.

"I will tell you willingly," said the gentleman, "and perhaps you will be interested enough to give me a little more help. I went through the far Western part of our country last year, and found so many places where there are no trees that I thought I would do what I could to remedy the evil, for it really is a very serious want. So I am going to send some canvas bags of elm seeds to all the postmasters out that way and see if they cannot get some one to plant the roadsides and every where else they like."

"What a good idea!" said one of the boys. "Where do you get the bags?"

"That is easy," was the answer. "I have four brightened little granddaughters, and they have been busy to make little friend, and all this afternoon the eight bright-eyed girls have been hard at work making the little bags."

"Oh," said the biggest boy, "that's the bag party my sister Susie and cousin Kittie have gone to; I didn't know what they meant when they talked of it."

"That must be it," said the old gentleman; "I don't believe there is any other party of the kind. The girls are more than 40,000; but for the present purposes, that of showing the degree of increase, the statistics of the House are sufficient. But while the number of bills and resolutions introduced into Congress, the number of petitions and remonstrances favoring or opposing them, and the number of reports of committees have so greatly increased in twenty years, it strangely happens that not only that the relative number of bills passed has diminished, but even the absolute number has of late fallen from the earlier period of Buddhist history. One of the proudest titles of the King of Siam is "Lord of the White Elephant." Not very long ago a real white elephant, who excelled all his fellows in beauty, was brought into Bangkok with all the pomp and ceremony of an emperor. According to Mr. Bock, he was quite an albino, the whole body being of a pale reddish-brown color, with a few white hairs on the back. The feet of the eye, the color of which is said to be a good test of an albino, was a pale Naples yellow. He was blessed and baptized in the presence of the King and the nobility. One of the high priests presented him with a piece of sugar cane, on which was written the elephant's name in full, and which he very readily ate. The following is a translation of his description, painted on a red tablet, hung over one of the pillars of his stall: "An elephant of beautiful color; hair, nails and eyes are white. Perfection in form, with all signs of regularity of the high family. The color of the skin is that of lotus. A descendant of the angels of the Brahmins. Acquired as property by the power and glory of the King for his service. Is equal to the crystal of the highest value. Is of the highest family of all in existence. A source of power of attraction of rain. It is as pure as the purest crystal of the highest value in the world." The elephant has for a companion a white monkey.

THOSE who have never seen the much talked of dynamite explosive will be interested to know that it looks very much like moist brown sugar. Nitro-glycerine, which is formed by the action of nitric acid upon glycerine, at a low temperature, is the active agent in dynamite, but is mixed with some absorbent substance to render it safer to handle than the liquid glycerine. The absorbent material thus used is a siliceous earth—a fine white powder composed of the remains of infusoria, and resembling powdered chalk; this takes up two or three times its weight of the nitro-glycerine, without becoming pasty, and the ingredients are easily mixed, leaden vessels and wooden spoons being used to avoid dangerous friction. When flame is applied to this mass it burns with a strong flame, without any explosion; but when ignited by a detonating fuse, or even by a sudden blow, its explosive force is tremendous.

BISHOP HUNTINGTON is out in an indictment of the public school system, on the score of its alleged inability, as things are managed now, to impart to the rising generation anything like moral education. "The supreme individual and national good," says the Bishop, "is character. Character includes elements that are moral and religious, as well as the intellectual; it includes conscience, affection, and will. Morality, as well as religion, gives way before the idolatry of the brain, and we are thus brought to confront the vast defect of our public school system." As to Sunday schools, the Bishop has but little respect for them as moral agents, while as to parents, "they are not moral themselves, or they lack the care, skill, and ability to discharge this chief parental trust." The conclusion arrived at is that the Christian idea is inseparable from Christian dogma, and that religious freedom does not mean freedom from religion.

SOME official tables, which have just been printed, says the New York Sun, set forth in a striking form the steady increase of demands for legislation in Congress. Among them is the interesting statement of the number of bills and joint resolutions introduced into the House of Representatives for the Thirty-eighth Congress to the Forty-seventh, inclusive:

Congress.	Bills.	Res.	Total.
Thirty-eighth	1,?61	85	1,?46
Thirty-ninth	2,?00	100	2,?00
Fortieth	2,?03	76	2,?79
Forty-first	3,???	102	3,?99
Forty-second	4,?4	203	4,?77
Forty-third	5,???	113	5,?90
Forty-fourth	6,???	180	6,?80
Forty-fifth	7,???	159	7,???
Forty-sixth	9,???	170	9,???
Forty-seventh	10,???	156	10,???

This, it must be noted, is the record of the House alone. A like increase in Senate bills and resolutions brought the aggregate for the last Congress to more than 20,000; but for the present purposes, that of showing the degree of increase, the statistics of the House are sufficient. But while the number of bills and resolutions introduced into Congress, the number of petitions and remonstrances favoring or opposing them, and the number of reports of committees have so greatly increased in twenty years, it strangely happens that not only that the relative number of bills passed has diminished, but even the absolute number has of late fallen from the earlier period of Buddhist history. One of the proudest titles of the King of Siam is "Lord of the White Elephant." Not very long ago a real white elephant, who excelled all his fellows in beauty, was brought into Bangkok with all the pomp and ceremony of an emperor. According to Mr. Bock, he was quite an albino, the whole body being of a pale reddish-brown color, with a few white hairs on the back. The feet of the eye, the color of which is said to be a good test of an albino, was a pale Naples yellow.

THE Deputy Sheriff of Texarkana, Tex., owns a game cock and is as courageous in the numerous cock-fights at that place as the most prominent sports.

A ST. PETERSBURG PICTURE.

St. Isaac's Cathedral—A Structure Cost $11,000,000.

This (St. Isaac) is an illustration of the fact that when Russia puts forth an effort she can mold both the modern world in the special architectures; since the t[illegible] quarries are exhaustless, and of her lapidaries unceasing, however, unfortunate that the eminences in the city on which could have been placed, for a instance it is impossible to advantage the magnificent digni leading to its portico. Yet you, each of these steps is worthy of the Egyptian Karnak. Moreover, the pe is supported by stupendous co the same materials, sixty feet and seven in diameter, and like the unbroken surface of a "Well," you perhaps exclaim is there no remarkable in this distinguish it from others?" along those columns for fi jointure. You will discover t are monoliths. Yes, every one solid mass of beautiful stone! With the exception of pillar in Egypt and the column they are indeed monoliths which the hand ever quarried, turned and Now, ordinarily, a temple is with one such portal as this that this magnificence is lav on each of the four sides of Moreover, from the centr structure the mighty dome r height of 236 feet, and is ble rounded by thirty round while the roof, which glo miniature sun, is covered with gold worth $250,000. When that the cost of the whole was more than $14,000,000, having been expended in mar into the soil a perfect forest make a sufficiently strong fo for the enormous mass.

Now for the interior.

"Before its gilded altar s ten colossal pillars of malachite high, and columns of lapis-l of which cost $20,000. The every other display of these stones of the world known seemed equally certain, whether the assailants retreated or remained where they were. Such is his own explanation of his conduct.

"Men," he shouted out, in a momentary lull of the conflict, "if we don't take Chapultepec, the American army is lost; for we are the last to fall back."

Voices answered: "We will charge if my one will lead us!" "We're ready!"

"Come on! I'll lead you!" shouted Capt. Reid, as he bravely leaped over the wall in the last campaign, and followed them, and made the charge already described.

There was no need, he says, to look back to see if he was followed. He knew that his men would not have been there, unless prepared to go where he led. About half-way he saw the parapet crowned with Mexican artillerists. on the point of discharging a volley. He avoided it by throwing himself on his face, receiving only a slight wound in his sword-hand, another shot severing his clothing. Instantly on his feet again, he made for the wall, in front of which he was brought down by a Mexican cannon-ball tearing through his thigh.

All the testimony goes to show that he was the first before the wall of Chapultepec. Reid's lieutenant, Hunter Dardonville, a young Frenchman, mounting the scaling ladders with the regimental colors, was down the Mexican flag from its staff.

Before that, however, Reid was observed by Lt. lt. Couzac, of the Engineers. Couzac was pushing for the castle with his men, when before him, he says, were the fountains from the fleece of infantry and a command to "Go, and God be with you!" He was off at once, with his volunteers and minutes. After a quick run across the intervening ground, they came up with the storming party under the fleece of the hill, where it had halted to await the scaling ladders. "At this point," says Lieut. Marshall, of the Fifteenth Infantry, "the fire from the castle was so continuous and fatal that the men faltered, and several officers were wounded while urging them on. At this moment, I noticed Lieut. Mayne Reid, of the New York volunteers; I noticed him more particularly at the time on account of the very brilliant uniform he wore. He suddenly jumped to his feet, and calling upon those around to follow, and without looking around to see whether he was sustained or not, pushed on almost alone to the very walls."

Reid's action was not quite so reckless as this account of an eye-witness would make it appear. The outer wall of the castle was commanded by three pieces of cannon on the parapet, which, loaded with grape and canister, fearfully decimated the ranks of the Americans at every discharge. To advance seemed certain death. To retreat seemed equally certain, whether the assailants retreated or remained where they were. Such is his own explanation of his conduct.

"Men," he shouted out, in a momentary lull of the conflict, "if we don't take Chapultepec, the American army is lost; for we are the last to fall back."

Voices answered: "We will charge if my one will lead us!" "We're ready!"

"Come on! I'll lead you!" shouted Capt. Reid, as he bravely leaped over the wall in the last campaign, and followed them, and made the charge already described.

There was no need, he says, to look back to see if he was followed. He knew that his men would not have been there, unless prepared to go where he led. About half-way he saw the parapet crowned with Mexican artillerists. on the point of discharging a volley. He avoided it by throwing himself on his face, receiving only a slight wound in his sword-hand, another shot severing his clothing. Instantly on his feet again, he made for the wall, in front of which he was brought down by a Mexican cannon-ball tearing through his thigh.

All the testimony goes to show that he was the first before the wall of Chapultepec. Reid's lieutenant, Hunter Dardonville, a young Frenchman, mounting the scaling ladders with the regimental colors, was down the Mexican flag from its staff.

Before that, however, Reid was observed by Lt. lt. Couzac, of the Engineers. Couzac was pushing for the castle with his men, when before him, he says

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

National Democratic Convention.

The National Democratic Committee having met in the City of Washington on the 22d day of February, 1884, has appointed Tuesday, the 8th day of July next, at noon, as the time, and chosen the city of Chicago as the place for holding the National Democratic Convention. Each state is entitled to a representation therein equal to the number of its Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States. The Democrats of each organized territory and the District of Columbia are invited to send two delegates, subject to the decision of the convention as to their admission.

All Democratic conservative citizens of the United States, irrespective of past political associations and differences, who can unite with us in the effort for pure, economical, and constitutional government, are cordially invited to send delegates to the convention.

Notes and News.

Brookfield, Eaton county, has a man over 70 years old, who never used tobacco or whiskey, and always voted the democratic ticket.

The tri-weekly edition of the Detroit Free Press has been discontinued, and subscribers will get the daily instead. The price of the daily has been reduced from $10 to $7 and with the better mail service the tri-weekly is no longer a necessity.

Some people complain because governor Begole does not spend more time at lansing. Don't he spend as much time as he can afford to for $1,000 a year? Give a man poor pay, and he is apt to shirk his work, whether as ditchdigger or governor.

We believe democratic principles should predominate and we believe the party should take a manly, straightforward course; and if the democracy of any state is so feebly democratic, that they will bolt anything that does not suit them, then the sooner a new party is organized the better.—Argus-Press.

Prominent Grand Rapids democrats unite in expressing feelings of disappointment at representative Burrows's course in deserting the Morrison tariff bill. Some of the gentlemen are lumbermen, and therefore vitally interested, and while they admit that the profits will be slightly reduced, they have no fear of any general disaster resulting from a reduction of the tariff, or of putting lumber on the free list.

The next campaign is going to have for its issue the bloody shirt and the tariff. American workmen begin to see that tariffs does not help them, but that they are the servants of the wealth of capitalists who import pauper labor to compete with home workmen. Protection to home industries has got to yield to protection to American laborers, and the party that boldly champions the cause of the workingmen and the farmer, by relieving them from the robbery of protective tariff, and bravely administrating on the "embargo" policy will sweep the country.

The following extract from a private letter was not intended for publication, but it presents the issue so fully, and so forcibly points out the necessity for active, earnest work in the right direction, that we give it a place: "What do you think of the pre-ideantial outlook? Tried your ax in sympathy with the tariff reformers, such as Morrison and Carlisle. It is the coming question, and I hope the democrats will have the sand to make it the issue in this campaign. The working people of this country are protectionists simply because they have not studied the question. All that is wanted is to have the question put before them, boost them thinking, and I believe free trade would sweep the country. I don't mean absolute free trade, that cannot be,—but a sweeping change in the tariff as now administered."

The destruction of life and property by storm, flood and accident has been a terrible experience during the past month. It is doubtful if the war in Africa has during that time been more fatal; it has certainly not been more destructive of property. The floods of the Ohio and its tributaries have been followed by the most terrific cyclones that ever swept the country. Georgia, South Carolina and Kentucky have suffered a thousand miles from east to west, have suffered simultaneously. In Georgia alone the storm is said to have killed 400 persons and destroyed 1500 houses. On the heels of this follows a fearful coal mine explosion in the Pittsburg region, which blows over 70 men into eternity in an instant. The year 1884 opened with a series of calamities that made it memorable, but all its calamities of two days have been eclipsed by the first two months of 1884.

Having seen how easily the bill appropriating $500,000 for a new post office ship, ped through congress, United has long been kicking herself that she did not ask for more. Congressman Mahony and Senator Palmer are doing their level best to induce congress to reconsider the matter and give $1,500,000. This is more than the state capitol cost and is an "ask for the old flag and an appropriation, without a peanut." However, we should care, but rather enjoy instead may get the coin and expend it honestly. There is now over $90,000,000 in the U. S. treasury, and it is accumulating at the rate of $10,000,000 per month, and if not stopped will create a most terrible panic, and if congress is going to be too cowardly to cut down the tariff so as to spend the surplus in internal improvements, in building government buildings where necessary, improving our water courses and harbors, etc., the money can again go into circulation and avert the impending panic.

Hand-Sleigh for Sale.

Durable Sleigh for sale cheap. Inquire at this office.

Our New Picture.

Above is shown the Revised Birds-eye View of Charlevoix. The Revision was made by Mr. F. S. BLANCHARD. It contains many buildings not shown in any other, notably the many new residences on the Upright & Hurlbut, the Mason, and the Dixon Additions. Our readers will not fail to notice other improvements over all former views. Those who appreciate these improvements will show it by ordering their printing at this office, or buying Printed Stationery at O. B. Weed & Co.'s.

FARM FOR SALE

Consisting of 144 acres, six miles from Charlevoix, on main road. Soil, clay loam. A good frame house, and two frame back barns. About 55 acres cleared, balance good beech and some timber. About 250 fruit trees beginning to bear. One-half mile from school and saw mill. Terms three thousand seven hundred dollars, one-half less than two thousand down; balance to suit purchaser. For further particulars apply to DAVID H. FRANCIS, Charlevoix, Mich.

TO CONSUMPTIVES

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure cure for CONSUMPTION, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. EDWARD A. WILSON, 194 Penn St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

ERRORS OF YOUTH

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

WOOD WANTED.

Fifty Cords good 18-inch block wood wanted on subscription, at the JOURNAL office. Highest price while the roads are good.

NOTICE.

A meeting of voters who are friends to the cause of temperance will be held at the old town hall, for the purpose of considering the propriety of placing in nomination a temperance ticket, to be supported at the coming election. All who are friendly to the cause are cordially invited to be present, to take part in the deliberations of the meeting. The meeting will be called to order promptly at 8 o'clock, Saturday evening, March 1st.

ROBERT MILLER, AND OTHERS.

Feb. 25th, 1884.

FOR SALE.

SECOND HAND

Stationary Engine and Boiler

Size of cylinder, 8 inches in bore by 12 feet long, 42 in diameter, 48 flues. The engine has been thoroughly overhauled, and is practically as good as new. Price and terms low. Call on or address, S. M. SIPE,

Of or of Washburn & Ackett, at the Machine shop, CITY.

NOTICE OF ELECTION

The annual village election of Charlevoix village, will be held at the village hall, in the building now occupied as council rooms, and town hall, in the village of Charlevoix, on Monday, the tenth day of March, A. D. 1884, at which time the following officers are to be elected: A village President, to succeed Peter Boyce; a village Clerk, to succeed Samuel M. Sipe; a village Treasurer, to succeed Edson Carpenter; a village Assessor, to succeed Samuel M. Sipe; and three trustees in place of Henry Cooper, John Nicholls, and A. E. Wright, whose terms of office expire. On the said day of election, the polls shall be opened at eight o'clock in the morning and shall be kept open until five o'clock in the afternoon, at which hour they shall be finally closed.

The board of registration for said village will be in session at the law office of F. W. Maxim, in said village, on Friday, March 7th, 1884, from o'clock, a. m. to o'clock p. m., for the purpose of registering the names of electors.

Dated Charlevoix, Feb. 27th, A. D. 1884.

BLAIR, KINGSLEY & KITCHEN,
Attorneys for applicant.

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT. State of Michigan, } ss. In the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. The Fourth National Bank of Grand Rapids, Michigan, vs. Thomas T. Addis. Notice is hereby given that on the 19th day of January, 1884, a writ of attachment was duly issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, at the office of the Fourth National Bank of Grand Rapids, the above named plaintiff, against the lands, tenements, goods, chattels, moneys and effects of William T. Addis, the above named defendant, for the sum of one thousand one hundred and ninety dollars, which said writ was returnable on the fifth day of February, 1884. Dated this 19th day of February, 1884.

BLAIR, KINGSLEY & KITCHEN,
Attorneys for plaintiff.

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT. State of Michigan, } ss. In the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. Lewis Reynolds, Walter E. Brown, plaintiffs, vs. Archibald Bulters, James Matthews, defendants. Notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of December, A. D. 1883, a writ of attachment was issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, at the suit of Archibald Bulters, Adelbert E. Upright, and Ingersoll Bright, the above named plaintiffs, who are doing business in the village of Charlevoix, under the style and firm name of Bulters, Upright & Co., against the lands, tenements, goods and chattels, moneys, and effects of John Munroe and James Matthews, the defendants above named, for the sum of three thousand three hundred and forty-six dollars, which said writ was made returnable on the 5th day of February, A. D. 1884.

Dated February 12th, A. D. 1884.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER,
Attorneys for plaintiffs.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, The circuit judicial Circuit, in chancery. Present, Hon. Edgar O. Grant, circuit judge. Charles Sayles, Martin J. Ayers, Mary H. Wood, defendants. Said pending in the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in chancery, at the court house, on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1884. In this cause it appearing from affidavit on file, that the defendant, Martha J. Ayers, is not a resident of this state, but resides at Elmira, in the state of New York, on motion of Cruickshank & Grier, complainant's solicitors, it is ordered that the said defendant, Martha J. Ayers, cause her appearance to be entered herein within four months from the date of this order, and in case of her appearance that she cause her answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed, and a copy thereof to be served on said complainant's solicitors, within twenty days after service on her of a copy of said bill, and notice of this order, and that in default thereof, said bill will be taken as confessed by the said Martha J. Ayers. And it is further ordered that within twenty days the said complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Journal, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county, and that said publication be continued therein at least once in each week for six weeks in succession, or that the cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant, at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for her appearance.

OSCAR F. WISNER,
Circuit court commissioner.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER,
Complainant's solicitors.
A true copy, attest. OSCAR F. WISNER,
Circuit court commissioner.

OSCAR F. WISNER,
Deputy Register.

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

Has purchased the

Ladies' and Children's Furnishing Goods

Lately owned by Fisher & Inwood, and will be pleased to call on the old customers, and gain as many more as possible. Call and see my stock.

JOSEPH HYLAND,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

JOHN NICHOLLS,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades,

WAGON TONGUES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at his

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

The highest market price in cash paid for

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days,

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish,

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

A few fine sewing machines for sale at ten dollars each. Call soon and have your pick.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED

D. S. WAY.

EVERYTHING

IN THE LINE OF

Furniture and Undertakers' Goods

CAN BE FOUND AT THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE OF

HENRY C. COOPER, CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

CHEAP FOR CASH.

Come and See Me Before Buying.

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.
ADVANCE, Mich.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoe

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. Bridge, CHARLEVOIX.

THE MOST USEFUL BOOK EVER PUBLISHED

A Book that should be in Every Home.

The press, teachers, and professions throughout the country pronounce it the BOOK OF BOOKS. It contains 50,000 WORDS, with their definition and pronunciation, according to Webster and other recognized authorities; a large number of useful words and definitions in general use, and a mine of information for everybody. The whole handsomely bound in cloth, containing 544 pages.

Profusely Illustrated. We propose to send you one of these valuable books, by mail, postage or express charges prepaid, to any address, at the ONLY ONE DOLLAR.

Address M. STOLZ & CO.
26 Park Place, New York.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Feb. 28, 1884.

Business Announcements.

New goods just received, at E. M. Clark's.

A genuine article in Butter at B. Boyce's.

Headquarters for canned goods at E. M. Clark's.

New Cottons and Prints this week. Are buying old and shelf worn goods, give us a call. Upright Emrey & Co.

Any amount of Sap Buckets at bottom prices, at L. D. Bartholomew's.

500 bushels of Oats; and 300 bushels of Potatoes wanted at Upright, Emrey & Co's.

All wool flannels way down, at E. M. Clark's.

We have just opened up a choice lot of Green apples of every description, which we will sell cheap for cash or exchange promptly at 25 and 30 cents per peck, at Upright Emrey & Co.'s.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and maple block wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

Two thousand dollars in Gloves and Mittens, at cost at E. M. Clark's.

If you want a good potato give Upright Emrey & Co., a call. They have just received a new supply.

For Yarns, Zephyrs, Fancy Goods, and all kinds of goods, go to E. M. Clark's.

Provision Market.

Retail prices to consumers, as corrected every Wednesday evening by UPRIGHT, EMREY & CO., general dealers:

FLOUR, per bbl, $6.00, $7.00, and $8.00.
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $4.00.
CORN MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, $1.80.
HAY, per ton, $8@$.
OATS, per bu, 30c.
GROUND FEED, per cwt, $1.40.
APPLES, per bu, $1.00.
POTATOES, per bu, 50c.
ONIONS, per bu, $1.00.
BEANS, per bu, 2@3c.
EGGS, per doz, 20c.
LARD, per lb, 10@12c.
BACON, per lb, Shoulders, 12½c.
SALT PORK, 11c; Beef, 9c.
CHEESE, 20c.
WATER WHITE OIL, 22c.
FARMERS' PRODUCE in good demand.

Fresh Meats from the Market.

MEAT, best steak, 12@14c; pork steak, 8@9c; mutton, 6@12c; sausage, 15c; hams, 14c; shoulders, 10c.
TALLOW, 6@8c.

Local News Brevities.

Rain and snow on Monday.

G. W. Crouter is home again.

T. D. Smith is building a new scow.

L. D. Wood returned home last Friday.

Mr. Lewis Reynolds returned home last Thursday evening.

Jas. O'Brian, of Inwood, was among our callers last Saturday.

H. A. Jersey, of Boyne, gave the JOURNAL a call on Tuesday.

J. Milo Eaton is getting brick from Boyne for his handle factory.

For a live team of horses on short notice, go and see Geo. Durance.

H. H. Finney, of East Jordan, gave the JOURNAL a call on Saturday.

Rev. G. W. Howe, of Boyne city, gave the JOURNAL a call yesterday.

Mr. Chas. Hitchcock, of Ionia, was in Charlevoix last week prospecting.

L. W. Skinner, now of Elk Rapids, visited friends in Charlevoix last week.

H. H. Vannornum has so far recovered as to be able to ride to town last Saturday.

In the case of the People v. Robert Bowles, forgery, the jury found a verdict of guilty.

E. S. Hawkes has a handsome writing desk for sale. Can be seen at B. See's store.

The Clara Belle has been announced to run between East Jordan and Petoskey next season.

The ladies aid society of the M. E church meet with Mrs. Oscar Upright next Wednesday afternoon.

Rev. C. P. Van Anken writes that he will be at home in time to occupy his pulpit next Sunday morning.

He who grumbles at the staying qualities of the snow should remember that most people would prefer five or six weeks more of winter to the same length of time in rain and mud.

The only way in which to stop the paper is, first to pay for every copy you have taken from the office and then notify the publisher by postal that you wish it discontinued. If, after so doing, he continues to send the paper, then refuse to take it out of the office. Even though you never subscribed for it you are holding for every copy you receive and the publisher can collect his pay.

There is a prospect of our having plenty of telephones. We understand that Mr. S. E. Watson, Supt. of the Telephone and Telegraph Construction Co., will be here next week to prepare for the construction of lines between Charlevoix, Petoskey, the various resorts around the bay, Mackinaw and Cheboygan; making a northern Michigan circuit. The phones used by this company are the Bell patent. Record.

Upright Emrey & Co. have filled all available spaces on their own dock, and the vacant lot north of Mrs. Bradley's, with ties and posts, and are now filling the lot in rear of Mason's store. With six weeks more of good sleighing they will have the town well filled. They are also buying large quantities of wood. They advertise to pay cash for ties, posts and wood, as well as all other kinds of produce a farmer has to sell.

The Grand Rapids Trade Journal, an organ of the liquor interests, suggest one way to suppress drunkenness, and consequent crime, is for saloonists to organize among themselves and refuse to sell liquor to any man liable to get intoxicated and to prosecute any dealer so doing. If this idea should be acted on and carried out in good faith it would certainly do much good, and would in a measure remove one of the great causes of the odium that attaches to liquor selling.—Ex.

"Last Saturday evening about five o'clock, thirty three teams came into town together, with sleighs loaded with wood. The amount drawn being ninety-nine cords. The largest load brought in was four and a half cords of green four foot wood. This was drawn by Eugene Hill's team the distance of three miles and a half. This amount of wood would last the furnace about one day." Progress. Mr. L. W. Skinner, our former townsman, has charge of this gang of men and teams. The net results of his winter's work is 5,000 cords of wood cut, and 4,800 drawn.

"There is too little co-operation on the part of dealers on the dead-beat question," said a prominent local retailer, "and I see no reason why the project you propose should not benefit every one who sells on credit. For instance, a dealer gets 'stuck' $30 on a bad pay customer, who leaves him and begins running up an account at a neighboring store. Nine times out of ten the dealer who is first victimized will not inform his neighbor of the true character of his new customer, but will allow him to be duped, too. On the other hand, a prompt report made in all cases of delinquents would be the means of warning dealers against the parties, and be of direct benefit to the dealer making the report, as it would compel the debtor to settle his bills, before he could secure further credit."

In two cases recently decided by our supreme court the statute of 1881, regulating the sale of liquor has been given a rigid construction. It holds, (Campbell, J. dissenting) that the clause directing saloons to be closed on Sunday, requires the proprietor to see to it, at his peril, that they are not opened even by those in their employ. In one case it was decided that the offence was committed as well by opening it for scrubbing out as opening for the sale of liquors; that in such cases the rule that the crime consists in the intent of the offender does not apply. The offence consists in the negative act of not keeping the saloon closed. In another case the court held that the statute against the sale of liquors without having a bond applies to a single sale, and no proof is required that the accused party was a regular dealer in liquor.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Putnam Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, Feb. 26, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Isaac L. Lyon and wife to H. B. Chapman, n e ¼ of s e ¼, and n e ¼ of s e ¼, 26-34-8, $40.

William W. Smith and wife, to Elizabeth Hicks, e ½ of s e ¼, and s e ¼ of s e ¼, 26-34-8, $2,000.

Richard Williams and wife, to Wm. E. Dewey, part of blk 1, village of Ironton, $250.

Freeman Lyon and wife, to Frank C. Bennet, and ½ of e ½ of n e ¼, 11-33-7, $1,200.

Asa F. Spencer et al to H. C. Loveday, lot 6, blk 2, Mason addition to Charlevoix, $250.

Nicholas Morgan to Charles Dowell, 16 ½ acres s e ¼ s e ¼ 2-33-6, $315.

Serious Accident.

Our Ironton correspondent gives the following particulars concerning an accident to Mr. James Otis, vice president of the Pine Lake Iron Co.:

Last Friday evening there was something the matter with the elevator, and Mr. Otis went under it to investigate. The "top filler," not knowing the danger, let it down, and it caught Mr. Otis, doubling him up, nearly crushing him, and he was taken out more dead than alive. The elevator weighs a ton or more, and it is a wonder that he was not crushed beyond recognition. At last accounts the attending physician thinks he will recover.

Circuit Court Proceedings.

The following are the cases reached up to the time of going to press:

People v. Burgess, murder. Arraigned and case continued.

People v. Bowles, forgery. Verdict of guilty. Not yet sentenced.

Smith v. Fox, assumpsit. Motion to set aside justice court proceedings granted.

Pine Lake Iron Works v. Foote, replevin. Continued.

Gorman v. Alec, assumpsit. Verdict for plaintiff $20.

Gaylea & Nash v. Gonet, replevin. No cause of action.

Martin v. Beach, assumpsit. Stricken from the calendar.

Jackson v. Jackson, assumpsit. Continued.

Austin v. McGlashan et al. Motion to set aside default denied.

Harding v. Kinney, et al. Decree of foreclosure granted.

Miscarry v. Miscarry, divorce granted.

Miller v. Miller, divorce, granted.

Von Platten v. Box. motion to amend plea granted.

Thirty v. Addis, assumpsit. Given to jury this morning.

Burgess.

The wife of Reuben Willis was buried one day last week.

J. A. Bacon is still confined to the house, although able to sit up some.

Zilpah Gibson went to Vanderbilt one day last week to meet her husband.

The tax collector should have a portable safe in which to store his wealth.

The friends of Mrs. Scott will be pleased to learn that she has regained her health.

The rising generation of Hayesites have been pretty well Chewed up this winter.

Mr. Josiah Gibson, who is visiting friends in Lonsville, Ky., fell down stairs and was injured.

Wm. Scroggy went to the lumber woods some time ago, and as his mother has not heard from him, she is somewhat worried.

We have here a lively little burg, consisting of three private houses, a hay-stack, and a "corner grocery," also a United States postoffice. At the corner grocery the inhabitants congregate freely to talk over the political situation, and lay plans for the ensuing campaign. They keep on tap pipes, tobacco, red herring and crackers; also a stock of patent medicines. It will be seen that we are progressing and will soon become a "city." Uso.

Hayes.

The sleighing is splendid.

Lorin Hamlin has returned home from the lumber woods.

Quite a number of our citizens are working at Ironton at present.

Miss Sophia G. Ross has closed her winter term of school in Evangeline township.

The tax collector's countenance is becoming familiar, as he may be seen going his rounds.

A spelling school at the Lakeview school house next Friday evening. Everybody invited.

We are informed that seven Indians were buried here last week; some of them died at Ironton.

Rev. McLellan, of Northport, filled Rev. VanAuken's appointment at Lakeview last Sunday.

Mrs. Maggie Wolverton, of Eastport, Antrim county, is spending a few weeks visit at her parents, Alex. Ross.

The mill yards throughout the township are well filled with logs, which will make a boom in the saw mills, when spring opens.

A. W. Chew has closed a term of four months school, in district No. 1. E. C. Chew has closed a term of three months school in district No. 4. There are now but two schools in session in this township.

J. ZEKE.

South Arm.

School has closed in the Nicloy district.

Mr. N. F. Churchill and family passed through here to Ironton recently.

Thermometer 9° below zero, Feb. 24th, but weather somewhat milder at present.

Supervisor Hipp's youngest child, five months old, died last week of lung fever.

An oyster supper for Elder Blake, was held at South Arm last week; net receipts $11.00.

Mr. Jos. Cameron, of the firm of Cameron Bros., Torch Lake, passed through here recently.

The Bennett M. E. class held an oyster supper at Mr. H. Vance's, for Rev. R. Tyndall, recently. A good time and $18.00 realized.

Mr. Melbourne Wilson is soon to start for southern Illinois, where he expects to remain five years. Mrs. W. plans a visit to Canada for the summer, then to join him in the fall.

Rev. H. C. Scofield was called over to Jordan to preach the funeral sermon of the youngest child of John and Susan Wilks. The discourse was listened to by a large and attentive audience. F. A. N.

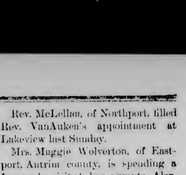
Ironton.

The skirmish for wood choppers continues.

Mr. Williams returned with eighteen wood-choppers.

Miss Shattuck was in town visiting friends last Saturday and Sunday.

The tax-gatherer is seen on our streets almost every day. It looks as if another extension would be necessary.



A large stock of New

Spring Goods

on the way, and every day expected to arrive. Come and see the

NEW STYLES.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are head quarters for.

DRUGS

CHEMICALS,

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery,

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and best drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Partlo's new block.

Opera Block

RENUNCIATION.

Beth bird and cage were fair,
And both belonged to me;
Yet ever with fearful eyes
The bird looked over the sea.
Within their tender depths
Shone ever a wild unrest;
Ever against the bars
It beat its beautiful breast.

I said, I will make it cage
So bright, and glad, and gay,
With all that love can do,
It cannot choose but stay.
In vain I wrought with art;
Still it was plain to me
That ever with longing eyes
My bird looked over the sea.

Then I said, I will hold it close—
Surely it is my right—
I will keep this prize one thing.
It rest by love, by might.
In vain! Though into the power
To hold or set it free,
N-I mine to hold its heart—
That could escape from me.

Then I said, Be free, O bird,
To spread your beautiful wings.
Who cares for a song, unless
It's also the heart that sings?
For the glance of eyes that shine,
If shining they also rove?
For the snow-tost breast, if ne'er
It beat with the pulse of love?

While I opened the door;
But I turned my face away,
For men are weak sometimes,
Whatever the world may say.
A thrill of joy rang out
From a happy, songful breast—
A flash of wings—silence!
My heart told all the rest.

My bird will never come back;
Yet why should I weep or sigh,
If only the thing I love
Has entered its native sky?
I will never come back, I know;
But who, its heart to prove,
Is willing to be forged,
Stands on the heights of Love.

ICHABOD TURNER'S MISSION.

"Crooked! crooked! crooked!" rang out the sharp, peculiar, dissonant voice, and the tall thin figure in sooty garments and flapping hat swayed to and fro on the stump that had been selected for a rostrum. "All things have gone crooked in this world, and I've come to set 'em straight—to make the snarls, give the power where it belongs, and put men in their places. Oh—h—h, my friends! The world is topsy-turvy; the top's at the bottom and the bottom's at the top, and I've come to turn things right end up."

The 6 o'clock whistle had sounded the close of another day's work at the shops, and the men, pouring out from the various smoke-stained archways, paused to listen. It was a motley group—some bedaubed with many colors from the paint-rooms, some with grimy hands and faces from foundry or machine shop, while further back on the long platform that extended along the track were gathered that inevitable adjunct of any crowd, the boys, and a sprinkling of women—some of them with children in their arms. The speaker's excitement seemed to deepen as his audience increased. His keen eyes under the old hat darted lightning-like glances here and there; he gesticulated wildly and his voice rose to a still higher pitch.

"Oh—h—h, yes! Look at me! I'm Ichabod Turner, and the mission I'm sent on is to mend all crookedness and turn things right end up!"

The men seemed to find a grim pleasure in the harangue. They laughed as they exchanged comments.

"Chosen a good point to begin at, eh, Jack?" questioned one.

"I should say so! He'll have a tough contract, even if he doesn't extend his territory."

"Goin' to set all things straight? Will take a mighty sight more than you to do that job, my wash to mussel-bed boss; it needs."

murmured an old woman on the platform, as she picked up her bundle and trudged on again.

The two men looked after her, and the elder shook his grizzled head.

"Poor soul! No doubt things seem crooked enough to her—her boy was crushed between the cars last year. Does seem as if somebody might invent a way to get along with killing fewer brakemen."

Jim Barclay, sauntering down the long walk, stopped beside a bright young girl who had paused for a moment on the outer edge of the crowd.

"If that fellow would begin his work by altering the days and nights a little, or by means of capping them, I'd be obliged to him," he laughed.

The girl turned with a little start of surprise and pleasure.

"Why, Jim," then a glance at his lunch-basket brought the swift question, "You're not going out to-night? It's not your run."

"I just make it, though, they say. It's an extra train, and they are short of men, somehow—off or disabled. I feel considerable disabled myself."

"You were out last night?"

"And the night before, and nearly all yesterday. I didn't get in to-day until afternoon, and I was scarcely settled into a comfortable sleep before I was called. I'm not fit to go, that's a fact. Don't worry, Dell."

He broke off his sentences abruptly, as he saw the shadow of anxiety on his companion's fair face. "It doesn't happen so often. They're short, you see."

"I ought not to happen at all," insisted Dell, indignantly. "I wouldn't go."

"Then my head would come off at short notice," laughed Jim. "We can't afford that."

Pretty Dell flushed rosily. She knew so well what that meant. There was a little home talked over and arranged to every detail of its simple furnishing, for when the two were planning what Jim should obtain his hopes for promotion.

No, I won't insure my necks to-night, but I'll take the risk of crossing a few other people's heads rather than the certainty of being run over," laughed Jim. "It's a pity that fellow, who is so sure of his mission, couldn't turn my brains right side up; they feel crooked enough. But don't worry, Dell," he repeated, hurriedly.

The crowd began to thin. Hungry men, swinging their empty dinner pails, presently found the prospect of supper more alluring than the stranger's promised millennium. Jim looked at his watch and found he had not even five minutes to spare for a part of the homeward walk with Dell. He parted from her with a reluctant good-by, and she walked away alone. She had gone but a few steps, however, when she turned and looked back.

"You'll be careful, Jim? Don't let anything happen."

"Why, Dell?" He laughed, half touched, half wondering. "I oughtn't to have talked such nonsense. Don't be uneasy."

She smiled in answer, and the cloud slowly faded from her face as she walked on. A call for extra service was no cause for serious trouble—all these exigencies were so familiar to her. Bell and whistle, messenger and dispatch, with their always-imperative and often unwelcome orders, were part of her daily life. Jim would be tired and worn out, of course. That had happened often, and would doubtless happen again, but her thoughts turned in pleasanter pictures of the future, to arranging once more that tiny home with its dainty rooms, which should be a very haven of rest to one who came home weary. She paused on the long iron bridge and looked down on the network of tracks below, crossing and interlacing in a seemingly inextricable tangle.

The gray twilight of the short autumn afternoon was already deepening toward night, and the headlights of the engines passing and repassing as they changed from one track to another, shone out brilliantly. Men were running here and there, waving their signal lanterns and shouting hoarse orders that to one uninitiated only mingled confusedly with the heavy breathing of the locomotives and the clanger of bells. Familiar sounds to Dell—regel outlines against the faint rose of the western sky, were the great shops, and beyond the clumps of trees that came from, unless—why, yes, almost to a station, of course. Dell must have put a bright light in the window.

Alas! Bill had climbed back over the tender to look after a suspected hot-box on the after truck.

Shriek after shriek of warning from a steam whistle aided the flashing signal lights, and at last forced their meaning upon the brakeman's brain. With a low cry of horror the engine was reversed, but too late to avoid the crash that followed as the two freight trains were piled upon each other in common wreck.

"What possessed you to run in that fashion, man? Were you drunk or crazy?" demanded more than one rough voice, as Jim stood by the track. But he only gazed, with blanched face at the scene before him, and answered them nothing.

"Fortunately almost miraculously, it seemed no one was seriously injured," as the morning papers said, in chronicling the occurrence. Under the same glaring headlines they also commended the promptness of the company in dismissing "the engineer whose criminal carelessness caused the disaster, and who, as nearly as can be learned, was comfortably sleeping at his post, and so neglectful of all signals."

These were the tidings that reached Dell, instead of the glad word for which she had waited.

"What they say is true, after a fashion," said Jim, simply and sadly. "I was to blame for it—and yet I wasn't, for I was not fit to make the run, and I told them so."

There was no one to chronicle his years of faithful service, save by official carelessness," if not cruelty, which had placed him in such a position; but those things were well understood among the many workers in that railroad town, and they acknowledged to each other, with ready but helpless sympathy, that it was "rough on poor Jim."

Rough it surely grew as the long days came and went, and the hope of reinstatement grew dimmer. "All those missing men, who couldn't be found when I needed a single night's rest, seem to have turned up once more, and they can spare me indefinitely," he exclaimed bitterly to Dell, with a pretense of jocularity that scarcely covered the bitterness. The brave little woman tried to comfort and encourage him, though the dancing light had gone out of her brown eyes, and new grave lines were deepening about the young lips. The little home that they had planned seemed so like the shadowy ghost of a dead hope that neither cared to talk of it any more, and, indeed, Dell's ingenuity found full occupation now in combating the various wild schemes which Jim, in his desperation, was constantly forming. He had been away to look for employment, but business was dull everywhere at this season; and, moreover, grown up in that railroad town, where all interest and industry centered in the shops and tracks, he had belonged to the line from boyhood; he could do but one thing, and there was little chance for a situation elsewhere for one of his training. Dell's every suggestion's disapproval seemed to follow him in all his efforts like a blighting frost.

Gradually the bright gleam in eyes dropped from the brave, heavy brown and barren branches; the soft haze faded from the hills, and the narrow iron track, stretching away over the frozen earth toward the cold gray sky, looked to Dell's sorrowful eyes a fitting emblem of the dreary life road that lay before her.

"I'm going away to-morrow," Jim was saying, one bleak afternoon, as they paced up and down toward the town. "I've shown idiocy enough in waiting for you, Dell, but I've decided I ought to go as far West as I can make my way, and I'll come back when I've some real word to brag—if that time ever comes."

It was useless to combat his purpose; there was nothing better to offer. The girl's wistful face only won a dreary persistency to the track again. What a hard, narrow road it was, stretching away to the voiceless goal—the far-away wintry horizon!

Down on the walk by the round-house a knot of men gathered, and Ichabod Turner's wanderings had brought him thither again—the place seemed the only home-like resort for him—and he was discoursing on his favorite theme. Suddenly a movement in the outer edges of the crowd, and its numbers were speedily augmented from various quarters of the building. Swiftly and excitedly the speaker had turned, and with a single bound placed himself in the cab of a locomotive that had for several hours been fuming with eyes

"It's steamed up! Off! off! Come out of that!" shouted several voices.

But Ichabod only looked loosely and waved his long arms triumphantly above his head.

"I've made many run on this continent that can run an engine! I'm ordered to take this one and go mad 'run the night' and I'm going to do it!"

Two or three persons rushed forward, but he caught up an iron bar and struck them vigorously that they were obliged to fall back. Then, like a flash, his hand seized the throttle-lever, and the dangerous steed he had chosen leaped forward with a snort.

"Fall him off!" "Lock the wheels!" rang out in conflicting orders. But Ichabod Turner, crouched low, with eyes gleaming like fire, and shook his bar in threatening and defiance.

"Touch me if you dare! I'm sent to set the crooked straight. Here comes the millennium! Clear the track for the millennium!" And he was off.

Swiftly as an arrow some one darted through the crowd, ran along the track, and leaped on the engine, clinging, no one knew how, as it moved away. Dell herself suddenly deserted, and could only move forward with the others, now following with eyes of mingled admiration and horror the athletic figure clinging and swinging as the speed increased and it finally forced its way into the cab.

"What a terror to be left loose on the road! Who can tell what he will run into before he can be stopped!" exclaimed one with a white face.

"Has anybody'll manage him?"

"He'll be killed!" answered dissenting voices.

But the unexpected appearance in the cab, meanwhile, had momentarily confused its occupant, who mutil then had not been aware of the presence of any one else.

"Where did you come from?" he demanded in surprise.

"Flew down," panted Jim; "sent to help you. But what on earth do you mean by trying to start the millennium in broad daylight?"

"Daylight?" repeated Ichabod, bewildered by an earnestness and assurance as fierce as his own.

"Don't you know we must wait until the stars begin to 'fall? Besides, we must go back and telegraph to all the world to clear the track for us."

He was improving his companion's momentary confusion by gently edging into his place and sending him back, while he urged the superior advantages of his own plan of proceeding. All the details of that brief, horrible ride Jim could never clearly recall; but with the engine once in his own hands he held possession, and as soon as it was possible reversed it, endeavoring the while to distract the other's attention by a stream of explanations concerning their joint mission. The suggestion of clearing the track seemed to suit Ichabod's crazed brain, and seizing the cord near him he clung to it so persistently that the shrieking, deafening steam-whistle drowned out all further efforts at conversation, and never ceased its terrific din until they rolled back into the great yard. Officers, police, and train dispatchers had been hastily notified, only to find themselves helpless in the matter, and a line of anxious spectators watched the engine's return. Then, discovering for the first time that his project was foiled, or bent upon some new scheme no one could tell which—Ichabod suddenly dropped the cord, and, before his companion could surmise his intention, leaped to the track. A moment later he was crushed under the cruel wheels and tenderly lifted.

"So ondeth—the first lesson," he murmured, and then all earthly tangles for a dead hope that neither cared to talk of it any more, and, indeed, Dell's ingenuity found full occupation now in combating the various wild schemes which Jim, in his desperation, was constantly forming. He had been away to look for employment, but business was dull everywhere at this season; and, moreover, grown up in that railroad town, where all interest and industry centered in the shops and tracks, he had belonged to the line from boyhood; he could do but one thing, and there was little chance for a situation elsewhere for one of his training. Dell's every suggestion's disapproval seemed to follow him in all his efforts like a blighting frost.

Gradually the bright gleam in eyes dropped from the trees, leaving only

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., Feb. 20, 1884.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

The Mississippi river and its tributary improvements promise to become a nucleus for western political campaigns judging from the action of the Mississippi and Ohio river convention which was in session in this city last week. The convention was composed of several hundred prominent business men representing the territory and sentiment of over 30,000,000 people interested in the development of western commerce. They want congress to appropriate about $40,000,000 for western rivers and harbors and they said to congress, "Give us what we ask and need, or our people will relegate you to private life."

WHAT WILL CONGRESS DO ABOUT IT?

Provious to the assembly of this convention the house committee on rivers and harbors had informally discussed the appropriation for the coming year, and the majority of the committee seemed to favor a $10,000,000 limit, and expressed themselves as desirous, if possible to confine it within $9,000,000. The estimates of the engineers having in charge the improvements of rivers and harbors amount to $35,000,000, and the convention endorsed and urged the expenditure of even a greater sum than this. But the famous river and harbor steal of '81 is still fresh in the minds of congressmen, and the probabilities are that not over $12,000,000 will be appropriated it is said.

THE EFFECT OF MORRISON'S TARIFF BILL.

Democratic senators and representatives are cautious in what they say on the Morrison tariff bill. But it is clear that the proposed horizontal reduction awakens no enthusiasm and is not satisfactory to a large wing of the party. It is now to be considered a committee, and we are assured it can not come back to the house inside of a month at the earliest. This will throw over the discussion well into the spring when the political caldron will be boiling and the appropriation bills are under full headway. Hence the bill has a stormy career ahead even in the house while its prospects in the senate are so small as practically to dismiss the whole scheme to the domain of speculation rather than legislation. As a battle-cry the bill can serve its purpose as well whether adopted or not, and it is in this direction that its chief importance lies.

HOW MUCH IT REDUCES THE TARIFF.

The horizontal reduction of the bill decreases the taxes about $28,000,000, and when you add to this the abolished duties on the increased free list the sum total swells to $30,000,000. It remains to be seen whether the bill can pass the house, but eight democratic senators have publicly declared that they will vote against the measure, therefore it can not pass the senate.

CHECKMATING JAY GOULD.

Some months ago when a little war began between the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and the Union Pacific roads, it was here published that Jay Gould was beginning, with this war, to carry on his plan for wrecking Union Pacific, causing it to be sold on the first mortgage, buying it in himself, and thereby wiping out over $100,000,000 indebtedness to the United States, which is only secured by second mortgage. Mr. Anderson, of Kansas, introduced a bill in the house the other day which will save the government from such loss. It provides that when either of the railroad companies indebted to the United States on second mortgages shall fail to keep up the interest on their first mortgage bonds, the attorney general shall apply for a receiver, who shall thereafter manage the road under the direction of the secretary of the interior, until the debt to the United States is all paid. There are a great many people who think that the Pacific railroad companies never intended to pay the U. S. when they borrowed this money, but if Mr. Anderson's bill becomes a law, the easy, and at present the only visible method of "freezing out" Uncle Sam as a creditor will be eventually shut off.

BANKING AND SILVER LEGISLATION.

A member of the banking and currency committee of the house says that there is but little doubt that a bill will soon be reported providing that national banks may increase their circulation to the full par value of such United States bonds as they have deposited in the U. S. Treasury to secure their notes. He also states that there is little prospect of any silver legislation, except perhaps with regard to the trade dollars, and that these will be retired for recoinage upon strictly just terms to the holders.

SECRETARY CHANDLER CURTAILED.

There is a strong flavor of economy in the forthcoming naval appropriation bill. The estimates were over $22,500,000 and the amount allowed will be less than $14,500,000. The sum asked for the four steel cruisers is granted, but the poor old monitors are left out and Chandler is cross about it. The committee seems to think that the building of a new navy is a matter of time as well as money, and that the government's wiser and safer policy is to go a little slow on both.

THE DANVILLE RIOT.

Although announced to sit with open doors the senate committee to investigate the Danville anti-election riot was quite a difficult body for a stranger to find when it commenced its sessions. The room occupied is without a sign on the door, which was kept closed during the first day, but opened thereafter by Mr. Sherman because of several very loud complaints. The evidence thus far produced is only a repetition of that presented before the citizens committee which investigated the matter in Danville a week after the riot. The report of the committee will be in accordance with Mr. Sherman's wishes, as the republicans have the majority. A minority report is predicted by many, and the democratic contention for its adoption will give Sherman, Mahone and other "bloody shirt" senators an opportunity to create "campaign documents" at the public expense. The report of the committee will hardly reach the senate before the 1st of March as the investigations here and in Mississippi will not be concluded for another week or more.

POLITICAL ASSESSMENTS.

The bill introduced in the senate by Mr. Voorhees to punish government employees who admit to political assessments aims a blow at the worst evil in our politics. It is true, as Mr. Voorhees says, that so long as officials are permitted by law to hand their money over to campaign committees means will be found to compel them to do so—"voluntarily," of course. The civil service law prohibits assessments, but the law is ingeniously evaded by the republicans. I will give you an instance: The state election in Ohio cost the republicans a large sum of money and at the close of the campaign the state committee found themselves in debt nearly $15,000. Now, the Ohio republican association of this city is composed of government officials and clerks from Ohio, with Judge Wm. Lawrence, the first controller of the treasury as its president. At the request of the Ohio state committee Judge Law rence called a meeting of the Ohio association and requested subscriptions to liquidate the aforesaid deficiency, and over five hundred clerks "paid up." Burt Francisco, son of Andy Francisco, editor of the Toledo Telegram, and a member of the Ohio association and a clerk in the government printing office, said to me that when a demand came from this source every member invariably contributed money, knowing that a failure to so do would result in his being "spotted." All the important states have these associations and they are officered and managed by government officials high in position.

The debate in the senate on Mr. Voorhees' resolution was not a fortunate incident for all who took part in it. In fact, it was notably unfortunate for Mr. Harrison, of Indiana, and a would be president, who, giving way to impulse, uttered sentiments that would be applauded only by that element of his party which was supposed to have been crushed in 1882, when the people rose in their might to put down Hubbleism. Whether the bill will become a law cannot be surmised.

TOO HONEST IN THE HOUSE.

The various railroad companies interested in land grants, for the forfeiture of which bills are pending, seem to have abandoned any idea of stemming the tide of sentiment against them in the house, but they hope to accomplish something over in the senate. The representatives of the railroads say that the senate is a more temperate body than the house, and proceeds more judicially and regardless of public sentiment in disposing of important matters. They will make their fight before the senate, and they claim that they will win; but should they fail there, it is anticipated that the validity of forfeiture legislation will be tested in the courts. It is a well known fact that many of the leading senators are financially interested in these railroad companies, and will do nothing inimical to their own purses.

EXTENSION OF THE LETTER CARRIER SYSTEM.

It is now probable that all towns of 2,000 inhabitants and over will enjoy the convenience of letter carriers The house committee on post offices have agreed to report such a bill, as also one for the issue of a special 10 cent stamp, which, when attached to a letter, will secure its immediate delivery at any letter carrier office from 7 a. m. to 12 midnight. These two measures would be favorably received by the public.

SPENDING $50,000,000 TO PREVENT $10,000,000.

Mr. Morrison's committee is besieged by various interests antagonistic to his tariff bill. A number of Louisiana politicians are now in the city to convince Morrison that the duty on sugar ought to be retained. One of these protectionists said to me yesterday, in relation to the duty on sugar: "It is the most burdensome tax which the American people have to pay. It is a tax of $10 a year on every family in this country. We use $100,000,000 worth of sugar every year. Of this amount our own sugar plantations produce a little $10,000,000 worth. The other $90,000,000 is imported, and we have to pay a tariff equal to about 53 per cent of its value. It amounts to a tax of $50,000,000 to protect a $10,000,000 industry, and we could better afford to hand every sugar planter and all his laborers at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. But, you see, we are bound to protect them, for they spent their money in improving their plantations and erecting refineries under an implied agreement that the country would protect them, and if this democratic house don't do it, the republican senate will."

BREWSTER'S IMBECILE TREACHERY.

Some time ago I promised to say more about the retirement of Corkhill. The investigation of Brewster by Springer's committee will bring out the facts, and I may as well give them in advance. The president had determined to re appoint Mr. Corkhill, when Brewster made a personal appeal against it. "If Corkhill is reappointed I am ruined," was the substance of this imploration. "I can only justify the employment of special counsel in the star route cases, and the enormous expenditures attending it, on the plea that Corkhill was incompetent to try them. To reappoint him is to refute such an argument. I shall be disgraced and ruined by the investigation in such an event." Notwithstanding this talk to the president, up to the very last day Brewster pretended to Corkhill that he was friendly to him, and had recommended his retention.

When temptation appears, and we are almost persuaded to sin wrong, how often a mother's word of warning will call to mind vows that are rarely broken. Yes, the memory of a mother has saved many a poor wretch from going astray. Tall grass may be growing over the hallowed spot where all her earthly remains repose; the dying leaves of autumn may be whirled over it, or the white mantle of winter may cover it from sight; yet the spirit of her, when he walks in the right path, appears, and gently, softly, mournfully calls to him, when wandering off into the ways of error.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of CATARRH that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by dr. druggists.

PIMPLES.

I will mail Free the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove FACE PIMPLES, BLACKHEADS and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also best treatment for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, including a 3c. stamp, [illegible]

J. MILO EATON,

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FAR

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companie

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 187

IMMENSE CUT IN PRICE

—OF—

All-Wool Goods,

Overcoats and Suitings,

Boots and Shoe

have a large stock of Clothing and Boots and Shoes which I will close out at actu as I wish to make room for spring goods. All my goods I will warrant

First-Class,

And will be pleased to show them to all parties whether they intend to purchase or n member, I have marked these goods down at actual cost, and they are

Big Bargains.

E. M. Clark

Charlevoix, Feb. 12, 1884.

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS,

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run to him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charle

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHIN

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goo

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets,

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Fe

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a [illegible] and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our establish

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses or [illegible] and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction.

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 34. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, MARCH 6, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

Is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, MICH., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

CLEVERANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, Office in Dollars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich. E. D. CLEVERANK. C. J. GRIER.

[illegible] & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich.

EDWARD W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor at Law and Real Estate business promptly attended to. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law, Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

BRALTON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

[illegible]TON, BEAT & MARTIN, Attorneys at Law, Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

SCARF, WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and C. A. Count Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX Deposit and Exchange department. Deposits received; other Government bonds, real estate, and [illegible] taken for same. Loan money on first mortgages. Draw drafts and transfer money. RANGER & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Services and preaching [illegible] Sunday-school at 12 m. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, at school house. C. F. SAUNDERS, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday-school at close of morning service. Prayer and praise meeting Thursday evening at 7. J. T. HAWKINS, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX HOOK AND LADDER FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month at the town hall. R. F. BISHOP, Secretary.

HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACY.

SHEFFIELD Homeopathic Physician & Surgeon, Boyne City, Mich. Office in Lewis block, Court street.

LIVERY STABLES.

[illegible]RIDGEMAN, Proprietor, [illegible] Livery, Boarding and Sale Stable. Only first-class horses kept and [illegible] Good Saddle Horses a Specialty.

PHYSICIANS.

A. CHRISTIAN, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, Charlevoix.

LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, Office in the Lewis block, East Jordan, Mich.

M. PHINNEY, M. D., Surgeon and Physician, Office: Pinney Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

HORACE S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix, Mich.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. K. Baxter Post No. 138, meets second and fourth Wednesday evenings of each month at Odd Fellows' hall.

O. K. Charlevoix Lodge No. 322, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

O. R. P. Round Lake Lodge No. 203 meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

O. L. True Blues, No. 12, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

ELKANA Charlevoix Lodge No. 337, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Postoffice.

A. R. PERRIGO, President. A. B. EPPERT, Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank, OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money on approved paper at reasonable rates. Collections promptly made. Collections given careful attention and remittances made promptly. G. S. TIBBITS, Cashier.

Board by the Day or Week AND WARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS. Also Tobacco and Cigars. Prices reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON, Op. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Bridge Street House, ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor, Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only stage route in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House, RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor. Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public and headquarters for the Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

United States Hotel, GEO. W. CURLIS, Proprietor, Boyne City, Michigan.

[illegible] is centrally located and is furnished

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.

PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County

L. L. CARR

Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in the season. Nuts, candies, confectionery, cigars, cycle, always on hand. Call and see me. Westside Bridge.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and cordial Good as Charlevoix county. Agent for the well-known ROCKFORD WATCH, the best made. Repairing a specialty. All goods sold by me warranted as represented, or if not satisfactory may be returned within six months and exchanged or money refunded. Store near the bridge.

O. W. SMITH

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.

Electro-plating in Gold and Silver. Any article of jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect January, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv		11 40m	12 00m
Richmond		2 55m	10 52
Winchester		3 51	11 46
Bluffton		4 11	11 57
Fort Wayne, ar		6 35	1 50pm
Fort Wayne, lv			2 47	5 30
Roanoke			3 56	6 37
Sumpter			5 13	7 54
Wabash			6 15	8 56
Kalamazoo, ar			6 52	9 32
Kalamazoo, lv			7 05	9 42
Grd Rapids, ar			9 02	11 37
Grd Rapids, lv		7 15am		4 45
Big H & M cross		7 30		5 05
Ellsworth		8 03		5 37
Big Rapids		9 13		7 02
Reed City		10 13		8 14
Cadillac, ar		11 25		9 30
Cadillac, lv				9 50
Sherwood				10 55
Walkersville				11 17
Manistee				12 00am
Boyne Falls				4 32
Petoskey, ar				6 24
Harbor Springs				7 05
Mackinaw City				8 30
St. Ignace				8 50
Marquette				5 50pm
Negaunee, ar				7 12

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv			5 50pm	7 30am
Marquette			6 05	8 30
St. Ignace			8 25pm	4 25pm
Mackinaw City			9 10	5 15
Harbor Springs			7 00	1 20
Petoskey, lv			7 38	11 33
Boyne Falls			8 15	12 25am
Manistee			9 19	2 11
Kaliksca			9 51	2 58
Traverse City, lv			10 15am
Cadillac, ar			11 37	5 30
Cadillac, lv		3 30pm	11 45	5 50
Reed City		4 30	12 50pm	7 08
Big Rapids		5 12	1 11	7 39
Paris (Ry Hy)		5 35	1 35	8 02
Big H & M cross		7 45	4 08	10 05
Grd Rapids, ar		7 30	4 30	10 25
Grd Rapids, lv	6 35am		4 32	12 20am
Kalamazoo, ar	8 32		6 32	2 21
Kalamazoo, lv	8 37		6 52	2 39
Wakeshma	9 05		7 22	3 10
Schoolcraft	9 20		7 36	3 25
Mendon Hills	11 08		9 25	5 31
Fort Wayne, ar	12 45pm		10 52	6 42
Fort Wayne, lv	12 52	5 55am	12 02am
Hoagland	2 00	7 56	2 03
Winchester	3 24	9 16	3 25
Richmond, ar	4 17	9 47	4 02
Cincinnati, ar	7 40pm	12 50pm	7 30am

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Ass't G. P. Agt., Grand Rapids, Mich.

HALL'S Catarrh Cure

Recommended by Physicians

100 REWARD PAID FOR A CASE IT FAILS TO CURE.

We manufacture and sell it with the positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance. It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you are troubled with the offensive disease, ask your druggist for it, and GET NO IMITATION OR SUBSTITUTE. If he can not get it, send 10 cts and we will forward by return mail. Sold by druggists, price 75c.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Dr. Cheney, Agt., Cleveland, O. 223

Buy note paper and envelopes [illegible] a box at Charlevoix, 40 O. R. Wood & Co.'s drug store.

From the National Capital.

Notes and Interviews by a Journal Correspondent.

Mr. Morrison, "the pusher" of the house and the head of its most important committee, is working diligently, and if he don't prove an acceptable nominee in tariff reform, I shall be much disappointed. And of course the other house committees, Mr. pushes his [illegible] opportunity among other men in the house to apply his party with campaign material. He won't work well in harness a lasting and lasting time on Brewster, Attorney General." If he does and that he can do, and that is now promised, you will hear of more concentrated democratic and successful unanimity than has been turned up in Washington in the memory of man. The utter and incomprehensible incapacity exhibited and practiced in the department of justice for the last two years has been more scandalous than any one will believe till the very names and homely truths are dragged to light. This you may depend upon it, Mr. Springer will do most gracefully. And this leads me to a topic of general interest.

ARTHUR'S PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDACY.

The weakest of the weak points of Mr. Arthur's administration is, unquestionably, the efficiency per se of his cabinet. This fact will bear severely against him in his candidacy for nomination at the Chicago democratic convention. Of the less than two are in the cabinet, Lincoln and Chandler. The war and navy are manned, only I have only intimated a point or two about the attorney general's [illegible] more will be developed. But the state department, for more prominent, as an equally sombre in [illegible] store door under-hands the price and virtue of a Havana cigar. He takes England's insults, Bismark's snubs, and the general run of foreign nations' jeers without much apprehension of manner as though they were paying our nation the highest compliments. He is perfectly satisfied if he can bob up once a week at the president's or Mr. Secretary so and so's state dinner, and particularly so if Mrs. Frelinghuysen can be passed on the president's right hand and then the Misses Frelinghuysen directly destined down the table in their regular order. This to him is "greatness."

Secretary Teller's office may not be a fat one in incompetency, but the congressional inquiries will find solid meat there if they get all the facts. Some of the most flagrant, but most carefully hidden schemes will be unearthed in the interior department if it shall be made known, of western land operations, railroad connections and the like. No doubt the secretary himself is a genial business man, but he has clerks and secretaries who have led a wild chase for him in more regards than one. But enough of republican reminiscence for one letter.

GERMANY VS. UNITED STATES.

Tom Ochiltree has at last succeeded in identifying himself with the United States either by intent or accident. Bismark's return of the Ochiltree House Lasker resolution is now the great theme of speculation as to whether our foreign relations are not now passing into a stage of hostilities. It is urged and reported that when Herr Eisenbecker, the German Minister, officially presents the resolution to our government, its return will be refused peremptorily. This action must be taken to maintain the dignity of the United States, and the result will be the recall of the respective ministers to a very serious state of affairs between two governments. The next week or ten days will develop this matter and a great question.

E. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by druggists.

General Sherman has been officially placed on the retired list of the army. There are now on the retired list 54 colonels, 82 majors and 63 captains.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every year, and we guarantee that [illegible] and [illegible] will cure any case of Catarrh that can be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by druggists.

A bill has been introduced in the house providing for the election of three vice presidents as another solution of the succession problems.

Keep the cow your horses and colt good appetites. Improved sweet and [illegible] powder [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN.

NEWSPAPERS do not meet the popular demand, after all. During the Nutt trial, at Pittsburgh, not one could be found willing to defile its columns by printing the Dukes letters in full. An enterprising man filled the want, however, by printing the letters with all their indecent details and sending them out to be sold by boys on the streets. Thousands of the sheets were snapped up eagerly by all classes of citizens, and the enterprising man reaped a pocketful of what might have been honest, but were certainly dirty, pennies.

DURING the past seven years the German Empress has conferred a gold cross, with an autograph diploma, on no fewer than 1,027 female servants who have remained uninterruptedly in the same family for forty years. In other words, such honorable service is made honorable in a very acceptable and tangible manner. The idea is a good one, for my honest labor is honorable, and no one in limited circumstances need be ashamed of service as "hired girl." Better that, with the attendant comforts, than even marriage to a man who will be unable to provide and incapable of love.

JOHN HARRIS, the Cornish poet, the author of a thousand pieces of rhyme and prose, which were highly praised by Longfellow, has just died at Falmouth, aged 63. The son of a miner, he often, in his early days of poverty, used ink made of the juice of blackberries. In 1864 he got the great prize for the best poem on the tercentenary of Shakspeare. "Although," he says, in his autobiography, "my life has been one of hard struggles, I have been content. A crust and song are better than a sirloin and groan." Six years ago Lord Beaconsfield secured him a grant of $1,000 from the royal bounty fund, but most of it was lost by the suspension of the Cornish bank. Mr. Gladstone then added him a grant of $500 from the civil list.

AT the last meeting of the Academy of Sciences in Paris, M. Paul Bert gave the results of some researches which he has recently made respecting the administration of chloroform, particularly to persons of weak heart, in surgical operations. M. Bert is of opinion that the quantity of an æsthetic is less important to observe than the tension of the vapor inhaled and the proportion of air with which it is mixed. He has constructed an apparatus with which he administers a proportion of eight grammes of chloroform to a hundred litres of air. Experiments which he has made with this have shown that not only is a saving of chloroform effected, but the danger is considerably lessened. The pulse of the patient inhaling the mixture is calm, and the temperature of the body is not sensibly lowered, while in only four cases out of twenty-two was the slightest appearance of nausea produced.

EDWARD SIEBERT, who lately died at Memphis, of water on the brain, was quite a character, notable chiefly for his experience and success with the game of poker. He was a Swiss by birth, but was taken to New Orleans when a boy. He was one of the few survivors of the Nicaragua expedition, and in the war of the rebellion was in the Commissary Department of the Confederate army. In 1867 he was sent on a secret mission to England, and on his return was made Chief of the Secret Service. After the war he conducted a saloon business until he had made a fortune, devoting the greater part of his time to poker. He is put down among his remarkable exploits that he once bet $10,000 on a hand he held, his face in the meantime being perfectly immovable. He rarely lost at the game, and when his luck he drew three capital prizes in lotteries. He died at the age of 62 years, his life being insured for $20,000.

FOOTBALL is made rather a brutal sport under the rules of Rugby, England, in what is known as the "scrum." A player is allowed to take the ball in his hands and run with it toward his goal, but his opponents are also permitted to pounce upon him to regain the ball the best way they can. The consequence often is the meeting of twenty lusty young men in a pack of struggling, pushing cavalry for the ball in their midst. When the "mass" disperses it frequently happens that some one of the players is crippled or badly hurt. A few days ago, in a match between university clubs, a young man died from injuries sustained in one of these terrible scrambles, and the Coroner's jury very justly passed vigorous condemnation upon the rule permitting such a perilous rush. All sports that are worth manly pursuits have an element of ruggedness in them, which makes it all the more desirable that there should be precautions against extremes, and rules should be made accordingly.

CHICAGO Daily News: A few years ago the death of Wendell Phillips would have been a calamity to universal liberty. Now he can go, and freedom only suffers as children suffer who see the aged head of a fond father laid low—a father who has been their guide, protector, and friend, but whose days of labor are past. The great work of Wendell Phillips was completed when he saw the race for which he had so long striven unmurmured and untrammelled. The years that have followed have been years of honor to him, and years of usefulness also, but the edifice was reared, and less cunning hands could place the finishing touches upon it. And so he has been only waiting, ready to go, his accounts ready, his life-work finished, his labor done. Without official position he fills one of the principal niches in the history of his country. Without the spur of public place and the ambition of men seeking rewards and recognition at the hands of his fellows, he stands among the most eloquent utterances of his contemporaries. He spoke without price, he labored without pay, he battled without fee or reward, save what came from an approving conscience. And whether he spoke amid applause or jeers, with approval or frowns, it was all the same to him. He began by saying, with Lincoln, "if slavery is not wrong nothing is wrong," and on that rock he builded for posterity. Others who strove with him were great; some of them have reared above their tombs the lofty shafts that tell of a nation's love and admiration; but none among them all battled for liberty more unselfishly, more decidedly, or more effectively than Wendell Phillips.

THE LITTLE FOLKS.

Those Three.

The night was dark as a night could be
When Jack and Harry and Dan—those three—
Sneak, each as only a boy can be,
Into the old deserted house.

And this is many long years ago,
Long before the days of the rebellion,
But the story is not ancient old,
For it will match with any to-day.

Each of the three had a mighty aim,
Each of the three had a mighty pride,
Each of the three was a fearless lad,
Each of the three was a lion bold.

Each of the three had a mighty scorn
For the coward who dared not venture
Into the house at the midnight hour,
Into the house that was said to be haunted.

To share his courage, in this case boy
And have the laugh, in this case less glee,
Came Jack and Harry and—those three.

Came with a lantern, legion I and each,
Some to them cried: "Don't go!" and "Don't!"
"I didn't tell you so, now you know!"
Said I, and I'm a prophet, I."
"Because the ghosts"—"That's all stuff and nonsense!"
"Pooh, hanging bats haunt"—"The poor old fool!"
"Chloe!"

"Did I've heard it somewhere," said Jack, "and With the money I earned myself, you see,"
"Pho, boy!" laughed Harry, "cheer'd be scared,
For so have I, and a heap of money,
And here are no ghosts"—"And silly"—"And older"—

"And a dandy for child"—"And lot of rats,"
And what's that on a page, Longed Jane,
I've been with one for a week or so?"

"I never have money," he laughed back at Those's the place the ghosts are never plain.
But here is a Testament—dear I was to Each Lucky Chloe one Sunday years ago—and
And these are lies, there's nothing to me,
For I'm for Christ, and my mother says,
Then into the house, and in a trice,
The old and rotten door and stairs,
The apocrypha and the Testament,
The kerchief, and the lantern gone went;
While the bats or potatoes that his ry bore
Mor (he) like (he) bat-like
Cried Jack, with a little dimpling twirl,
Which I'm not afraid of your ghosts, girl!"
And the dim treads he first ventured in and Quite excited to hear, as it is said,
A thump or two in the room he,
Then Jack and Harry and Jane—those three."

Then Joe and Harry and Jack, whose test
Nobody ever could from the trouble—tired
Down and down and away
To the little cottage, grim and gray;
Gray and grim as the graves close by,
And old and dusky. "Now sh-sh-sh!" said Joe,
While he rapped against the door,
While it creaked as again with the weight it bore;
While Harry himself nervously drew
His revolver from his pocket. "Not a word in town
The minute you hear me—jump!"
"HUSH! THE MIP.

And then, oh, then, with an arrow flight,
They vanished like visions of the night!
And then, oh, then, in a silver shower
Its moon and rover, on trees and flower,
And poor old Chloe at her cottage door,
Turning her head to see and more,
Till her heart and her lips with one accord
Cried out, "For mercy's sake! the Lord!"
The incubus came, and the lustrous light
Flooded the dark as it never was right,
As if the angels had smiled it down
On the lonely house and not on the town;
Or as the angry lips came to me
By Jack and Harry and Jane—those three.
—Ada Cutchins, in Youth's Companion.

Turtles.

The turtle is one of the most ingenious of compound animals. In order to make a turtle you take a snake, a tortoise's back, and four claws like those of a crab, only you must not fit up the claws with the scissors, so that they will look something like the teeth of a comb. Now cut a hole through each end of the tobacco box and draw the snake through it, so that his head will appear at one end of it and his tail at the other. Then stick the four claws on the sides of the box, two on each side, and you will have a respectable turtle. Of course it won't run, or eat, or anything, because it won't have the regular turtle's insides inside of it, but it will look like a turtle.

This is not the way that real turtles are made, for they are hatched out all complete, and with their works in perfect order, from eggs. Turtles' eggs are made with soft shells like India rubber, and they are never cut open. Long ago the turtle found out that eggs could be hatched by burying them in the sand. Then all the little turtles leave their eggs in the sand to be hatched by the heat of the sun, and this saves them a great deal of trouble, and give themselves time to improve their minds.

The turtle has a great deal of mind, though he can't talk as if he could. There is a very old story about a turtle that ran a race with a hare, and beat him. The hare could run ever so much faster than the turtle that he stopped on the way to rest, feeling perfectly sure that he could get to the goal. Meanwhile the turtle kept on, and reached the winning-post before his rival. It is only fair to say that there are those who doubt this story, and say that the turtle climbed up behind a cart, and got over the ground in the race unfairly; and when you remember that the turtle is about one-half snake, it is impossible to feel much confidence in his honesty.

Turtles are frequently found with their initials and the date of their birth on their backs. These initials are cut on by the turtles themselves, and they are not very trustworthy. Any one who has a sharp knife, and who catches a turtle, can cut letters and figures on his back without hurting him. This is very often done, and the result is that a vast number of turtles crawling about in this way are now wandering about like comets, displaying some thousands have "6. W., 1775," cut on their backs, and people who find them imagine that the turtles are more than 100 years old, and were once remounted by George Washington. But George Washington was too busy in 1775 to meddle with the backs of turtles. He was more interested in seeing the backs of British soldiers.

Boys sometimes make turtles run races. Turtles can run over smooth ground very nicely, but they can not jump fences very well. It is of no use to encourage turtles to run with a whip, for the moment you frighten a turtle he draws in his head, tail, and claws, shuts up his box, and locks it on the inside. Then he goes to sleep, and is often very much surprised when he wakes up and finds himself put away in a table-drawer or in some one else's box.

Turtles have for a long time been kept as pets by ladies in France. The turtle is a very inoffensive pet. He seldom keeps the neighbors awake by barking at night, or by singing on the back fence like ill-bred cats. He never tears the curtains, and never gets on the dining-room table, or steals milk and meat out of the kit en. All he requires in order to be comfortable is a few flies, and as there are a great many spare flies in all dwelling-houses, he catches as many as he cares to eat.

In this country the turtle has lately become quite a fashionable pet, and is often dressed in gay clothes and introduced into the very best society. Not long ago some young ladies in Boredom-town, New Jersey, who have pet turtles, got up a "turtle party." It was quite a brilliant affair. Considerable time and expense had been lavished upon the turtles to make them appear well and attractive for the occasion. One aristocratic Miss Turtle, called Venus, was not able to attend, although her party dress was made and in readiness for the occasion. Two of the turtles were dressed in the most elaborate style, one having on a magnificent white silk dress, with train profusely trimmed with gold embroidery. Another belle wore a dress of pink plush, trimmed with blue satin and lace. The train being looped with white daisies. Some of these turtles have "Jerseys," but none were worn on this occasion.

It is doubtful whether a turtle takes much pleasure in fine clothes and rich suppers. An animal that has been accustomed ever since he was born to wear nothing but a warm, durable, waterproof tobacco box, and has always seen the most eminent turtles of his acquaintance dressed in the same style, may very likely think that silk and satin clothes are inconvenient and ugly. The turtle probably thinks that it is all very well for men to wear clothes, since they are unfortunately born naked, and without serviceable coats of tortoise-shell; but he cannot see why he should trouble himself to wear clothes, even for dinners, every sensible turtle prefers plain flies, since the latter are cheap and wholesome, to any of the dishes which his human friends set before him.

Treated rationally, the turtle is a quiet and pleasant pet. He seldom shows any affection for his owner, but on the other hand he never bites like a vicious dog, or uses bad language like a depraved cat. Turtles live an immense length of time, and one turtle will last for a lifetime, although if the shell is polished occasionally, and he is not allowed to eat wasps under the impression that they are a new and delicious style of fly.—Harper's Young People.

The General Government and Education.

The most important donation of land ever granted by the general government to aid the schools and colleges of the various States was made in the year 1862. It was accomplished by an act "donating public lands to the several States and Territories which may provide colleges for the benefit of agricultural and mechanic arts." It authorized the granting to each State an quantity of land equal to 30,000 acres for each senator and representative in Congress. The income arising from the proceeds of the sales of these lands is to be devoted to the teaching of "such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts, in such manner as the Legislature of the States may respectively prescribe, in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions in life." Within five years of the passage of this act two-thirds of the States had established colleges of agriculture and the mechanic arts in accordance with its provisions; and in 1878 every State, excepting Colorado and Florida, had organized these colleges. Nine million six hundred thousand acres of land had been donated. New York received slightly more than one-fourth of this amount, which was employed in the endowment of Cornell University. Massachusetts divided its share between the agricultural college at Amherst and the Institute of Technology at Boston. Maine, and the large majority of the States, devoted their proportions to the support of colleges of agriculture.

The total amount, then, by which the general government has added the several States in education consists of the grant of 125,000 square miles of territory, or about one-thirtieth part of the entire national domain, and of the gift of nearly $80,000,000. The value realized by the sale of this large quantity of land it is almost impossible to estimate, but it must be very great, since so much of it yet remains unsold. In some States it was, upon its surrender by the general government, placed in the market, and its enhancement in price was absolutely small. In Iowa and Wisconsin the minimum price was $1.25 an acre. In these States it has been ascertained that a large fund has thence resulted for purposes of education. In Minnesota the average price, in the five years between 1862 and 1866, was $2.28 an acre, and by sales made in this period more than $1,200,000 were realized. Of the $60,000,000 which now constitute the permanent school fund of the different States, it is probable that more than one half was derived from the gifts of the general government. If the 70,000,000 acres granted by the United States for education were sold at the rate of $3 an acre—a low estimate—an amount of not less than $200,000,000 would thence accrue as a permanent fund for the support of the common schools, the colleges, and the universities.—Charles F. Thwing, in Harper's Magazine.

The Chinese God.

I presume that I shall not be regarded as inflicting an irreverence to the god as an inferior piece of art simply from an artistic and critical standpoint, if I express my opinion that the Chinaman should have given his bow-legged and ineffective god a more conventional appearance in any other national uniform.

I do not wish to be understood as interfering with any man's religious views; but when polygamy is a divine decree, or when a man is whittled out and painted up to and to worship, I do think that so-called religious decency and reverence for the Liberal in all religious matters, have noticed that one remarkable characteristic which should be in the ceremony of consecrating the church, and that is the presence of a clergyman. Again, how can the clergyman of the Celestial Joss be expected to preach a moral and temperate god, if he never could see the god? He is omniscience, and the disciple of the copious neck would not meet with the ideas of purity and sobriety.

It is, no doubt, wrong to make sacred matters for the purpose of ridicule; but I believe that when I assert that this China god is a failure, I am not going to far. We should not be afraid to tell the truth, but we may safely draw the line at the low-bred and sickening doses of leprosy.

If Confucius bowed the knee to this gaggle-eyed image, he grieved to know it. If such was the case, the friends of Confucius keep that matter from us. I believe that the great philosopher bowed in the dust at the feet of this idol-like caricature of a grinning dream.

I bought a Chinese god once myself. He was not successful in his profession. Whatever he may have been in his own country, he was not a very successful missionary to the Celestial Empire. I put him in the parlor, and the clock stopped. The servant girl sent in her resignation which he aimed to the floor. Whatever he may have been in his own country, he was not a very successful missionary to the Celestial Empire. I put him in the parlor, and the clock stopped. The servant girl sent in her resignation which she

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

The daily average circulation of the Detroit Evening News is getting larger.

The cold wave swept the whole country, and in some places was the severest of the winter.

The Cedar Springs Mail starts its second year with every appearance of being a financial success.

Dan Holcomb and Jud Crouch have been arrested for the murder of the Crouch family near Jackson.

Forty to fifty columns of choice reading matter for two cents is what you get in the Detroit Sunday Times.

Last Saturday's Detroit Free Press contained a four page review of Lansing, its business and institutions, with a cut of the state house.

It has been announced that A. P. Swineford, now of the Marquette Journal, will take editorial charge of the Cleveland Plaindealer, which is to be run in Henry B. Payne's interest.

"All the news for two cents," is the best recommend we can give the Detroit Times; its news department represents the whole world, and is condensed to meet the wants of the business man or mechanic who has but little time for reading.

Arrangements have been definitely concluded for the publication of the new temperance organ the Union Light. The paper will be printed from the office of the Adrian Weekly Press, and the first number is expected to issue Friday, March 7.

Armour, Kent & Beasley took out a permit for a 12 story office building, 174x172 feet, at the corner of Van Buren street and Pacific avenue, Chicago, to cost $1,000,000. The building will cost more for its construction than has any buildings of like character in the city, and will also be distinguished, when completed, as the highest building in Chicago, for its roof will also be 176 feet from the sidewalk.

A Washington dispatch credits Gen. Cutcheon with saying that he will have a hearing before the river and harbor committee in a few days, to talk on the subject of a harbor of refuge near Manistee. He says the cost of half the vessels wrecked on that coast in one season would more than pay for the expenses of the harbor. Gen. Wright, chief of engineers, was before the committee last Friday and gave his personal recommendation to the scheme.

The jury in the trial of Wilson for murdering policeman Ballaud, of Detroit, returned a verdict of murder in the second degree, with a recommendation for mercy. Judge Swift paid little attention to the recommendation for mercy, and when asked by defendant's counsel to postpone sentence, replied that the moral effect of the punishment would be lessened in a postponement, and he therefore proceeded to sentence Wilson to hard labor in the state prison for life. The Detroit Journal applauds this sentence and says: "When we have more such judges and more such sentences we shall have fewer murderers." The Journal might have added that to make such sentences effective the governor should be forever enjoined from exercising the pardoning power.

The Politics of the Detroit Times.

"The Detroit Times wants a fair open fight in congress on the tariff question. Which side would that sprightly journal champion?" Grand Journal. The side that supported the Morrison bill. If anybody could better that bill in any particular, in the way of lessening the trade restriction without disproportionately reducing the revenue to be derived from the importation of the articles in question, the Times would say amen to the amendment. But, inasmuch as prompt action is desirable, the Morrison bill as it stands is to be preferred to what it might be after the defenders of various interests had finished "trading." The Morrison bill is designed to reduce the revenue about $28,000,000, while it relieves the consumers of the country of the payment of six times that sum in the way of bounties to favored enterprises and general monopolies. That's why the Times is pretty well satisfied with the measure. Detroit Times.

Whatever may be the opinion of the Times as to the old issues, we are glad to see it on the side of economy and reduction, of taxes in whatever form.

Tariff Reform.

A private telegram received in this city yesterday from congressman Houseman continued positive assurance that the Michigan Democratic delegation in congress will act in harmony on the lumber question; are a unit in favor of the Morrison bill as it at present stands, and will support any amendments made to it by the ways and means committee.

Michigan democrats are perhaps no more interested in free lumber than they are in free iron ore, free copper ore, and free raw materials generally, and they demand that they all be put on the free list by this congress, as far as they can be without jeopardizing to an unwarrantable degree the immediate interests of any protectionist housed industry, and without of course curtailing the revenue to a figure below the necessary expenses of the government. Mr. Hewitt recently showed, through the months of protectionists, that such tariff enormities as the iron and copper ore duties ought to be slonghed off entirely. In the same way the land devastating and flood breeding lumber bounty ought to be removed. The position Mr. Houseman was reported to have taken is that placing lumber on the free list would destroy the interests of manufacturers and owners of lumber in Michigan. This is mere assumption. It is an error. There can be no mistake about this. The lumbermen of Michigan can compete with the lumbermen of Canada and make money. There are hundreds of men in this city who will remember a speech made by John C. Blanchard of Ionia in the campaign in which Mr. Houseman was elected, when Blanchard, discussing this question of duty on lumber, said, in substance, that he had made about $12,000 in manufacturing less than five millions of feet. He had a large quantity of pine lands, and was in favor of duty on lumber, because it put $2 per 1000 extra into his pocket. It was a mistake, he said, to suppose that any part of this went to the laborers. He employed his labor where he could get it the cheapest and pocketed the whole of the tariff swag. He would have manufactured, he said, the same amount of lumber had there been no tariff, and would have made money. "Bah," Mr. Blanchard said. "I think I can stand the tariff on lumber as long as the consumers can stand it." Were the duty removed it might slightly diminish the profits of manufacturers, but would still leave them a margin highly remunerative. An examination of the books of any lumber firm in this city will disclose the fact that the profits range from five dollars to nine dollars per thousand feet, according to the grade and location of the place. What justification is there, with these facts admitted by leading lumbermen, in continuing this tax? Mr. Houseman can be relied on, the Democrat believes, not to place himself in open antagonism to democratic principles and policy, and with direct interests of an overwhelming majority of the people who elected him, for the benefit of a few who fear, with much reason, that to put lumber on the free list would reduce their profits to a per cent that other businesses are glad to get on their investments. Grand Rapids Democrat.

Jersey Justice.

Speaking of "Jersey justice," a Rahway lawyer declares that New Jersey "leaves all her high prizes she gets for graft unwarning and merciless to lawbreakers. Criminals are in that State condemned and punished without difficulty or delay. This is all right, we complain, he thinks, when it is considered that at the ends of New Jersey lie the two largest cities of the new world New York and Philadelphia. However, it is to this very fact that Jersey justice owes its origin "for half a century," he explains, "Philadelphia and New York have sent murderers into New Jersey. Either as they were even-pointed, lazy tramps, or professional thieves, they come penal for murder. When caught they are almost always without money or friends to hinder punishment, the just severity of which there is nobody but themselves to dispute. These cases long ago hobbinated our courts to celerity, and that is what led to the establishment of the much-vaunted Jersey justice. I don't know that our officials are better men than the average in other States, but it is certain that they do better work from habit."—N. Y. Sun.

Eggs of choice breed fetch from $1,000 to $2,000 in Australia, while fresh mutton subs in Adelaide and Sidney for 37 cents the stone—fourteen pounds.

Hand-Sleigh for Sale.

Inquire of the Editor for Counting. Inquire at this office.

A. J. McLEOD

Keeps on hand at his

Meat Market

Everything usually kept in

A First-Class Establishment.

The highest market price in cash paid for

Hides, Pelts & Fat Stock.

GEO. W. MILLER,

dealer in

CLOTHING,

GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS,

ETC.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH

NEW GOODS.

I am pleased to say that my

Spring Stock

is ready for inspection. Come and see them, and when you want a suit of clothes you are JUST IN STYLE, you will know where to find them. My stock is all of the

LATE STYLES,

AND

Price to Correspond With the Times.

GEO. W. MILLER.

JOSEPH HYLAND,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS,

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery.

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's new

Opera Block

EVERYTHING

IN THE LINE OF

Furniture and Undertakers' Goods

CAN BE FOUND AT THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE OF

HENRY C. COOPER, CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

CHEAP FOR CASH.

Come and See Me Before Buying.

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.

ADVANCE, MICH.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware,

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoe

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY.

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. House

CHARLEVOIX.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.; HARBOR AND SUMMER RESORTS.

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL

A Progressive Local and Family Newspaper.

Published Every Thursday, at $1.50 a Ye

G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish,

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix

New Goods

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Da

MISS L. SPAULDING

Ladies' Furnishing Goods

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 6, 1884.

Business Announcements.

A genuine article in Butter at B. Eppler's.

New Cottons and Prints this week. Are buying old and shelf worn goods, give us a call. Wright Emery & Co.

Any amount of Sap Buckets at bottom prices, at L. L. Bartholomew's.

We have just opened up a choice assortment of every description, which we are selling rapidly at 25 and 30 cents per pound, at Wright Emery & Co.'s.

It is not wind pudding, but a genuine fact, that we sell the best cookers for 25 cents per ran ever offered in Charlevoix. Wright Emery & Co.

Wood, Wood, Wood.

200 cords of good dry birch and hard maple wood for sale. Good measure guaranteed. Call at the office of

J. MILO EATON.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m. each day, for the week ending yesterday, above zero in all cases unless marked with a minus (-).

	7AM	2PM
Thursday	23	24
Friday	12	4
Saturday	10	0
Sunday	17	12
Monday	4	10
Tuesday	16	19
Wednesday	2	14

Provision Market.

Retail prices to consumers, as corrected every Wednesday evening by WRIGHT, EMERY & Co., general dealers.

PORK, per bbl, $6.00, $7.00, and $8.00
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $1.50
CORN MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.00, unbolted, $1.90
MEAL, per 100, $0.90.
OATS per bu, 35c.
SECOND FEED, per cwt, $1.05
APPLES, per bu, $1.50.
POTATOES, per bu, 30c
ONIONS, per bu, $1.00
BUTTER, per lb, 28@30c.
EGGS, per doz 26@28c.
LARD per lb 10@12c
HAMS, per, Shoulders, 12½c.
SALT PORK, per, Beef, 8c.
CHEESE, 20c.
WATER WHITE OIL, 25c.
FARMERS' PRODUCE in good demand

Fresh Meats from the Market

BEAT beef steak, 20@12½c; pork steak, 9½ per, mutton, 8@12½c; sausage, 15c; hams, 12½c; shoulders, 12½c.
TALLOW, 4@5c

Local News Brevities.

St. Cæch almanacs at Wood's

S. G. Isaman, of South Arm, recently sold a stall fed steer that dressed 915 pounds.

Seven and one-half columns of statistics in the last issue of the Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Stoepel & Co., of East Jordan, have a hand five million feet of lumber to saw spring business.

H. B. Chapman and wife of Bay Springs favored the JOURNAL with a social call on Monday.

L. D. Bartholomew writes from Tarpon, Fla., that he may be home about the first of April.

A company of amateurs is to play the "Octoroon" in East Jordan Saturday evening, March 8th.

Summer boarders are already calling for rooms for next summer, and a large business is predicted.

Neighboring papers predict a great immigration to this northern country during the coming summer.

Rev. B. F. Van Auken had a very interesting and successful series of meetings at Northport last week.

Capt. A. H. Bennett will command the Clara Belle next season, and will run from East Jordan to Petoskey.

W. F. Orrell has gone to Chicago to work until business opens here. He expects to engage in paper hanging.

H. Mitchell, of East Jordan, has built a 10 horse power engine, the first ever built in Charlevoix county.

A portion of Geo. Miller's new spring goods have arrived, and he is now putting them on the shelves this week.

Chas. Ely was remembered a few days since by some Ypsilanti friends who sent him a very fine gold watch as a present.

Has anyone anything to offer on the important question of getting another railroad here? We must shoo that Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad over into this clearing if there is any good there. Kalkaska Leader.

The wife of John McCabe went to Petoskey for medical treatment recently, and reports received yesterday indicate that she is gradually failing.

Messrs. Jas. Hemmings and Chas. Swallow, painters, have gone to Chicago for the balance of the winter. They will return in time for business in the spring.

The W. C. T. U. will hold a special meeting at the home of Mrs. L. E. Allen on Friday at 3 o'clock. It is desired that every member of the union be present.

We had a story written telling how cold it was last Sunday morning, but on reading the Statesman determined not to print it. We were not cold enough to compete with him.

Last Friday morning fire destroyed the building in Traverse City occupied by Haskell's book store, the U. S. express office, and the Western Union telegraph office. Loss $10,000, partially insured.

J. Milo Eaton, has copies of the carnival edition of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, one side of each sheet being filled with colored illustrations representing features of the carnival in that city.

Contracts are being let for getting out the ties for the railroad between Alma and Mt. Pleasant, which will be a part of of the proposed Lansing, St. Johns and Mt. Pleasant railroad. Lansing Republican.

March is ushered in in no very lamb like manner, if cold weather be a consideration. The mercury has been playing around zero for a week past, and on Sunday morning reached 17° below. Fortunately, however, there was no wind with this extreme cold.

The party at the residence of Mr. Bondish, last Friday evening, was a very enjoyable affair. About twenty couples were in attendance. Dancing was the chief amusement, which was kept up until 12 o'clock, when a bountiful supper was served to which they seemed to do ample justice.

The Methodist Episcopal pulpit has been occupied, for the past two weeks, by Rev. G. W. Howe. Next Sabbath the pastor will preach morning and evening. The revival work is still progressing, and promises to extend especially through several weeks and generally through the conference year. The church is in earnest expectation All are invited."

Messrs. H. O. Rose, M. F. Quaintance, and F. J. Smith, of Boyne City, and S. E. Watson, supt. of the Bell Telephone Construction Co., in Michigan, visited Charlevoix on Monday to work up the necessary pledges of business for a line connecting Petoskey, Charlevoix, and Traverse City. One thousand dollars was asked for, and about $800 was pledged, but it is thought the whole amount can be secured.

Glenn & Porter's saw mill at East Jordan has been running about a month, and has averaged 17,500 feet per day of frozen timber. The head sawyer informs the Enterprise that the saws cut as clean lumber from frozen timber as they do from timber not frozen, and expressed the belief that saws rightly fitted would do as good work in the winter as in the summer. If this be proven it will make business dyeing in this region during the winter season, especially after we get a railroad.

Every dollar that our citizens spend in other cities takes just that amount from the business and the capital of our own town. In these matters there should be a spirit of reciprocity shown. There is a mutual dependance in a community like this which calls for mutual aid in all business relations. A lawyer has his clients among old residents, makes his money through their patronage and upon what principle is he justified in receiving such a favor and in return spending the money thus earned with the residents of some other city? A physician has his patients from our business men, why should he be justified in purchasing his clothes, his household furniture, his carriages or his provisions some place else? Builders, contractors, working men and all employes owe their living to the business men of the city who hire them, and their duty in return is to patronize those by whom they are thus favored. The dry goods men who sell to our hardware merchants should reciprocate, and so through all branches of trade. So long as these mutual obligations exist they should be observed, and the citizen who fails in his part need not be surprised to find that he is left in the cold by those who would otherwise be his patrons and business friends. Patronize our own institutions and as an inevitable result you are promoting the welfare of the city and all its interests.

The meeting called at the old town hall last Saturday evening for considering the question of nominating a prohibition ticket in the village this spring, brought out considerable discussion, and developed a determination to make this one of the chief issues in local politics. A few favored postponing the caucus until other tickets are nominated and see if a third ticket be necessary, while others favored an aggressive movement regardless of other parties. The meeting adjourned to meet Wednesday evening, at the same place, when it is expected a full ticket will be nominated.

J. S. Hyland received a dispatch on Saturday from the Elk Rapids Iron Co., to come at once to do some repairing. He went on Tuesday with help and tools. Mr. Hyland's reputation as a workman brings him numerous good jobs. No least among his work lais winner has been the overhauling and rebuilding of the boilers for the tugs Bob Stephenson and L. S. Payne, the former owned by the Pine Lake Iron Co., of Ironton, and the latter by Elk Rapids, of Charlevoix. Mr. Hyland's institution will save many dollars to the county that would otherwise go out, and, as in the job this week, may bring many dollars into the county. He should receive the entire business of this community.

A private letter received by one of our citizens mentions the possibility of Charlevoix getting the Lansing, Alma, Mt. Pleasant and Northern Railroad, recently organized. It would be an almost straight line to Lansing, and would pass through some of the richest agricultural and timber land in Northern Michigan, that is not reached by any other road. The letter mentioned predicts that the cars will be running on a portion of the road within a year. Work has already been commenced, as will be seen by the following dispatch from Alma to a Detroit paper: "The contract for grading the miles on which to build the bridge of the Lansing, Alma, Mount Pleasant & Northern railroad has been let to G. D. Barton of this place, and work began yesterday morning. It will be pushed rapidly to completion."

The County Jail.

In our court proceedings it will be noticed that the judge designated the jail at Traverse City as the county jail for this county. This is a reflection on the public spirit and progress of the citizens of this county. Will they permit their law breakers to be taken to another county for safe keeping. The expense of transportation will go far toward renting or building suitable quarters at some point in the county.

As the village and surrounding country increases in population, we shall need a village lock-up among other things, and why would it not be a good investment to build a town hall, council room, lock up, engine house, etc., large enough to accommodate the board of supervisors, circuit court, and county criminals, and then by renting to the county, manage to keep our funds at home as much as possible.

The village needs such a building, and if the county does not want to build, they would certainly be willing to rent of the village, and thus economize in their own expenses, as well keep the cash at home.

Historical Society.

Fifty five persons assembled at the parlors of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Green on Tuesday evening, to enjoy the exercises of the historical society. Ed. Parmelee read the historical paper, upon the character of Benjamin Franklin, and his influence during the revolution. R. W. Kane read a sketch from De Quincy. Miss Severance read "Paul Revere's Ride." The music of the evening was by Mrs. O. D. Wood, Miss Ainslie, Mrs. Mayne, Maggie Green, and Edith Hawkins. The company spent a portion of the evening examining the new books, 27 volumes having been added to the society's library. The next meeting will be held at A. R. Upright's Tuesday evening.

Circuit Court Proceedings.

The following cases were disposed of after making our report last week:

Robert Bowles was sentenced to the reformatory at Ionia for two years.

Bennett v. Gemett. Judgment for defendant, $12.50 and costs.

Gayles & Nesly v. Gemett. Replevin. Judgment for defendant, $37.50 and costs including attorney fee.

Catherine Their v. Addis. Judgment for plaintiff, $120.36 and costs.

Thuner v. Meloch. Assumpsit. Continued.

Wood v. Township of Norwood. Continued.

Clark v. Coleman. Judgment for plaintiff $25.72 and costs.

Hahn et al v. Lavanway. Assumpsit. Judgment for plaintiff $288.36 and costs.

Brown v. Sweet. Assumpsit. Judgment for plaintiff $20.68 and costs including attorney fee.

Bash v. Macy. Replication to be filed within ten days or bill dismissed.

Chapman v. Morgan. Bill dismissed.

Fuller et al. v. Strong. Judgment for plaintiff $214.00 and costs.

Willis v. Dyer and wife. Foreclosure. Decree confirmed.

An order was entered designating the jail at Traverse City as the county jail for Charlevoix county, on account of the unsafe condition of the jail here.

Ironton School.

The following is a report of senior department of Ironton school, for month ending February 26.

NAMES.	GEOGRAPHY	ARITHMETIC	READING	ORTHOGRAPHY	WRITING	GENERAL AVE.
FIRST GRADE.
Celesta Rex	100	98	98	98	98	98
Nellie Nevers	100	98	98	98	98	98
Katie Smith	100	98	98	98	98	98
Anna Moorhouse	100	98	98	98	98	98
Owen Hammond	100	98	98	98	98	98
Frank Hammond	100	98	98	98	98	98
Frank Massey	100	98	98	98	98	98
SECOND GRADE.
Lizzie Wessler	98	96	96	96	96	96
Nellie King	98	96	96	96	96	96
Eddie Jackson	98	96	96	96	96	96
Freddie Hammond	98	96	96	96	96	96
Phebe Holland	98	96	96	96	96	96
Lucy McIntyre	98	96	96	96	96	96
Dewitt Hammond	98	96	96	96	96	96
Cecile Rex	98	96	96	96	96	96
George Smith	98	96	96	96	96	96
Birdy Wessler	98	96	96	96	96	96
Ella Stone	98	96	96	96	96	96
Elton Brink	98	96	96	96	96	96
THIRD GRADE.
Warren Webster	95	92	92	92	92	92
Lizzie Caldwell	95	92	92	92	92	92
Katie Bogert	95	92	92	92	92	92
Katie Massey	95	92	92	92	92	92
Frank Wilkins	95	92	92	92	92	92
FOURTH GRADE.
Walter Bogert	90	88	88	88	88	88
Jennie Bogert	90	88	88	88	88	88
Nellie Hammond	90	88	88	88	88	88
Nellie Wilkins	90	88	88	88	88	88
Caroline Nelson	94	100	94	94	94	94
Hannah Watson	92	94	94	94	94	94
Mary Scudder	92	94	94	94	94	94

J. M. HARRIS, Teacher.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Chicago Business Agency, real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, March 4, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Harriet L. Clifford to George W. Cranter, lot No. 9 of Clifford's addition to Charlevoix, $175.

George W. Cranter and wife to Lake Hallett, lot No. 9 of Clifford's addition to Charlevoix, $175.

O. S. Washburn and wife to Edwin M. Clark, part of sec. 26-34 8, $714.20.

Jason Maddock to William H. How and, s e ¼, 30-32 6, $200.

How it Takes.

The following extracts from letters accompanying of the revised view of Charlevoix explain themselves:

Reading, Mich., March 3.

We thank you for revised birds eye view of Charlevoix, received this afternoon. It shows Breezy Point cottage finely. * * *

H. P. PARMELEE.

Middleville, Mich., March 4.

The cut you enclose is a fine one. I will have it photographed on glass, and present it to the public through my stereoscopic instruments.

M. WRIGHT.

G. A. R. at Eastport.

Maj. E. H. Green, assisted by Adjt. Frank Shanbut, and comrades H. Berdan, Wm. Kanagy, D. Flannigan, A. W. Hartwell, and H. R. Sweet, of Baxter Post, No. 119, of Charlevoix, went to Eastport last Saturday, and there organized Geo. Martin Post, No. 227, with 21 members and the following officers:

P. Com.—D. W. Sigsbe.
S. V. Com.—W. H. Barnes.
J. V. Com.—A. J. Drake.
O. D.—D. Blakely.
O. M.—S. B. Anway.
Adjt.—H. Blakely.
Chap.—J. R. Childs.
O. G.—L. Kinyon.
Sergt. Major.—Wm. Cook.
O. M. Sergt.—L. R. Rogers.
Sentry.—Jno. McPherson.

After the business of organization was completed, the "boys" gathered around a fire and enjoyed themselves with cigars and reminiscence until long after midnight. The occasion was one to be remembered by all the participants.

Ironton.

Mr. Bee's saw mill is running again.

The brewery is moving upward slowly.

Mr. John Otis, of Macedonia, is in town.

The family of Mr. James Freel is expected every day.

Town meeting is close at hand, and the question is, Who shall be supervisor?

The furnace made 320 tons of iron last week, the largest run it has ever made.

Mr. Robinson is looking over the prospects here with a view of starting another grocery.

Richard Lake registered at the Pioneer house on Saturday. He is still looking after taxes.

Rev. Mr. Blake preached at the school house last Sunday morning. A revival service might be of some benefit here.

Mrs. Thomas, a widow with three small children, slipped and fell last Saturday night, breaking one of her legs, just above the ankle.

Mr. James Otis is mending slowly. He says he will be out in two weeks, but his physician thinks that if he gets up in six weeks he will be doing well.

Burgess.

School closed last Friday.

Will Burgess build a church?

Cold weather interferes with business at Whitford's mill.

There was a pleasant surprise party at J. A. Bacot's on the 22d.

Moses Cooper is pushing the post and tie business this winter.

Albert Norman's mother, who has been quite sick, is recovering under the treatment of Dr. Lewis.

It is safe to say that some people's cattle are more trouble to the neighbors than they are to the owners.

The revival at Fair Grove had a tendency to quiet matters at the "corners," and, as the boys say, everything is lively.

Last Friday afternoon the inhabitants of Hayes were made glad by the whistle of the Charlevoix Mfg. Co., although many did not know what it was.

The spelling school at Lakeview school house on Friday evening was well attended, considering the cold weather. Miss Mary Bennett is the champion speller.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, } ss.
County of Charlevoix, }

In the matter of the estate of

FRANK CHALOUPKA, Minor

Notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, guardian of the estate of said Frank Chaloupka, by the Hon. Judge of Probate, for the county of Charlevoix, on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1884, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the front door of Lewis's hall, in the county of Charlevoix, in said state, on Saturday, the 19th day of April, A. D. 1884, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, subject to all encumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of sale, the following described real estate, to-wit: The north east quarter of the north west quarter of section twenty four (24) in township thirty four (34) north of range eight (8) west, containing forty (40) acres more or less.

CHARLES CHALOUPKA,
Guardian.

JOHN NICHOLLS,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Car Blades,

WAGON TONGUES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

HASTE NOT—REST NOT.

BY GOETHE.

Without haste! without rest!
Bind the sheaf to thy breast!
Bear it with thee as a spell!
Soon or sunning, guard it well!
Heed not flowers that round thee bloom,
Bear it onward to the tomb!

Haste not—let no thoughtless deed
Mark it—let no look unkind!
Reach with zeal the distant goal!
Faster still and still and still!
Thus, through life, with unclasped hand,
Bear it onward to the land!

Haste not—let no wandering thought
Dull the power of high intent!
Let no strife unholy and sublime
Leave behind the onward line:
Give no toil to live for aye—
Win those home hours that cloud away!

Haste not! rest not! calmly wait,
Meekly bear the storm or heat;
Duty be thy polar guide—
Do the right, whate'er betide!
Haste not—rest not—conflict—toil—
God shall crown thy work at last!

"KEPT TILL CALLED FOR."

BY MRS. W. J. HAYS.

"It's all well enough for your highly-tighty rich folk to keep Christmas. Where's the use in our schoin it? I 'aint had a square meal in a month, an' I'd rather have baked beans than plum puddin' any day. Shake the ashes out o' that old rusty pot, Doll, an' pick out what ye can find for the fire. Law! how the wind howls, an' the old pool creaks. Listen! what's that noise?"

Was it the surf beating on the rocks, or a hungry demon howling through the storm?

"I don't hear nuthin', Pop."

"But I do. Hark! there it is again."

The boy flung a handful of half-burned coals on the fire, and then fastened his nose on the window-pane in the effort to hear what his father's keener ear had caught.

"Taint no use, Doll; these here coals ain't no good. I'll go out an' git some drift-wood."

"It's all wet and won't burn." Doll had lugged the coals all the way from the village ash heap on account of the storm, and in hopes of having a little cheerful warmth.

"So you won't keep Christmas, Pop?" he asked, again returning to the subject they had been discussing.

"Keep it—no. There's that noise again. I'm goin' out. Jest you stay here, an' hold on to things, or mebbe we'll be drowned out afore mornin'."

Doll held the door as his father plunged into the darkness, or the wind would have prevented its being shut again.

Wrapping himself in an old pea-jacket much too big for him, Doll sat down to await his father's return. It was after this fashion that his thoughts ran:

Me an' father's lived all alone here as long as I can remember. We ain't had much to eat an' drink an' wear, an' I ain't had no schoolin'. Claus is about all we've got, an' if it wasn't for claus we might as well be drowned d, an' done with it."

Then he drew from his pocket a crumpled half-sheet of an illustrated paper, and gazed longingly at the picture of a Christmas dinner party on it. Around a beautiful table were the chubby faces of well-fed children, looking, with delight at an immense plum pudding. Sprigs of holly and wreaths of evergreen, with the usual branch of mistletoe, decked the page. Besides the three was the old boy in the corner—the three Wise Men on their camels in the desert, the bright star above resting there, the old inn of Bethlehem, Penniwer, and the Blessed Babe.

What did it all mean? In vain he spelled out a word or two. He could not understand it.

Meantime the wind rattled at the door, shook the old frame of the house, and shrieked through every loophole. Doll was getting sleepy, and the fire was almost out. Why didn't Pop come back? Should he go to bed, or would he wait? Fatigue soon settled the question, for he fell asleep in the rocking-chair.

Waking late in the night, he found that the wind had died down, and the storm was over.

Where was Pop? He must find out, for he and Pop were all in all to each other. Opening the door, he crept out.

He had not gone far when he saw something queer. Under a jutting rock, a big bundle seemed to be lying, and twisted up with ropes and coarse wool and such trifles.

Doll looked and looked; then he went nearer, then a little nearer still, and at last he touched the bundle cautiously. As he did so, something cried. What was it? and who was it that hugged to something so tight? Surely not—yes, it was Pop!

II.

Doll's curiosity and fears were about equal. He knelt down and put his hand on Pop's cold face; he tried to get at his heart, but as he did so there was the cry again, and he grasped back in a heed.

Boy, glad he was! to see a little flaxen-haired baby, and a tiny little hand pulling at the ropes. Pop's service-able pilot-coat was around it, and its soft waist-coat was a great help.

"Pop! Pop!" cried Doll, bursting into tears, "please wake up, please do."

And then Pop really did try to speak, but his voice was very low and faint.

"Take this home first, Doll," he said, and he put the strange object he was hugging into Doll's arms. "Take it home and put it in your bed; be very careful; and then come back and help me."

Doll did as he was bidden. The queer little thing struggled, and struck him with its tiny fist, and kicked against his breast with all its small strength, but he did not let go; and, after putting it on his bed, and tucking it up carefully, he hastened back to his father. Pop was badly hurt, but with Doll's help crawled home and got to bed, meanwhile giving the boy directions what to do.

Doll must go over to Granny Crane's and get the cent's worth of milk which she always let them have when they could afford the luxury, and he was to warm a few spoonfuls and feed the baby. And he wasn't to say a word about it. It was a rule among the rude people of the shore to say little about the wrecks in their vicinity; there was no life-saving station there, and they wanted none—for reasons of their own.

So Doll got the milk, and after he had made the fire burn took the little creature on his lap and tried to feed it. He wished it had been a baby, for then it could have fed itself, but it winked its great blue eyes at him, and spluttered and choked until he was scared out of his wits. It wakened his father, who was now groaning with pain, and to quiet it Doll thought of a way of feeding entirely original with himself—he put the end of a towel in the milk, and the child sucked it.

It was slow work, but it succeeded, and Doll had the happiness of seeing the hungry little creature satisfied. Then he fondled and caressed it, just as he would have done a kitten, and its warm breath was sweet as it snuggled against his rosy cheeks. All day long this was repeated, and at night he built a big fire, and sitting with his bundle it, keeping the child still in his arms.

The next day he warmed water and tried to bathe it; but, between the soapsuds and the kicking and screaming, he was glad to wrap it up again in one of his own coarse but clean garments, and quiet its cries.

Still Doll was supremely happy in his new possession. He had often wished for brothers and sisters, but this was much better; it was all his own, and he took the tiny fist in his grasp with fatherly fondness, only one thing marring his joy, and that was Pop.

Poor Pop was very ill; all day long he moaned and moaned, and refused food; nothing but a little clam juice passed his lips; and Doll began to think something must be done. What the something should be he did not know, but he would try just as he had done for the baby.

When he went over to Granny Crane's for his next pennyworth of milk he asked for some lessons about it, and gave him a big bunch of the herb. This he stooped in hot water, and gave to Pop to drink. Then he generally did get better after he had swallowed a big pitcherful; but there seemed to be something the matter with his legs, and Doll did not dare to touch them; so there was nothing to do but travel off his nice warm couch, and let Pop have it to come over.

It would have been too great a trial for Doll to leave the baby, so he didn't do it; he just bundled it up in an old quilt of Pop's, and started on his journey. Fortunately he did not have to go the whole way, for he met Granny Crane on the road.

The gig was going slowly, and when Doll stopped it it stopped, for the Doctor's horse knew when to do this quite as well as his master.

"So something's the matter with Pop, eh?" said the Doctor. "Well, I'll come down that way before I go home. What have you got there—clams?"

"Ain't."

"Well, I was in hope you had some—they're wanting them at home."

"I'll bring you some, Doctor—soon as you take a look at Pop," answered Doll, in a great hurry to get off, and sending the gig away as fast as his leg could carry him.

"That was an odd sort of a bundle he carried," thought the Doctor, as he tickled his horse with his whip.

Doll thought it odd when he was getting only half family handling Pop's poor bruised body, finding one leg broken, and the other one almost as badly hurt.

Doll was crouching over his bundle in the most remote corner of the room, and the Doctor watched what he was watching him. He thought the Doctor wouldn't find out what it was, but his sharp eyes soon discovery, and he could not prevent its erying.

"Bobby, Doll; that's a queer kind of a kitten," said the Doctor.

"Ain't no cat," said Doll, indignantly.

"What under the sun is it, then?"

"Where's no use in trying to conceal it any longer.

"It's a baby, that's what it is, an' it's mine; ain't it, Pop?" said Doll, holding his treasure closely, but still proud to show the little fair head, and fists like crumpled rose leaves.

"Eh? what? what's that?" Where did you get that, Doll?"

"I didn't find it!" Pop did; but I'm going to keep it till it's called for."

"It 'll be a long while 'fore that's done," said Pop, feebly. "It was the only one I could save—all the rest went down. There were three men an' women, an' I might have saved her but for the baby. She couldn't hold on long enough, though, an' the wind was awful."

"Ah! I heard there was a schooner ashore the other night."

"That was it."

"I must make inquiries. And this child—poor little thing! 'twill have to go to the county house."

"No, it shan't," sobbed Doll. "Pop says I may keep it. It's his find, an nobody wants it. I say, Doc, I'll bring you clams every day if you'll let it alone with me."

"Nonsense, child! How can you bring up a baby?"

"I must and I will," said Doll, proud and defiant.

The Doctor laughed, and turned toward his patient, who, having had a hand on his arm, said softly, "Let him be, Doc; it's Christmas, ye know, an' I ain't got nuthin' else ter give him."

III.

Years passed, and it was Christmas Eve again and there was a storm beating on the coast, and rearing its angry waves high upon the shore; again the old rafters shook, and the timbers rattled, and the door seemed about to burst open; but it did not, for in place of the rude people of the shore to say little about the wrecks in their vicinity; there was no life-saving station there, and they wanted none—for reasons of their own.

So Doll got the milk, and after he had made the fire burn took the little creature on his lap and tried to feed it. He wished it had been a baby, for then it could have fed itself, but it winked its great blue eyes at him, and spluttered and choked until he was scared out of his wits. It wakened his father, who was now groaning with pain, and to quiet it Doll thought of a way of feeding entirely original with himself—he put the end of a towel in the milk, and the child sucked it.

It was slow work, but it succeeded, and Doll had the happiness of seeing the hungry little creature satisfied. Then he fondled and caressed it, just as he would have done a kitten, and its warm breath was sweet as it snuggled against his rosy cheeks. All day long this was repeated, and at night he built a big fire, and sitting with his bundle it, keeping the child still in his arms.

The next day he warmed water and tried to bathe it; but, between the soapsuds and the kicking and screaming, he was glad to wrap it up again in one of his own coarse but clean garments, and quiet its cries.

Still Doll was supremely happy in his new possession. He had often wished for brothers and sisters, but this was much better; it was all his own, and he took the tiny fist in his grasp with fatherly fondness, only one thing marring his joy, and that was Pop.

Poor Pop was very ill; all day long he moaned and moaned, and refused food; nothing but a little clam juice passed his lips; and Doll began to think something must be done. What the something should be he did not know, but he would try just as he had done for the baby. So

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 6, 1884.

ORIGIN OF THE GRAND TRAVERSE LEGION.

BY HON. J. G. RAMSDELL

In the Grand Traverse region, one bright autumn day,
I sat on a hillside, o'er looking the bay
As it spread out below, to the landscape's far ell
Like a lunar pearl classed in a setting of gold.
And, wondering, gazed on the beautiful scene,
All dappled with carmine and russet and green;
And dyed in its grandeur of autumnal hues,
For the cause of this beauty I questioned the Muse.

"You ask," said the goddess of verse and of song,
"Why all this array in the region belongs?
Why its waters so pure, its breezes so bland,
Its soil so fruitful, its sky dome so grand,
Its climate so healthful, its sunrises so mild,
And why fickle fortune on this land has smiled,
And all nature is quiet and Peace seems to reign?
Then listen, my friend, and I will explain.

"The wall was created, the continent made,
The mountains uplifted, the foundations laid
For oceans and rivers, for rivers and seas,
When the gods June assembled, and thus his decrees
To the mightiest assemblage in lumber proof, lined:

"'I will,' said the architect of heaven 'a high bird,
That a land be created, whatever the cost,
Fit abode for the gods—whereall races of men
Can flourish in peace.' My will must be done.'

"Apollo uprose, and the deep silence broke
With his silver-toned voice, and the monarch bespoke—
'Great dome of potent ruler of heaven and earth!
My duty has call'd me since creation's birth
To drive the orbit sun through its trial space,
And guide heaven's courses as onward they pace.
To clear all the evil ties spread out on the face
Of the broad rolling world, and illumate their place.

"'There's the Orient milky, my the great ocean bind;
And Egypt most fruitful, from waste desert saved
By the dark flowing Nile,—and Attica's high land,—
Bright Italy's plains,—and Erin's green island,—
And there's sweet sunny France, and still sunnier spain—
Fit abodes for the gods,—an elysium for man.'

"'The Lords Pluribus unutions,' the monarch replied,
'Though favored by nature, yet Fate has decreed
Shall be of money grands,—be wasted by war;
A prey to each vicissitude. Better by far
Be the land I obtain.

"'Who, with footed Heroes, with oil most deadly,
And simmon on the Titans, and fell them away
To that country vast, to the Occidents lake-ocean,
That lies in the West near the lakes rising sun;
To create there a country as fertile and famed,
And the peer of all those which Apollo has named
In every virtue, without the dire fate
Which betime destroys each Old World state.

"'Bid Zephyr, and Aster, and Boreas come forth,
The West and the South must unite with the North
To temper the climate of that favored land,
And make it commercial, salubrious and bland.'

"On Mercury's pleasure the message was sped;
The Titans were summoned, the Titans obeyed;
And over the broad ocean with Neptune they roam
To the land prescribed to be Liberty's home.
In the heart of the continent, far from the sea,
Tory selected a place. Pluvious Jupiter threw
With his broad burnished shield, and it hung in the vair
To build up a country on dollar's plan

"They delved down in the mountains, and rolled up the hills,
And opened the fountains, and traced out the rills;
Pushing east moving glaciers across the broad ways
Of the high polar region, they sweep from the bays
And plains of the highlands, and dimpled the face
Of the country with baskets; and in every place
Poured the transparent flood, until each one was filled
With nature's purest cleverest rain-drop distilled.

"Then mount in the glaciers, they filled with the lakes
And turned on the sunbeams and hastened away;
Each settling vessels as homeward they stray,
Which grew up the forests you see here today.

"'Great dome my I looked down, from his throne in the skies,
On the newly made country. With mid-land surprise,
He swore by Jupiter's Thy dome, it's well done!
'Tis the loveliest country that lies 'neath the sun!

"Then turning to Boreas, who came to consult
That his realm was invaded, his rightful domain
Usurped by his brother, the monarch replies,
'Your realm is invaded, but warm summer skies
Hold sway in a landscape and Zephyr's mild breeze
Must waive its great woodlands and fan its broad seas.

But still, be assured, you, my blustering child,
You may reign half the year, but you must govern mind.'"

The Discovery of Tin in North Carolina.

We notice that some of our esteemed contemporaries are congratulating the American people on the opening of some valuable tin mines in North Carolina. Until this deposit of tin ore was discovered it was thought that there were no appreciable quantities of that metal in this country. We have in the past depended upon the English mines for our supply of tin.

While naturally it should be a matter for rejoicing that America numbers thus new form of mineral wealth among its almost boundless natural resources, yet we are not disposed to look upon the opening of the North Carolina mines with the same degree of enthusiasm that some of our esteemed contemporaries regard it. We have serious misgivings about the people ever receiving any substantial benefit from these mines. They may thank their stars if they do not actually suffer a severe pecuniary loss on account of these North Carolina tin deposits.

There are very good reasons for believing that as soon as they get fairly to working their mines the owners will appreciate the importance of having a monopoly of the American market and will go up to Washington and petition congress in the most plaintive terms to place a high duty on tin and thereby shut out the product of the "pauper labor" of Europe. Just watch these tin men and see if this isn't their game. It has been successfully played by the copper, the iron, the steel and the brass men, and the latter have become rich "beyond the wildest dreams of avarice." The tin men will naturally try to profit by the same game.

If they should obtain favorable tariff legislation, what will be the result? The whole country will be compelled to pay tribute to the half-dozen favored individuals who own the mines. The unprotected millions of toilers will be taxed to swell the coffers of another set of "protected" monopolists. This is what the tariff on tin will do. Is this a pleasing prospect for the American consumer to contemplate? Does this scheme come up to his idea of "dignifying American labor?" — Lansing Journal.

Free Iron Ore.

It is well known that the iron and steel trades me the keystone of the system of public plunder known as "protection," and Mr. Hewitt, as member of the house ways and means committee, being himself an iron miner and manufacturer, is letting a good deal of useful light on the necessity of nursing the iron infant. The iron lords appeared before the committee in full force on Saturday and were treated to a series of questions which it puzzled them to answer without practically conceding that their iron interests demanded the very changes in the tariff which they have been fighting against. Joseph Wharton of the Bessemer steel association conceded that free iron ore would make cheaper steel and give the steel workers more money to pay for labor. He also conceded that the substitution of foreign ores increases the consumption of domestic ores, as the foreign ores mixed more advantageously with much domestic ore and made them really more valuable. This brought the Lake Superior iron people to the front in a hurry. Mr. G. H. Ely, of Cleveland, president of the Lake Superior companies, was next heard, but before he had been on the stand ten minutes he had admitted that the greatest development and prosperity of the Lake Superior mines occurred under a low duty on iron ore, and was concurrent with and dependent on the introduction of foreign ores. He also admitted that there had been no increase of wages since the duty on iron ores had been doubled, and that under the higher duty there had been greater depression in the trade than ever before. Mr. Van Dyke of the Menominee mining company opposed free iron ore, but on cross examination said that he believed the price of domestic ores would go up if the duty on foreign ores was removed. When again asked why, then, he opposed free ores he did not answer. The reason, however, was apparent enough. The strength of the protection robber lies in united action, and protectionists dare not let a single stone in the protection arch be disturbed, lest the whole structure fall. — Grand Rapids Democrat.

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY
has purchased the
Ladies' and Children's Furnishing Goods
Lately owned by Fisher & Inwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and gain as many more as possible. Call and see my stock

Sewing Machines CHEAP.
A few fine sewing machines for sale at reduced rates cash. Call soon and have your pick.
EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED
D. S. WAY.

WOOD WANTED.
Fifty Cords good 18 inch beech wood wanted on subscription, at the HOUSEHOLD office. Bring it while the roads are good.

PIMPLES.
I will mail, Free the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and blotches, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing a 3c. stamp, H. S. VANDER & Co., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.
A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from nervous debility, premature decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

FARM FOR SALE.
Consisting of 111 acres, 75 in the town of Antwerp, on main road. Soil, clay loam. A good frame house, and good frame bank barn. About 50 acres cleared, balance good hardwood timber. About 20 acres stumpage to be cut. Also one-half mile from second road saw mill. Price, one thousand seven hundred dollars; will rent less than two thousand dollars; balance to suit purchaser. For further particulars inquire of DAVID H. FRANCIS, Antwerp, Mich.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.
The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means used. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure CURE for CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c. Parties wishing the prescription will please address, REV. EDWARD A. WILSON, 194 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

FOR SALE.
SECOND HAND
Stationary Engine and Boiler.
Six-of-sixteen, length 30, Bolley 42 feet long by 42 diameter. 8 flues, 12 inches diameter, for eighty pounds steam, and is perfectly in good as new. Price and terms easy. Will be at our Washburn & Arcade, of the Marble's shop.

NOTICE OF ELECTION
The annual village election of Charlevoix village, will be held at the village hall, in the building now occupied by Cutler & Gunsolley, in the village of Charlevoix, on Monday the 14th day of March, A. D., 1884, at which time the following officers are to be elected. A village president, two trustees to serve for two years, one to succeed Fred. W. Maynard, village Treasurer, one to succeed Egbert Cutler, one to succeed Andrew Bennett, one to succeed Samuel M. Seward, three trustees to succeed Henry Crowe, Joseph Bolin, and Thomas E. Wright, whose terms of office expire on the 20th day of March, A. D., 1884, and one village assessor to succeed Egbert Cutler, whose term of office will expire on the 20th day of March, A. D., 1884, and one village constable, and one village pound master. The polls of said election will be opened at eleven o'clock a. m. and will remain open until five o'clock p. m. for the purpose of registering the names of electors.
Dated February 25th, A. D. 1884.
FRED. W. MAYNE, Village Clerk

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT. State of Michigan: The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. The Peoria Sulphur and Lime Co. vs. Rapids vs. William A. Addis. Notice is hereby given that on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1884, a writ of attachment was duly issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in favor of the above named plaintiff, against the goods, chattels, moneys and effects of the said William A. Addis, for the sum of one thousand, four hundred and seventy-five dollars and fifty cents, as appears on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1884. Dated this 25th day of February, A. D. 1884.
BLAIR, KING & KLEINHANS,
Attorneys for plaintiff.

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT. State of Michigan: The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. Peter Kelly vs. Henry Addis. Notice is hereby given that on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1884, a writ of attachment was duly issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in favor of the above named plaintiff, against the goods, chattels, moneys and effects of the said Henry Addis, for the sum of [illegible] dollars and [illegible]

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

MR. LEEDOM, Sergeant-at-arms of the House of Representatives, is to be called to a strict account for the expenditure of $3,500 in escorting the remains of Mr. Haskell to Kansas.

JACOB SCHAFFNER, of New York, started for Las Vegas, New Mexico, to visit his brother, but on learning of his death became insane, leaped from the train, and was frozen to death.

L. Q. C. LAMAR is said by his Mississippi friends to be one of the few poor men in the United States Senate. Of late years most of his salary has gone to pay old debts, obligations of a nature that only a scrupulous integrity would think of paying.

DAVID DOWS, the well-known grain-merchant, whose health has recently been somewhat impaired, is once more at his desk in his counting-house. Though slightly paler than usual, there is nothing in his appearance to indicate anything but the most robust physical condition consistent with his advanced years.

THE great heiress of England at present is Miss Hamilton, whose mother, Lady Nisbett Hamilton, has just died. The large estates in Haddingtonshire and Lincolnshire, the annual income of which is estimated at $620,000, have been, for some years, owing to the lady's incapacity, under the management of the Scottish courts, and an immense sum has accrued. Miss Hamilton's father, whose original name was Dundas, had the agreeable fortune to adopt no fewer than three additional family names—Christopher, Nisbett, and finally Hamilton each change bringing a large increase of fortune. Her mother, just deceased, had been first married to the Earl of Elgin, father of the Lord-Chamberlain now-a-day, and of Sir Frederick Bruce, Minister at Washington, but was divorced from him.

NEW YORK letter to Philadelphia Times: Here lives old Ericsson, who made the screw and the monitor, and is making the solar engine to boil by the sun's rays and save coal. He is past eighty years. He saved this country from being bottled down at once and the blockade opened, and Mr. Mellen's army captured. He weighs in the moral and useful scale about 3,000,000 Vanderbilts, and Goulds, and Sages put together. Nobody knows much about him, because he has some knowledge and is reticent. Forty-six years he has lived here, and every great ship you see is his monument. One of those monuments built on the Delaware sank a few days ago, and swallowed up a hundred people as if they had been condemned and executed in the gallows trap. Yet, shipwrecks do not appear as good reading as they once did, when we were a sea-faring nation.

IN Dakota there are great numbers of Norwegians, who have been attracted to the country by the flaming circulars of the railroad and land companies, and still more by letters from friends already on the ground. They are not disappointed, for they are content to begin very humbly. At first a house of sods of one room is entered, though the pig is a fellow occupant. The first improvement is a sty close by front door, and the pig only enters the the house occasionally as a visitor. Next, the home-made sod stove must make way for an iron one, and the sod house is deserted for a dwelling all wood, and costing perhaps as much as $200. When this house, with its windows and its shingled roof, is finally painted white, the climax is reached. Imagination in its wildest flight can picture nothing more luxurious or beautiful.

THE Two Republics, of Mexico, publishes statistics, based on a report from the Treasury Department, that gave interesting information relative to the mining industry of Mexico. It appears that the silver coinage for the fiscal year of 1882-83 amounted to $24,083,-821.95, and the gold to $107,940, a total of $24,191,121.95. As showing that the ancient mining people, Aztecs, have been worked since the sixteenth century in fact, still hold their own against the more scientific points, the coinage of the mints may be interesting, they being: Mexico, $5,858,000; Zacatecas, $5,210,350; Guanajuanta, $4,258,000; San Louis Potosi, $1,182,-000; Chihuahua, $ 957,20,550; Guadalajara, $4,111,511; Alamos, $900,000.—St. Nicholas.

885.45; Durango, $889,778; Culiacan, $802,143; Hermosillo, $449,460; Oaxaca, $99,650.

THE recent debate in the House of Representatives over the bill for the relief of Gen. Fitz John Porter drew upon the dictionaries and cyclopedias of poetical quotations to an extent quite unusual in Congress, except on days specially devoted to the business of eulogy. Mr. Browne, of Indiana, a veteran legislator and an enemy of the bill, led off on Jan. 19, with Robert Burns:

But men are mans' weak and little to be trusted;
And when they want to do a thing
The balance is rarely right adjusted.

This was followed by an argument from Tennyson, with one misquotation:

Not though the soldiers knew
Some one had blundered:
Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to do and die.

Then came a new member, Mr. McAdoo, of New Jersey, in defense of the bill, with the sentiment, which was greeted with applause:

The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation; that away,
Men are but gilded loam or painted clay.

That is from Shakspeare, and it was correctly quoted by Mr. McAdoo. A week later Mr. Thomas, of Illinois, who opposed the bill, enlivened the debate by interjecting a scrap of "Pinafore":

It is gratifying to your pride,
For you would not have sold it.

That, also, was misquoted. Mr. George W. Bay of Norwich, N. Y., another new member, then filed the following exhibit for the defense:

Tenth cousin to earth shall rise again:
The eternal years of God are hers;
But Error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies among his worshipers.

It is from Bryant's "Battle Field." Mr. Ray also submitted for the consideration of the House three lines from Joel Barlow's poem on Hasty Pudding:

Using the sacred I know, the charms I feel,
My mounting lips exude and my evening meal.
The sweets of lusty pudding.

Mr. Ray's colleague, Mr. Francis B. Brewer, closed the poetical case against Gen. Porter with not less than three quotations in the same speech. The first was from the Lady of the Lake:

Where, where was Roderick then?
One blast upon his bugle horn
Were worth a thousand men.

The second was from the "Charge of the Light Brigade" again, and again that of Carlyle's poor suffered misquotation:

Forward, the Light Brigade!
Charge for the guns! he said.
Cannon to the right of them,
Cannon to the left of them,
Cannon in front of them,
Into the jaws of death,
Into the mouth of hell,
Rode the six hundred!

Finally, Mr. Brewer quoted from "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers":

So the smack cackle, chirrupt upon the plain,
No more through rolling clouds to soar aside,
Viewless the realms of air the fairy skiff,
And when the chase had quite cleared its height,
It soon o'ertook the prey, but never to slay.
Then call me "Bailey's Sister,"
Or else how can I know
If we are not some other girl
You truly want should go?

Here's cup and spoon and handkerchief.
I quickly wean and cease;
Say, "Thank you, Bailey's Sister,"
For that's my very name.
—Good Cheer.

A Story for Boys.

The robins flew from the far away
Southland where the summer loves to stay.
Plenty more were with them,
Bluebirds, thrushes, bobolinks, wrens, and others, but it is only with these two that we have to do. They flew many and many a mile over hill, mountain, and valley, lake, forest, and prairie, till they came to the land where Jack Frost lays his cold hand on the trees with a tight and persevering grip that the tender leaves never venture a peep out until long after the birds who stay in warmer lands are singing under bowers of green among full blooming flowers.

It seems a wonder, sometimes, why the dear little singers ever leave such sunny lands; but if they did not, what would the girls and boys of the North do?

The two knew of a beautiful spot where they had built a nest for several years past. It was in an old tree close by a waterfall, which smiled at them, gleaming and sparkling in the sunshine all day long, and then sang them to sleep at night. The eyes of the pretty things brightened and their tired little wings moved more lightly as they drew near what they had come to look upon as their summer home. Who then can imagine their sorrow and dismay at finding the dear old tree lying prostrate beside the laughing water?

"What shall we do?" said Robin.

Mrs. Redbreast could hardly answer at first.

"We shall never find such another spot," she said.

"Never! The location was so good."

"Such a cozy nook to hold the dear little darlings!"

"No facing the north, where the cold winds could blow upon them."

"Nor to the west, whe'r the sun burns so long in the afternoon."

"Nor away up by the sky, where the nest might be blown away."

"Nor too near the ground, where it might be found by those dreadful young savages, boys?"

And again, ruefully shaking their heads:

"What shall we do?"

There was, however, little time to waste in lamentation, for the season was already late. They took a day to hunt in building spot, and at its close Mrs. Redbreast met Robin with a face full of importance.

"I think I have found the very place," she said. "You see, I never again should have a moment's peace in a tree. Supposing the old one had gone down last summer with that darling nestful of ours. I trouble to think of it? Robin, we must choose a safer place. Come and see what I have found."

She flew before him to a building which stood at some distance from their former home.

"See," she said, "it is empty. No place in the world could be safer; and only think what a charming nook I have found."

It really did look very safe and inviting, the creamy she had spied out in a corner of the wandering of the piazza. Robin looked at it from all directions, gravely turned his head from side to side, feeling great doubts of the wisdom of building anywhere but in a tree, yet fully aware of the importance to Mrs. Redbreast's feeling quite safe and secure in her new home.

He could not find anything to object to, and the next morning birdies began work in great spirits and with much energy that before the week closed some blue eggs had made their appearance in the snug little nest, over which Mr. and Mrs. Redbreast twittered and chirped as if they had only just gone to housekeeping instead of having already raised several fine families.

But one morning soon afterward, as Robin returned from a short absence from the nest, Mrs. Redbreast eagerly met him with such a frightened face that he anxiously inquired what was the matter.

"Oh, Robin! I have seen—I have seen—"

"What?" cried Robin, "not fire?"

"No—worse."

"Not a man with a gun?"

"Oh, worse, Robin. Boys! A great crowd of boys!"

Robin turned pale to the very point of his beak.

"Where?" he asks despairingly.

Running all over the grass, and now they are gone under the cascade."

Robin groaned. "What shall we do?"

"What shall we do?" was all poor Mrs. Redbreast could echo, dreadfully sobbing. "But I shall never forsake my precious eggs, Robin."

And he said in the same breath:

"And I shall never forsake you."

"Hurrah! Hurrah!" The boys gathered in a crowd after a week's holiday rushed out at noon. If poor little Mrs. Redbreast could have sat perfectly still in her nest above the piazza, no one, perhaps, would have seen her; but a shout arose as she flew off in affright, while Robin scurried about in helpless alarm. A big boy climbed up a pillar to look.

"A nest with five eggs!"

"Bring it down."

"No, no," cried the others, "let the poor birds alone."

The parent birds were uttering sharp cries of distress, when the teacher came out. He smiled when he heard what had been found, and himself climbed up to see it, and, to the surprise of all, carefully took out and brought the nest down.

"I don't care," muttered Billy Barlow. "I say I saw it first. It's not fair for him to have it."

But nobody minded Billy, as the teacher showed the pretty eggs in the dainty bed so lovingly prepared for them, then pointed to the excited robins.

"I don't think the Longfellow school has ever before received such a compliment," he said. "These little birds have made a direct appeal to the honor and manliness of every boy here. They are helpless, except for the strength this very helplessness gives them in the eyes of every noble and generous nature. The Master puts his little creatures out our mercy, that we may show mercy in protecting their weakness. Now, shall we, each and all, determine to leave these young birds shall be reared in peace from any one belonging to Longfellow school?"

There was a clapping of hands with loud cheering, and in another minute the nest was replaced and the noisy little crowd had dispersed.

And Robin and Mrs. Redbreast could hardly believe their eyes as they stood on either side of the nest twittering their astonishment, until she rested upon her eggs and he flew away to see about a lunch for her.

Billy Barlow, the next morning, an hour before school, came and fastened his sharp little eyes upon the molding behind which he knew the coveted nest lay. Using a pillar he climbed, but neither his arms nor his legs were as long as the teacher's, nor yet as the big boys', he could barely touch with a finger end a tantalizing bit of twig which helped to form the outer circle of Mrs. Redbreast's throne. Stretching and tiptoeing were of no avail, and he ran to an upper window, through which he could just see the piazza roof. It was steep, and as he leaned over and peered with his head hung downward, a pair of poor Mrs. Redbreast's cries, he lost his balance. Just missing the nest, he fell, went over the ornamental woodwork—and caught. Hanging head and feet down with a tightness of clothing about the middle which made him sick and faint, he kicked and called lustily for help, which, however, did not come until he had full time to think of his sins. Then he called Billy Barlow as he sank home for repairs.

Mrs. Redbreast bravely surmounted this excitement, and thereafter was apparently the most composed and self-possessed bird on the piazza floor. From one point on the playground the boys could catch a glimpse of the green head and breast of the dear little mother. And when they climbed up to take a nearer view of her and her nursery treasures, she never gave a friendly little chirp. No queen was ever more faithfully guarded, for each boy seemed to consider the honor as sacredly pledged for their discretion. She grew to like the noise of the merry crowd at play, declaring to Robin that it was really quite delightful to have so much lively company about, and that indeed she wondered how they had ever got along before. Robin knew that quite agree with her, for to him no sound was quite so sweet as the music of the little orchestra, to which he always frequent visits, almost wondering that it kept on singing just as gayly as when he had every day joined his song with its own.

"Ah, dear" sighed Mrs. Redbreast one evening in late June. "How long it will be ere—ere—"

The school was close. The merry laughing boys and girls were coming in more by fathers for the second of the gay mothers with the mother-bird had trained so carefully in all the graces of young motherhood.

"Never mind," said Robin, consolingly, "we can come back next summer, and they'll be here again."

"Yes, indeed, we will," said Mrs. Redbreast decidedly, "for how could we ever feel safe unless there were plenty of boys?" The Illustrated Christian Weekly.

A Nest Egg.

A commercial traveler jumped from the cars at a small station and shouted to the proprietor of the lunch counter to give him a hard-boiled egg and a piece of mince pie.

He ate the pie hurriedly, and was attempting to break the egg when the conductor gave the g nal for starting.

"What is rotten?" asked the proprietor.

"Rotten? no, but I can't make any impression on it, and here I am as hungry as a wolf and the train half-way out of the yard;" and he made a dash for the back platform as the rear car, which he just succeeded in reaching.

"Well, I'm blowed," said the proprietor of the lunch counter, picking it with a knife, "if I didn't give the young man a china nest egg."—Exchange.

IN THE JAWS OF A SHARK.

A Marine Diver's Remarkable Adventure with a Huge Man-Eater.

The following, a thrilling story with a shark, was related to your respondent by a gentleman of Augusta and who claims to know both the shark and the Atlanta, which was caught in a storm on Sept. 22, 1883, on the coast of North Carolina. The steamship owners of the craft contracted with a diving company to have her raised and to recover as much of her cargo as possible. Two divers went to work at the wreck. They made several successful trips, but on the fourth trip one of them met with the adventure which we are about to speak of. His comrade was hastily to be drawn up, and he had been landed into the boat before how his other comrade had been attacked by a monster shark and carried off. He scarcely had he done speaking when the one that was supposed to be lost appeared rose from the water about fifty yards from the boat and was seen to swim rapidly toward it. A shout of terror issued from the lips of the fishermen, who, terror-stricken, were standing near the gunwale, where they had been busily engaged in counting their fish. Many of them, in their fright, dropped their fish and attempted to run over each other in their endeavors to get out of the way of the approaching monster. Some

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

William Henry Hunt,

LATE AMERICAN MINISTER TO RUSSIA, WHO DIED AT ST. PETERSBURG, FEB. 27TH.

Hon. William Henry Hunt, American Minister to Russia, and ex secretary of the navy, who died at St. Petersburg, Wednesday, Feb. 27th, was born at Charleston, S. C., in 1824, the youngest of five sons of an influential lawyer and member of the state legislature.

Mr. Hunt was brought up in New Orleans, to which city his father removed on account of the Calhoun nullification excitement, but attended school at New Haven, Conn., and at 17 year he entered Yale college. He graduated here with an elder brother, and was admitted to the bar in 1841 in New Orleans at the age of twenty. He soon took a high rank as a profound [illegible] lawyer, and was for a [illegible] in a New Orleans [illegible] When the war came he [illegible] in the secession movement, and was a consistent Union man. When Admiral Farragut entered New Orleans, Judge Hunt invited the officers of the navy to his house. He assisted in the reconstruction of the state, and was elected attorney-general on the Packard ticket in 1876. In 1878 he was appointed a judge of the United States court of claims. President Garfield took him into his cabinet as representative of the south, and when President Arthur succeeded to the executive office he appointed him minister to Russia.

In this capacity Mr. Hunt performed an active service to his country in looking after the survivors of the Jeannette expedition, and assisting them in making their way from a remote corner of the Russian empire to St. Petersburg, and thence to their homes. Through his efforts the good offices of the Russian government were secured in bringing the remains of De Long and those who perished with him, from the western coast of Siberia to the Russian capital.

Judge Hunt was four times married. His first wife was a daughter of Commodore Ridgley. His second wife was a daughter-in-law of late Bishop Hopkins, of Connecticut. In his personal characteristics Mr. Hunt was one of the most winning of men. Handsome, learned and eloquent, he possessed all the graces of a finished gentleman. He leaves a widow, one daughter and four sons.

The following was received by President Arthur the day after Mr. Hunt's death:

[illegible] SECRETARY OF STATE, WASHINGTON: [illegible] express to you my sincere sympathy in the bereavement of the government of the United States, the ministry and the people which Mr. Hunt has so recently represented at this capital. [illegible] I have just heard that the government and Russian society are much affected by his death.

[illegible]

By order of secretary Chandler the navy department will be draped in mourning for thirty days.

The Muskegon News predicts that there will be few trade interests in Michigan which will not be permanently benefited by the coming revolution in the lumber trade which is to practically abolish the general lumber market at Chicago and establish markets at the mills of the manufacturers. Important lumber sales are now almost wholly made on orders, and not after personal inspection and selection by buyers, as was the custom a few years ago, and the need therefore for a convenient central market no longer exists, while the cost of maintaining lumber yards in Chicago has of late years greatly increased. For these reasons, as well as to save freights, the News says there is a "general movement among the lumbermen of the Northwest whose mills are in the vicinity of the pineries and whose storage yards are in Chicago," to quit that city and sell direct to dealers from their home yards. As to the result of this proposed change the News says: The effect of this change in business method will be in many ways advantageous to business in western Michigan. It will virtually cut off the expense of the present Chicago handling from the price of lumber, and by so much will make lumber cheaper to the consumer, and lead to a larger demand. It will multiply activity at the lumber centers of Michigan and the northwest, and will make cities of the villages which now cluster about the saw mills. It will give to Michigan railroads the lumber business of Lake Michigan; and growth in railroad traffic anywhere means added prosperity to every city and village which the railroad touches. Lumber shipments will be made from the mills to consumers in the far west and far south without breaking bulk; and this in time will necessitate an extension of railways which now branch westward and southward from Chicago into the heart of the lumber regions of the northwest. They will be compelled to reach out where the business is, or lose the business.

PITH AND POINT.

—Five Polish poets have been arrested in Europe. Poets in this country are occasionally killed, or crowded out.

—One of the charges against tobacco is that its use has a dwarfing effect. That's true. Many men get short by buying cigars. Chicago Times.

—Worcester has an "R. A. T." club, which entertains the public with plays, operettas, and the like. "Hear me gnaw-um," ought to be a favorite air. —Lowell Courier.

—A young correspondent complains that "there are too many lawyers in the country." Oh, no, my boy, there aren't too many lawyers. There aren't half enough clients, that's all.—Bar-celle.

—"What is true bravery?" asks a New York paper. It is going to the door yourself when you don't know whether the caller is a dear friend, a book agent, or a man with a bill.—Buffalo Post-Express.

—When the hired girl was asked to put an extra plate on the table she said she wasn't much of an authoress, but she could work an example in addition like that. —Boston Musical and Traveller.

—The fellow at the other end of the telephone wire may be perfectly sound financially, but the man at this end should reflect, as he listens, that his business is in the hands of a "receiver." —Pittsburgh Telegraph.

—Mary Jane says that she shall never be satisfied until women are permitted to sue as well as to be sued. Perhaps it would be unkind to say that Mary Jane has never been sued; therefore we shall not say it. —Boston Transcript.

—Swimming is becoming a favorite amusement with the New York ladies. It has long been known that the husbands of New York ladies often find it difficult to keep their own heads above water, and now, perhaps, their wives will help them. New York Graphic.

—"Did you find the people indigent?" asked a clergyman of a wealthy member of his church, who had been calling on some very poor families. "Oh, dear, no," answered the lady, "they were respectable, but as poor as poverty." —Yonkers Gazette.

—A Philadelphia woman was poisoned by hobbling out in her mouth while hunting street car change, and one in Chicago was similarly afflicted by holding a street car ticket. This causes the Detroit Free Press to ask: "Why doesn't the sex take a walk instead of riding?"

—"Why do young men remain single?" asks a newspaper writer. An old philosopher once observed that if more young men went to nunery, there would be fewer old bachelors in the land, and the more we reflect on the subject the more it strikes us that the old philosopher hit the bull's-eye. Young men remain single because they don't marry.—The Budget.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—Knoxville, Tenn., is entering largely into the manufacturing enterprises, and among its latest industries are carworks.

—The making of sassafras oil is now a leading industry in many parts of Virginia. The raw root costs $1.50 for 1,000 pounds.

—In the United States, Ontario and Manitoba the increase of the lumber product this year over last is estimated at 2,000,000,000 feet.

—Washington Territory is in demand in San Francisco for car building, and a very large trade is expected to spring up in this lumber for the East, as it can be profitably used instead of hardwood for finished work. Lumber Trade.

Emma Larson's Trip.

"Hello! how far is it to the next town?"

These words greeted the ears of Mr. W. W. Davis and family as they sat at supper yesterday evening at their residence, Sixteenth and O'Neill Streets.

Mr. Davis looked out of the open door of his dining room upon Sixteenth Street. He saw there an unusual picture. A fine, large sorrel mare, with a yearling colt at her side, was standing by the sidewalk. Upon the mare's back sat a young woman sidewise in a man's saddle. She had on a man's broad-brimmed hat, a close-fitting blue and white checked calico dress, rough lace shoes, and on one foot was a man's stirrup. A yellow rubber coat was tied up behind the saddle. The young woman was sunburnt and travel-stained, but sat erect and looked as if she was able to take care of herself. She was a girl of a sort twenty or twenty-two years of age, having an intelligent face, with comely features. Her hair, which was brown, was cut somewhat short, and bobbed. Her complexion was of the fine but wind and sun puts on a man or woman, and her lips were crimped from the same cause. She had bright gray eyes and a straight [illegible] nose.

"What can I do you want?"

"The next town, whatever it is."

"Where are you traveling to?"

"To California."

"Alone?"

"Yes, alone, and coming out. Where can I find good grass?"

Mr. and Mrs. Davis, like good, hospitable people, invited the young lady to dismount and partake of some supper. She stabled her hands and face, sat down to the table and talked about the trip she was making.

"My home is in Wisconsin," she said, "where I live with my father. I once spent some time visiting in South-ern California, but it was some years ago. I have for several years thought of starting in the spring and making the journey on horseback, and this year I made up my mind that I would do it. I have been eight weeks on the road. From my home to the Mississippi River the distance is 180 miles; it is 350 across the State of Iowa, as I traveled it, and then 500 and more to Cheyenne. So I have come over a thousand miles on it to-day, and 90 yet."

"Is your mare a good horse?"

"Indeed I have. They wanted me to give up my trip at Kearney. Why, some folk there grew real angry with me because I persisted in going on. They wanted me to sell my mare and colt and take the money to pay my passage. But I do not need money and I'll never part with that mare. She's a good animal, has speed as a racer, and she weighs as much to a pound as when I started with her. To-day I have ridden twenty-eight miles, but that is more than I go really make. I travel mornings and evenings and I stop a long while at noon. I rested with a school-ma'am, but it made the mare's back sore, so I had to ride for a man's saddle. At night I secure the mare and her colt to the picket. She can't move but I know it. She got away twice, though. Once I followed her at on-ten miles and caught her in a herd of thirty horses."

"What bedding have you in camping out?"

"Nothing but that yellow oilcloth and the saddle blanket. I haven't suffered from the cold, but I get awful lonely sometimes at night when the coyotes are howling."

"Don't you keep company?"

"Not a great deal. I go back from the railroad at least two miles and avoid towns. Once a tramp came upon me in a lonely place when I had the saddle off the mare, and began talking. I at once drew his attention to some object at a distance, and slipped on the saddle, buckled the fore girth, and got loped off. But I'm not afraid. I never think of danger, and I carry no firearms."

"How do you manage about eating?"

"There I have trouble. If I didn't strike a station at meal time I get nothing to eat. Why, I've gone all day often without eating. Two days some times. It was hard at first, but I got used to it. I don't want to travel with emigrants; there's no glory in that. I have set out to do this trip alone. I have been the last day or two traced in at about the same rate with some emigrants to Washington Territory. Sometimes they're ahead; sometimes I am but I don't camp with them."

"Would you mind telling me your name?"

"Emma Larson."

"Miss Emma?"

"Yes, sir." —Chicago Ledger

Do you value your horses and cattle? Attention to their health is as necessary as their regular food. If your horse is suffering from Epizootic, Ringbone, Spavin, Sprained leg, Fever in feet, Strains, Bruises or cuts, or your cow has caked bag, sore teats, or bad thrush, you will save money by buying Parmelee's Universal Liniment and using it freely for any or all of these troubles, and so bring your stock into a healthful and valuable condition. It is the best liniment also for general family use. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co

WILL M. GILBERT,

EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN.

House, Sign, and Fresco Painting

GRAINING AND KALSOMINING.

Plain and Decorative Paper Hanging.

The Oldest Established Business on South A

S. G. ISAMAN,

South Arm, Mich.

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

A Large and Well-Selected Stock Always on Hand.

Dry Goods, Ready-made Clothing, Boots a Shoes, Groceries, Provisions, Crockery, Glassware, Hardware, Drugs, Stationery, Notions, &c.,

AT LOW PRICES

PRODUCE OF ALL KINDS TAKEN IN E CHANGE FOR GOODS.

Give Me a Call. S. G. ISAMA

EVERYTHING

IN THE LINE OF

Furniture and Undertakers' Goo

CAN BE FOUND AT THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE OF

HENRY C. COOPER, CHARLEVOIX, MIC

CHEAP FOR CASH.

Come and See Me Before Buying.

Advance Lumber Compa

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWIN

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of Hard and Soft Wood Lumber a Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER C ADVANCE, M

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW

DEALER IN

Hardware

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST

All kinds of

Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goo

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt

They have no Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTL

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. CHARLEVOIX

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 13, 1884.

Business Announcements.

A genuine article in Butter at B. [illegible]'s.

Any amount of Sap Buckets at bot[illegible] prices, at L. D. Bartholomew's.

New Cottons and Prints this week [illegible] are buying old and shelf worn goods, give us a call. Upright Emrey & Co.

We have just opened up a choice [illegible] of Green apples of every description, which [illegible] going rapidly at 35 and 40 cents per peck, at Upright Emrey & Co.'s.

It is not wind pudding, but a great [illegible] fact, that we sell the best oysters for 25 [illegible] cents per can ever offered in Charlevoix. Upright Emrey & Co.

Provision Market.

Retail prices to consumers, as corrected every Wednesday evening by UPRIGHT, EMREY & [illegible], general dealers:

FLOUR, per bbl, $6.00, $7.50, and $8.00

BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $1.50.

GRAHAM MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, [illegible].

HAY, per ton, $9@20.

OATS, per bu, 35c.

GROUND FEED, per cwt, $1.00.

APPLES, per bu, $1.50.

POTATOES, per bu, 50c.

ONIONS, per bu, $1.00.

BUTTER, per lb, 20@26c.

EGGS, per doz, 20@20c.

LARD, per lb, 14@15c.

HAMS, 10c; Shoulders, 12½c

SALT PORK, 12c; Beef, 8c.

CHEESE, 20c

WATER-WHITE OIL, 25c

FARMERS' PRODUCE in good demand

Fresh Meats from the Market.

MEAT, beef steak, 12½@15c; pork steak, 8@[illegible]; mutton, 8@12½c; sausage, 15c; hams, 14c; [illegible], 12½c.

TALLOW, 4@5c.

Local News Brevities.

B. Glass' little child is quite sick.

Monday was a fine day for election.

A brass band is to be organized at Norwood.

The mercury reached 52 above on Tuesday.

There are 285 pupils enrolled in Elk Rapids schools.

Ben. Ingalls, of Boyne City, lost a valuable horse last week.

D. Blakely, of Eastport, gave the JOURNAL a call on Monday.

A. D. Cruickshank attended circuit court at Bellaire this week.

Dr. Hood, formerly of Boyne City, died recently at Mancelona.

J. Milo Eaton advertises a pair of oxen, for sale, cheap for cash.

M. J. Stockman and W. A. Smith went to Detroit on Wednesday.

Will Fisher is suffering with hemorrhages of the lungs, at A. J. McLeod's.

Frank Shimbot will be found at Fox's store, while Al. Cooper is away.

A happy party joined the dance at Archy McNeil's last Thursday evening.

Upright, Emrey & Co., have over 2,000 cords of wood to begin spring business.

J. A. Bacot has a notice of land and live stock for sale, in another column.

A. B. Noyes, of the Pioneer House, Norden, gave the JOURNAL a call last Tuesday.

The Band of Hope will give a concert at the M. E. church next Wednesday evening.

Several members of the G. A. R. at Eastport visited Baxter post on Monday evening.

The democrats elected the entire ticket at the charter election in Susquack last week.

Geo. Durance's big black dog went through the livery stable window yesterday afternoon.

The sudden change of weather on Wednesday made lively times for the boys on Round lake.

The rain of Tuesday morning was the first since November, except a part of a day in January.

Tuesday morning dawned with a severe sleet storm, but by nine o'clock was warm and spring-like.

The JOURNAL acknowledges receipt of a set of Howell's annotated statutes from the secretary of state.

In a vote of 351 on "license" or "no license," Black River Falls, Wis., gave a majority for "no license."

Revival services are still being held at the M. E. church. Appointments are anticipated for some time to come. Service to-night.

The T. T. F. F. club will give another of their select parties at the Bridge street house on Friday evening.

Dr. S. C. Graves has returned home from the northern peninsula, and is located in his old room in the See block.

Mr. A. B. Noyes sends the JOURNAL a card for the Pioneer House this week, which will be found in another column.

Rev. G. W. Howe returned to Boyne City last Thursday. His work in the M. E. church here gave satisfactory results.

A little daughter of W. F. Orrell, was bitten on the finger by a cat, one day last week, and for several days the hand was swollen and very painful.

Armstrong & Chisholm take possession of McLeod's meat market this week. They will probably be heard from through the JOURNAL later on.

W. F. Lance writes from Orlando, Fla., that they are living on fresh vegetables, such as radishes lettuce, green peas and cabbage. Thermometer 80° in the shade.

W. F. Orrell writes from Chicago that times are lively, and "spring trade booming." The ice is breaking up in the lake and river. Sleighing poor and walking sloppy.

The Addis property, consisting of a stock of general merchandise, 600,000 feet of lumber, railroad engine, and 18 flat cars, will be sold at sheriff sale, at Bay Springs, on March 19th.

The residence of I. L. Stauffer, recently caught fire from a defective flue, and but for a timely discovery it might have been destroyed as there was a strong wind blowing at the time.

Our temperature report is omitted this week, but will be resumed next week and continued a few weeks longer. It is used for making comparisons, of the weather, by our eastern and southern readers.

Stormy weather prevented a large attendance of the historical society on Tuesday evening, and the usual program, we are informed, was not fully carried out. The next meeting will be with Mrs. O. S. Washburn.

On his last trip to Charlevoix, Jeff Weikel had a little experience which should be a warning to smokers. Driving in a strong wind, fire from his cigar fell onto a silk neck tie, and burned through that and two coats before he discovered it.

Next Sunday morning Rev. J. T. Iddings will give by request a sermon upon the "Grandeur of the orthodox faith." In the evening the discourse will be to the young people of Charlevoix. A cordial invitation is extended by the pastor and congregation to the public.

Will M. Gilbert, of East Jordan, recognizes the value of the JOURNAL as an advertising medium, and makes an announcement to our readers this week. Mr. Gilbert has a reputation for artistic work second to none in this vicinity, and from what we can learn, all who have employed him are willing to recommend his work to others.

I. A. DeLamarter, of the firm of E. T. Brown & Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., manufacturers' agents for portable and stationary engines, boilers, mill machinery, supplies, etc., gave the JOURNAL a call on Wednesday evening. He has sold considerable machinery in the county this winter, and to increase these sales he places a card in our advertising columns.

One of the JOURNAL force witnessed the drama, the "Octoroon" at East Jordan last Saturday evening, March 8th. It was the best play ever gotten up in that town, and the performance is seldom beaten by traveling troupes. A full house netted $50, which goes for the benefit of the band. They think of playing the same in Charlevoix, in the near future.

Capt. Cryder last Tuesday purchased at Grand Haven, the steam pleasure yacht Gracie Baker, for $7,000. We understand Mr. Cryder intends running his new boat next season as a passenger and mail boat between Beaver Island and points along the lake shore in this vicinity. The yacht is said by those who have seen her to be an excellent craft. Detroit Democrat.

The pioneer merchant of South Arm, Mr. S. G. Isaman, has something this week to interest the JOURNAL readers who live south and southeast of Charlevoix. Mr. Isaman has the oldest established business on the Arm, and his continued success is the best recommend for fair dealing and low prices. For further particulars call and see him at his store in South Arm.

Sufficient encouragement has been shown towards the location of telephone connections between various towns in this section, to be well assured of its being a success, and in operation early during the coming summer. This will prove a very desirable acquisition not only for the accommodation of our business men but for the convenience and use of the visitors to our community.—Petoskey Democrat.

The East Jordan Enterprise mentions a large cast by the foundry at that place for Charlevoix parties. The first impression might be that our own foundry could not do the work, but such is not the case. There were other considerations in this transaction which make sufficient explanation. The Charlevoix foundry and machine shop can make anything that can be made in any foundry in northern Michigan.

The "Peak Family" will give an entertainment at the opera house on Friday evening, March 21st. It will be under the auspices of the ladies of the Congregational society, and the proceeds will be devoted to finishing the church. Admission, 25 cents; children 15 cents. After the entertainment, refreshments, consisting of cake, coffee, and ice cream, will be served in the same room. The cause is worthy, and the public should respond liberally.

Last Saturday afternoon, about 2 o'clock, the residence of Edward Skinner, near Eastport, was burned, involving a loss of about $1,000, with an insurance of $500 in the Home Mutual. At the time of the fire there were three sick children in the house who were removed to a neighbor's. The furniture was removed from the lower rooms, but the contents of the chamber were entirely destroyed. It is supposed to have originated from a defective chimney.

The Village Election.

At the hour of going to press last week (Wednesday evening) the prohibition caucus was in session, and did not conclude in time to give us a report without delaying the paper. The nominees of this caucus were: For president, A. E. Upright; For trustees, M. J. Stockman, L. E. Allen, and E. M. Clark; for clerk, R. W. Kane; for treasurer, F. W. Mayne; for assessor, O. Blair; for street commissioner, W. B. Taylor; for constable, G. Bonk.

On Saturday morning a call was issued for a Union caucus, to be held at Lewis' Hall Saturday evening. The nominees of this caucus were: For president, Amos Fox; for trustees, Chas. Ely, J. Milo Eaton, and W. C. Newman; for clerk, H. S. Harsha; for treasurer, Geo. W. Miller; for assessor, O. Blair; for street commissioner, J. Weyburn; for constable, Wm. Ferguson.

The democratic, greenback and republican parties did not make any nominations.

The work on Monday defined the issue to be prohibition against license. The following is the result.

PRESIDENT.	Vote.	Maj.
Fox	147	46
Upright	101
TRUSTEES.
Ely	149	*60
Eaton	102	467
Newman	151	764
Stockman	89
Allen	95
Clark	87

* Over Stockman, one of Allen; 2 over Clark.

CLERK.
Harsha	162	79
Kane	83
TREASURER.
Miller	146	46
Mayne	100
ASSESSOR.
Blair	241
STREET COMMISSIONER.
Weyburn	157	67
Taylor	90
CONSTABLE.
Ferguson	146	46
Bonk	100

There were seven imperfect and scattering votes.

E. T. BROWN & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS' AGENTS.

Portable and Stationary Engines,

Boilers, Mill and Wood-working Machinery.

Mill Supplies, Threshers, and Threshing Engines.

Bargains in Second-Hand Machinery.

WRITE FOR PRICE AND CATALOGUE.

WEST BRIDGE ST., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Delinquent Taxes.

Amount of taxes returned delinquent in the several townships of Charlevoix county for 1883:

Bear Lake	$497 06
Boyne Valley	881 57
Chandler	508 76
Charlevoix	127 16
Evangeline	1,063 57
Eveline	240 01
Hayes	545 02
Hudson	389 44
Marion	231 04
Melrose	785 04
Norwood	177 35
Resort	343 78
South Arm	344 59
Springvale	432 57
Wilson	897 80
	$7,395 46

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Upright Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, March 11, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

James Pearson and wife, to Sarah L. Weasley, w ½ of s e ¼ and s w ¼ of s e ¼ 35-35-8, $200.

William Smith to Jane Smith, n e ¼ of s w ¼ 4-32-8, $700.

Lydia C. A. Hood to Henry H. Eaton, lot 2 and s ½ of lot 1 of lot 1, Boyne Falls, $600.

Joseph Eshout and wife to Will A. Stone, n w ¼ of s w ¼, 19-32-7, $500.

Moses Cooper and wife to Ruth Trobridge, n w ¼ of s w ¼, 2-32-7, $200.

H. B. Munroe to J. P. Lisemewski, s w ¼ of s e ¼ and s w ¼ 9-32-8, $800.

Sophronia Sipples to Daniel A. Sipples, n e ¼ of s w ¼, 8-32-7, $100.

Liberal Club.

The Liberal club will give another of their free entertainments at Barthdomew's opera house, on Monday evening, March 17th. The Rev. George W. Bell will deliver the lecture. Subject: "The effects of tobacco and whiskey." W. C. Newman will recite Shamus O'Brien. There will also be an interesting musical program, consisting of songs and duets, and the usual variety of instrumental solos, duets, etc., under the direction of Prof. Bice. It is intended to make the entertainment one of the best of the series. All are invited.

Charlevoix, March 11th, 1883.

ROBERT MILLER,
Chairman of Committee.

Burgess.

Lottie Webster visited her parents last Sunday.

Moses Cooper is thinking of going to Florida soon.

A child of Benjamin Walker died Tuesday morning, March 4th.

The church mentioned last week is to be built the coming season.

Bell Long, of Evangeline, formerly of Hayes, visited at Peter Kane's last week.

It is rumored that a gentleman by the name of Smith will erect a saw mill at J. A. Bacot's on Pine Lake. He will also put in a planer.

For the next supervisor of Hayes, we would suggest the name of Flavius J. Smith, who has had experience, and would look out for the interests of his town.

Ironton.

W. A. Smith and wife were in town Thursday.

A. F. Draper and Frank Noyes were in town Sunday evening.

Mr. James Otis still lies in a critical condition. His recovery will be slow.

There will be preaching at the school house on Thursday evening.

There will be a school exhibition at Ironton on the 21st. A pleasant time is anticipated.

Harry Atkinson, of East Jordan, was in town Sunday. He predicts lively business up there this summer.

Isaac Debonham has returned from southern Michigan, and will engage in building. He already has several buildings engaged, to be finished this summer.

Will Sise, registered at the Pioneer House on Saturday. He is buying wool for T. D. Smith. He says there is more wool on the shore of Pine Lake than has been in one season for a long time.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every year with Hall's Catarrh Cure, that the doctors had given up and said could not be cured. 75 cents a bottle. Sold by Jas. Cromer

Stock growers all agree that for general use in their business no powder is better adapted to give satisfactory results than those prepared by C. M. Parmelee, because they really contain the valuable remedies claimed, and do not fail to act quickly and effectively in combs, colds, epizootic, hoof blood, stoppage of water, and poor digestion, &c., in horses. For cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry, they are invaluable. Full pounds only 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

Bring your Election Tickets to the JOURNAL OFFICE to be Printed.

TOWNSHIP CAUCUS.

A township caucus will be held at the Black School House in the TOWNSHIP OF MARION, on Saturday, the 29th day of March, 1884, at one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating township officers.

FOR SALE.

Eighty acres of land, 60 or without improvements. Also one seven-year old mare with colt, one good work horse, two Texas ponies four years old, well broke, and one five year old cow. The place is in good condition. Inquire of J. A. Bacot, on north shore of Pine Lake.

35tf J. A. BACOT.

FOR SALE.

A FINE

Pair of Oxen.

Yoke, Chain, and Sled, for Cash.

Come Early.

J. MILO EATON.

PIONEER HOUSE,

A. B. NOYES, PROPRIETOR.

Ironton, Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public.

JOSEPH HYLAND,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

Boiler Maker,

Sheet-Iron Worker,

and manufacturer of

Hyland's Patent Fireman.

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS.

Patent Medicines, all Kinds.

Imported and Domestic Perfumery

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

Kept in stock

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and be convinced that we will save you money. Our store is on Bridge street's new

Opera Block

THE STATUE OF CLAY.

"Make me a statue," said the king,
"Of marble wild as snow;
It must be pure enough to stand
Before my throne at my right hand;
The niche is waiting! Go."

The sculptor heard the king's command,
And went upon his way;
He had no marble; lost he went,
With willing mind an image meant.
To mold his thoughts in clay.

Day after day he wrought the clay,
But knew not what he wrought;
He sought the help of heart and brain,
But could not make the noble plain—
It lay beyond his thought.

To-day the statue seemed to grow;
To-morrow it stood still;
The third day it went well nigh;
Then, year by year, in joy and pain,
He served his master's will.

At last his lifelong task was done;
It was a lifeful copy;
He took his statue to the king,
And troubled like a guilty thing
Because it was but clay.

"Where is my statue?" asked the king.
"Here, Lord," the sculptor said,
But I commanded in cold." True;
I had not that—since cold I do
But model in clay needed."

Then shalt not unreworded be.
Since thou hast done thy best,
Thy statue shall see statue with
It shall be as it should have been,
For I will do the rest."

He touched the statue, and it changed;
The clay fell off, and lo!
A marble shape in pure him stands,
In perfect world of heavenly hands,
An angel, just as now.

A NEMESIS.

"A bouquet, sir?"

Elmer Richards starts suddenly, and glances apprehensively at the speaker. Surely there is nothing to fear in the little pale-faced figure before him, with shyly drooping eyes, and white, dimpled hands that just now are engaged in wrapping a bit of silver leaf around the stems of a bunch of flowers.

"Bouquet, sir?" she repeats. "Here is one I am sure you will like, myrtle and tuberoses. Shall I arrange it for you?"

He bends forward that she may pin the blossoms on his coat-lapel. He notices how small and white her hands are, and wishes she would raise her fringed lids.

"There; don't you like it?" she says. "The price is a shilling."

Elmer draws a sovereign from his well-filled wallet, and lays it on the counter.

"Keep the remainder for the cause," he says.

The young girl smiles, and raises her eyes to his.

Beautiful eyes they are, large and black, with a yellow fire smoldering in their depths like the gleam of a topaz. They thrill Elmer Richards's heart with a strange emotion.

Can it be that he, a blase scion of the world, who has been admired and sought by dozens of beautiful women, has fallen in love with a pretty flower-seller in a charity fair?

He moves away, and presents an acquaintance moving around in brilliant apartment.

"Who is that young girl with the handsome black eyes at the flower-seller's?

George Ellis looks up at his companion with an amused smile.

"What, Richards, are you scattering?" he says. "Well, you are to be congratulated the first one with whom those eyes have made sad havoc. Her name is Beatrice Irving."

Irving. Elmer gives an involuntary start. Irving. Ah, yes, that name is familiar to him! Aunt, you have read before him, with wistful like eyes and trembling lips.

It appeared to him unjust to deny this evening, when he first heard Beatrice Irving's voice; it haunts him all the evening, and when the fair is over, and he returns to his bachelor quarters, he hears it still, and besides it glows the flower-seller's brilliant face.

He remembers the bright dance on the evening when other white hand than hers had flecked him with blossoms, and other eyes had smiled into his. All those little hands will gather flowers no more; those pretty fingers sparkle never again in the moonlight, in the deep slumber that knows no waking.

Elmer Richard is startled like a guilty thing as this thought comes to him; he knows why the sweet life ended so early; why the little grave was made so soon for her whose last words were of him—pretty Mattie Irving.

"Why indulge in these morbid fancies?" he thinks. "It is a thing of the past now, and as such should be forgotten."

So he dismisses the sad, unpleasant memories, and, leaning back in his chair, lights a cigarette, and, watching the curling smoke-wreaths as they float upward, he sees in their midst a dim vision of the fair-haired flower-girl Beatrice Irving, the flower-seller.

"What, Richards! are you going to snub your friends in this manner?"

"Jerry, old boy, is it you?" he exclaims. "Do not be angry with me, I did not know you! Step up into my room and tell me the news."

"New place you've got here," says Jerry, as they enter the luxuriant apartment.

"When did you return?" Elmer asks.

"Only two days ago," is the reply. "Been down to see the folks; lots of company there—a whole household. Oh, by-the-by, Richards, Esther sent you an invitation to come down and enjoy yourself." Nothing else on hand, have you? No? Then of course you'll accept. It will be a good chance for you. Almost a dozen girls, Esther says, and every one either a beauty or an heiress."

"What, are you married?" Elmer inquires.

"No, but engaged, and that amounts to about the same thing," Jerry replies.

"Beasie Townsend—don't you remember her? Well, she's there too. But say, you haven't told me whether you are coming or not."

"Yes, I will come."

"Soon as possible, mind," says Jerry. "Esther will be looking for you. Au revoir."

He goes out, and a few moments later Elmer, looking out of the window, sees his tall form striding up the street with the same careless, swinging gait he remembers of old.

A few days later Elmer Richards enters the train en route for the Trows' country residence. That evening he makes a faultless toilet and descends to the lighted rooms.

Esther presents him to the other guests, and soon he is engaged in a lively conversation with Jerry's betrothed, Beasie Townsend. Then Esther comes and carries him off to the conservatory. As they enter a recumbent figure rises, and in the dim light Elmer sees the yellow flash of jewels.

"Are you here?" cries Esther. Then, "Miss Irving, Mr. Richards.

The figure takes a step forward, and a ray of light, streaming through the half-open door, falls upon her face, the brilliant face and lustrous black orbs of Beatrice Irving.

She bows, and her face dimples in a smile of recognition; she has not forgotten that evening at the charity fair.

Elmer gives an amused smile; he is thinking of the little banquet, the roses and the music, and wondering what she would say if she knew of its fate.

Then Esther slips away, and they are left alone together.

Beatrice is a charming conversationalist, and Elmer thinks it is infinitely more agreeable to pass the time with her in the dimly lit conservatory than to chatter with this one and that in the illuminated room beyond.

At last they come and join the evening. As they emerge into the light, Elmer glances at his companion; she looks wonderfully fascinating to-night.

Early one morning, a few days later, Elmer, while strolling through the garden, sees Beatrice standing by a rose-bush, endeavoring to disentangle her scarf from the thorns upon which it is caught.

"You must allow me to be rewarded for your handiness," Beatrice says, and plucks a white rosebud with a spray of dark green leaves for a background.

As she holds forward to fasten it in his buttonhole, their eyes meet, and something in his eyes—the girl is not blush slightly; and, making a hasty movement, a stray thorn pierces her finger. A tiny red drop falls on one of the petals and mars its whiteness.

"There!" Beatrice exclaims, in a vexed tone. "I have spoilt your flower. Let me get you another."

"Never mind," Elmer replies. "It does not show; and, besides, you may keep it for your hand again."

"No! I hope I should not be so foolish another time," says Beatrice.

Then they stroll about in the shady path together, and enjoy a pleasant chat, until the bell calls them in to breakfast.

The summer days pass quickly by, and some of Esther's guests take their departure. Beatrice Irving and Elmer Richards are among the last that linger; it has been a blissful summer for him—one he will never forget.

One evening Beatrice announces her intention of returning to her home on the morrow, and that day Elmer determines to know his fate. That evening Beatrice comes down stairs, arrayed in the same dress that is so becoming, and Elmer remarks that she wears her flower in her hair.

"Yes. Did she never speak of me to you?" Beatrice says.

"Yes, yes," Elmer replies; "but she called you ——"

"Fess," interrupts the girl. "Yes, that was her pet name for me."

There is a long silence; then Elmer raises his white, haggard face.

"Beatrice," he says, "I mount no harm to you, sister. I did not dream of such a sad ending. I was young then, young and foolish. Can you not forgive me? Will you ——"

But she not reads him with a mocking laugh, and, rising, flits down the garden path. He sees her amber robe fluttering in the moonlight, and her jewels flash forth tiny flames of fire; then she is gone, and he is alone with his sorrow and despair.

Elmer does not meet again, and the next day Beatrice bids her hostess farewell, and returns to the city.

One year later, Elmer Richards goes to a second charity fair. He has been persuaded, much against his will, however, to attend, and now he sauntered about with a friend, paying little attention to the gay scenes around him; they fail to interest and more him as they once did.

Only one year has passed since that night in the moonlit garden, yet there are deep lines on his handsome face, and his dark, brown hair is streaked with gray. He has not outlived his sorrow—it was followed him and crushed him down, making him an old man long before his time.

Before a stand of flowers he pauses, and memory calls a fair face back to the time when two white hands fashioned for him a fragrant bouquet, and two bright eyes looked up into his. He hears the rustling of garments, and looking up, sees Beatrice Irving standing before him. She is attired in her favorite color, amber, and wears the old gleaming jewels.

Their eyes meet, and the yellow light in hers burns brighter. She bows over the counter, and her jewels flash in the gaslight.

"A bouquet, sir?" she asks, with a mocking smile.

Cards—An Analysis of Whist.

George W. Pettes gave an interesting lecture at Boston on "The History of Cards and an Analysis of Whist." The lecturer said that the first mention of cards was in Hindostan, some twelve centuries ago, when they were used as a means of gambling, resembling and emblems of various significance, and that some of these are yet to be seen in India. The game is very rare. In the reign of Charles VII. cards similar to those of the present were used in France, but before the court cards were known by different names; and in the reign of Edward I. of England charges for cards are found in the royal rolls, while in 1752, in the reign of Queen Anne, £3140 worth of paper were used for making playing cards. The game of cards was made to afford information and pleasure to the heathen, and it was Christian Europe that debased the use by the introduction of gambling and slurping. Whist probably took its name from a peculiar call of "whisk" or "whisht," although the two were very dissimilar, the one being noisy and the other quiet and a thinking game. In England, Lord Folkestone and friends revised the ancient game of whist, and made the present game of ten points, and the era was 1742. Hoyle's treatise in 1742, but he was not the father of the game, being only the publisher of the rules governing it. Cards of short whist was conceived by John Lorraine Baldwin, of England, in 1760, and the short whist rules were then framed but the lecturer condemned it as being far inferior to the full, long game, as it took away the spice of points, excluding honors, which is sometimes played, and which he called a mongrel game. Mr. Pettes then explained that whist, properly played, was one of the most scientific of games, which, while it required close attention, was a rest from active business for the player, and a peculiarly fine game which showed the disposition of every man who played it.

Noisy Music.

Shakespeare asserted that no man should be trusted who "is not moved with concord of sweet sounds," His dictum would make Turks and Chinese objects of suspicion, for the subject is the clashing rather than in the harmony of sounds. A Turkish audience never applauded when the Sultan attended a concert. On being asked which piece he preferred, he answered, "The last one." He meant the tuning of the instruments. According to an anecdote told by Mr. S. C. Hall, Scotch Highlanders slurs in the musical tastes of the Turk.

"I once heard," said Mr. Hall, "a Scotch Highlandman declare that the greatest enjoyment he ever had in his life was one night when sheltered from a storm in a bothie twenty feet square, Highlanders all around him, playing on him, and, as each insisted on playing his own pibroch, all of them played together.

"Ough!" ejaculated the Highlander, "tal was music!"

Worth $25,000,000.

Speaking of the telephone patent, the Electrician says: "The value of this patent is enormous, and we very much doubt if it could be purchased now for $25,000,000. It is probably by far the most valuable single patent which has ever been issued."

Not Up on Science.

He sat by the stove in a Michigan avenue grocery store for full twenty minutes before speaking. He spread out his legs to encircle as much of the fire as possible, drew his sleeve across his nose at regular intervals, and there was a strong smell of burning hoof leather as he finally looked up at the grocer and asked:

"Can you tell me why combustion causes a draught?"

"No, sir," was the prompt reply.

"It's positively wonderful how ignorant the masses are on scientific subjects," continued the man as he helped himself to an apple. "Can you tell me why this isinglass in your stove is not consumed by the heat?"

"I guess it's because you keep all the heat off," was the sneering reply.

"You are a liar, sir, and you say that to excuse your ignorance! Now, then, what pressure does water exert on a human body at a depth of sixty feet?"

"I'll exert a pressure on your body if you call me a liar again!" exclaimed the grocer. "What do you want here?"

"I want to ask you if you understand the principle by which birds fly?"

"You get out of this! I have no time to fool away with such nonsense!"

"Nonsense!" piped the old chap; "why, I don't believe you know the amount of oxygen you consume at each respiration!"

The grocer laid hold of the man to draw him to the door, but he caught a Tartar and was flopped on his back.

"I exerted a force of about one-eighth horse-power to accomplish that," said the old man as he knelt on the prostrate body. "A dead blow of twenty pounds from my fist would flatten your nose, while two pounds additional would crack your skull."

Get off of me or I'll slay you."

"I seize your hair with a clutch equal to the grasp of a hand lifting fourteen pounds of iron and I bring your head on the floor with a force equal to nine pounds."

"Let go my hair!" yelled the grocer as he kicked and struggled.

"You are now exercising a force equal to eight pounds to the square inch, and the old man as he jumped up again, "but it is useless. I shall now exercise a force equal to the clutch of forty eight grasshoppers on the jaw of your wind, and I will then administer a kick equal to the force necessary to upset a couple of barrels of soap."

When the grocer got up the man was across the street.

"Perfect parlor," shouted the victim. "You exhausted six gallons of oxygen in the first yell and five in the second," called the scientist, "but it was simply wasted. I could have obtained all the force necessary to move the whole earth a quarter the speed exercised by an antelope in outrunning a lion. Good-by, gentle grocer, good-by."—Detroit Free Press.

Schoolboys' Cuts.

That little world in which school boys live has its own code of honor. It is not a high-toned code, and it ignores the distinction between right and wrong. Yet it is a despotic code, and few schoolboys dare violate it, because its penalty is ostracism from the social life of the school.

Yet a boy in an luxurious school did not escape the moral courage to break one of its chief laws, being impelled to the violation by his regard for the purity of the school. The teacher of the school, who tells the story, says:

As I was going into my school-house one morning, I noticed two of my boys engaged in a fond dispute over something. One of them held a book in his hand, and the other was trying to get it away from him.

Just as they reached the door, the one who was struggling for the book succeeded in wresting it from the surprise, he rushed into the school-room, opened the store door, and threw the book into the fire.

I was more amazed at what seemed like an act of wanton destruction, because it was not in keeping with my usual and honored pupils. Such a thing could not pass unnoticed. So as soon as the school had been called to order, I called him to my desk and asked:

"Was that your book, John?"

"No, sir."

"Whose was it?"

"Hands's."

"Why did you take it away from him?"

"Because he had no business to have it?"

"How's that? You said it was his."

"Yes, sir. But" her he hesitated a little, "but it was an indecent book, sir, and I didn't feel I had a right to destroy such a book wherever I found it."

"You did right!" I exclaimed, as I shook hands with him, heartily, and dismissed him to his seat.

A false idea of what is commonly called "schoolboy honor" would have prevented most boys from giving evidence against a schoolmate in a case like this. But I am thankful to say that this one brave example has already done a world of good in my own school, and cheered the ideas of some of my pupils on the vexed question of how far one boy may go in "telling on another."

DIFFERENCES in faith are inevitable. Men cannot believe alike more than they can look alike or act alike. Their faith will vary with their temperament, with their education, with their habits of thought, with the influences around them. Some will be able to believe what others cannot possibly believe. Some will accept readily what others cannot be persuaded to accept.—C. B. Brigham.

ALL other knowledge is hurtful to one who has not the science of honesty and good-nature. Montaigne.

HUMOR.

TAFFY is one of the sweets of love.

DISTRESSING accident—losing your scalp.

COULD conjugal affection be more strictly displayed than it is by the joined? "And so, doctor, you say wife will get well?" "I am sure, if you can persuade her to take dose." "Doctor, take it she will have to break every bone in her body."

THE "wishbone" walking is the correct thing. The cane beneath a floral wishbone, the ceremony the bridegroom grasps the wishbone to pull. There in a break somewhere, and holds the long piece is always getting up to build fires in the

A DISCUSSION at dinner on a Mediterranean steamer was started by the question: "Why is it that for something before his waiter, checking him, exclaims, 'Yes, sir, is a dessert.' "O," said the "I don't care if it is a wild-goose egg to eat it all the same."—Buffalo Courier.

EPITAPH copied in a Pennsylvania cemetery:

"SWEET MY MOTHER
"With cancer
"To Heaven

And below:

"HERE I AM."

"How can you and your sister get on?" asked a Western man of a colored man. "She has no boss. I is to blame, boss. I is a splendid white soldier, and got so proud she had to be. She bowed I was too dark to dress."

THE story is told in France of an American lady, who at an unusually was deputed as host to a French scholar in her party. The arrangements for the journey were left to the gentleman. She did her best—although long way short of perfection—in the matter of provisions, and the clerk did not satisfy her mind as to his remarks were "grave or gay," but, in desperation, she said to him with awful distinctness: "Do you speak—English?" "Wa'al, yes, I guess I just talkin'," shouted the clerk. "I'd orter speak English, I've ten miles from Bangor."

New Weather Predictions Improved.

An intensely blue sky is a temporary absence of clouds, and indicates fair weather. A deep blue sky indicates a tornado.

When a woman leaves a party upon the arrival of a gentleman friend, it is a good deal like a dead season.

When the sun rises behind clouds, and the clouds lift around the horizon, and the sky, and the air feels damp, it is a fine drizzling mud-holer. Boat deations are there will be a heavy rain. Take your umbrella.

When it begins to thunder, look for lightning.

When a man gets up in the night and feels along the top part of the dark, and knocks the bottle without any label on it, and then breaks it, it is a cinch he is going to be a dry spell next o'clock in the morning.

When the candle begins to sputter with irregular, spasmodic about I reckon in the next hour or so you will be in a place where you put the lamp-cord time you used it.

When the youngest boy in the comes home three hours after of school, with his hair wet, shirt wrong side out, boots full of mud, and his pockets filled with loose, it was certainly a most wonderful exercise.

THE TRUE.—Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is the best remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma, and consumption. Price 25 cents.

Fashions in 1725.

Just own that some of the fashions this season are a little strange. In truth, the freaks of Dame Fashion in the past were far more fantastic than those at which we are occasionally obliged to smile to-day.

Our overdressed girls of our own time, for instance, what would they say to the dress of the Spanish belle in 1725? Her hair was cut high in front and very broad, displaying her shoulders, were touched with red paint, at the tips of her ears, and even tips of her hands, were also and she was perfumed from head to foot.

Her bodkins were thrust through bracelets and rings adorned her fingers, and a broad kind of girdle glistened at the top of her as from it a chain of pearls or stones extended to her waist. Her lower limb-breadth long, to give sometimes added watches, pistols, keys, or little bells, to her inner petticoat. She wore short, at about mid-calf, and was studded with pearls, and sewed, and sewed; but required their various allurements. The attraction of widely diffused.—Strawberry Journal.

Wrong Side of the Meridian.

The sun of the Meridian, which on old-fashioned clocks marks the hour, is quickly termed "the wrong side of the sun" when the functions decay and the body begins to show signs of broken machinery. Nature's remedy for these ills is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It tones the digestive organs, regulates the liver, and thus restores the vital forces to their normal condition. Appetite, sleep, and vigor follow its use. Try it.

What Americans Read.

There is such a thing as reading too much. If you would grow you must study. Perhaps you the world read so much as to be in danger of losing your head in the literature they read? The columns of criminal courts, sensational telling news, extravagant romances, and the incidents of fights, baseball games, and read with avidity; and the high order is neglected, and profound treatises upon artistic, moral, and social are allowed to grow dusty on the of libraries and book stores.

Reading is mainly in their early life, and today rise, are laid aside, and the mind is left to dull and stagnate. Moreover, of a former period were their whole minds to the reading of books made by Arthur Cleveland Coxe, prepared by Rev. A. Coxe, Burlington, Vt. for agricultural fairs it the highest award over all com-

Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is a time-tried, standard remedy for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, bronchitis, asthma, and consumption. Price 25 cents.

CONFERRING the ratio of between grain and its straw. Sedelow has lately made known sults of his experiments. It rye the weight of grain a third of the whole; in barley third to one-half. The and chaff.

A MODERN RESURRECTION.

A Miracle That Took Place in Our Midst Unknown to the Public—The Details in Full.

[Detroit Free Press.]

One of the most remarkable occurrences ever given to the public, which took place here in our midst, has just come to our knowledge, and will undoubtedly awaken as much surprise and attract as great attention as it has already in newspaper circles. The facts are, briefly, as follows: Mr. William A. Cromble, a young man formerly residing at Birmingham, a suburb of Detroit, and now living at 287 Michigan avenue in this city, can truthfully say that he has looked into the future world and yet returned to this. A representative of this paper has interviewed him upon this important subject, and his experiences are given to the public for the first time. He said:

"I had been having most peculiar sensations for a long while. My head felt dull and heavy; my eyesight did not seem so clear as formerly; my appetite was uncertain, and I was unaccountably tired. It was an effort to arise in the morning, and yet I could not sleep at night. My mouth seemed filled; I had a faint, allgone sensation in the pit of my stomach that food did not satisfy, while my hands and feet felt cold and clammy. I was nervous and irritable, and less all-enthusiastic. At times my head would seem to whirl and my heart palpitated terribly. I had no appetite, no ambition, and I seemed indifferent of the present and thoughtless of the future. I tried to shake the feeling off, and persuade myself it was simply a cold or a little malaria. But it would not away. I then determined not to give up, and so I one passed alone and all the while I was getting worse. It was almost this time that I noticed I had begun to bloat fearfully. My limbs were swollen so that by pressing my fingers upon them deep depressions would be made. My face also began to enlarge, and continued to until I could scarcely see out of my eyes. One of my friends, describing my appearance at that time, said: 'You are an unlimited soon-fishing, but I should like to know what.' In this condition I passed several weeks of the greatest agony.

"Finally, one Saturday night, the misery culminated. Nature could endure no more; I became irrational and apparently insensible. Cold sweat gathered on my forehead; my eyes became glazed and my throat rattled. I seemed to be in another sphere and with other surroundings. I knew nothing of what occurred around me, although I have since learned that it was considered no death by those who stood by. It was to me a quiet state, and yet one of great agony. I was helpless, hopeless, and there was no one to companion. I remember trying to see what was beyond me, but the mist before my eyes was too great. I tried to reason, but I had lost control of myself. I felt that it was death, and found how terrible it was. At last the mist upon my mind gave way and all was a blank. How long this continued I do not know, but at last I realized the presence of friends and recognized my mother. I then thought it was earth, but was not certain. I gradually regained consciousness, however, and the pain lessened. I found that my limbs had, during my unconsciousness, been giving me a preparation I had never heard of before, and the next day, under the influence of this treatment, the bloating began to disappear, and from that time on I steadily improved, until now I am as well as ever before in my life, for no trouble or disease, which I had previously had, has been so nearly killed me, and all through the wonderful healing qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I firmly believe the remedy that brought me to life after I was virtually in another world."

"You have had an unusual experience, Mr. Cromble," said the writer, who had been breathlessly listening to the recital.

"Yes, I think I have," was the reply, "and it has been a valuable lesson to me. I am certain there are thousands of men and women at this very moment who have some ailment which came on so near killing me, and they do not know it. I believe it my decease is the most deceptive trouble in the world. It comes like a thief in the night. It has no certain symptoms. Some it attacks one way and others differently. It is quiet, treacherous, and all the more dangerous. It is killing more people today than any other complaint. If I had the power, I would warn the people against it and urge them to remove it from the system before it is too late."

Mr. Cromble resides at the Ben of Whitehead & Mitchell, proprietors of the Riverine Hotel, Detroit, and a fraternal visit in this office yesterday, and in the course of conversation Mr. Mitchell remarked: "Mr. Cromble's statement is nothing so good as Pico's Remedy for Catarrh."

"Rough on Rats" clears out Rats, Mice. 15c.

Mother Swan's Worm Syrup, tasteless. 25c.

"Rough on Coughs" Troches, 15c; Liquid, 50c.

WELLS' May Apple (Liver) Pills, 10c.

"Rough on Toothache," instant relief. 15c.

"Rough on Corns," for Corns, Warts, Bunions. 15c.

WELLS' Health Renewer cures Dyspepsia, Impotence.

The "Rough on" Tooth Powder, elegant. 15c.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM, Neuralgia,
Sciatica, Lumbago,
BACKACHE,
HEADACHE, TOOTHACHE,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS, SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
and all other bodily aches and pains.

FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine in 11 Languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

AGENTS WANTED to sell Lubricator, Harness and Shoe Oils. L. L. BROWNELL, Cleveland, O.

BIG PAY To sell our rubber hand stamps. Terms free. Tucker Rubber Co., Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS, Send stamp for our new book on Patents. L. BINGHAM, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D.C.

Young Men learn TELEGRAPHY and earn good salaries. Address, with stamp, VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

ARE YOU WEAK? Send 10c. (stamps) for a copy of "Health Hints," containing valuable information. Address Dr. E. B. FOOTE, 1130 Broadway, New York.

CHEAP LANDS Near Richland, Waterville, Nelson Centre, Grain, Grass, and Stock. Easy and TEXAS LANDS Terms. J. S. HOGG, 407 Main St., Dallas, Texas.

A GENTS WANTED for the best and fastest-selling Pictorial Books and Bibles. Prices reduced 33 per cent. National Publishing Co., Chicago, Ill.

$250 A MONTH Agents Wanted. 60 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample free. Address JAY BROWN, Detroit, Mich.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list, terms and sample. Satisfaction guaranteed. E. H. BINHAM, 71 State street, Chicago.

Clerical For Business, or the Oldest & Best Collar Paper. Try Them. Send for Circulars. Address, BAYNES, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PATENTS TO OBTAIN PATENTS, and for Patent business generally, address, E. G. SIGGERS, Patent Attorney, Washington, D. C. Terms moderate. Advice free. Best of references. Write for inventor's guide.

Post instructions and Hand-book of Patents sent free.

BY ASK YOUR NEWSDEALER FOR NUMBER 1 (PRICE 10 CENTS) OF THE FAMILY HERALD AND WEEKLY. It contains a list of valuable Premiums to be given away to subscribers, and a full description of each. Or, send 10 cents to the publishers, and you will receive the paper for three months, and a list of premiums. Address, THE HERALD CO., 63 Beekman St., New York. Agents wanted. Send for terms and sample copy free. Don't delay. Now is the time. Address, THE HERALD CO., 63 Beekman St., New York.

CONSUMPTION.

Having a positive remedy for the above disease, by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

TO SPECULATORS.

E. LINDBLOM & CO., N. G. MILLER & CO.,
Members of Principal Produce Exchanges in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee.
Offer exclusive private telegraph wire between their offices in New York and Chicago. Orders executed for cash or on margin. Write for pamphlet containing particulars. ROBT. LINDBLOM & CO., Commission Merchants, 2 Exchange Place, New York.

GRAIN & PROVISION BROKERS.

Members of all prominent Produce Exchanges in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Milwaukee.
Direct wires between principal markets. Orders executed for cash or on margin. Pamphlet explaining our system and containing market reports sent free on application. Correspondence solicited. Liberal advances made on consignments. Refer to Bradstreet's Commercial Agency. Established 1865. Members New York Produce Exchange. Chicago Board of Trade. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce. St. Louis Merchants' Exchange. Commission Merchants, 71 Broadway, New York.

LAME BACK

This person plaster is absolutely the best ever made, combining the virtues of hops with the most valuable pain-subduing medicines known. Price 25 cents. Mailed on receipt of price. Sold by all druggists and country dealers.

HOP PLASTER

Hop Plaster Company,
Proprietors, Burlington, Vt.

CP For other medicines, how of appetite and diseases of the bowels take Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills. 25 cents.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM

HAY-FEVER

Applied into each nostril is quickly absorbed. Gives relief at once. It opens the passages, allays pain and inflammation, protects the membrane from additional colds, completely heals the sores, and restores the senses of taste and smell. A thorough treatment will cure. Not a liquid or snuff. A few applications relieve. Agreeable to use. Price 50 cents by mail or druggists. ELY BROTHERS, Owego, N.Y.

A Case Not Beyond Help.

Dr. M. H. Hinsdale, Kenawee, Ill., advises us of a remarkable case of consumption. He says: "A neighbor's wife was attacked with violent lung disease, and pronounced beyond help from quick consumption. As a last resort, the family was persuaded to try Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs. To the astonishment of all, by the time she had used one half-dozen bottles she was about the house doing her own work."

My Wife and Children.

Rev. L. A. Dunlap, of Mt. Vernon, says: My children were afflicted with a cough repelling from Measles, my wife with a cough that had prevented her from sleeping more or less for years, and your White Wine of Tar Syrup has cured them all.

CHAPPED Hands, Face, Pimples and rough Skin, cured by using JUNIPER TAR SOAP, made by CASWELL, HAZARD & CO., New York.

BEWARE of the incipient stages of Consumption. Take Piso's Cure in time.

The best and oldest medicine for cure of liver diseases is Dr. Sanford's Liver Invigorator.

For a cold in the head, there is nothing so good as Piso's Remedy for Catarrh.

"Rough on Rats" clears out Rats, Mice. 15c.

Mother Swan's Worm Syrup, tasteless. 25c.

"Rough on Coughs" Troches, 15c; Liquid, 50c.

WELLS' May Apple (Liver) Pills, 10c.

"Rough on Toothache," instant relief. 15c.

"Rough on Corns," for Corns, Warts, Bunions. 15c.

WELLS' Health Renewer cures Dyspepsia, Impotence.

The "Rough on" Tooth Powder, elegant. 15c.

A SKEPTIC SAID

ugly blotches and stubborn blood sores. Eliminates Boils, Carbuncles and Scalds. Permanently and promptly cures paralysis. Yes, it is a charming and healthful Aperient. Kills Scrofula and Kings Evil, twin brothers. Changes bad breath to good, remove.

SAMARITAN NERVINE

Jog the cause." Roots bilious tendencies and makes clear complexion. Leading by none in the delirium of fever. A charming receivent and a matchless laxative. It drives Sick Headache like the wind. It contains no drastic cathartic principles. Relieves the brain of morbid fancies. Promptly cures Hysteria in Females. Restores lingering prospective to the blood. Is guaranteed to cure all nervous disorders. The Debilitated when all opiates fail. Refreshes the mind and invigorates the body. Cures dyspepsia or money refunded.

THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR

NEVER FAILS

Diseases of the blood own it in consequence. Endorsed in writing by over fifty thousand leading doctors, clergymen and physicians in U. S. and Europe. 25 cents at all leading druggists. $1.50. (12)

For Testimonials and circulars send stamp.

The Dr. S. A. Richmond Med Co. St. Joseph, Mo.

Lord, Stoutenburgh & Co., Agents, Chicago, Ill.

KIDNEY-WORT

THE SURE CURE
FOR
KIDNEY DISEASES, LIVER COMPLAINTS, CONSTIPATION, PILES, AND BLOOD DISEASES.

PHYSICIANS ENDORSE IT HEARTILY.

"Kidney-Wort is the most successful remedy I ever used." Dr. P. C. Dallas, Moskton, Vt.

"Kidney-Wort is always reliable." Dr. R. N. Clark, Co. Htpo, Vt.

"Kidney-Wort has relieved my distressing pain and suffering." Dr. C. M. Summerlin, Red Hill, Ga.

IN THOUSANDS OF CASES

it has cured where all else had failed. It is mild, but efficient. CERTAIN IN ITS ACTION, and harmless in all cases.

It Cleanses the Blood and Strengthens and gives New Life to all the important organs of the body. Thousands of women have cause to bless it for health restored and strength given.

Kidney-Wort moves the bowels freely and perfectly and the Bowels never free and healthfully, if in this way the worst diseases are eradicated from the system.

PRICE, $1.00 LIQUID OR DRY, SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Dry can be sent by mail.

WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO., Burlington Vt.

KIDNEY-WORT

ASK FOR HOPS & MALT
TRADE MARK BITTERS
THE GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER
Liver and Kidney Remedy,

Compounded from the well known Curative Hops, Malt, Buchu, Mandrake, Dandelion, Sarsaparilla, Cascara Sagrada, etc., combined with an Aromatic Elixir.

CURE THE WORST FORMS OF DYSPEPSIA & INDIGESTION.

Act upon the Liver and Kidneys, REGULATE THE BOWELS, and purify the blood, which makes pure blood, a sure cure for all Kidney and Liver troubles.

HOPS & MALT

ALLEN'S Lung Balsam!

A GOOD FAMILY REMEDY!
—THAT WILL CURE—
COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP,
CONSUMPTION,

Dr. Meredith, Dentist, of Cincinnati, was thought to be in the last stages of consumption, and was so pronounced by his physicians. Allen's Lung Balsam was thrown in his way, and he purchased a bottle. He was benefited from the first dose. He continued its use, and was restored to perfect health. He now recommends it to all who are afflicted with Consumption.

Jeremiah Wright, of Marion County, W. Va., was pronounced by his physicians in Pittsburgh incurable, and was recommended Lung Balsam by their principal druggist. He used it, and was restored to health. He now recommends it to all who are afflicted with Consumption.

Wm. C. Pippin, Merchant of Bowling Green, Va., writes: April 6, 1881, that Allen's Lung Balsam cured his wife of Consumption, after everything else had failed. He says he would not be without it for any consideration. Mr. Pippin is well known throughout Virginia, and his statements are entitled to the fullest confidence.

Wm. A. Graham & Co., Wholesale Druggists, Cincinnati, O., say: Allen's Lung Balsam is a popular medicine, and has given universal satisfaction. We have sold it for years, and have never heard a word of complaint. We recommend it as the best Cough Remedy in the market.

R. ROBERTS, Marion, O., 155 W. 6th St. Cincinnati, O.

ALLEN'S LUNG BALSAM

Is harmless to the most delicate child! It contains no opium in any form!

Recommended by Physicians, Ministers and Nurses. In fact by everybody who has given it a trial. Is now sold in 50 Million Bottles Annually.

As an Expectorant it has no Equal.

SOLD BY ALL MEDICINE DEALERS.

Thousands Hastened to Their Graves!

Relying on testimonials written in vivid, glowing language of some miraculous Panacea made by some legally puffed-up doctor or patent medicine has hoodwinked thousands to their graves; believing in their almost insane faith that the same marvels will be performed on them, and that these testimonials make the cures, while the so-called medicine is all the time hastening them to their graves. We have avoided publishing testimonials, as they do not make the cures, although we have

THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS of them, of the most wonderful cures, voluntarily sent us. It is our medicine, Hop Bitters, that makes the cures. It has never failed, and never can. We will give reference to any one for any disease similar to their own if desired, or will refer to any neighbor, as there is not a neighborhood in the known world but contains cures by Hop Bitters.

A LOSING SUIT.

A prominent preacher of Pittsburgh was a hard drinker. He was cautioned, or he would be defeated in a law suit for a ministry incumbency, pulpit, etc. "Try Hop Bitters." He took it in earnest and used the Bitters from which the ardent spirits had not evaporated. He won the suit on the case he had to plead, he knew it, as well as the court and jury, and has been a sober man ever since. He says Hop Bitters is worth $1000 to him.

HOPS to one pulpit.

The fee of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in. We believe the schedule for visits is $2.00, which would be a sum considered low for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $730 in a year for medical attendance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Bitters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's sickness.

A LOSS'S WISE.

"Oh, how I do wish my skin was as clear and soft as yours!" said Lucy to her friend. "You are really quite a beauty." "Why, my dear," answered the other lady, "it must be Hop Bitters that make me clear, pink bloom and loveliness, for I did it for one year's practice."

GIVEN UP BY THE DOCTORS.

"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy?" "Indeed you may well be surprised, for he was given up by the doctors, and had not strength to stand alone. He was a mere wreck. You can easily imagine the joy, my friend, when I inquired the next day, 'Is many Hop Bitters that make you, dear husband, look so well?' And if he was not a convert to Hop Bitters before, he is now."

PENSIONS Increase, Atty's fee $10. Write for circulars. Col. L. BINGHAM, late Com'r Pensions, Washington, D.C., Attorney.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in 20 minutes. Price only $20. Warranted for 5 years. Will knit 1,000 stitches a minute. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 30 Union Square, Boston, Mass.

LIFE LOANS AT 4 PER CENT.

Principal need never be paid. Interest is kept low. Send for circulars. Address, with stamp, MUTUAL LOAN ASSOCIATION, 1 Pine St., New York.

CATARRH Use Piso's Remed

Second-Hand Building Stuff.

"What are you going to do with that stuff?" was asked of a man who was placing on a truck the remnants of a building that had been torn down in Sixth avenue.

"Take it to the yard," he replied.

"And then what."

"Sell it."

The yard referred to is the headquarters of a dealer in second-hand building material.

"This business is fifty per cent," the superintendent said. "We occupy nearly forty city lots. They are covered with second-hand building material. We can supply brick for the interior walls, or brown stone for front walls, or granite columns for ornamental high stoops or parlorets. It is all ready for use, and it is of known quality. We have thousands of feet of timber and lumber of various kinds. Every kind of lumber used in building a house can be found here, joists, flooring, studding, rafters and roof boards. The roof itself can be had, too. Tin deteriorates some, but slates do not as much. We can supply tin roof that is as good as it was the day it was laid. We have several cords of slates. Our lumber is better than new. It is thoroughly seasoned. We supply the lumber for about all the swell mansions. Every piece of timber in Vanderbilt's house came from this yard. When men put thousands of dollars into fresnoes they want no shrinkage in the timbers of their houses."

"You do not confine your attention to dwellings, do you?"

"Your question reminds me of a man from a negro-ing village who came here. He said he guessed he'd get an order that would puzzle us to fill. He wanted a second-hand pulpit. He was a-mouthed when I showed him a complete outfit. We had stained glass windows, crosses, altars, candlesticks, and morning benches, a pulpit, a desk and a reading-desk. I showed him a reasonable assortment of pews for the lady or gentleman. Then I offered him a second-hand steeple with bell, complete and all set up. He bought a pulpit and paid for it in silver. He was so surprised he couldn't talk."

"What else can you fit out?"

"Anything. Here's a good bar for a lager beer room, and back of it is an elegant arrangement of shelves to hold the cut-glass bottles. There are partitions between to reflect the look better to the bartender. If you want some one to supply you with a first-class stiff to Maud S. There would be an undertaker in our corner, a solid mahogany door at the street, and a second and back entrance, if you wanted it."

"You don't mean to say you've bought a second-hand outfit of that kind, do you?"

"Well, not quite that. We have everything but the key rack, the quilt, and toilet set that goes with them. We have a complete set of burglar's tools, and a—"

"Take it to the yard," he replied.

"And then what."

"Sell it."

The yard referred to is the headquarters of a dealer in second-hand building material.

"This business is fifty per cent," the superintendent said. "We occupy nearly forty city lots. They are covered with second-hand building material. We can supply brick for the interior walls, or brown stone for front walls, or granite columns for ornamental high stoops or parlorets. It is all ready for use, and it is of known quality. We have thousands of feet of timber and lumber of various kinds. Every kind of lumber used in building a house can be found here, joists, flooring, studding, rafters and roof boards. The roof itself can be had, too. Tin deteriorates some, but slates do not as much. We can supply tin roof that is as good as it was the day it was laid. We have several cords of slates. Our lumber is better than new. It is thoroughly seasoned. We supply the lumber for about all the swell mansions. Every piece of timber in Vanderbilt's house came from this yard. When men put thousands of dollars into fresnoes they want no shrinkage in the timbers of their houses."

"You do not confine your attention to dwellings, do you?"

"Your question reminds me of a man from a negro-ing village who came here. He said he guessed he'd get an order that would puzzle us to fill. He wanted a second-hand pulpit. He was a-mouthed when I showed him a complete outfit. We had stained glass windows, crosses, altars, candlesticks, and morning benches, a pulpit, a desk and a reading-desk. I showed him a reasonable assortment of pews for the lady or gentleman. Then I offered him a second-hand steeple with bell, complete and all set up. He bought a pulpit and paid for it in silver. He was so surprised he couldn't talk."

"What else can you fit out?"

"Anything. Here's a good bar for a lager beer room, and back of it is an elegant arrangement of shelves to hold the cut-glass bottles. There are partitions between to reflect the look better to the bartender. If you want some one to supply you with a first-class stiff to Maud S. There would be an undertaker in our corner, a solid mahogany door at the street, and a second and back entrance, if you wanted it."

"You don't mean to say you've bought a second-hand outfit of that kind, do you?"

"Well, not quite that. We have everything but the key rack, the quilt, and toilet set that goes with them. We have a complete set of burglar's tools, and a—"

The Mystery of Matches.

Matches are undoubtedly useful. They are an evidence and accompaniment of civilization. The savage knows nothing of matches. He has to depend upon the tedious process of rubbing a stick against a dry piece of board when he wants to kindle a fire or to light the gas, and very inconvenient he must find it when he hears a burglar in the night and wants to light a candle and go down-stairs to search for him. And yet it is by no means certain that we are any better and happier for the invention of matches.

Think for a moment of the danger that always lurks in matches—how children set themselves and valuable things on fire with matches, and how rats try experiments with matches which they have stolen and dragged into their holes. Such dangers were unheard of in the days of the flint and steel and tinder-box. No child could start an undesirable fire with flint and steel, for in order to use these implements one evidently the incident of a grown man, together with long experience and great command of temper, was necessary. As for the rats, they scorned flint and steel as articles maliciously designed for the purpose of injuring the teeth. In those happy days it was possible for a schoolmaster to enforce discipline among small boys without the risk of setting them on fire by unintentionally striking the matches which nowadays are found in every small boy's pocket. As to the influence of matches in promoting the habit of smoking there can be only one opinion. Not one-half of the amount of tobacco which is now daily consumed would be consumed were it not for the fact that the smoker always has matches in his pocket. There would be comparatively little smoking were it necessary for the smoker to sit down in some quiet place and devote half an hour to a struggle with flint and steel every time he might wish to light a cigar.

It is one of the objectionable features of matches that they are enveloped in mystery. Few people have considered this subject seriously, for had they really given their minds to it, the inexplicable nature of the mystery of matches would have forced them to wholesome hatred of the loathing little splinters of sulphur-tipped wood. Yet there is more than one incident in connection with matches and there is no prospect that the mysterious element in matches will ever be eliminated.

There are in the United States say twenty millions of people every one of whom uses, on an average, twenty matches daily. That will mean by no means a large estimate when we remember that the woman who lights fires, lamps, candles or gas always uses at least three matches to do so—to get one to burn, and that the habitual smoker rarely uses less than forty matches per day. A match usually does its work, and is extinguished by the time half of it is consumed, and of course the unconsumed half is thrown away. It is estimated that these half-consumed matches would, if evenly spread out over the surface of the earth, cover the United States to the depth of one inch. Obviously they do nothing of the sort, and the question therefore arises, what becomes of them? The ash-story of their disappearance is quite as nothing to this. Pins are more or less sharp and can easily work their way to both the surface of the earth, or in many other ways successfully conceal themselves—but matches are large, blunt and clumsy; they are not readily escaped notice, and they are so light that they do not easily sink out of sight in the grass or elsewhere. Therefore the rational hypothesis which will explain the utter disappearance of millions of half-burned matches annually, and we can only assume that there is something in the nature of the match which enables it to vanish at will.

This hypothesis is sustained by the mysterious and utterly inexplicable way in which matches disappear from the matchstands in which they are placed. No matter how carefully the housewife may go from room to room apportioning to each its due supply of matches, and placing them where no rat or other irresponsible animal can reach them, the matches will not remain where they are placed. A few days later the man of the house, busy in his room upstairs, wants a match with which to light his evening cigar. He looks in the match-safe in his room, and finds it empty. He goes from one room into another, and in each an empty match-safe meets him. He descends to the first floor, and still his search for matches is fruitless, and it is not until he penetrates to the kitchen that he is able to find a match-safe containing, at the most, three matches. If he needs his wife during or soon after his search for matches, he naturally informs her that there is not a match in the house, and has her to see that this state of things does not occur again. Of course she scolds for more matches, and fills every match-safe to overflowing, but three days later they are as empty as before.

Now it has been established hundreds of times by unimpeachable testimony that no human hand is concerned in the disappearance of matches from match-safes. The man of the house is always prepared to make affidavit that he has scarcely touched them, and has used at the utmost say three matches out of the hundred which his wife has distributed the ugh the house, the children maintain that they have never touched a match, and the wife is perfectly well convinced that she has used even fewer matches than her husband has used. The conclusion is that matches are the victims of some mysterious, supernatural ways of disappearing—a conclusion, of course, as unsatisfying unsatisfactory, and which we have no doubt [illegible] would never [illegible] to influence our feelings [illegible] toward them. Bonton's

WOOD WANTED.

Fifty Cords good Dried block wood wanted on subscription, at the JOURNAL office. Bring it while the road are good.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing 2 3c. stamp, Rev. T. A. WILLIS & Co., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous DEBILITY, PREMATURE DECAY, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will, for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

FARM FOR SALE.

Consisting of 11 acres, six miles from Charlevoix, on main road. Soil, clay loam. A good frame house, and two frame bank barns. About 35 acres cleared, balance good beech and maple timber. About 250 fruit trees beginning to bear. One-half mile from school and saw mill. Terms, three thousand seven hundred dollars, with not less than two thousand down; balance to suit purchaser. For further particulars apply to DAVID H. EVANS, Charlevoix, Mich.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a SURE CURE for COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, and all throat and lung affections. All who desire the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. WILSON, 59 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

FOR SALE.

SECOND HAND

Stationary Engine and Boiler

Size of cylinder, 10x20 in; Boiler 12 feet long, 42 in diameter, 48 flues. The engine has been thoroughly overhauled, and is practically as good as new. Price and terms to suit. Enquire of S. M. SMITH,

Cor of Washington & Ackert, at the Machine shop.

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT.—State of Michigan: The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. The Fourth National Bank of Grand Rapids vs. William T. Addis. Notice is hereby given that on the 30th day of January, 1884, a writ of attachment was issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, at the office of the clerk of said county, in favor of the above named plaintiff, against the property, goods and chattels, moneys and effects of William T. Addis, the above named defendant, for the sum of one thousand one hundred and no dollars and 57 cents, which said writ was returnable on the 25th day of February, 1884. Dated this 30th day of February, 1884.

ISAAC L. HAYNES & CO., Attorneys for plaintiff.

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT.—State of Michigan: The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. Lewis Reynolds, Asher H. Brown, plaintiffs, vs. John Mathews, Alonzo Mathews, defendants. Notice is hereby given that on the 4th day of December, A. D. 1883, a writ of attachment was issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, at the office of the clerk of said county, in favor of the above named plaintiffs, against the property, goods and chattels, moneys and effects of John Mathews and James Mathews, defendants, for the sum of three thousand three hundred and forty six dollars, which said writ was made returnable on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1884.

Dated February 19th, A. D. 1884.

CHUBB, SHANK & GRIER, Attorneys for plaintiffs.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, } ss.
County of Charlevoix, }

In the matter of the estate of FRANK CHALUPKA, Minor.

Notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, guardian of the estate of said Frank Chalupka, by the Judge of Probate, for the county of Charlevoix, on the 30th day of March, A. D. 1883, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the front door of Lewis's hall, in the county of Charlevoix, in said state, on Saturday, the fifth day of April, A. D. 1884, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day (subject to all incumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of sale) the following described real estate, to wit: The north east quarter of the north east quarter of section twenty, four (24) in township thirty-four (34) north of range eight (8) west, containing forty (40) acres more or less.

FRANK CHALUPKA, Guardian.

STATE OF MICHIGAN.—Thirteenth judicial circuit, in chancery.—Joseph C. Glenn, complainant, vs. Martha J. Sisley, Martha J. Ayers, Ayers (not a resident of this state, last resided at Ellenburg in the state of New York, on mother of Cricklewood & Grier, complainant's solicitors, it is ordered that the said defendant, Martha J. Ayers, cause her appearance to be entered herein within four months from the date of this order, and in case of her appearance that she cause her answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed, and a copy thereof served on the complainant's solicitors, within twenty days after service on her of a copy of said bill, and notice of this order; and that in default thereof said bill will be taken as confessed by the said Martha J. Ayers. And it is further ordered that within twenty days the said complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Journal, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county, and that said publication be continued therein at least once in each week, for six weeks in succession, or that he cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant, at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for her appearance.

OSCAR F. WISNER,
Circuit court commissioner.

CRICKSHANK & GRIER,
Complainant's solicitors.

A true copy, attest:

OSCAR F. WISNER,
Deputy Register.

Grand Rapids Democrat,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Daily (Morning Ed.), by mail, $6.00 per year in advance, postage paid.

Weekly (Democrat), 32 page paper, seventy-five cents for six months; 50 cents for three months; invariably in advance. Address,

THE DEMOCRAT,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 1858

IMMENSE CUT IN PRICES

—OF—

All-Wool Goods,

Overcoats and Suitings,

Boots and Shoes

I have a large stock of Clothing and Boots and Shoes which I will close out at a great sacrifice as I wish to make room for spring goods. All my goods I will warrant

First-Class,

And will be pleased to show them to all parties whether they intend to purchase or not. As a member, I have marked these goods down at actual cost, and they are

Big Bargains.

E. M. Clark

Charlevoix, Feb. 12, 1884.

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY GONE YEARS.

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run for him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all.

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charlevoix

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHING,

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goods,

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets,

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Feed

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a year ago, and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our [illegible]

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses or [illegible] and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction.

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 36. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, MARCH 20, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL
is published every Thursday morning,
BY CHAS. J. STRANG.
Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.
ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

CRICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law, Office in Bittner's Block, Charlevoix, Mich. B. CRICKSHANK. C. J. GRIER.

HAYNES & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich. 27

EDWARD W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor, at Law, Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich. MONEY TO LOAN.

A. JESSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law, Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PORTER, KEAT & MARTIN, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

CHARLES F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX.—Capital $50,000. Savings department. Deposits secured by mortgage on real estate, and interest allowed on time deposits. Exchange on New York, Detroit and Chicago. Loans on first mortgages. Foreign and domestic exchange. REYNOLDS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7, in the school house.
C. F. VANAUKEN, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7.
J. T. ROBBINS, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX ROUGH AND READY FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall.
B. F. BISBEE, Secretary.

HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACY.

DR. SPENCER FIELD, Homeopathic Medicines, Books, Pocket Cases, etc., Charlevoix, Mich.

LIVERY STABLE.

MILO EATON, Proprietor. Geo. Bonsteel, Manager. Only Reliable Horses and Carriages Kept. Good Saddle Horses a Specialty.

PHYSICIANS.

A. CARLSTEIN, M. D.
Office at the Ingleside.

LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in the Lewis block, Charlevoix, Mich.

M. PRESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Homeopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich. 19

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

ISAAC S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

I. O. G. T.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 927, meets every Friday evening, at Odd Fellows' hall.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 283, meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

I. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 262, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over postoffice.

A. BITTNER, President. A. R. URQUHART, Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money loans on approved paper at reasonable rates. Deposits received. Collections given careful attention and remittances made promptly.
G. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor,
Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public. Headquarters for the Pelosney and Elk Lake stages.

Pioneer House,

A. B. NOYES, Proprietor.
Boyne, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CHILDS, Proprietor,
Boyne City, Michigan.

Newly refitted and refurnished throughout.

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.
PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County.

E. T. BROWN & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS' AGENTS,

Portable and Stationary Engines,

Boilers, Mill and Wood-working Machinery,

Mill Supplies, Threshers, and Threshing Engines.

Bargains in Second-Hand Machinery.

WRITE FOR PRICE AND CATALOGUE.

WEST BRIDGE ST., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

WILL M. GILBERT,

EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN.

House, Sign, and Fresco Painting,

GRAINING AND KALSOMINING,

Plain and Decorative Paper Hanging.

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.
ADVANCE, MICH.

EVERYTHING

IN THE LINE OF

Furniture and Undertakers' Goods

CAN BE FOUND AT THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE OF

HENRY C. COOPER, CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

CHEAP FOR CASH.

Come and See Me Before Buying.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

WARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.
Prices reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON,
Op. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Buy note paper and envelopes with a view of Charlevoix, at O. S. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

L. L. CARR

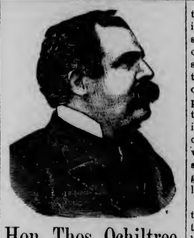
Has just received a fresh lot of

Fruit and Vegetables

at his store near the bridge.

All kinds of fruit and vegetables in their season. Nuts, candies, pop, ginger ale, etc., always on hand. Call and see me. West side Bridge St.

Bring your Election Tickets to the JOURNAL OFFICE to be Printed.



Hon. Thos. Ochiltree,

PROPOSER OF THE FAMOUS LASKER RESOLUTION.

There is probably no other representative in the forty-eighth congress whose name is more frequently mentioned throughout the United States, and even in foreign countries, than is that of the above congressman from Texas. This sudden notoriety has been gained by Mr. Ochiltree's introduction a few weeks ago, in the house of representatives, of the now famous Lasker resolutions, which Prince Bismarck has thrust back upon our congress with the intimation that our country should attend to its own affairs. This insult stirs the American heart to resent it, and brings Mr. Ochiltree into a national prominence in connection with the affair which will perpetrate his name in our civil history.

Mr. Ochiltree is a resident of Galveston, Texas, and the first native Texan ever elected to our congress. He represents twenty-seven counties, which compose the seventh district, and comprise over 37,000 square miles of territory, reaching from Galveston, on the Gulf, to Eagle Pass, on the upper Rio Grande. He was elected to congress as an independent by a majority exceeding 3,000 votes over Findlay, the democratic candidate.

After receiving a limited education at the public schools of his state, at the age of seventeen he became a private in the Texas Rangers, and was engaged in the campaign against the Apache and Comanche Indians in 1854-5. When the war broke out Mr. Ochiltree went in with the confederacy and his war record on the staffs of General Green, Taylor and Sibley, is replete with incidents of bravery that would have been more profitable in a better cause. But when the victorious armies of the north had suppressed the rebellion, Colonel Ochiltree accepted the new order of things in good faith, and was in time appointed United States marshal of Texas by President Grant, and thereafter was appointed United States commissioner of emigration to Europe, in which capacity he several times visited foreign countries, and when in Berlin had numerous audiences with Bismarck on emigration affairs.

In personal appearance Mr. Ochiltree is one of the original freaks of human nature. Heavy set, with canary-colored mukept hair and a heavy light-colored mustache, eyes twinkling with good nature, a ruddy complexion, protruding lips and rather antiquated dress, he is a striking oddity in the present congress, but very popular and always the centre of a group of attentive listeners.

Michigan Census of 1884.

The state decennial census, contemplated by the constitution, will be taken in June of this year, pursuant to the provisions of act No. 146, laws of 1883. The act is not an amendment of the law under which the censuses of 1854, 1864, and 1874, were taken but is an entirely new act, and repeals all former census acts. It provides for a much fuller census than has ever yet been taken under state authority. Excepting certain special investigations provided for by the national census law, our present state law is scarcely less comprehensive than the national law. The schedules to be used in the enumeration are believed to be an improvement on those used in taking the national census. The statistics of manufactures will be equally as good as the manufacturing statistics collected by enumerators for the census of 1880, and the statistics of births, marriages, deaths, and occupations will be better, and of agriculture much fuller, than in 1880. The inquiries as to the acreage in growing crops June 1, 1884,—barley, buckwheat, corn, oats, rye, winter wheat, spring wheat, potatoes, sorghum, and grass, required by the state census law, are new and important.

Former state censuses have been taken by supervisors at the time of taking the assessment. Objections has been made that assessing officers cannot take a complete and accurate census, both on account of the many other duties imposed upon them, and the fact that the inhabitants cannot be persuaded that honestly answering the various census questions will not in some way increase the amount of their taxes. That no such objection may lie against the census of 1884, the law provides that it shall be taken in the month of June, or more than a month after the completion of the assessment, and by enumerators appointed specially for that purpose. The enumerators are to be appointed after the first Monday in April, and on or before the first Monday in May. The appointments in cities are to be made by common councils, and in townships by township boards.

The enumeration is to commence on the first day of June, and be completed in the month of June. It is to be of date June 1, or just four years after the National census of 1880.

After the enumeration is completed the population schedule will be publicly reviewed, but no unauthorized person should be allowed to examine, or in any way to ascertain the facts contained in any the other schedules. If an enumerator shall communicate to any person not authorized to receive the same, any statistics of property or business included in his return he will be subject to a fine of three hundred dollars, or thirty days' imprisonment in the county jail, or both fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court. This clause is necessary for the protection of individual interests. Men naturally hesitate, if they do not altogether refuse to answer the questions relating to their private business required by census laws, but there is no excuse for concealment when assured that their answers will be treated as confidential. The census of business will be tabulated by the secretary of state so as to show the aggregates for state, counties, townships, cities, and wards, but the tables will in no instance expose the operations or business of an individual, firm, or corporation.

Enumerators will receive for their services two dollars and fifty cents per day for the time actually and necessarily engaged in the canvass and in the review of the population schedule, and ten cents per mile for going to the office of the county clerk to obtain the necessary blank schedules and ten cents per mile for carrying the returns to the office of the county clerk The amount due each enumerator will be calculated by the clerk and paid by the county treasurer on the certificate of the clerk. Before the county clerk can certify the amount due an enumerator, he is required to satisfy himself that the returns are properly made out and duly certified. He will "closely examine each census sheet for omissions, erasures, interlineations, and other defects, including careless or imperfect entries, and a torn or soiled condition of the sheets, causing indistinctness in the entries. Every sheet thus defaced will be rejected as not 'properly made out' as required by law."

It will be seen from the foregoing that a high order of intelligence will be necessary for the proper taking of the census under the present law, and it is hoped that those authorized to make the appointments will select only those persons for enumerators who are in every respect thoroughly competent.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

NEW HAVEN News: The following advertisement was printed in the Morning News a couple of days ago:

BOY WANTED—Good to canvass required; $3 weekly employment. Apply to G. B. S. HUBBARD, Printers' War house, 379 State street.

The Morning News received the following notice last night:

BORN—In this city, Jan. 4, a son to Mr. and Mrs. G. B. E. HUBBARD.

DR. REEVES, of Wheeling, stated in a paper read before the American Public Health Association that if you "count the number of deaths in a community for any given period, and multiply it by thirteen—the estimated number of sick you have on hand for each death—you have the average total of sick persons cared for at an expense much greater than would have been necessary for their support in health."

THE Medical Times and Gazette having recently referred to the value of adder's poison as a curative agent in lockjaw, Dr. Richard Heule calls attention to the fact that in 1874 there were 1,438 persons exposed to yellow fever who were inoculated with adder venom, not one of whom died, although seven were attacked with the disease. The account of the matter, written by a nephew of Baron Humboldt, appeared in the Medical Digest.

M. RUEL is a sort of French Hollo way. He began life by selling medicines, and then became the largest manufacturer of them in France, his wealth being estimated at 25,000,000 francs. One of his charitable enterprises was to start a restaurant for the poor in the Rue de Rochechouart, Paris, at which a hearty dinner can be obtained for ten cents, and of which an average of 3,000 paupers avail themselves daily. He has now, from equally humane motives, built the Hotel Beau Regard, at Cannes, where invalids compelled to go there for their health can have board and lodging for from seven to twelve francs a day.

VICTOR HUGO is in excellent health, but suffers from eczema. His daughter, which he does not like to show or confess, isolates him. His receptions are, like Lucullus' feasts, of Homeric splendor, and he is very fond of children. He has a collection of photographs of women and children, 500,000 images, four cabinets for them, filled, and three in addition for plans, 250,000 more, and several cabinets for manuscripts, 3,000 of which are unpublished. Besides the original manuscripts of his own works, he has a collection of autographs, 4,000 letters, and 1,000 drawings by celebrated artists, all of which he has received as presents.

THE jewelry of Mrs. John W. Mackey has been amply described in Paris journals. Many of the stones are antique and the ornaments in general are said to be characterized as much by the artistic beauty of their workmanship as by the splendor of the gems whereof they are composed. Perhaps it is the famous set of sapphires which was exhibited at the Parisian Universal Exhibition of 1878. It is valued at 300,000 francs, and comprises diadem, bracelets, fan, necklace, bracelets, and aigrette. The necklace has five rows, the pearls in the lowest row being of the size of the largest knickerbocky, and those in the uppermost being larger than a large pea. Each pearl is perfect in color and shape, the strings having been matched with the greatest care. The clasp is a sapphire set with diamonds. A set of turquoises is unique, so large and fine in color are the gems. They are said to surpass the parure of the sumptuous belonging to the Empress of Russia. For the hair there is a long garland of pearls and leaves in diamonds, studded with diamond dewdrops. One bracelet is a diamond serpent that encircles the arm above the elbow five times; it is formed of a single jewel very large diamond, 200 in number. All these treasures are not kept at the residence of Mrs. Mackey, but in a bank. They are contained in a small chest of metal, closed with a secret spring. The interior of this chest is lined with red velvet and is divided into three compartments, each filled with a series of pounds of trays. The value of the contents cannot be less than a million.

What Was Left.

The news letter of a school committee man turning out in the face was the bane of his attempt to puzzle the boys. The pieces why his colleagues left him out in the cold was the sneer of the boys. The reason why his colleagues left him out in the cold was the sneer of the boys. The reason why his colleagues left him out in the cold was the sneer of the boys. The reason

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, · · MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

Owen O'Donnell's fine residence on Beaver Island burned last Friday.

The Frankfort Express has evidently engaged a new humorist recently.

It is anticipated that a company will be organized at Bellaire with a capital of $50,000 for the manufacture of the Harriman patent table.

Grand Rapids and Allegan were both visited by very destructive fires last week. The loss of the latter town is nearly half a million dollars.

We have received from the press of the Traverse Bay Eagle the proceedings of the Western Michigan Press Association, at its fifth annual meeting, Aug. 28 31, 1883, at Reed City, Mich.

A syndicate of land owners who hold hundreds of acres of good farming lands in the vicinity of Cheboygan has been formed to pay the expenses of an immigration commissioner to reside in New York this summer to induce immigrants to locate in their section.

The new manager of the Charlotte Leader adopts as a motto, "when the press compromises truth it ceases to be the guardian of liberty," and in the same page adds sixteen years to the age of the paper, making it volume thirty instead of fourteen. How does the editor harmonize these matters?

A Cross Village correspondent writes to the Harbor Springs Independent that Capt. Neil Gallagher and Paddy Frank were over from Beaver Island Thursday, with a double team. While the team were leaping across a crack, the sleigh caught in the ice in such a manner that Mr. Frank was thrown out and his right leg was badly fractured.

A horse belonging to and occupied by John Jock and his wife, a couple of aged Hollanders, in Missaukee county was recently burned, and the charred bodies of the inmates were found in the ruins. There are grave suspicions of murder and incendiarism, as there were known to be several hundred dollars in the house at the time.

Another good boy has gone wrong by reading dime novels. James Riley, a New York messenger boy, was found on the streets a raving maniac. At first it was supposed that overwork in carrying messages had done it, but when he was heard to say "I'm Butts, the boy detective," the cause was plain. He has been in the habit of carrying a dime novel in his pocket with which to beguile the hours when delivering dispatches.

Fruit Prospects.

The following reports from Antrim and Grand Traverse counties, to the secretary of state, indicate to some extent the effect of the severe winter on fruit trees in this region:

From W. W. Johnson, Snowflake, Antrim county: The thermometer here indicated 13° below zero on the night of February 28. Last night (March 4) it showed 22 below. The peach buds were destroyed in the valleys by a cold night in January (29 below) but on the hills they were all right until this last cold spell. Have not time to learn to-day the extent of the injury, if any. Am inclined to believe, however, that the crop will be only a partial failure in orchards on high ground. Apples are all right.

From Geo. Parmelee, Old Mission, Grand Traverse county—Previous to the "cold snap," the last of February, there was no damage to sweet cherry buds, and but very little to peaches. Yesterday (March 5) I found a few sweet cherry buds killed, though not enough to be missed in the crop, but of peach buds, except on seedlings, quite a number are killed, while some seedlings have suffered no loss. I think pear buds are all right, but the trees did not set full, and a large crop cannot be expected, though a few trees are showing well. Have not been able to go about much, but think the above represents fairly the conditions about here. Last fall I passed through several counties in this vicinity, and found every where a more or less unhealthy foliage, and have little faith in a heavy crop of apples on this account. A few varieties promise an average crop. Among these are the Baldwin, Duchess of Oldenburg, Tetofsky, and Hubbardston Nonsuch.

From J. G. Ramsdell, Traverse City, Grand Traverse county—Up to March 1 no material damage had been done in the county, although on one occasion the temperature had gone as low as 20° below zero. On March 2 the thermometer marked 22 degrees below zero at sunrise. What effect this may have upon fruit it is impossible to tell before the weather moderates. Cutting branches and bringing them into a warm room to thaw is too uncertain a test to report upon.

Curries.

Babua seemed to fancy that I, as a zoologist, must take an equal interest in every class of animal life, and that therefore, their application to the end and purpose of curry must be an important natural problem. So, if on Monday the vertebrata were represented by some delicate fish in my curry, on Tuesday this was replaced by noble prawns and shrimps, or by small crabs, as representing the crustacea. On Wednesday cuttle-fish (sepia or lolign) would appear, the most highly organized of the molluscs; while on Thursday we condescended to some edible univalve or to baked oysters. On Friday the worthy race of radiata were represented by starfish or echinodermata, the eggs of the searchin, or the gelatinous texture of a holothuria, (trepang.) On Saturday I fully expected to have come down to the zoophytes, and to find medusæ or corals, sponges or actinize in my bowl of curry. My cook, however, clinging to an antiquated system, evidently regarded zoophytes as plants, and supplied their place with some winged creature—bats or birds, or sometimes the fleshy bodies of a horned beetle or moth. On Sundays, of course, he laid himself out to give me some special treat, and my curry was of the best, containing a fowl or a fat iguana, occasionally even a snake, which I at first mistook for an eel. Babua was evidently convinced of the close affinities of birds with reptiles, and thought it made no difference whether he sent the earlier or the more recent type of sauropsis to table. Happily for my European proclivities, I was gradually initiated into the mongrel mysteries of curry, and commonly knew nothing of its constituents till after I had swallowed it in blind resignation. Besides, the thick sauce in which they were disguised contained such a mixture of spices, with particles of roots, fruits and leaves, that nothing short of anatomical analysis would have revealed the nature of the first elements, and this I carefully avoided.—A Visit to Ceylon, Huecke!

—Pine sawdust, highly compressed, has been successfully used to make up center frames of carriage wheels. It is said to be so solid that it will bear a pressure equal to twenty-three tons per square inch. As sawdust has also been used for partitions and bricks, its application to the production of complex carvings and mouldings does not seem to be far off. This opens up quite a new market for sawdust, which has hitherto been a comparatively waste product.—Boston Post.

O. W. SMITH,
ELECTRO-PLATER,
Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.
Every plating in Gold and Silver. Any article of Jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order.

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY
has purchased the
Ladies' and Children's Furnishing Goods
Lately owned by Fisher & Inwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and add as many more as possible. Call and see my stock

Sewing Machines CHEAP.
A few fine sewing machines for sale at ten dollars each. Call soon and have your pick.
EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED
D. S. WAY.

FOR SALE.
A TINE
Pair of Oxen
Yoke, Chain, and Sled, for Cash.
Come Early.
J. MILO EATON.

New Goods.
At Cost
FOR CASH
For the Next 30 Days.
MISS L. SPAULDING,
Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

JOHN NICHOLLS,
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,
Manufacturer of and Dealer in
HARDWOOD AND PINE
LUMBER!
ALSO
Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades,
WAGON TONGUES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.
LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

O. B. WEED & CO.
Are headquarters for
DRUGS
CHEMICALS,
Patent Medicines, all Kinds.
Imported and Domestic Perfumery.
Toilet Articles,
AND FANCY GOODS.
None but Pure Medicines
Kept in stock.
Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our Store is in Bartholomew's new
Opera Block

JOSEPH HYLAND,
CHARLEVOIX, Mich.,

Boiler Maker,
Sheet-Iron Worker,
and manufacturer of
Hyland's Patent Fireman.
Dealer in all kinds of
SECOND-HAND MACHINERY.
Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and Repairing of Boilers promptly attended to.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect January, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

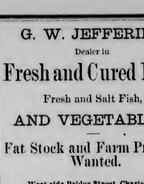
STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv.		7 40am	7 15pm
Richmond	2 37pm	10 32	9 52
Winchester	3 31	11 27	10 46
Ridgeville	4 11	11 57	11 21
Fort Wayne, ar	4 42	12 25pm	11 50am
Fort Wayne, lv.	2 47	2 50		8 05am
Kendallville	3 55	3 42		9 17
Sturgis	5 13	5 11		10 35
Vicksburg	6 11	6 07		11 34
Kalamazoo, ar	6 52	6 52		12 25pm
Kalamazoo, lv	7 02	7 12		1 20
Gd Rapids, ar	9 02	9 22		3 55
Gd Rapids, lv		9 30		4 15
Det H & M cros	7 30	10 05		5 05
Howard City	8 17	11 01		6 27
Big Rapids	9 03	12 10pm		7 52
Reed City	10 17	1 52		9 58
Cadillac, ar	11 25	3 21		11 30
Cadillac, lv		3 28		9 50
Traverse City, ar		6 10		12 50am
Cadillac, lv		4 17		12 50am
Manistee		5 45		12 55
Boyne Falls		5 47		2 20
Petoskey, ar		6 21		3 14
Harbor Springs		7 15		9 15
Mackinaw City		9 40		6 00
St. Ignace		10 00		8 50
Marquette				7 00am 5 00pm
Negaunee, ar				9 12 7 08

GOING SOUTH

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv.				5 15pm 7 30am
Marquette				9 00 11 15
St. Ignace				5 45am 6 45pm
Mackinaw City				6 10 9 15
Harbor Springs				7 00 4 30
Petoskey, lv.				7 38 41 33
Boyne Falls				8 15 12 25am
Mancelona				8 39 12 11
Kalkaska				9 53 2 58
Traverse City, lv				5 45am
Cadillac, ar				11 37 5 20
Cadillac, lv			3 30pm	12 07 5 50
Reed City			4 39	1 12pm 7 16
Big Rapids			5 47	2 21 8 47
Howard City			6 08	2 35 8 47
Det H & M cros			7 25	3 52 10 05
Gd Rapids, ar			7 40	4 05 10 25
Gd Rapids, lv		6 25pm		12 30pm 12 30pm
Kalamazoo, ar		8 22		6 32 2 21
Kalamazoo, lv		8 37		6 52 2 39
Vicksburg		9 07		7 22 3 09
Sturgis		10 01		8 16 4 12
Kendallville		11 18		9 35 5 31
Fort Wayne, ar		12 25pm		10 52 6 42
Fort Wayne, lv.		12 52	5 37am	12 05pm
Ridgeville		1 30	6 10	12 43
Winchester		2 08	6 47	1 20
Richmond, ar		2 57	7 35	2 05
Cincinnati, ar		7 40pm	12 50pm	7 30pm

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Asst. Gen'l P. A., Grand Rapids, Mich.

G. W. JEFFERIES,
Dealer in
Fresh and Cured Meat
Fresh and Salt Fish,
AND VEGETABLES.
Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.
West side Bridge Street, Charlevoix.



NEW GOODS.
I am pleased to say that my
Spring Stock
is ready for inspection. Come and see them, and when you want a suit of clothes that are JUST IN STYLE, you will know where to find them. My stock is all of the LATE STYLES,
AND
Price to Correspond With the Times.
GEO. W. MILLER.

C. R. BELLINGER
carries the largest and finest stock of
JEWELRY,
Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best time-piece ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges.

Buy note paper and envelopes with a view of Charlevoix, at O. B. Weed & Co.'s drug store.

Bring your Election Tickets to the JOURNAL OFFICE to be Printed.

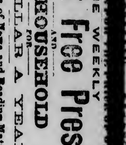
$1 A YEAR. $

ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR. $

THE WEEKLY
Detroit Free Press
AND
THE HOUSEHOLD
ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.
Ten Large Pages of News and Reading Matter. The Greatest of Dollar Weeklies.
The Free Press Household Department is unique and entertaining. Its Serial Stories are of unusual interest. Its Miscellaneous Reading is bright and pure. Its Editorials are able and fearless. The Free Press Weekly is the cheapest paper published. Address FREE PRESS CO., Detroit, Mich.

$1 A YEAR. $



ONE DOLLAR.

$1 A YEAR. $

Old Newspapers for Sale

The Oldest Established Business on South Arm

S. G. ISAMAN,
South Arm, Mich.
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
A Large and Well-Selected Stock Always on Hand.
Dry Goods, Ready-made Clothing, Boots and Shoes, Groceries, Provisions, Crockery, Glassware, Hardware, Drugs, Stationery, Notions, &c,
AT LOW PRICES
PRODUCE OF ALL KINDS TAKEN IN EXCHANGE FOR GOODS.
Give Me a Call. S. G. ISAMAN.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,
DEALER IN
Hardware
FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.
Charlevoix, Mich.

AT COST
All kinds of
Boots, Shoes, and Rubber Goods
The Finest Line of
French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' Wear
Ever brought to Charlevoix.
Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt Shoe
They have no Superior.
CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY
And Satisfaction Guaranteed.
L. B. CONNOR, opposite Bridge St. H. CHARLEVOIX

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 20, 1884.

Business Announcements.

A genuine article in Butter at B. Hyland's.

Any amount of Sap Buckets at bot prices, at L. D. Bartholomew's.

The best oysters of the season, go cooked cakes, at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

Upright, Emrey & Co. have just received a choice lot of English Breakfast Meck... the finest sample ever offered to the trade.

Upright, Emrey & Co. are noted for their Fresh Groceries and Flavoring Ex...

Fresh Coffees, Teas, Spices, Crack... Nuts, Foreign and Domestic Dried Fruits, Canned Goods received this week. Upright & Co.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of observations of the thermometer at the JOURNAL office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m., each day, for the week ending yesterday:

	7AM	2PM
Monday	18	26
Tuesday	20	34
Wednesday	18	24
Thursday	16	32
Friday	26	29
Saturday	19	34
Sunday	30	42

Provision Market.

Retail prices to consumers, as corrected every Monday evening by UPRIGHT, EMREY & Co., general dealers:

FLOUR, per bbl, $6.00, $7.00, and $8.00.
BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per owt, $1.50.
OATMEAL, per owt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, $1.75.
MEAL, per bus, $1.20.
OATS, per bus, 40c.
GROUND FEED, per owt, $1.60.
APPLES, per bus, $1.00.
POTATOES, per bus, 50c.
ONIONS, per bus, $1.00.
BUTTER, per lb, 25c.
EGGS, per doz, 20@22c.
LARD, per lb, 10@11c.
HAMS, sm. Sizes, 12½c.
SALT PORK, 12c; Beef, 9c.
CHEESE, 12c.
WHITE WINTER OIL, 25c.
FARMERS PRODUCE in good demand.

Fresh Meats from the Market.

BEEF, best steak, 25@30c; pork steak, 20 ham, sugar cured, 15c; sausage, 15c; hams, 14c; shoulders, 12½c.
TALLOW, 6@8c.

Local News Brevities.

"Octoroon" Saturday night.

Pink fanity to-morrow night.

The business outlook is encouraging.

Won't some of our subscribers bring some wood.

Geo. W. Jefferies returned home yesterday.

Read L. L. Carr's new advertisement this week.

Some of our correspondents are taking a long rest.

Mike Linsey's robust form is again visible on our streets.

C. Y. Cook and family returned to Charlevoix on Tuesday.

Harrison Miller expects to return to Beaver Island this week.

The best laugh of the season,—at opera house to-morrow night.

Strangers are accumulating around our hotels and boarding houses.

R. W. Kane will visit Kalamazoo and other places south this week.

J. A. Cameron, of Boyne City, gave the JOURNAL a call on Wednesday.

Fred. Smith and Al. Washburne will visit friends in Flint this week.

Refreshments at opera house to-morrow night after the entertainment.

E. H. Green is to muster a post of the G. A. R. at Boyne City to-night.

The family of Wm. Hamlin rejoices over a ten pound girl, born Tuesday morning.

We have sampled Upright, Emery & Co.'s mince-meat, and know them to be fine.

John Connor, book-keeper for the Pine Lake Iron Co., goes to Chicago this week.

Charlie Mason, who cut his leg so severely a few weeks ago, is making a good recovery.

Do not forget the entertainment at the opera house to-morrow evening. Admission 25 cents.

While coasting one day this week Bert Mason run through a fence and had his nose broken.

It has been intimated that the portrait on our first page might easily be mistaken for our genial prosecuting attorney.

Robert Miller's wife was called to her father's home this week by the sickness of her father.

Charlevoix can boast of another live young attorney. He will reside with J. M. Clark for a few years.

D. Sherwood & Co. are enlarging their store, to make room for a large spring stock of boots and shoes.

The first of the season,—a young man fell off the pier, and was thoroughly wet, yesterday about noon.

A fly-wheel weighing nearly half a ton, was cast at the Charlevoix foundry last Thursday, for Bernard Burns.

Messrs. C. A. Reinhart and Merritt Smith, of the East Jordan dramatic club, gave the JOURNAL a call last Thursday.

Henry O. Johnson and Florence M. Cole joined their fortunes on the 17th. May their investment prove a profitable and happy one.

L. G. Evans finds laziness good on his Charlevoix and Elk Rapids express line this winter and spring. Last week two extra trips were required to accommodate the traffic of this line.

Will our correspondents please remember and sign their names to all communications? We do not require them to publish, but it is necessary to know the author of all communications published.

We have been told that the Peak Family are from Alaska. If this true, they are a long distance from home, and this alone is sufficient to excite curiosity as to what sort of people they are. The only way to settle the question is to go and see.

"I am alpha and omega," is the text announced for the morning service at M. E. church next Sunday. In the evening a temperance lecture will be delivered on the theory that "if we can control the buyer, we will have a wonderful grip on the drinker."

The East Jordan dramatic club will present the four act drama, the "Octoroon," at the opera house on Saturday evening. The Enterprise, in noticing the performance in East Jordan, pronounce it a success, equal to the performance of most professional traveling troupes.

O. W. Smith has invented two articles likely to come into general use, and he may yet reap fame and wealth from them. One is his patent sleigh-brake, mentioned in another column, and the other is a paint-brush holder. This latter will relieve painters of much of the strain on the fingers, and in house-painting will add a large percentage to a man's work. We predict a large sale.

The concert given by the Band of Hope at the M. E. church last evening was a success in every respect. The little ones did well in both songs and recitations, and their performance is a great credit to the ladies in charge of the entertainment. The ladies desire to thank Prof. Bice and others for the active interest shown in the exercises. A collection was taken, amounting to $4.46, for which the society also return thanks.

"There has been good sleighing at Charlevoix since December, and an unprecedented amount of wood, bark, posts, ties and logs have been banked around Pine lake. One Charlevoix firm has on hand 25,000 cedar posts 20,000 cedar ties, 6,000 cords of wood and 400,000 feet of hardwood logs, etc. New lumber and shingle mills are being built at different points, and the coming navigation season promises to be the most active and profitable in the history of Charlevoix county."—Evening News.

A recent letter from Westfield, N. Y., contains the following in penise of our winter weather: "I have been very much interested in the daily thermometric observations taken at your office. I have compared them carefully with our temperature here, and find for the month of January the average temperature to be eight degrees lower here on the south shore of lake Erie than at your place, three degrees farther north. Lowest temperature here 24° below. February temperature very nearly alike. In the last cold spell of over one week's duration, you have had the temperature (on Sunday, March 2) three degrees lower than here; the rest of the time, at morning observation about the same, but at afternoon observation you have it warmer than with us. These observations speak well for your latitude in winter."

The Village Finances.

To satisfy those who may be inclined to watch with suspicion the actions of the new council, we give below a statement of the condition of the village treasury at the present time, and also the indebtedness to be provided for this year. The report of the treasurer shows the following:

Cash on hand, March, 1883..	$400 63
Received from saloon license	297 00
Received from all other sources	47 65
Total	$745 28
Total expenses	743 95
Balance on hand	$1 33

In addition to this amount there is $10 in the hands of the clerk, and $14 in the hands of the marshal, making a total of $25.33 available funds at this date.

The total indebtedness of the village, to be provided for by the council, is something like the following, as shown in a report by clerk Mayne at the last meeting:

Unpaid orders	$8 78
Salaries and bills allowed	90 05
Amount to become due for clearing snow from sidewalks	95 00
Interest on park bond, due June 8	59 50
Balance on fire engine, due July 12	275 00
Hose and firemens supplies due Oct. 19, including interest	$81 92
Total	$1,013 65

Deducting from this the $25.33 cash on hand, leaves $988.32 to be provided for, in addition to the other necessary expenses to be incurred from time to time. As this all comes due before the December taxes are collected, it may be necessary to call in a portion of the tax early in the year. And if the taxes are increased this year, it should be credited to the proper source.

Alcohol and Tobacco.

Rev. Geo. W. Bell discussed the above subject before the liberal club at the opera house Monday evening, showing their evil effects upon the human organism, and classing them with narcotic poisons. The cause of drunkenness he attributed to the very prevalent use of tobacco, and produced statistics showing that many who had committed crime while intoxicated, acknowledged that they commenced with tobacco. He said that tobacco creates a desire for stimulants. The evil effects of both upon the constitution were shown, and medical and scientific authorities quoted. The lecture was illustrated with an experiment with alcohol.

Remarks by members of the club generally admitted the evil effects shown by the speaker, though some were not prepared to admit all the statements made.

The club wish to return thanks to Messrs. Bice, Wheat, and Carr, and the young ladies who furnished the music. Also to W. C. Newman for his recitation of Shamus O'Brien, and to Dan Rhoades who enlivened the occasion with his banjo.

Log Broken.

Yesterday afternoon, while Jos. McElroy and Eddy Stewart, a fifteen year old son of Alex. Stewart, were driving to the woods for a load of logs and posts, the boy dropped his logs down through the sleigh, and one was caught by a stump, breaking it just above the ankle. Mr. M. turned the team homeward, and on the way was fortunately met by Dr. Preston, who gave the case his attention, and in fifteen minutes from the time of the accident the doctor was at work on the broken limb, which will doubtless make a quick recovery.

Rumors from Hayes.

That two Indians, after imbibing too much "body rot" at Ironton one evening last week, started to cross Pine Lake, and were frozen before reaching the opposite shore.

That the daughter of one of our prominent Hayesites was married to an engineer on one of our inland boats.

That our treasurer has not been very successful in getting in all the taxes of this town. Money seems to be scarce in spite of the republican business boom.

That there is to be telephonic communication established between like Michigan and our "corner grocery."

That if some of the inhabitants of Hayes, when they went to Charlevoix, would imbibe less "body-rot," it would be better for themselves and families.

Lakeview school closes next Friday after a most successful term of four months. The teacher, though young, is favorably mentioned by all the patrons of the school.

Sugar-making will soon have a boom.

D. H. Pierce had the misfortune to lose a valuable ox he was wintering for Josiah Gibson.

Sudden Death at Norwood.

Last Monday it was announced here that Mrs. Eva Johnson, wife of Nathan Johnson, and youngest daughter of Hon. Richard Knight, of Norwood, died suddenly at her father's residence that morning. The facts as near as we can learn were that on Sunday morning she had attended church with her husband, and on her return home, not feeling well, had laid down to rest and sleep, remaining the afternoon and evening. At 12 and again at 3 o'clock Monday morning, she called for water, which was given and then she dropped to sleep. Two hours later, her husband spoke to her, and getting no answer, was surprised to find her dead.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were married Dec. 27. A portion of the time since has been spent visiting friends, but for a few weeks they have lived with her parents. She has been in good health at all times, which makes the announcement more severely felt by the community and friends.

Smith's Patent Sleigh Brake.

This is an invention recently introduced to our business men, the inventor and proprietors being prominent residents of this village. If it always works as well as at the trial last Thursday, there is no doubt of its success and value both to dealers and users. It can be applied to any sleigh, is simple in construction, always ready for use, cannot get out of repair, and makes it possible to draw a heavy load down a steep hill without danger to team or load. The smallest team can hold the largest load on a very steep hill; the track is left in good condition, the ice being left where broken, and not dragged down as with a chain. The brake also prevents sideways movement of the sleigh. Arrangements are being made for introducing it, and we have no doubt it will come into general use next winter. For particulars call on Chas. Ely.

Historical Society.

Over 60 of our citizens gathered at O. S. Washburn's on Tuesday evening, at the regular meeting of this society. The opening exercise was an instrumental solo, by Luna Washburn.

Mrs. Mayne followed with select readings, both amusing and instructive.

Jos. Dixon gave a recitation and the usual intermission followed.

After the intermission, Fred. W. Mayne read a selection from McCauley, touching the competitive civil service examination of England for her official appointments in India.

Miss Maud Lovejoy recited "The Chieftain's daughter."

The next meeting will be held at O. D. Wood's, the second at N. Ainglee's, the third at Bridge street house, and fourth and last for the season, at A. Butters' on April 8th.

Ironton.

Wood is coming in lively.

Town caucus next Saturday.

John Otis went to Marcelona Sunday evening.

The furnace makes its usual run from week to week.

Rev. Mr. May preached at the school house Thursday evening.

Rev. Mr. Blake preached to an attentive audience last Sunday.

Geo. Burton has a display of fine arts at the school house.

The school exhibition came off Friday evening with J. M. Harris, principal, and 120 children as actors.

Quarterly meeting next Saturday and Sunday. Don't forget to bring your dues. [Our correspondent does not state what society meets.]

A. F. Draper and James Draper, an uncle from southern Michigan, visited his sister, Mrs. Walter Manney, this week.

Death of James Otis.

We learn that Mr. James Otis, superintendent of the Pine Lake Iron Co.'s furnace at Ironton, died at that place at two o'clock yesterday morning, as a result of his injuries received on Feb. 22d. Mr. Otis has been constantly under the care of Dr. Carlstein, who gave up all his other patients, and devoted his whole time, day and night, to this case. For the first two weeks there were hopes of recovery, but since that time he has grown weaker quite fast, until death relieved him of his suffering.

We do not know to what extent this will effect the workings of the affairs of the company, but from what we have heard of him, it will be difficult to find a more active, thorough manager than Mr. Otis.

Episcopal Service.

Rev. E. J. Babcock, general missionary of the diocese of western Michigan, expects to hold service and preach at the school house in this village on Monday evening, March 24th, at 7:30 o'clock. He would be glad to see all who will come and especially would he like to meet personally all communicants, and all others who are in any way connected with or interested in the Episcopal church, after the service, to confer with reference to more frequent occasional services.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by Cutright Bros., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, March 18, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

John Nichols and wife to H. L. Chapman, lots 1 and 2, sec 6, $150.

Daniel Hudson and wife to Jesse B. Hamlin, s e ¼, sec 24, $1,000.

Orin B. Hogan and wife to Joseph Hyland, n w ¼, 11-34-8, $1,000.

Mary N. Dow to George C. Kendall, land, Charlevoix, $2,305.85, $1,500.

Frank Ash and wife to Nettie Karlson, 14-5, block B, Advance, $150.

Born.

HAMLIN—On Tuesday, March 11, a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hamlin.

Married.

JOHNSON—COLE—At the M. E. parsonage, March 17, 1884, by Rev. J. L. Hilings, Mr. Henry O. Johnson and Miss Florence M. Cole, all of Charlevoix.

CROTHERS—NEFF—At the M. E. parsonage, by Rev. J. L. Hilings, Mr. Jos. Crothers, of East Jordan, and Frona B. Neff, of Clare Valley, Mich.

Died.

OTIS—At Ironton, March 19, 1884, Mr. James Otis, superintendent of the Pine Lake Iron Co.'s furnace, from injuries received on Feb. 22d.

JOHNSON—At Norwood, March 17, 1884, Mrs. Eva Johnson, wife of Nathan Johnson, and youngest daughter of Richard Knight.

Thousands are being cured of CATARRH every year with Dr. Cozzens' Cure, that the doctors had given up and said could not be cured. 25 cents a bottle. Sold by Dr. Cronce

Fresh Oysters
Just Received.
300 pounds Candy and Nuts.
Two Barrels Fresh Butter.
Golden Thread Sauer Kraut.
Two Cases Fresh Oysters, 25 and 35 Cents.
AT L. L. CARR'S.

TOWNSHIP CAUCUS.
A township caucus will be held at the Block School House in the TOWNSHIP OF MARION, on Saturday, the 29th day of March, inst, at one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of nominating township officers.

FOR SALE.
Eighty acres of land, with or without improvements. Also one seven year old horse, one pair two years old steers, one good work horse, one three year old cow, three year old heifer, and one yearling cow. Inquire the above stock is for. Inquire of the above stock is for. Inquire of A. A. Rawson north shore of Pine Lake.
A. A. RAWSON.
3m

HALL'S Catarrh Cure
Is Recommended by Physicians!
$100 REWARD $100 A CASE!
We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance. Remember, it is unlike any catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. Circulars, testimonials, &c., free. Send for circulars. If you have a cough, tickling in throat, or symptoms of the above disease, use your druggist for it, and accept no substitute or imitation. If he cannot supply you, send to us and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.
F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.
Dr. Cronce, Agt., Charlevoix. 27

A QUESTION.

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why doth the spring return
To scatter flowers beneath our feet,
And the wastes of winter spurn?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why doth the buried grain
Send forth new harvests for men to reap,
And willow the spreading plain?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why the ocean's ceaseless flow,
Where tiny planets all their journeys keep
And never weary grow?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why do we hope for Love's,
When we approach the mercy seat
And ask to be forgiven?

If death be an eternal sleep,
When will justice come,
To those who toil for other's meet,
And receive but scanty crumbles?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why did the angels say
The precious boon to bear to Abraham's seat,
While the rich man was in woe?

If death be an eternal sleep,
Why was man ever born,
And why an end for life's vain keep,
If there is no coming morn?

LADY BEST'S MISTAKE.

They lived in a creeper-covered cottage, nestling among verdure in the highly cultivated valley of one of the Home counties. There was a small dairy farm attached to it, upon which Lady Best bestowed all her leisure hours, and thereby managed to add no inconsiderable sum to her income, which since her husband's death had been rather limited.

With the money derived from this source she had been able to send her only son, Arthur, to Oxford—Arthur, who was the pride of her eye, the one only being for whom she really cared. She had given him a first-class education, and it had not been received on stony ground, for Arthur was clever, and a book-worm, too much so for worldly purposes, since he had indulged in study and contemplation till he had become a dreamer. By the time he reached the age of 25 it had been declared by all the neighbors, and Lady Best's circle generally, that Arthur would never do any good for himself in life—a hard verdict, considering that he had not a single vice, and was handsome and manly looking. Not that his habits and pursuits were exactly manly; fishing was the only sport in which he had ever been known to indulge, and he spent his time for the most part in wandering listlessly about the valley, wearing clothes of a somewhat æsthetic cut, which was very exactly manly; fishing was the only sport in which he had ever been known to indulge, and he spent his time for the most part in wandering listlessly about the valley, wearing clothes of a somewhat æsthetic cut, which was very exactly unlike his neighbors, a slouching felt hat on his head, and a book—generally poetry—in his hand.

Idolizing Arthur though she did, it depressed Lady Best not a little to see him take to an effeminate, drawling style of life; and since he had now wasted more than a year in this sort of dream, she began to despair of seeing him embark in any of the professions for which she had hoped his education would have fitted him. What she was to do—how she was to retrieve the current of events—she did not know.

Was he in love? Had he had a disappointment? Lady Best sometimes asked her till she was tired of answering. The question, however, at last suggested a remedy. Why should not a touch of the very disease from which people thought he was suffering, bring about his cure?

Girls! she would surround him with girls; of course, while she had a due regard for good looks, never forgetting that, in her estimation, nothing made the eyes glisten with so much pleasure as the sight of gold.

So Lady Best gave a tennis party, and invited all the beauty of the county, including two or three heiresses; but before the afternoon was well over, Arthur had disappeared. He had wandered down the valley, away from "the noise," as he called the unusual laughter of these maidens, presuming himself to return as soon as they should all be gone.

Lady Best was disappointed, but not crushed; she would try again, this time in a quieter, but, she hoped, more effectual way.

"Arthur was out so much, she was at times very dull," she told him; "more over she wanted some assistance in the feeding one or two dairy rebecas. Her eldest brother's daughter Hannah Milton—aged 18, was she understood, a decidedly practical, energetic girl. She had not seen her since she was a baby, but she should like to invite her on a long visit, and make her a companion. Had Arthur any objection?"

"No; none whatever. Of course his mother was perfectly free to do as she liked."

But would he be civil and kind to this unknown cousin when she came? "If she pleased him, certainly; but doubtless, she would in no way interfere with his pursuits."

Not very encouraging if Lady Best had any serious intentions in reference to Miss Hannah Milton, were she still obscure in parochialities—she believed would sooner or later come into the possession of at least a hundred thousand pounds.

Not a word of this did she, however, utter to Arthur; but, with a further display of diplomacy, wrote an affectionate letter to her niece, asking her to come and stay at the cottage as long as she could endure the friendship and kindness of their impecunious life.

Miss Hannah Milton was moved by receiving of that letter, and decided to avail herself of the invitation. She loved everything that grew her practical tendencies more especially as her father was going abroad on a visit, and was to be away for two months. She might be expected to arrive, by her reckoning, at the end of June, for the "third day," was then the end of June.

To this announcement it followed a postscript that she would her object aunt did not object to living animals, as of course she could not leave hers all alone at Milton Hall during her own and her father's absence.

Lady Best was delighted at the success of her letter, and wrote again to say that both she and Arthur were particularly fond of pets.

Arthur had read Miss Milton's letter, and merely said that he hoped the dogs, if they were dogs, were thoroughbreds; he hated everything that was not perfect.

So, till the 5th of July, the Cottage, whenever Arthur went out—for it could not be expected that he should endure fuss and clutter—was convulsed with preparations for the arrival of the heiress-cousin and her retinue. A bedroom was turned into a boudoir for her private use, and two bedrooms adjoining were set aside for herself and her maid.

The Cottage was one of those elastic establishments, with countless small rooms, capable of taking in a far larger number of people than its exterior would lead you to imagine.

Hannah Milton's home was in the north; it would be quite evening before she won it arrive, and Lady Best passed all that day in a state of feverish excitement, wandering from room to room. She seemed to feel that there was a destiny at stake; while Arthur—the individual who was in all probability the most concerned—was perfectly cool and unbothered, and passed the hours in his habitual placid enjoyment of idleness.

The mystic shade of twilight was already creeping up the valley when wheels were heard approaching the cottage, and Lady Best went out into the porch to receive her guest. Fain would she have persuaded Arthur to accompany her, but he pretended an armchair by the window.

At last the carriage is at the door, and Hannah Milton, having sprung out, is clamorously kissing her aunt.

There is nothing æsthetic or dreamy about her. She has a broad, plain, honest, open face, with fine eyes, and a large mouth full of strong-looking white teeth; and the slightest perversion to beauty, but you can see at a glance that Hannah Milton is a thoroughly good, kind, sincere woman. Her voice is very loud, but it has the ring of a true heart. It frightens Lady Best, Hannah perceives; she will not do. What will Arthur say? Will he run away from Hannah, or allow himself to be subdued by her?

But, till the 5th of July, the Cottage, whenever Arthur went out—for it could not be expected that he should endure fuss and clutter—was convulsed with preparations for the arrival of the heiress-cousin and her retinue. A bedroom was turned into a boudoir for her private use, and two bedrooms adjoining were set aside for herself and her maid.

The Cottage was one of those elastic establishments, with countless small rooms, capable of taking in a far larger number of people than its exterior would lead you to imagine.

Hannah Milton's home was in the north; it would be quite evening before she won it arrive, and Lady Best passed all that day in a state of feverish excitement, wandering from room to room. She seemed to feel that there was a destiny at stake; while Arthur—the individual who was in all probability the most concerned—was perfectly cool and unbothered, and passed the hours in his habitual placid enjoyment of idleness.

The mystic shade of twilight was already creeping up the valley when wheels were heard approaching the cottage, and Lady Best went out into the porch to receive her guest. Fain would she have persuaded Arthur to accompany her, but he pretended an armchair by the window.

At last the carriage is at the door, and Hannah Milton, having sprung out, is clamorously kissing her aunt.

There is nothing æsthetic or dreamy about her. She has a broad, plain, honest, open face, with fine eyes, and a large mouth full of strong-looking white teeth; and the slightest perversion to beauty, but you can see at a glance that Hannah Milton is a thoroughly good, kind, sincere woman. Her voice is very loud, but it has the ring of a true heart. It frightens Lady Best, Hannah perceives; she will not do. What will Arthur say? Will he run away from Hannah, or allow himself to be subdued by her?

So

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 20, 1884.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRIES.

—Grape-culture is assuming large proportions in North Carolina. One grower near Charlotte expects to ship twenty-five tons of the fruit this season.—N. Y. Tribune.

—According to the Weiss system of type-setting, recently introduced in Vienna, the type is cast in syllables, common prefixes, suffixes, etc., instead of letters, as a great saving of time is thus effected, it is claimed.

—A piece of oyster-ground off Milford, Conn., containing six hundred acres, has been sold to parties in California, who have been shipping seed oysters quite extensively to that coast to plant in San Francisco bay.—Boston Herald.

—Scientific engineers say that the bridge over East River is the last long bridge that will ever be erected, and that bad engineers known as much in 1870 as they do now, this bridge would not have been erected. Tunnels are to take the place of bridges.—N. Y. Tribune.

—The Rio Grande Sugar Company, Cape May County, N. J., have now 1,300 acres of sorghum under cultivation. They have more than doubled the capacity of their works, and look forward to a very prosperous season. The cane is growing finely, and an excellent crop is anticipated.

—A "Commission," presumably of experts, appointed by the French Society of Hygiene, has studied the condensed milk question, and reports that when it is diluted with twice or four times its weight of water it may in some cases be useful as a food for infants, but is always to be considered "incontestably inferior to good cow's milk."—Health Monthly.

—The dredging of South Carolina rivers for phosphates is a new industry of considerable importance to the territory surrounding Charleston. Some of the crude rock is shipped to Europe, but most of it is ground at home before it goes to market. At the present time the demand is great, and all the companies are working on full time.—Chicago Herald.

—An organization has been incorporated in New York, under the name of the National Horse Show Association of America, with a capital of $100,000, in shares of one hundred dollars each. This association will hold its first show of horses next fall, at which time it is announced liberal premiums will be offered for all classes of horses. It is expected that this will be the largest and most notable exhibition of horses held in this country, and will occupy the same position here that the horse shows held at the Agricultural Hall, London, do in England.—N. Y. Sun.

Those who object to the odors of the disinfectants used at the present day will find charcoal unobjectionable on this account, while it absorbs gases in a surprising way; pieces can be laid on plates and put out of sight in a sickroom.—N. Y. Times.

The scuttle, a growth common to nearly all of the States, and which has hitherto been a source of great trouble to farmers, has now been found to yield a fiber, which it is claimed, will supplement cotton in the manufacture of cloth. Cloth made from it, on trial, has been adjudged equal in texture and appearance to linen.—Chicago Journal.

—A Swiss watchmaker in Pennsylvania has completed an automatic clock, which for intricate mechanism is said to surpass the celebrated one at Strasburg. During twelve hours it plays three musical selections, and 2,022 automatic movements are made. Of course, the machinery is so arranged as to permit the entire performance of the automatons taking place every fifteen or twenty minutes.—Philadelphia Press.

—Mr. F. L. Slocum has examined the ink for writing on glass and, according to the American Journal Pharmacy, reports that it is made by mixing barium sulphate, three parts; ammonium fluoride, one part; and sulphuric acid q. s. to decompose the ammonium fluoride and make the mixture of a semi-fluid consistency. It should be prepared in a leaden dish, and kept in a gutta-percha or leaden bottle.

Patent plastering was a novelty exhibited at a recent building exhibition held in London. It is claimed for it that it saves both time and labor. The material is prepared beforehand in slabs which are fixed to the joists direct, with great speed, forming the ceiling at once. Thus, plastering which would occupy weeks to execute can be accomplished by this slab system in as many days. It is also claimed for this patent that the ceilings are fire resisting.

Turpentine is regarded by many persons as an antidote to poisoning by phosphorus. It is not the ordinary turpentine which should be given, but the acid French turpentine, or oil turpentine which has been exposed to the air long enough to have become ozonized by absorbing oxygen. If this be administered while the phosphorus is still in the stomach it changes the poison into an inert substance which resembles spermaceti. After phosphorus has entered into the circulation the only remedy is transfusion of fresh blood into the veins.—N. Y. Times.

Blood! Blood! Blood! Is a necessity to all animal life, and to be free from disease the blood must be pure. There is no doubt that Parmelee's Blood Purifier excels in the driving out of all impurities and building up the system by making new blood, thus preventing the disorders so common, of sores, ulcers, boils, humors, pimples, erysipelas, &c. Do not wait but prevent them by a free use of the Purifier. Large bottles 81 00. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

PITH AND POINT.

—The sale of bootjacks last year was 91,000 less than the year before. Is this country going to bed with her boots on?—Detroit Free Press.

—Three-fifths of the fashionable alligator satchels and pocket-books are made from pig-skin. This, at least, is the allegation, but perhaps the alligator lies.—Philadelphia News.

—"I am saturated to the epidermis," said the high-school girl, throwing her gum boots into the corner. "I don't wonder at that," replied her mother; "they give you such hard lessons at school!"—N. Y. Journal.

—The Crow Indians have been caught putting rocks in the bales of hay they sell to the Government. The day is not far distant when all Indians will be civilized enough to vote.—Philadelphia News.

—In modern Egypt a young man is not permitted to see his wife's face before marriage. Whoever has invested in price packages can imagine the feelings of the average young Egyptian as he gazes on his trinket for the first time.—Modern Argo.

—"A beautiful Boston girl has crossed to Europe in the steerage of the Cunard liner, just to see how it was," says an exchange. For the same reason a Boston mother has been keeping boarders to pay the daughter's expenses.—N. O. Picayune.

—They were approaching an ice cream saloon, and she said: "Oh, Charley, I'm going to have a new dress cut bias—Oh—oo. S-p-p-p-l—there's an ice-cream saloon. Goody!" "Yes, and it is like your new dress, for it will be cut by us;" and the horrid old wretch led the panting damsel across the street.—New Haven Inquirer.

—Little Johnny says that when he was a baby, his mother tells him that he was as good as pie, and used to sleep all night and half the day. Now, when he does not get up the first time he is called, he gets a fearful scolding and occasionally something else beside. It can't see why what was praiseworthy in the infant should be reprehensible in the boy.—N. Y. Post.

—Miss Jenny Marks, of Baltimore won a sewing-machine by making 7 mistakes at the number of pills in a bottle in a window. There were 25,190 pills in the bottle, and she guessed 25,190. There were over 5,000 guesses, and the worst one was a guess of 9,000,000. The man who guessed 9,000,000 was one of those fellows who get their education by reading gas-meters.—Oil City Derrick.

—It is estimated that the Illinois Central Railroad handles a million trunks in six months, unhandling not less than a quarter of them. It is a great trunk line.—Chicago News.

F. J. Cheney & Co., proprietors of Hall's Catarrh Cure, offer $100 reward for any case of Catarrh that can't be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and tone up the system you will find Parmelee's Condition Powders unexcelled. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co. 8-00

—Ah You is the prettiest Chinese girl ever brought to America. She was one of the wonders of San Francisco's Chinese quarter, and as such was polished out to all tourists. One of these, an English-man, has fallen in love with and married her.—N. Y. Sun.

—David Brown, a colored man, has been the messenger of the Philadelphia Board of Health forty years.

Incipient consumption, coughs' colds, bronchitis, &c., are all the results of neglect or exposure, and must have prompt and active remedies to remove them. Croup and whooping cough cause great suffering because an effective remedy is not at hand. Why then leave yourself and children exposed to danger and death, when Hamilton's Cough Balsam will relieve all of these and prevent diseases, such as pneumonia, inflamation of lungs, and consumption. All lung difficulties are removed by this remedy. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

—The London Lancet tells how to cure a bone felon. As soon as it is felt put directly over the spot a fly blister the size of your thumb nail. Let it remain for six hours, at the expiration of which time exactly under the surface of the blister may be seen the felon, which can instantly be taken out with the point of a needle.

Stock growers all agree that for general use in their business no powder is better calculated to give satisfactory results than those prepared by E. M. Parmelee, because they contain the valuable remedies claimed, and do not fail to act quickly and effectively in coughs, colds, epizootic, bad blood, stoppage of water, and poor digestion, &c., in horses. For cattle, hogs, sheep and poultry, they are invaluable. Full pounds only 25 cents. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

—Pine sawdust, highly compressed, has been successfully used to make up center frames of carriage wheels. It is said to be so solid that it will bear a pressure equal to twenty-three tons per square inch. As sawdust has also been used for partitions and bricks, its application to the production of complex carvings and mouldings does not seem to be far off. This opens up quite a new market for sawdust, which has hitherto been a comparatively waste product.—Boston Post.

Do you value your horses and cattle? Attention to their health is as necessary as their regular food. If your horse is suffering from Epizootic, Ringbone, Spavin, Sprained leg, Fever in feet, Strains, Bruises or cuts, or your cow has caked bag, sore teats, or bad blood, you will save money by buying Parmelee's Universal Liniment and using it freely for any or all of these troubles, and so bring your stock into a healthful and valuable condition. It is the best liniment also for general family use. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by O. B. Weed & Co.

WOOD WANTED.

Fifty Cords good 18-inch block wood wanted on subscription, at the JOURNAL office. Bring it while the roads are good.

PIMPLES.

I will mail (Free) the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE BALM that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLOTCHES, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful; also instructions for producing a luxuriant growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, inclosing a 3c. stamp, Rose. YARDLEY & Co., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, JOHN B. OGDEN, 42 Cedar St., New York.

FARM FOR SALE.

Consisting of 144 acres, six miles from Charlevoix, on main road. Soil, clay loam. A good frame house, and two frame bank barns. About 85 acres cleared, balance good beech and maple timber. About 250 fruit trees beginning to bear. One-half mile from school and saw mill. Terms: three thousand seven hundred dollars, with not less than two thousand down; balance will purchase. For further particulars apply to DAVID H. FRANCIS, Charlevoix, Mich.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow-sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure CURE for CONSUMPTION, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, &c. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. WILSON, 194 Penn. St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

FOR SALE.

SECOND HAND

Stationary Engine and Boiler

Size of cylinder, 10x20 in; Boiler 12 feet long, 42 in diameter, 46 flues. The engine has been thoroughly overhauled, and is practically as good as new. Price and terms to suit. Enquire of S. M. SEE.

Or of Washburn & Ackert, at the Machine shop. 33tf.

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT.—State of Michigan: The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. The Fourth National Bank of Grand Rapids, vs. William T. Addis. Notice is hereby given that on the 16th day of January, 1884, a writ of attachment was duly issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, at the suit of the Fourth National Bank of Grand Rapids, the above named plaintiff, against the lands, tenements, goods, chattels, moneys and effects of William T. Addis, the above named defendant, for the sum of one thousand one and 84-100 dollars ($1,001 84) which said writ was returnable on the fifth (5th) day of February, 1884. Dated January 16th, A. D. 1884.

CRUCKSHANK & GRIER,
Attorneys for plaintiffs.

32-38

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT.—State of Michigan: The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. Lewis Reynolds, Walter F. Brown, plaintiffs, vs. John Munroe, James Matthews, defendants. Notice is hereby given that on the 6th day of December, A. D. 1883, a writ of attachment was issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, at the suit of Lewis Reynolds and Walter F. Brown, who are doing banking business in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, under the style and firm name of Reynolds & Brown, as plaintiffs, against the lands tenements, goods and chattels, moneys and effects of John Munroe and James Matthews, the defendants above named, for the sum of six hundred and forty-six dollars, which said writ was made returnable on the 5th day of February, A. D. 1884.

Dated February 6th, A. D. 1884.

CRUCKSHANK & GRIER,
Attorneys for plaintiffs.

31-37

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, } ss.
County of Charlevoix. }

In the matter of the estate of

FRANK CHALOUPKA, Minor.

Notice is hereby given, that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, guardian of the estate of said Frank Chaloupka, by the Hon. Judge of Probate, for the county of Charlevoix, on the 30 day of March, A. D. 1881, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the front door of Lewis's hall, in the village of Charlevoix, in said state, on Saturday, the 19th day of April, A. D. 1884, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day (subject to all incumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of sale), the following described real estate, to-wit: The north east quarter of the north west quarter of section twenty four (24) in township thirty four (34) north of range eight (8) west, containing forty (40) acres more or less.

CHARLES CHALOUPKA,
Guardian.

STATE OF MICHIGAN.—Thirteenth judicial circuit, in chancery. Joseph C. Glenn, complainant, vs. Martin J. Staley, Martha J. Ayers, Mary H. Wood, defendants. Suit pending in the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in chancery, at Charlevoix, on the 19th day of February, A. D. 1884, in this cause it appearing from affidavit on file, that the defendant, Martha J. Ayers, is not a resident of this state, but resides at Ellenburg in the state of New York, on motion of Cruickshank & Grier, complainant's solicitors, it is ordered that the said defendant, Martha J. Ayers, cause her appearance to be entered herein within four months from the date of this order, and in case of her appearance that she cause her answer to the complainant's bill of complaint to be filed, and a copy thereof to be served on the complainant's solicitors, within twenty days after service on her of a copy of said bill, and notice of this order; and that in default thereof said bill will be taken as confessed by the said Martha J. Ayers. And it is further ordered that within forty days the complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the Grand Rapids Journal, a newspaper printed, published and circulating in said county of Kent, and that said publication be continued therein at least once in each week, for six weeks in succession, or that he cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant, at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for her appearance.

OSCAR F. WISNER,
Circuit court commissioner.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER,
Complainant's solicitors.

A true copy, attest,

OSCAR UPRIGHT,
Deputy Register.

32-38

Grand Rapids Democrat,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Daily Democrat.—By mail, $8.00 per year in advance, postage paid.

Weekly Democrat.—$1.50 per year; 75 cents for six months; 40 cents for three months—invariably in advance.

Address,

THE DEMOCRAT,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

J. MILO EATON,

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FARMS

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice.

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 1876.

IMMENSE CUT IN PRICES

—IN—

All-Wool Goods,

Overcoats and Suitings,

Boots and Shoes

I have a large stock of Clothing and Boots and Shoes which I will close out at small as I wish to make room for spring goods. All my goods I will warrant

First-Class,

And will be pleased to show them to all parties whether they intend to purchase or not member, I have marked these goods down at actual cost, and they are

Big Bargains.

E. M. Clark

Charlevoix, Feb. 12, 1884.

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY-GONE YEARS,

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charlevoix

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHIN

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goo

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets,

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & Fe

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time a year and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our establishment

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses or and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

NUMBER 37. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, MARCH 27, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

THE JOURNAL

Is published every Thursday morning,

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over T. D. Smith's grocery,

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, MICH., AS SECOND-CLASS MATTER.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

WICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Hitters' Block, Charlevoix, Mich. A. B. CRUICKSHANK. C. A. GRIER.

DAVID H. CALL, Attorneys at Law, Real Estate and Loan Agents. Lake st., east of postoffice, Petoskey, Mich.

YNG & ALDRICH, Attorneys at Law, East Jordan, Mich. 22

RED W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Real Estate business promptly attended to. MONEY TO LOAN.

H. A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

L. NEWBERRY, Attorney at Law, and Circuit Court Commissioner. Office in bank building, entrance on Mitchell Street, Petoskey, Michigan.

M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

NTON, KEAT & MARTIN, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

OKE F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, and U. S. Circuit Court Commissioner.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

BANK OF CHARLEVOIX.—Capital $50,000. All banking departments. Deposites secured by state, county or government bonds; real estate, and approved notes for more than above amount. Loans to loan on first mortgages. Drafts on and domestic exchange. REYNOLDS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m., in the school house. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7, in the school house.

C. F. VASALDEN, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer and praise meeting Thursday evening at 7.

J. T. BROOKS, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

CHARLEVOIX ROUGH AND READY FIRE COMPANY meet the first and third Thursday evenings of each month, at the town hall.

B. F. BISSEE, Secretary.

HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACY.

H. SEFFIELD, Homeopathic Medicines, Books, Humicide Cases, etc., Charlevoix, Mich.

LIVERY STABLE.

J. MILO EATON, Proprietor. Geo. Durance, Manager. Only first-class horses and Carriages kept. Good Saddle Horses a Specialty.

PHYSICIANS.

A. CHRISTEN, M. D.
office at the Ingleside.

LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in the Lewis block, Charlevoix, Mich.

M. PRESTON, M. D., Surgeon and Homeopathic Physician, Charlevoix, Mich. 10

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

HORACE S. HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate, Loan, and Insurance Agt., Charlevoix, Mich.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. K.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Old Fellows' hall.

O. U. T.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 327, meets every Friday evening, at Old Fellows' hall.

O. U. A. M.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets every Wednesday evening, in their hall.

O. U. T.—Tree Rivers No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Old Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, meets Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over postoffice.

A. BETTARS, President. A. B. UPRIGHT, Vice President.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank,

OF CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

A general banking business transacted. Money to loan on approved paper at reasonable rates. Drafts received. Collections and other careful attention and remittances made promptly.

G. S. THOMAS, Cashier.

Bridge Street House,

ROBERT MILLER, Proprietor,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

This house is centrally located, and its accommodations excellent. The table supplied with the best the market affords. Only sample room in Charlevoix.

Fountain City House,

RICHARD COOPER, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public. Head-quarters for the Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

WARM MEALS AT ALL HOURS.

Also Tobacco and Cigars.

Prices reasonable. W. S. JOHNSON,

Cor. Bridge St. House, Charlevoix.

Old Newspapers for Sale.

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.

PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County.

E. T. BROWN & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS' AGENTS,

Portable and Stationary Engines,

Boilers, Mill and Wood-working Machinery,

Mill Supplies, Threshers, and Threshing Engines.

Bargains in Second-Hand Machinery.

WRITE FOR PRICE AND CATALOGUE.

WEST BRIDGE ST., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Advance Lumber Company

Are now prepared to do

CUSTOM SAWING

Promptly and on short notice. We have on hand a large quantity of

Hard and Soft Wood Lumber and Hemlock Timber.

GIVE US A TRIAL. ADVANCE LUMBER CO.
ADVANCE, MICH.

EVERYTHING

IN THE LINE OF

Furniture and Undertakers' Goods

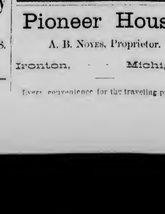
CAN BE FOUND AT THE OLD RELIABLE HOUSE OF

HENRY C. COOPER, CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

CHEAP FOR CASH.

THE MOST USEFUL BOOK EVER PUBLISHED!

A Book that should be in Every House.



The press, teachers, and professional people throughout the country pronounce it to be the BOOK OF BOOKS. It contains upwards of 50,000 WORDS, with their definition and pronunciation, according to Webster and other recognized authorities; a large number of additional words and definitions in general use. It contains a mine of information for everybody. This book is handsomely bound in cloth, containing 542 Pages Profusely Illustrated. We propose to send you one of these valuable books, by mail, all shipping charges prepaid, to any address, on receipt of only ONE DOLLAR.

Address M. STOLZ & CO.,

26 Park Place, New York.

Pioneer House,

A. B. NOYES, Proprietor.

Ironton, - Michigan.

Every convenience for the traveling public.

United States Hotel,

GEO. W. CHILDS, Proprietor.

Boyne City, Michigan.

Route thoroughly refitted and refurnished

Prince Bismarck.

IMPERIAL CHANCELLOR OF GERMANY.

The recent events in connection with the return of the Lasker resolutions, and Prince Bismarck's speech on the subject in the Reichstag the other day, when he declared his friendly feelings toward this country but vehemently stated his objections to being made his "enemy's postmun," have of late made the burly figure of the German Chancellor a notable object in the politics of the day.

Otto Edouard Leopold Bismarck-Schoenhausen, Chancellor of Germany, and politically the most powerful single man in the world, was born at Brandenburg, April 1st, 1813, of an old and wealthy family. He studied at the universities of Gottingen and Berlin, and his reputation is still high in the estimation of students as a duellist and beer drinker.

Bismarck's diplomatic career began in 1851, when he was made chief secretary of the Prussian Legation at Frankfurt. Before this he was known as an ultra-royalist and absolutist. The interests of Prussia, and its elevation to the head of a confederacy of German States, were objects always in his mind. He was special envoy at St. Petersburg in 1859, and rapidly grew in the regard of King William, and in 1862 was given the most important diplomatic position in the gift of the court—that of minister to France. Before long he was recalled and made president of the cabinet and minister of foreign affairs. The popular opposition to the militarism that was fast becoming the overpowering feature of Prussian politics met with strong opposition in the parliament, and in October, 1862, Bismarck dismissed the deputies. A revolution would doubtless have followed this arbitrary action, but the complicated Slesvig-Holstein question aroused a strong feeling in favor of the nationality and unity of Germany.

From this time the policy of Bismarck was secure, and Prussia at once took the lead of the German states. The war of 1866 completed the supremacy of Prussia, and Bismarck, from being the most hated became the most popular man in Germany.

When, in 1870, Napoleon III. took advantage of the so-called Spanish question to precipitate a war with Prussia, feeling that the security of his throne depended on proving that he possessed the military genius of the great Napoleon, Germany was prepared at every point, armed, as it were, to the teeth. The war of 1870-71 was soon decided. The discipline and skill in strategy of the Prussian troops were invincible. The anticipated "march to Berlin" of the French troops became a sudden retreat. Paris was surrounded, and at last the German soldiers marched through the streets of the French capital. The terms dictated by Bismarck included the surrender of Alsace and part of Lorraine, and a war indemnity of 5,000 million francs (about $1,000,000,000). The unification of Germany was the natural result. In 1871 Bismarck was made a prince, and in the same year was raised to the position of imperial chancellor. It is probably a fact that he is the ruler if Germany in an absolute degree that is hardly true even of the Russian Czar. The emperor follows his advice implicitly, and the Reichstag is almost always subservient to his will.

For some time Prince Bismarck's health has been very poor, but he has of late submitted to a severe course of training, and the other day, when about to make his speech on the Lasker question, walked to the Reichstag—the first time for many months—receiving an ovation from the people of Berlin.

The Record of the Republican Party.

If republican politicians imagine that financial issues are to be the only ones in the campaign of this year they make a grave mistake. The democracy can confidently go before the country on the Morrison bill. It is so obviously just, and deals so wisely and directly with the passing needs of the country, that the only effect of discussion must be to commend the bill to the voters in every state. If under any circumstances a due regard for consistency can work estoppel, the republican party is estopped from assailing the bill. Mr. Morrison has merely taken up and put in practical and definite form the recommendations of the tariff commission. They were overridden by lobbies of manufacturers when the tariff schedules as they now stand were in process of passage. Those schedules were framed, not with any view to the effect they might have upon the interests of the country at large, but with the sole, single purpose of meeting the wishes and interests of the lobbies which were in force at Washington at the time they were prepared. A more conspicuous instance of class legislation, confirming and extending monopoly, and in contempt of the interests of the people, cannot be found in our history, save in the legislation concerning the Pacific railroads.

The democracy will enter the campaign with every advantage on its side on the question of the tariff reform, but it does not propose that the criminal record of its opponents shall be forgotten. That record will be an important feature in the coming contest. The republican party will be placed on the defensive. The charges and specifications will be minute and particular, and the proof will be clearly presented. Surely the discernment and honesty of the people must take cognizance of that record. The demand for reform which was so effective in the Tilden campaign may be urged with increased impressiveness now, because the dominent party, grown insolent by long continuance in power, has added in measurably to its list of corrupt legislation. Not only this, but the proofs of corruption in all of the departments of the government, executive, legislative and judicial, are so conclusive as to preclude denial. Three or four days ago the Democrat reproduced extracts from an article published by the Chicago Tribune containing direct charges that the United States supreme court was controlled in its decisions by the Pacific railroads in all matters where their interests were involved. Had a democratic newspaper made such an assault upon the court it would have been regarded as partisan malevolence. Coming from the source it does, it cannot do otherwise than arrest the attention of the people, irrespective of party. The fact must be made plain that party and party, and not public interests, are the controlling motives of the party in power. Its legislative acts, and its administration are confined to these ends, and nothing higher than personal greed and ambition enters into the calculations of its leading politicians. It is an alliance with the corporate interests and monopolists of the nation, and it looks to the influence and capital of these for success. It is, in fact, the agent of these. Their interests are forwarded in utter disregard of the interests of the people. The people are not blind. The majority which carried Gov. Cleveland into his present seat was not this all together, or chiefly, to dissensions in the republican ranks. It was an awakened moral sense, acting through the ballot box, for the punishment of corruption. That sentiment still exists. It will be a prominent feature in the campaign this year. There is enough of it to break down prejudice of party and declare for purity of administration. And the republican party must go. C. P. Democrat.

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

WILLIAM KING, upon being converted in a Methodist revival meeting in Caldwell, Ky., arose and confessed that he had robbed a store in 1863 of $300 worth of goods. He went to the proprietor the next day and paid the amount, with twenty years' interest, but was immediately arrested for the theft, and now languishes in jail.

THE exact numbers killed and wounded last year in the Isle of Ischia calamity have now been obtained. On the island the total killed and wounded (not counting those who were badly bruised) amount to 3,075, of whom 2,312 were killed and 763 were maimed —the most of the latter for life. About one-half of the fatalities occurred at Casamicciola. This little town contained just 4,300 inhabitants, and of these 1,784 were killed and 443 were wounded—a fearful total. There were 672 houses at Casamicciola. Of these, 537 were crushed and crumbled into ruins, 134 were damaged, and only one escaped intact! Of foreigners on the island there were 54 killed.

THE Athlone woolen-mills experiment in Ireland has proved successful. A quay 300 feet long, built out to the deep waters of the Shannon, gives excellent facilities for shipment. Cheap turf fuel is obtained from the bogs adjoining, giving help to poor farmers, who deliver it for 14 cents a ton of twenty cubic feet. On the quay stands the mill, filled with the most improved machinery and a large wool storehouse. The wool is taken in for twenty miles round. There is a good home trade, and many cases are sent to this country and Canada. The goods are said to have a bright, clear appearance, given them by the peculiar purity of the Shannon water. The effect is that house property is at a premium, markets are large and increasing, and scarcely an idle hand is to be seen.

PUBLISHED tables show that out of 133 mines whose stocks are listed at the New York Exchange only nineteen paid dividends in 1883, and the dividends amounted to $4,145,000. Less than one-third of the sixty companies classed as "dividend-paying" appear to have paid dividends last year. But it is not to be inferred that the production of gold or of silver decreased in any such ratio. On the contrary, Mr. Valentine's annual statement shows that the product of mines in this country, west of the Mississippi, was $84,262,242, against about $80,000,000 during the previous year, and about $65,000,000 in the most productive year in the entire period covered by the Wells-Fargo reports. The explanation is that the mines which really produce the most gold and silver are not, as a rule, those whose owners make haste to have stocks listed for sale.

THE French war transport ship Poitou has just left Toulon for China, having on board a complete military balloon equipment, which was dispatched from the arsenal at Meudon and filled nine railway wagons. The corps consists of five men, including a colonel and two Captains, is intended to act specially in submarines, and is attached to the artillery. The balloons are manufactured of the finest silk, and will be inflated with vitriol acid gas. A complete photographic apparatus is attached to each car, which can turn out 100 impressions a second, and printed instantaneously, besides pneumatic compasses, aneroids, thermometers, and other scientific instruments of recent invention, including the new electro-magnetic balancing bar, which prevents the balloon from oscillating, and, it is expected, will be the means of eventually dispensing with ballast.—Gaulois.

MRS. KEZIA BALCOMBE, an elderly spinster, who earned a scanty livelihood by sewing for charitably disposed persons, and who was generally supposed to be very poor, occupied for a long time a small room on the top floor of a house in Brooklyn. She was recently found dead in her room, and her will, which had been deposited with her spiritual adviser, showed her to be possessed of $1,200, and its provisions made it compulsory with her executor at her death to dress her body in white, place it in a solid rosewood casket, inscribed with silver handles and a silver plate, on which should be inscribed her name and age. The hearse at her funeral was to be drawn by six black horses, and there were to be six pall-bearers, wearing white gloves and white ties. Her body was to be buried in Evergreen Cemetery beside her parents, and a tombstone bearing the inscription:

"Blessed be he who reverses these stones,
And cursed be he who moves these bones."

was to be erected over her grave. Any money remaining after the expense of these numerous behests had been defrayed she desired her executor to place at interest to be paid to a man to keep her grave in order.

AN able article on "Henry Irving" is contributed to the March Century by J. Ranken Towse, who says apropos of the fact that most of the actors who saw Irving as Louis XI. pronounced the impersonation a masterpiece: "Now actors, as a rule, are not good critics, inasmuch as their professional habit leads them to study the mechanical rather than the imaginative or creative powers of the performer. They are apt to estimate a work, not by the soul which animates it, but by the executive detail which gives it a good surface finish. When the business is minute and neat, the grouping varied and effective, the exits and entrances picturesque, and the meaning of every line illustrated by a great wealth of intricate gesture, their ideal of dramatic expression is satisfied. Inspiration is a quality with which few of them have any intimate dealings; and when they happen to encounter it, they are likely to regard it with a feeling akin to contempt, if it does not happen to be in accord with that bane of the modern stage—tradition. Of mechanism, however, pure and simple, they are necessarily excellent judges."

ALEXANDER JEFFERSON, colored, sentenced recently at Brooklyn to be hanged for murder, made a strong and touching plea for his life, but without avail. He said: "I was under the influence of liquor when I committed this crime. I was not in my proper senses at the time. Life is given unto man from God, and I cannot see how the taking of my life is going to better the condition of those I am accused of killing. They are dead: I am not." The same argument has been advanced by those opposed to capital punishment on principle. It is faulty, because the logic is false. It is a sound principle in both human and divine law that he who wantonly sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed. To take a man's life according to law will not still further the loss to society; but it makes a restraining influence upon others murderously inclined, and unquestionably puts the man hanged beyond the possibility of committing other murders. The principle is that a man who wantonly will kill a fellow-man would possibly do so again if opportunity offered or inclination suggested, and immunity from punishment would be prejudicial to the best interests of society. A man whose moral nature is so warped that he would kill a man without cause is unfit to live, and is a menace to the community.

Why Farragut Wanted Promotion.

It has been a source of great trouble to our navy for many years to know that, no matter what their position in our navy, they had to go to the foot of the list—called if they took dinner at a foreign squadron. It is the habit among nations to extend the courtesies of the table to other naval officers, and Farragut had often, when he was in England or the Mediterranean, to take his position down below some young scrub of a rear or vice admiral, who had not been half his time on the ocean. They did not grade according to relative rank, but according to the word of rank, and our highest officer was a captain. When Farragut went to New Orleans, Secretary Welles, or Assistant Secretary Fox, said to him: "Captain, if you can take New Orleans, I will make you an admiral, or have Congress do it." Farragut said: "Admiral? That is what I have been trying to get this Government to do with us for years." So, when he took New Orleans, the old man knew he was going to get a reward of honor for it.—Cattle.

How to Prevent Divorces.

Old maids should dress so as to advertise that they are old maids, and there would be only one-half the unpleasant marriages chronicled in our dailies, to harrow up the souls of the matrimonially inclined, and scare away their intentions.

Three fourths of the divorces which take place to-day are the result of guileless, unsuspicious men marrying old maids in mistake for young widows. Let a costume be particularly designed for old maids, and let it bar by pains and compelling them to assume it. And there would be less ceremony, not so many Sarahs meaning fewer divorces, more harmony, and less alimony in this divorce-ridden land.—Pretzel's Weekly.

LOVE is the dawn of civility and grace in the coarse and rustic. It makes the clown gentle and gives the coward heart.

THE LITTLE FOLKS

A Yarn of 1812.

Brant Rock Cove is a summer resort near Mashfield, on what is called the South Shore of Massachusetts Bay. Perhaps some of you have been there in your vacation, and have had rare sport on the beach. But, while thus enjoying yourselves, you did not realize what a thrilling scene happened there in the war of 1812 between England and the United States.

It was a bowering morning many a year ago, that the schooner Swallow was off the northern end of Cape Cod. She was bound for Boston with some prisoners she had taken from an English merchant-ship. The wind was northeast and fair, although threatening a storm. The Swallow was a privateer belonging to New York. That is, she was a privateer ship which carried cannon and a large crew, and was permitted by the Government to attack the enemy's ships as if she were a man-of-war. For this reason, although the wind was fair for making her port, the trim little schooner was not quite sure of reaching Boston without a struggle. For as soon as it was light enough to see clearly, the lookout shouted, "Sail ho!" "Whereway!" cried the Captain, eagerly.

"On the weather quarter, sir," replied the lookout, whose name was Luther Thomas.

The Captain immediately directed his spy-glass toward the stranger; for, if she proved to be one of the enemy's merchant-ships, chase must be made at once, while if she turned out to be a war-ship all sail must be crowded on the spars to get away from her, if she was large and heavily armed.

It took the Captain only a minute to discover that the stranger was a British frigate bearing directly down on the Swallow with all canvas set. The orders now rang quickly through the schooner. The crew flew up the rigging like spiders, and sail after sail was spread, until the little privateer fairly staggered under the pressure of her canvas, and flew over the foaming crest like a witch.

An hour passed away, and, as the sun burst for a moment out of the darkening clouds and lit up the lurid sea and the sails of the frigate, it became evident that she was gaining fast on the Yankee schooner. The latter sailed beautifully, but the frigate was so much larger she walked two miles for every mile the schooner made. The prize cargo that was stowed below the hatches was started and thrown overboard, and the wake of the little ship was strewn with bales of choice stuffs. But still the frigate gained on the chase, and in proportion as the wind freshened the advantage was with the larger vessel, of course. The breeze grew stronger, and the Swallow had to take in her lighter sails lest she carry away her spars. To balance this reduction of canvas several of the guns and the anchor were now hove overboard. But the frigate rose and fell in the heavy sea quite as the schooner was changed to southeast, with the hope that she might be able to get to Scituate or some other port on the south shore before the enemy would overtake her. The chase now became immensely exciting, especially after the frigate opened fire with her bow-guns, hoping to cripple the spars of the Yankee before she could get where her crew, at least, could escape on shore. The balls came nearer and nearer. Among the English prisoners on the Swallow was a young woman who now found herself in a fight at sea for the first time. She sat alone in the gliding, listening intently to the booming of the cannon, and torn by anxiety and alarm. If the schooner escaped, then she would still remain a prisoner, while, if the frigate came much nearer, a cannon ball might any instant enter the cabin and kill her. Since sea and shore were the bar of Scituate that the Captain of the Swallow did not dare to run in there, and so made for the bay of the Brant Cove, purposing to run the schooner on shore in that place. This was the only hope now left her crew for escaping from the frigate.

As the Swallow neared the shore the Captain cried to the man at the wheel, "Steady as you go!" and headed directly for the breakers. It was a wild and thrilling moment: it took courage and courage to run a ten-ship right to destruction.

"Look out for your lives!" shouted the Captain again, as he felt the critical moment at hand. Scarcely had he said the words when the Swallow struck the breakers, and the next moment was carried away the forem ast. It fell with a violent crash, killing or injuring several of the crew. But it was high time she should reach the land, for the shot from the frigate were now flying fast over the schooner, and would soon have sunk her.

All hands rushed forward, and, leaping over the bow of the crippled privateer, made for the shore as fast they could in the surf. They had all got there except the young woman and, in fact as their legs could carry them for a shelter from the British guns, when the young woman was in the cabin appeared on deck screaming for help. In their hurry to escape, the crew had forgotten her, and no one felt particularly anxious to go back for her cow, it, indeed, it were possible to do so.

Then it was that Luther Thomas, the sailor lad, showed of what true metal he was made. He heard the cries of the poor woman, and decided at once that it was his duty to go to the rescue, although he could only do so at the imminent risk of his life. He found a fisherman's dory lying on the beach. Shoving off in this crazy craft against the surf, which threatened to swamp it every moment, and unheeding the balls which whistled around him, he finally got under the bow of the Swallow, and told the young woman to let herself down into the boat with a rope. While the brave boy was rowing her ashore the balls fell fast around them, and as they landed a bar-shot actually flew between their heads and lodged in the sand just beyond them. But Providence smiled on this generous action, and they escaped unharmed.

Finding she could do no more mischief, the Chatham, which proved to be the name of the frigate, stood out to sea again, after ridding the Swallow with balls. The privateer remained there until she went to pieces. But it is said that her keel and part of her frame are still lying there, embedded in the sand, and can be seen sometimes at very low tides.

The bar shot which came so very near killing the young hero was picked up and preserved by him. He decided to remain at Marshfield the rest of his life, and this shot, which looks like a dumbbell, is still kept by his descendants, who have used it for a pestle. It was at the house of his granddaughter that the writer of this story saw this venerable missile of war.—Anon.

A Brakeman's Life.

A long freight train came to a stop on the siding near Richards, a small station in Dakota, on the Northwestern railroad. One of the brakemen entered the little office, where we were trying to send a message to Fargo. But the wire worked badly, for it was bitter cold, nearly ten below zero. We turned to the brakeman, and with a nod, said, "Rough night?"

"How would you like to swap places with me?" he asked. "Nice cool ride between here and Junction."

With a little more interest in the man, we asked, "You don't mean to say you're going to ride to Junction on the outside?"

"Fact!" said he, emphatically. "There's nothing easy about a brakeman's life, I tell you! Folks think it's a soft job to ride all over the country for nothin'! But let 'em try it on top of a freight train, such a night as this, and they'll prefer Raymond's five hundred-dollar excursions!"

"We should think so!" we replied, seeing he was in a talking mood. "But how will you keep from freezing to-night?"

"Run," he said, laconically. "Run up and down the train. Comin' down from the crossing, I ran the whole length of the train a dozen times."

"Isn't it dangerous?"

"Well, no—not if you're used to it. The worst time is during a snow-storm, or just after the rain has frozen on the roofs of the cars. A cut with ashes on her feet couldn't keep from slipping then."

"Did you ever slip?"

"Once I did. We were going about fifteen miles an hour, one dark night, and just as we rounded a curve, my foot slipped in jumpin' onto the car next the tender. Down I went between the cars, and for a minute I thought I'd reached my terminus. But I caught hold of one of the iron steps as I went down. If I hadn't the whole train would have gone over me. We had flat-cars on mostly that night, loaded with railroad iron."

He spoke with the air of one talking over a reminiscence, shaking, as he stood, the ice-cakes from his shaggy fur.

"Do you work all day and all night, too?"

"Pretty much. This is the first rest I've had to-day. We're waitin' here for the 8:15 mail to go by us, and then we run on to the next siding, sixty-two miles, to Billings."

"What is the pay of a brakeman in your place?"

"Well, the company gives me a dollar and a half a day. But I'm doin' some night-work."

"Do you brakemen have any homes of your own, or any holidays, such as Christmas, New Year's, or Washington's Birthday?"

"Haven't had a home since I went onto the road, six years ago. You see, we don't stop long enough in any one place to get acquainted, and I cannot even find time to court a girl long enough to get coupled to her. An' as for Christmas and New Year's and Washington's, why, I suppose a freight brakeman is slant out on those roads. He hain't the feelin's any, and the most of the connections on those routes is mighty onsarlin'. But here comes the 8:15. Didn't know I was talkin' so much. But when I get oiled up, I run pretty smooth if the track's clear. Good night!"

He went out into the black night, and we shivered for him.

We have since had a respect for brakemen since that talk, and have written this sketch to create consideration for a brave, uncomplaining class, seldom heard of in song or story, yet worthy of honorable mention.—Youth's Companion.

Bread from Grass.

On the west coast of England grows a sort of sea grass (zostphera marina grass) which is sometimes cast up like bread. In the main it is gathered by sorance; they then wash it and pick all other plants carefully from it. After this it is boiled for some two hours; then the mass is put in pieces with knives and kneaded into loaves. Oatmeal is then strewed over it to give it greater cohesion and a more inviting appearance, and then it is baked. It keeps in summer for four days and in winter for eight. Many women on the coast of Devonshire earn their living by selling this bread, and most of it is sent to Swansea (in Wales), where it is much liked by the poorer classes.—Scientific Press.

Sleeping Fee.

"Suppose," writes a young "that I accompany a young la theater, and just before the ance closes my feet go to sle I tell the young lady to wa get their nap out, or must stumble like a blind horse the impression that I am d other night my feet went to before the curtain went dow that act. I said nothing to but arose and attempted to away, but I fell in the aisle fleeman took me out and the home with her brother. T thought I was drunk, and the next morning gave a long ac the affair, giving as its cause should not be allowed to enter after again. I was taken before Judge and fined $10 for ness and disorderly conduct certain the young lady under situation, but when I called on next night she turned up in mo and told me to leave, as lingered in the sweet atmosphe dead love, like the fair pr pressed flowers and all that wash, the girl's father came chunk of bituminous coal a that if I didn't money he would uncomfortably. I have a great confidence in the old man, as a good order. Since then I have another attachment, yes, a st lackaniani. I have an engage take her to the theater, but I certain that my feet will go to sl I send a very active boy, and sit down my boots and go to sle Somehow I think it would be to say: 'Miss, my feet are sle Wait till I arouse them.' I fear, would take me for a fo ailment is peculiar. Many p afflicted with somnolescent j tremities, but with most peo one foot at a time is inclined please give me the benefit of vice."

We hardly know how to t young man in question. He a hog and change his voice a little. It is a poor Rhode that won't work several ways in this country.

THREE years ago Amherst College made a set of rules founded on the principle that each student was received as a gentleman, and would be expelled whenever his conduct proved that he was not. President Seelye says it is the unquestioned judgment of the faculty that there has been a great gain in regularity of attendance and standard of scholarship. No punishments are prescribed. The misbehaving student is not sent away, nor even shut out of the recitation rooms, but no attention whatever is paid to him. The system of government recently introduced at Bowdoin comprehends a college court, composed of student jury, with a professor as president, to try and punish offenders. A full test of this innovation has not been made, but thus far it has worked satisfactorily. Harvard also has recently put into practice a scheme which gives the student a voice in the deliberations of the faculty. Prof. Thwing says that the experiments in this direction have been so productive of good results that a standing committee will be appointed to receive whatever suggestions the students may wish to make.

WASHINGTON letter: Dawes said to be a great figure in the House. He was Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means. While Blaine was Speaker, he and Garfield were about the only Republicans who commanded the House. Where he now is, Dawes is apparently interested in nothing but Indian projects. Conger, of Michigan, occupied a considerable space in the lower house. He always dressed in an old suit, and never was so happy as when stirring up the Democratic animals. Once elected to the Senate, he put on a full-dress suit, the only one he ever owned, and became dignified. So he is a cypher. Frye has not been so entirely eclipsed. He thrashes around much as he did at the other end of the Capitol. But the other Senators do not like it, and Mr. Frye must wish himself back in the bustle of the House. The art of good speaking is not known in the Senate, and if a man goes there an orator he is speedily frozen out. Hawley, Hale, and Kenna are examples of the same tendency. They have made no reputation since their transfer. I know of but one notable exception, and that is Aldrich, of Rhode Island. He took no great part in the deliberations of the House. In the Senate he is already coming to the front.

Medical Motion.

"Oh, doctor, doctor, doctor," cried a woman who rushed breathlessly into Dr. Greenawalt's office, "my boy Johnnie has swallowed a mouse."

"Hm, swallowed a mouse, has he? Well, go home now, and have him swallow a cat."—The Hoosier.

GARRY has been compared to a hydra; for every one that dies two are born.

E JOURNAL

Y CHAS. J. STRANG.

LEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

L. TALMADGE, recently made manager of transportation of the Gould system of roads, was in 1859 a brakeman on the Alton and Terre Haute.

JAMES FRASER is superintendent, and author of covering the magazines, Fort Sumter with white sand, tory to its being turfed. The London News says that the interior ter has been greatly improved the past few years, and it will ger long before all traces of the will be removed.

Canadians have begun to pick Lord Lansdowne, their new governor-general. The first thing they found out is that he is not dignified On a recent occasion he was in his carriage in front of the e, at Montreal, waiting for the ness. When she made her apbe thirst his head out of the and said: "Come along, my Harry up! harry up! We haven't time to lose." The crowd of peoatching the departure were ed, and said to each other as they away: "Imagine the Marquis of speaking that way in public to H. the Princess Louise!"

ves of Scottsville, Va., make a to the strength of their riding to be determined by tying the tails together, leading one toMayville and the other toward aden, and starting them. At the "go" their owners plied their with hickories, and the horse toward Mayville made off with t. After dragging the New ing some distance, the owner ining horse drew his knife and ood cutting the tails loose. The eanded that the cutting should t the victor shouted: "Oh, no. on the bet; both horses are ntitled with his booty, but to stand a lawsuit.

London Grocers' Journal says: s a very common idea that the ine inundate us with their grain. e, Mr. Mongredien, in his on Free Trade and English ers (Isss), declares that this is mistake, and he even goes so say that the Americans do not as much as one ship-load of the course of the whole year. e of the large importations United Kingdom of American maize, etc., are, according to purchases made in New York lmore by English millers, and lmore for English accounts at rinks—paid for by the buyer, fore he gets possession of the OSTON "society" is interesting now in a young handsome named Burdick, who will be raised when a child as the little of state in Maximilian's court, e is hereditary heir to the throne se, being grandson of Emperor Iso. His mother, related the revolutionary families of ston and Greene, is now living ld Greene mansion on George, Rights. She was, in her prime, beauty, but her ambition led marry the dwarfed, noseless, but stringer, and a little more in her than she is with him.

A woman should always be younger, and a little prettier little more considerate than husband. He should bestow upon his worldly goods, and she should good care of them. He may o every care and tenderness that mayinrapt; but pecuniary gratitude for her youth, fresh graces, ive on a crust that he earns the fortune that she has brought him

Neither must be jealous, or give other cause for jealousy. Neither encourage sentimental friendship the opposite sex. Perfect confi in each other, and reticence con their mutual affairs, even to be of their own families, is a fact sity.

A wife should dress herself ingly whenever she expects to husband's eye. The man who grow slovenly, even at home.

Fault-finding, long arguments, scoldings, ends the happiness gins in kisses and love-making and brothers may quarrel and sp up." Lovers are lovers no longer such disturbances occur, and people who are not lovers are ly red-hot chums. If a man s his wife most in striped calico, silly not to wear it.—The Ey

The gift of improving in ing ful is a good gift, and comes the Father of light

ORGANIZING FOR THE CAMPAIGN.

Meeting of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

(Washington Telegram.)

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee met at the Arlington Hotel, in this city, and organized for the coming campaign. Senator Pendleton, Chairman of the Democratic joint caucus, presided, and Representative Post, Secretary of the joint caucus, acted as Secretary of the meeting. Thirty States and four Territories are represented on the Campaign Committee, these being the States and Territories which send a Democratic Senator or Representative to Congress. Thirty-nine members were present. The following Executive Committee was selected: On the part of the Senate, Senators Garland, Kenna, and Gorman; on the part of the House, Representatives Paige, Rosecrans, Stockslager, Stevens, and Murphy. It was decided that this Executive Committee should be empowered to select members for the Campaign Committee for the States and Territories not represented either in the Senate or House by a Democrat. These States and Territories are Colorado, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont, and Dakota, Idaho, New Mexico, and Washington. No other business was transacted by the Campaign Committee.

The Executive Committee met on the adjournment of the Campaign Committee, and organized by electing Senator Gorman Chairman, and Representative Post Secretary. Senator Kenna and Representatives Stevens and Stockslager were appointed a sub-committee on finance, and Senator Garland and Representatives Murphy and Paige a sub-committee on campaign documents, the Chairman being an ex-officio member of both sub-committees. The committee had an informal talk over the arrangements to be made for the campaign, but did not enter into a discussion of the question of party policy. Revenue-reform Democrats appear to be in the minority on the Executive Committee. Senator Gorman and Senator Kenna are both "tariff" Democrats, as are Representatives Paige and Stevens. Representatives Stockslager and Murphy were Carlisle men, and with Senator Garland represent the tariff-reform element on the committee. Representative Rosecrans voted for Carlisle for Speaker, but is an "incidental Protectionist," and indorses the Ohio tariff platform. The Secretary of the committee is a "tariff" Democrat. In the main the committee is composed of the younger element of the party. The following is a full list of the Campaign Committee as at present organized:

Alabama—H. A. Herbert.
Arkansas—A. H. Garland.
California—W. S. Rosecrans.
Connecticut—W. Eaton.
Delaware—C. B. Lore.
Georgia—A. H. Colquitt.
Illinois—R. W. Townshend.
Iowa—J. H. Murphy.
Kentucky—James T. Clay.
Louisiana—C. E. Schaeri.
Maryland—A. P. Gorman.
Massachusetts—H. B. Lovering.
Michigan—S. B. Dibrell.
Mississippi—H. L. Muldrow.
Missouri—A. M. Dockery.
Nevada—George W. Cassidy.
New Jersey—W. R. Fiedler.
New York—R. P. Stevens.
North Carolina—Vincent Bowd.
Ohio—D. M. Paige.
Oregon—J. H. Slater.
Pennsylvania—William Mutchler.
South Carolina—Samuel Dibble.
Tennessee—I. G. Harris.
Texas—R. Q. Mills.
Virginia—John S. Barbour.
West Virginia—John E. Kenna.
Wisconsin—P. V. Deuster.
Florida—R. H. M. Davison.
Arizona—C. Meyer.
Montana—M. Maginnis.
Wyoming—M. E. Post.
Utah—J. E. Caine.

Labor and Capital Suffer Together Under Republicanism.

We have endeavored to show in a former issue that the united system of labor caused by the overthrow of the institution of slavery, together with unrestricted free trade between the States and Territories of the United States, would necessarily distribute our manufacturing industries over a much greater extent of our territory than heretofore, and that the manufacturing centers of many of those industries, and notably that of iron and the cheaper qualities of cotton, would shift from their present localities into those localities where the raw material used by them was cheaper and more accessible, and that manufacturing, like farming, would flourish most where the greatest results could be obtained at the least cost. It seems plain to us that as these changes take place the tendency of prices will be downward until the point was reached where our chief products of manufacture, like our farm products at the present time, will be able to enter the foreign markets in competition with the world. The necessity of finding an outlet for our surplus products of manufacture is now severely felt. The serious disturbance in our labor centers resulting from overproduction and the results of suspending until the surplus can be disposed of, is one of the crying evils of the day, and thousands of laborers are now out of employment, awaiting the time when the home consumption shall take up the surplus so that they may have work to do, but if that surplus had the world for a market then it would be seldom, if ever, that there would be an overproduction. Under the present condition of things both capital and labor are suffering, but when manufacturing and farming are carried on under the same conditions, and the same favors and no more extended to each, then the industrial interests of the whole country will move on apace and in harmony. It is natural for the present manufacturing centers to hold on to the monopoly they have heretofore enjoyed as long as possible, and the high tariffs of the last twenty years have enabled them to do so up to the present time, but at a great cost to the consumer. While capital was timid about entering the new fields of the West and South, a high tariff could keep out foreign competition, and thus Johnstown could continue to freight iron ore from the Iron Mountains of Missouri and from Lake Superior to Pittsburgh, although it cost her $20 to make a ton of pig iron, for it eventually came out of the pocket of the consumer. But when capital produces the same kind of iron at the point where the ore has to be mined, at most of about one-half that sum, and no tariff can be interposed, then Johnstown must set up her furnaces in the iron belt or turn capital to some other kind of industry: and eventually Johnstown will insist that the duty be taken off of pig iron that the industries may obtain the raw material at prices that will enable them to manufacture the higher classes of iron and steel so as to compete with foreign manufactures in the same line. It will require the foreign competition to keep the prices steady. It is time that now, in the close of the war in many lines of manufactures the tendency of the prices has been downward; but this has been from other causes than the influence of high tariff that have prevailed, and in spite of their existence. It is very certain that the reduction of prices would have been much greater if the rate of "protection duties" had been less; but the important fact before us at this time is that natural causes will now have a free hand to do their work under which we have been and still are suffering in spite of our vicious system of class legislation, and when that cure has been accomplished the whole country will be prosperous.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

MR. MORRISON'S TARIFF BILL.

Views of the Leading Republican Advocate of Free Trade Doctrines.

Mr. Morrison's bill is an honest, simple, practical attempt to relieve the people of burdens which rest on every industry, every trade, every household and individual in the land. It is not a theorist's bill; it is not in effect, though it may be in interest, a political bill, and it cannot be made one except by the mistaken conduct of party leaders. It does not receive the support of the Democrats as a party, nor reflect their views or policy of tendencies. It is bitterly opposed by a powerful faction in the party, and cannot now be claimed as a Democratic measure. It does represent substantially the views of a large part, if not of the great majority, of the Republican party. It starts from the Morrill tariff. It stops short of the avowed intention of the last Republican Congress. It is purposely framed to meet the position to which the Republicans are committed. There is no reason why it should not receive the support of conservative Republicans, except that it comes from a Democratic source, and that fact would, by such support, be interpreted as of political significance or effect. Regarding the principle and expressed intention of the bill—and if it be found, on examination, not to conform to these, it can be made to do so—it is the plainest dictate of duty and policy to adopt it.

If, on the other hand, the Republicans oppose it utterly, or if they offer in place of it some such foolish device as the addition of the sugar duty, they must suffer the penalty of conspicuous folly and bad faith. They will then force the Democrats into the position of moderate and practical reform, and assume for themselves the indefensible position of indiscriminate support of high taxes for the benefit of a few favored interests. No sane man can doubt what the choice of taxpaying voters would be between parties holding these respective positions. It is idle now to talk of making the issue between free trade Democracy and Republican protection. The Morrison bill is for free trade, and the opposition to it is not, in any decent sense, the support of protection. The bill is, in effect, a moderate and conservative attempt to deal with the actual and pressing needs of the business of the country. By treating it fairly and intelligently the Republican party can serve the country with no harm to their own party and no decided advantage to their opponents. By blind adherence to the tariff as it is, exorbitant and oppressive, partial and unjust, they can do themselves great injury and greatly help their opponents.—New York Times.

A BAD man was taken out by a mob in Ohio the other night and strangled. Ohio is the State represented in part in the Senate by John Sherman. Is it not Mr. Sherman's business to suggest an investigation in this case? It is important to know whether Mr. Hickey was lynched because of his offensive politics or because he participated in a brutal murder. At all events, human life and human law are as valuable in the model State of Ohio as in Mississippi. The constitutional guarantees should certainly be observed in Mr. Sherman's own State. If Mr. Sherman doesn't look after this flagrant outrage at Brookville, we trust that Mr. Lamar, of Mississippi, will.—New York World.

SHERMAN and Malone's attempt to imitate Blaine by "stirring up" the Southern members was a flat failure. There are several years behind the age with their rubbish.

STARVING A COLD.

A Common-Sense Remedy That Is Claimed to Never Fail.

Though a life-long sufferer from the disease in various forms, from the "sniffles" of infancy to the "day fever" of adult age, together with occasional attacks of neuralgia, rheumatism, throat and lung affections, etc., I now find it impossible to excite any of the well-known symptoms, or, in fact, any form of disease, though subjecting myself to what many would consider the most suicidal practices in the matter of exposure to the elements, so long as I live upon a frugal diet, chiefly cereals and fruit, served plainly—nominally two meals a day; holding myself ready, however, to skip a meal when ever necessary—i. e., whenever any of the symptoms of indigestion, as acid stomach, flatulence, pressure in the region of the lungs or stomach, etc., warn me of having carried the pleasures of the table a trifle beyond the needs of the organism.

I have, in my efforts to "catch" cold, submitted myself to exposures that to the minds of most people would appear of a suicidal character, wearing low shoes and walking in snow and slop until both socks and shoes were saturated, sitting an hour in that condition and going to bed without warming my feet; removing flannel undergarments in midwinter on the approach of colder weather, and attending to outdoor affairs without the overcoat habitually worn; sleeping with a current of air blowing directly on my head and shoulders; sitting entirely naked in a draught, on a cold, damp night in the bath, for fifteen minutes before getting into bed; wearing a cotton night-shirt and sleeping under light bed-covers on the night following the use of flannel gown and heavy-weight bed-clothes; rising from bed on a cold, rainy morning, and sitting naked for an hour, writing, and then putting on shirt and trousers only, the shirt almost saturated with rain and the trousers quite damp from hanging by the window—these and similar experiments I have tried repeatedly, but without catching cold; I become cold and become warm again, that is all.

In the course of my experiments, whenever I have fed my cold as far as I wished or dared to go, I have, in every instance, banished the disease by entirely abstaining from food for a time. I have never known this remedy if applied at the very outset to fail of "breaking up" a common cold in twenty-four or forty-eight hours, whatever the age, sex, or occupation of the patient. However we may differ as to the origin of the disorder, whenever I can prevail upon a sufferer to try this remedy, we come to be of one opinion as to what will most surely and speedily "cure" it.

Of course the size of the "dose" must bear some relation to the severity of the case. On the first appearances of the disease—the symptoms of a slight cold, so familiar to all—skipping a single meal, in the case of a person who takes but two meals a day habitually, or two meals, in the case of a three-mealler, will sometimes suffice, if the succeeding meals be very moderate ones. I have usually in my experimentation been satisfied to "turn" at the "one-meal hour," not often being obliged to abstain longer than twenty-four hours. When, however, I have chosen to prolong the experiment by continuing to eat heartily, as is the custom with people in general at such times, I have found my experience identical with theirs—the symptoms would increase in severity, and to nasal catarrh, headache, slight feverishness, and languor would be added sore throat, perhaps with pressure at the lungs, hoarseness, increased fever, and entire indisposition for exertion. In this case two, perhaps three, days' fasting would be required, with a little extra sponging of the skin, to completely restore the balance. Outdoor air is desirable, and—when not demanding too great effort—exercise. Air baths, when there is much feverishness of the skin, are comforting and curative.—Dr. Daye, in Popular Science Monthly.

The Editor Was In.

"Is the editor in?" asked a wry-faced man, who stood six feet and two inches in his socks, of the office boy of a Bloomington newspaper.

"I don't know," said the boy. "I'll ask him." He was gone about ten minutes, when he returned, smiling blandly, and said: "I guess he's in. He's in if you are the man he thinks you are. Is your name Smithers?"

"Yes. My name is Smithers, and I reckon he won't be in, the cowardly puppy, when he knows that Jake Smithers is after him."

"So you're Smithers, are you," said the boy.

"Yes, I'm Smithers. The same Smithers that the gum-started editor called a man in this morning's paper. I've come to clean out the shop and thrash the editor till he won't know himself from a stuck pig, I reckon the editor aint in, now, is he?"

"Oh, yes! I'll show you up to his room in a minute. He told me to ask you if you was Smithers, and if you was, to show you up. When I left the room, he had two revolvers, a ten-pound weight, and a sword lying on his desk, and he said me to show you the door to his room right away, and to get behind the base burner for safety as soon as you went in. Right this way, sir. The editor's in, and he is anxious to see you."

"Well, you tell the editor that I said he might go to Chicago, if he wants to. He can kiss my foot. I hain't got no time to fool away on him." And Smithers hurried to catch the train.—Thorough Matter.

It is easier to prophesy the future than to interpret the past.

THE JOURNAL.

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

Notes and News.

The Kalkaskians are building a $5,000 school house.

The Detroit Free Press for last Sunday contained 18 pages.

Lansing has organized a "citizen's league" to enforce the liquor laws.

A stave mill is being built between the Arlington house, Petoskey, and Bay View.

The Detroit Times continues to improve from day to day. It is a complete newspaper.

A life saving station will probably be established at Bois Blanc Island in Mackinac straits.

A forty pound trout caught with a hook and line was one of the not able sight at St. Ignace, recently.

A young man named Burns, living at Mancelona, shot himself through the hand a few days ago while fooling with a revolver.

The Grand Rapids Radical is a nine-column folio newspapar, nearly all reading matter, and sent to any address for $1 a year.

W. W. Ashley, now editor of the Enton Rapids Times, gave us our first lesson at the printer's case sixteen years ago this week.

John Kelly says the laws of prohibition can never be enforced. No better evidence of this is needed than their repeated and open violation in Maine and Kansas.

Chicago-like, the fire sufferers of Allegan and Grand Rapids are preparing to rebuild, and grander than before. For good grit look to the average Michigander.

A raft of walnut logs, each four feet through, which sunk about forty years ago in the St. Joseph river, is being raised. The logs are water-cured and worth about $74 per thousand.

The Elk Rapids Iron company's grist mill, besides supplying home consumption, in 1883 shipped 6,000 barrels of flour made from wheat grown within hauling distance.

Henry Clews, the New York banker and republican, says we must have as cheap labor as that of Europe or our interests will suffer. Workingmen must submit to a reduction of 33⅓ per cent in their wages.

The Grand Rapids Tradesman evidently found a good field. It started six months ago as a six-column folio, and its second enlargement makes it a six-column quarto, with a good advertising patronage.

The Traverse City Herald says that the Chicago & West Michigan is to be completed as far as Traverse City this season. If this is a fact, that means a railroad for Elk Rapids and Charlevoix next season.—Progress.

The Cedar Springs Mail comes out this week with both sides printed at home. The evident intention is to give more room for local matters and it is well filled. The second page contains over six columns of items.

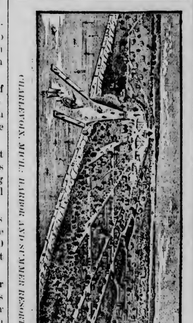
The democratic state central committee met at Lansing on the 20th and fixed upon June 18 as the time, and Detroit as the place for holding the state convention to elect delegates to the national democratic convention.

"Every honest and intelligent voter in the United States knows that the republican party is the mother of all detestible monopolies which wither and blight the industrial interests of this nation. They know that the free pass (bribe) system is the offspring of the republican party from which has grown Credit Mobilier, land grant steals, DeGolyer pavements, army contracts, crooked whiskey, star route frauds, and the use of corruption funds in the control of elections." The above is from the Three Rivers Reporter, the editor of which is R. E. Case, formerly a member of the party f high moral ideas himself, and is opposed to know wherof he speaks. —Ex.

It may be interesting to users of saws—and there are many of them in this part of the country—to know that American made plate steel saws, which is the best material for the purpose, can be bought in England about 40 per cent cheaper than they can in this country. The tariff tax on saws is about 40 per cent of their value in a free market. The manufacturer pays the tariff tax on the raw material, but if he wants to sell it abroad a rebate is allowed of 90 per cent of the tax paid, at the time of exportation. The saw manufacturers' laborers are paid the market price of labor and no more. How do carpenters, cabinet makers and woodworkers generally like to pay 40 per cent of what they pay for their saws as a bonus for the privilege of having had them made in America? This is one of the incidental beauties of the policy of protection.—G. R. Democrat.

Harpers Weekly goes a step further than the Chicago Tribune or the New York Times in its denunciation of things republican. It says: "The republican party is smirched with the whisky ring swindles, and the star route swindles, and the Belknap swindles, and the salary grab, and the third term plot, and myriad other similar jobs and thefts and crimes. The argument will be that no reform is possible until such a party is turned out, and that it can be turned out only by putting in the democratic party. That such a plan is shrewd and promising is undeniable."

Catarrh is the seed of consumption, and unless taken in time is a very dangerous disease. Hall's Catarrh Cure never fails to cure. Price 75 cents. Sold by Dr. Crouter.



G. W. JEFFERIES,

Dealer in

Fresh and Cured Meat

Fresh and Salt Fish,

AND VEGETABLES.

Fat Stock and Farm Produce Wanted.

West side Bridge Street. Charlevoix.

NEW GOODS.

I am pleased to say that my

Spring Stock

Is ready for inspection. Come and see them, and when you want a suit of clothes that are JUST IN STYLE, you will know where to find them. My stock is all of the

LATE STYLES,

AND

Price to Correspond With the Times.

GEO. W. MILLER.

TOWNSHIP CAUCUS.

A township caucus will be held at the Black School House in the TOWNSHIP OF MARION, on Saturday, the 29th day of March, 1884, at one o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of nominating township officers.

FOR SALE.

Eighty acres of land, with or without improvements. Also one seven-year old mare with colt, one good work horse, Two Texas ponies four years old, one Durham cow, and one five year old cow. The above stock is in good condition. Inquire of E. A. Bacon, on north shore of Pine Lake.

J. A. BACON.

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

A few fine sewing machines for sale at ten dollars each. Call soon and have your pick.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED

D. S. WAY.

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has purchased the

Ladies' and Children's Furnishing Goods

Lately owned by Fisher & Inwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and gain as many more as possible. Call and see my stock.

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks, and Optical Goods in Charlevoix county. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best 18-ounce ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges.

O. W. SMITH,

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.

Electro-plating in Gold and Silver. Any article of Jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order.

Fresh Oysters

Just Received.

300 pounds Candy and Nuts.
Two Barrels Fish Butter.
Golden Thread Sauer Kraut.
Two Cases Fresh Oysters, 25 and 35 Cents.

AT L. L. CARR'S.

JOHN NICHOLLS,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Oar Blades,

WAGON TONGUES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect January, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv.		7 00am	7 45pm
Richmond	2 37pm	10 32	9 52
Winchester	3 01	11 07	10 31
Ridgeville	3 11	11 57	11 27
Fort Wayne, ar.	6 32	2 20pm	1 55am
Fort Wayne, lv.		2 47	2 50	8 05am
Kendallville		3 50	3 55	9 15
Sturgis		5 03	5 15	10 35
Kalamazoo		6 11	6 10	11 48
Kalamazoo, ar.		6 52	6 52	12 45pm
Kalamazoo, lv.		7 05	7 05	1 05
G'd Rapids, ar.		9 05	9 05	3 05
G'd Rapids, lv.	1 45pm		9 50	3 45
Ionia H. & M. cross	2 30		10 05	4 05
Howard City	3 17		11 26	6 27
Big Rapids	4 16		12 19pm	7 22
Reed City	10 17		1 12	8 18
Cadillac, ar.	10 25		1 20	9 30
Cadillac, lv.			2 30	9 50
Traverse City, ar			4 55
Kalkaska, lv			1 17	12 00am
Mancelona			1 46	12 55
Boyne Falls			2 07	2 59
Petoskey, ar			2 24	3 14
Harbor Springs			2 15	9 45
Mackinaw City			8 00	6 00
St. Ignace			10 00	8 50
Marquette			7 00am	5 00pm
Negaunee, ar			9 12	7 08

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv.			5 15pm	7 30am
Marquette			9 00	9 30
St. Ignace			5 40am	6 15pm
Mackinaw City			6 05	9 05
Harbor Springs			7 00	4 20
Petoskey, lv.			7 38	4 53
Boyne Falls			8 15	12 27am
Mancelona			9 10	2 11
Kalkaska			9 53	2 58
Traverse City, lv			9 10am
Cadillac, ar.			11 37	5 26
Cadillac, lv.		3 59pm	11 45	5 50
Reed City		4 56	1 12pm	7 16
Big Rapids		5 12	1 41	7 49
Howard City		6 06	2 35	8 47
I. H. & M. cross		7 25	3 46	10 05
G'd Rapids, ar.		7 40	4 05	10 25
G'd Rapids, lv.	6 30am		4 25	12 50pm
Kalamazoo, ar	8 32		6 32	2 23
Kalamazoo, lv	8 37		6 37	2 28
Vicksburg	9 07		7 52	3 00
Sturgis	10 01		8 16	4 12
Kendallville	11 14		9 35	5 31
Fort Wayne, ar	12 30pm		10 52	6 42
Fort Wayne, lv.	12 50	5 30pm	12 05am
Wiley bridge	3 09	7 46	2 33
Winchester	3 24	8 01	2 47
Richmond, ar.	4 27	9 17	3 57
Cincinnati, ar.	7 30pm	12 20pm	7 30am

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Ag't G. P. Agt., Grand Rapids, Mich.

New Goods.

At Cost

FOR CASH

For the Next 30 Days.

MISS L. SPAULDING,

Ladies' Furnishing Goods.

O. B. WEED & CO.

Are headquarters for

DRUGS

CHEMICALS,

Patent Medicines, all Kinds,

Imported and Domestic Perfumery.

Toilet Articles,

AND FANCY GOODS.

None but Pure Medicines

Kept in stock.

Prescriptions filled by competent druggists and with fresh and pure drugs. Call and see us. We will use you well. Our store is in Bartholomew's new

Opera Block.

D. SHERWOOD & CO.

Have just received a fine stock of Ladies' French Kid Shoes

Made in the Latest Styles.

Ladies' Fine Shoes, all Kinds,

A Large Stock always on hand.

Men's Fine Walking Shoes

LATEST STYLES.

AT COST

All kinds of

BOOTS, SHOES, AND RUBBER GOODS.

The Finest Line of

French and American Kid Shoes for Ladies' W

Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Sole Agent in Charlevoix for the Celebrated Burt S

They have No Superior.

CUSTOM WORK AND REPAIRING DONE PROMPTLY

And Satisfaction Guaranteed.

L. B Connor

Opposite Bridge Street House, Charlevoix.

WILL M. GILBERT,

EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN.

House, Sign, and Fresco Painting

GRAINING AND KALSOMINING,

Plain and Decorative Paper Hanging.

L. D. BARTHOLOMEW,

DEALER IN

Hardware

FARM IMPLEMENTS, ETC.

Charlevoix, Mich.

The Oldest Established Business on South A

S. G. ISAMAN,

South Arm, Mich.

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

A Large and Well-Selected Stock Always on Hand.

Dry Goods, Ready-made Clothing, Boots a Shoes, Groceries, Provisions, Crockery, Glassware, Hardware, Drugs, Stationery, Notions, &c,

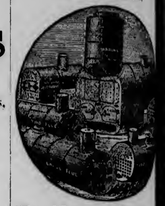
AT LOW PRICES

PRODUCE OF ALL KINDS TAKEN IN CHANGE FOR GOODS.

Give Me a Call. S. G. ISAMA

JOSEPH HYLAND

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.



Boiler Make

Sheet-Iron Worker and manufacturer of Hyland's Patent Firem

Dealer in all kinds of

SECOND-HAND MACHINE

Heavy blacksmithing of all kinds, and ing of Boilers promptly attended to.

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 27, 1884.

Business Announcements.

One of our best citizens would say to the public that he has tried Hall's Catarrh Cure, and it is all that is claimed for it. Price 75 cents per bottle. Sold by Dr. Crouter.

A genuine article in Butter at B. L.

Granulated sugar 10 cents per lb at M. Clark's.

The best oysters of the season, go- packed cakes, at Upright, Emrey & Co.'s.

New invoice of shelf hardware and ing tackle just received at L. D. Bartholo- w's.

E. M. Clark is closing out his Boots Shoes at cost to make room for new goods.

Upright, Emrey & Co. have just d a choice lot of English Breakfast Mush- . The finest sample ever offered in the trade.

Since the death of Mr. Otis, of ston, Dr. J. A. Carlstein has taken a brief from labor, but is now prepared to answer professional calls. Office at the "Ingleside."

Coffee sugar only 9 cents per lb at M. Clark's.

Upright, Emrey & Co. are noted r their Fresh Groceries and Flavoring Ex- cts.

Great bargains in all goods at E. Clark's to make room for new goods.

Fresh Coffees, Teas, Spices, Crack- s, Oysters, Foreign and Domestic Dried Fruits, of canned Goods received this week. Upright rey & Co.

E. M. Clark beats them all in sel- clothing.

Buy note paper and envelopes with e of Charlevoix, at O. B. Weed & Co.'s drug re.

The Temperature.

The following is a record of obser- tions of the thermometer at the eral office, at 7 a. m. and 2 p. m., ch day, for the week ending yester- y:

	7AM	2PM
nesday	28	40
day	35	46
rday	30	50
day	43	46
day	31	42
day	33	48
sday	37	40

Provision Market.

Retail prices to consumers, as corrected every Monday morning by UPRIGHT, EMREY & Co. general dealers:

FLOUR, per bbl, $4.00, $5.00, and $6.00.

BUCKWHEAT FLOUR, per cwt, $4.50.

CORN MEAL, per cwt, bolted $2.00; unbolted, .

HAY, per ton, $8@9.

OATS, per bu, 55c.

GROUND FEED, per cwt, $1.00.

POTATOES, per bu, 50c.

ONIONS, per bu., $1.00.

BUTTER, per lb, 20c.

EGGS, per doz, 12@25c.

LARD, per lb, 11@12c.

HAMS, 10c; Shoulders, 12½c.

SALT PORK, 12c; Beef, 8c.

MACKEREL, per lb, 10c.

CHEESE, 20c.

WATER-WHITE OIL, 25c.

CRACKERS: PREMIUM in good demand.

Fresh Meats from the Market.

BEEF, beef steak, 12½@18c; fresh pork, 12½@ ; mutton, 12½@15c; sausage, 15c; hams, 16c; shoulders, 12½c.

TALLOW, 6@8½c.

Local News Brevities.

Personal Gossip.

Mr. Bagley, of Atwood, is in town with work visiting friends.

Geo. Cook is out again. He has had a long siege of sickness.

L. D. Bartholomew will return home from Florida next week.

Mrs. Dr. Carlstein goes to Chicago this week, to be gone two months.

P. S. Hulbert and wife, of East Jordan, gave the JOURNAL a call last Saturday.

F. Carpenter and family expect to return home from Florida, about April 10th.

Dr. J. A. Carlstein will be found at his office at the "Ingleside," ready to attend to calls.

C. E. Meech, of Detroit, has been canvassing Charlevoix for a marine directory to be published by a Buffalo firm.

Chas. See and Montie Lewis returned last week from Valparaiso, Ind., where they have been attending a business college.

L. W. Skinner is home from Elk Rapids. He leaves for Alabama in a few days where he will take charge of the chemical works in connection with a furnace.

News Brevities.

Easter cards at Dr. Crouter's.

The ice is wasting away rapidly.

A nice rain on Tuesday evening.

It seems good to see bare ground again.

Best cuts of fresh meat are rising in price.

Is it not time to begin to boom the grist mill project?

The Clara Belle has been given an other coat of paint.

A small boy got a ducking in the channel on Tuesday.

The fish tug Anspach has been given a new coat of paint.

The Bridge St. house had 40 extra customers last Saturday.

The discovery of coal near Horton's Bay has been announced.

The new council held its first meeting last Thursday evening.

Prejudice should not interfere with the building up of our town.

John S. Dixon now delivers milk at the door for six cents a quart.

Portions of the Sea Gem have been painted a bright green this week.

"Keeps" is what engage the average boy's undivided attention now days.

The orchestra added much to the entertainment last Saturday evening.

The Addis store property sold for $4,100. The lumber was sold in two lots.

Don't forget the Journal when you want tickets and slips for township election.

Messrs. Newman & Price gave the Newman house office a fresh coat of paint last Saturday.

L. B. Connor expects to announce the arrival of a large stock of boots and shoes next week.

School teachers are allowed by law to attend state teachers' institutes without loss of wages.

"We are of the opinion" that our neighbor's local page shows a remarkable growth since one year ago.

Geo. E. Burton exhibited his "Stereopticon" views at Lewis' hall on Monday evening to a small audience.

Beware of counterfeit silver dollars and half dollar pieces. They are circulating in different parts of the state.

G. W. Jefferies is back to business again, and opened his market on Tuesday with a fine lot of fresh meat.

Firo was discovered in Jones Ackerts house last Friday, but was extinguished before the department could get there.

Special communication of Charlevoix lodge F. & A. M. this (Thursday) evening, for work in the second degree. Turn out.

The entertainment given by the "Peak Sisters" drew out frequent applause from the audience, and netted the society over $30.

When the millions of ties and posts now piled up around Pine lake begin to move out, it will remove all excuse for crying "hard times."

The Flint wagon, sold by W. R. Kilborn, Petoskey, possesses some advantages over all other wagons for use on rough roads in a new country.

The East Jordan band relieved the monotony of things considerably last Saturday by their playing on the street and in the opera house.

The little boo now buzzeth busily in the bonnet of the various candidates who are waiting patiently for honors and office to be "thrust upon them."

The old maxim "The early bird catches the worm," is true in business as well as elsewhere, and it is none too early to plunt advertising for spring trade.

Repairs are being made to the machinery of the North Star, now lying near the machine shop. She will run between Charlevoix and Boyne City.

The Statesman says that a team belonging to J. A. Cameron drew six tons of baled hay at one load from Charlevoix to Boyne City. Pretty good load.

The time for repairing rickety side walks and straightening up the front gate—a silent hint'ner to many loving sighs and blind to loving scenes—is near at hand.

When a newspaper says a kind word for a man he appears to never know it, but if it neglects him in the most trivial matter he finds it out in less than a minute.

Ice in lake Michigan is breaking up, and a favorable wind makes "open water" visible. Unless there is another freeze, business will soon be moving along briskly.

The business card of Dr. S. C. Graves will be found in this paper. The doctor has recently returned from the upper peninsula, and will be found in his old rooms in the Sec block.

In our business directory will be found the cards of Dart & Call, and Jay L. Newberry, attorneys, Petoskey, Mich. Our readers at the east end of the county will please remember these gentlemen when in need of legal services.

It behooves people to look carefully to their chimneys. The winter has been an exceptionally cold one, and chimneys and pipes are filled with soot which if once ignited, may cause a conflagration.

To extend the time within which the JOURNAL was to be "starved out," a friend and patron in southern Michigan has sent us a half barrel of bolted cornmeal, a portion of a consignment from Kansas. Thanks.

Because a girl "works out" it is no sign that she is not just as good and honest as any lady-taper-fingers who looks on honest toil as a mark of disgrace. Just put this in your hat, young man, and think of it occasionally.

The "History of the Traverse Region," now running in the Herald, has reached a point where the Mormon question becomes interesting. To add to the effect of the history, a sensational serial story of the early days of Mormonism, written by Joaquin Miller, is published in the same paper.

D. Sherwood & Co. make an announcement this week, of interest to the ladies. This firm carries a stock of boots and shoes which would be a credit to a much larger town than this. They have more goods than they can show to advantage in their present store room, and further enlargements may soon become necessary.

Young man, stop a minute when you are about to speak lightly of a young woman or girl, and think how you would like to hear some other young man to speak as you are about to, of your sister, and if you are the kind of a chap we give you credit for, you will change your mind and say something else. A girl's character is a very precious jewel to her, and its brilliancy is easily bedimmed, and sometimes through no fault of her own.

The president and secretary being absent, Robert Miller and Fred W. Mayne acted as officers for the historical society at O. D. Wood's last Tuesday evening. The opening exercise was an instrumental solo by Miss Abbie Bennett. F. W. Mayne read the historical chapter for the evening. Subject, The Surrender of Cornwallis. Instrumental duet by Mrs. O. D. Wood and Miss Abbie Bennett. Reading by Mrs. L. E. Allen. Recitation, "The Widow Budd," by Mrs. Dr. Carlstein. Vocal solo, Dr. J. A. Carlstein. The next meeting will be held at Mr. Ainslie's.

An East Jordan gentleman writes to the Grand Rapids Sportsman as follows: "If the sporting men of Grand Rapids, or any it may concern, wish to protect the trout in the Jordan river and its tributaries, they will have to look to it soon, or trout fishing in this country will be a thing of the past. You can see from ten to twenty men and boys daily at the mouth of the Jordan, catching trout through the ice, and some are making a business of it. One well known Detroit man, I am told, has been buying trout and shipping them home. They are caught here weighing from one ounce to two and a half pounds, and hundreds of them daily. If you cannot see to it yourself, please notify some one that will."

It was not the aim of the JOURNAL last week, as the Sentinel intimates, to charge previous village councils with making unnecessary debts, but to show the people how much indebtedness there is to be provided for by the present council. The purchase of the fire engine created the principal part of the debt, and it is a necessity. The necessity of this or other portions of the debt has not been questioned. But the debt exists, and there are people who would insist that, as the members of the council were elected in opposition to a prohibition ticket, it cannot be other than a "whiskey council," and all increase of taxes would be charged as a direct result of this election. To neutralize such an unjust accusation is what the JOURNAL'S figures intended and nothing else.

M. E. Church Notice.

Preaching next Sunday morning on "The Relation of Belief to Practice." At night there will given a second discourse on the "Grandeur of the Orthodox Religion." If you desire to hear sermons upon these themes, please be present.

Citizens' League.

A citizens' league to maintain law and order in general, and enforce the liquor laws in particular, has been organized in Lansing, and we commend the subject to the thoughtful consideration of our citizens. At the meeting for organization, Mr. Andrew Paxton, of Chicago, outlined a similar work in that city which had accomplished good results, and had been the means of saving many young men and girls from ruin. A resolution defining the work of the Lansing League was unanimously adopted, as follows:

Resolved, That we, the citizens of Lansing, do hereby form a citizens' league, for the suppression of the sale of liquors to minors, and for the enforcement of laws and ordinances regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors.

At the close of the meeting, 132 persons signed the following pledge:

"This league shall be called the citizens' league of Lansing. Its object shall be to secure by all proper means the suppression of the sale of liquor to minors, and the enforcement of laws and ordinances regulating the sale of intoxicating liquor."

The Octoroon.

The East Jordan dramatic club gave a most excellent entertainment, for amateurs, at the opera house last Saturday evening. With few exceptions, every part was as well performed as by most traveling troupes. It would be hard to beat C. A. Reinhart in the character of Jacob McClosky, G. W. Fast, as Saleen Scudder, played his part well, though he did not entirely satisfy our ideas of a yankee. Will Rogers made an excellent engineer, while S. M. Rose and A. J. Preess, as negro servants, created much merriment. Miss Minnie Shear, as Zoe, the octoroon girl, played her part well enough, but we could not see much of the octoroon in her appearance. Mrs. G. W. Fast well represented the rich widow, and little Ollie Fast, as Paul, the yellow boy, was a complete success. The other characters were more or less creditable, but lack of room prevents further mention.

Burgess.

The Lewis brothers intend to erect a large barn the coming season.

John Brown has contracted to sow ten acres of peas on Dr. Lewis' farm in Hayes.

Dr. Lewis intends to build a lot of wire fence this spring.

George Howe is very sick at his fathers. His sister has returned home to take care of him.

It is intimated that "cheap year" is being observed.

Mrs. Carrie Wilks visited with her sister Mrs. Frank Knowlust Saturday.

Geo. Banks has had a good business skidding logs this winter.

Mr. Minier is making preparations for sugar-making this spring.

Mr. Sayers, formerly clerk in the Cushman house, Petoskey, has decided to remain on his farm this season.

Mr. Van Schoick, who has been visiting in the southern part of the state, has returned home.

Mr. Case will engage extensively in the fishing business this summer.

South Arm.

The rain of Saturday night took away a large portion of our snow.

Who will seek the grogshop's open door, when nature has provided such a bounteous store of pure sweetness that from the tree does pour; and he will ne'er get "tight" though he sip forevermore?

Mr. and Mrs. C. Pepineau, of Charlevoix, were visiting Mrs. P's parents in Echo last week.

Mr. G. W. Jones, of Boyne Valley, was in town recently.

James A. Keat attended court at Bellaire.

The East Jordan machine shop seems to be doing considerable business. It can plainly be heard on this side of the Arm.

Z. Fairbanks, of Traverse City passed through town recently.

People are wondering why J. R Vance looks so smiling lately. We are informed that the cause is the arrival of a young heiress, March 12th.

Drunken rows, breaking teapots, killing deer, razors under pillows, threatening lives, prison birds on the wing, and a divorce suit, are some of the happenings in Echo.

We are sorry to hear that in your village election, the whiskey element prevailed, but we hope and pray that the "good time coming" is near at hand, this "long, long, long on the way." [We do not understand that the recent election means more whiskey, but simply a benefit of the license and the better control of what is drank by our citizens.—Ed.]

Ironton.

Sunday was quarterly meeting at Ironton. The presiding elder failed to put in an appearance. As there was no preacher, the good people had a sort of love feast.

Rev. J. F. Winkley, from New Boston, Wayne county, preached Sunday evening to a large congregation.

The school exhibition Friday evening was the finest thing of the kind ever in Ironton. Teacher Harris and the school are entitled to the honor.

Our enterprising merchant, J. G. Peterson, finds a steady increasing business.

John Otis is expected home on Tuesday, from Chicago, where he went to bury his brother James, Otis Maple sugar days have come.

Town caucus was held last Saturday.

Last Sunday there were several men on our streets too drunk to walk.

Ironton School.

The following is a report of the general average of the senior department of the Ironton school for the term ending March 21. [We are compelled to omit the figures for each study on account of our material being in use. Ed.]

First Grade.		Second Grade.
Nellie Noves	91	George Smith	82
Katie Smith	91	Third Grade.
Genevieve Bennett	89	Warren Webster	71
Owen Hammond	93	Katie Bennett	74
Frank Mabney	92	Katie Mayoney	72
Frank Hammond	88	Lodore Coldwell	84
Eddie Bird	72	Charles Box	74
Second Grade.		Charlie Shoemaker	77
Eddie Jackson	86	Amos Box	80
Fred Hammond	86	Frank Williams	64
Harvey Woodner	85	Fourth Grade.
Phoebe Holland	78	Walter Bird	70
Cook Keys	76	Jennie Mayoney	75
Lizzie Webster	83	Hannah Mayoney	76
Ella Hunt	82	Nellie Hammond	85
Lizzie McMillan	76	Caroline Nelson	86
Dewitt Hammond	82	Nettie Watkins	84
Byron Brack	75	Mary Schollen	66

J. M. HARRIS, Teacher.

Standing Committees.

The following are the standing committees of the council for the year 1884-5:

Public Buildings.—W. C. Newman, J. M. Eaton, and A. J. McLeod.

Sanitary matters and Police.—Chas. Ely, A. E. Mason, and G. W. Crouter.

Claims and Finance.—Mason, Newman, and McLeod.

Ordinances.—Eaton, Crouter, and McLeod.

Streets and Sidewalks—Eaton, Mason, and Newman.

Fires and other Preventions—McLeod, Newman, and Ely.

Licenses and Printing—Crouter, Ely, and Mason.

Real Estate Transfers.

Reported for the Journal by PERRIOTT BROS., real estate dealers.

The following is a list of transfers of real estate in Charlevoix county, where the consideration is $100 or over, for the week ending Tuesday evening, March 25, 1884, as recorded in the office of register of deeds:

Mary J. Stone to Mary W. Rheinhart, e½ of lots 1 and 2, blo 4 B, East Jordan, $200.

Thomas Phelps and wife to Richard R. Crane, n ½ of s ½ of w ¼ 15-32-8, $100.

John S. Dixon and wife to Henry P. Cook, lot 8, block 2, Dixon's addition to Charlevoix, $250.

Emily E. Hosse to Adelbert R. Upright, lot 4, 18-34-7, $600.

Oscar J. Smith and wife to Melvin Thompson, lot 18, block 12, Charlevoix, $375.

S. C. GRAVES, M. D.,

Office in Sec Block, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE.

A FINE

Pair of Oxen

Yoke, Chain, and Sled, for Cash. Come Early.

J. MILO EATON.

HALL'S

Catarrh Cure

Is Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE IN WHICH IT FAILS TO CURE!

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any cause, and we will forfeit the above amount if it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy, as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood and mucous surfaces. If this meets your eye, ask your Druggist for it, and avoid all worthless substitutes. If he has not got it, send to us and we will forward immediately. Price, 75 cents per bottle.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Dr. CROUTER, Agt., Charlevoix. 22

THE TALISMAN AND THE LEECH: A FRAGMENT.

It was a lowly lady that on her sick-bed lay;
It was her lordly lover that spurred for the leech away.
And met, upon the highway, crouched on the cold hard stone,
A withered white-haired beggar that made for alms her moan.

The lordly lover cast her his purse from saddle-bow.
"My love is lying dying, and for the leech I go.
In yon her ling physicians a many are, I trow;
Would God the skillfulest of all among them I could know!"

"Take this," the crone, upstarting, placed on his hand a ring
Of dull and tarnished copper, a mean and battered thing.
"Wear this, and I when thou ridest up to the leech's door, See for thyself what company of guests doth stand before."

And before the knight could thank her she vanished quite away,
And there was naught but a wee brown bird sitting upon the spray;
And the light-hearted lover onward he spurred his courser gay,
And kissed the tattered talisman, and blessed the kindly fay.

Up the ringing street he darted to the chief physician's door—
Heaven! what ghastly company was standing it before!
The souls of all the slain were there, ten thousand and more,
Like witch-fires in a pallid night, a-wavering to and fro.

On passed the knight to another leech, but before the door he grew sick,
Was goth-ue ghastly if not quite so great a concourse and throng!
And he passed down the long he rule, but every where it was the same,
Watched the spirit of each patient under a monument.

"Alack! doth never a leech have skill?" was his despairing cry;
"And must the Lady Cunegund in her youth and beauty die?
There is but one physician left, and yonder at his door—
Oh, heavens! there floats a single ghost—a single ghost, no more!

"Oh, a blessing on the talisman and on the kindly fay!
Here is the surgeon skilled shall charm my lady's hurt away.
Ho! husk ye, hook ye, Master Leech, and ride away withme,
And thou shalt save a precious life, and win a precious fee."

Up sprang the good physician then behind the gallant knight,
And swiftly up the sounding road clattered the corser wight;
And memy rily the knight lessons and shouted in his glee,
"A blessing on the kindly fay that guided me to thee!"

"Now, by our good Saint Anthony, what is it I hear?
Dost thou not know, Sir Knight, there is no good in neither leech?
But tell me truly, who it was to me thy steps did guide,
For how should a poor leech be known throughout the country-side?"

"Oh, trust me, trust me, Master Leech, thy fame spreads far and near;
On every side of thy healing skill what miracles we hear!
For though thy check doth lightly bear the rosy hue of youth,
There is no healing so renowned in all the land, good sooth."

"Sir Knight, it ill becomes thy rank to mock a simple man,
One who doth practice Galen's art with all the skill he can;
But only yesterday I hung my shingle out at door,
And I have had but a single call—one patient, and no more."

"Now by Saint Anthony," exclaimed the knight

The remainder of this interesting ballad has been lost.—Harper's Magazine

HIGH UP in a BALLOON.

Late on a clear autumn afternoon of 188– the well-known "Woodard's Gardens," in the city of San Francisco, could scarcely contain a surging crowd come together from all quarters of the city to witness the ascent of a monster balloon; in fact the scene of mirth and the faithful reporter were directly interested: nor was the flight into ether which they and the Captain (an experienced aeronaut) of the undertaking proposed by any means a common-place affair, being no less than an attempt to cross in mid-air the rugged mountains of Sierra Nevada, and land far on the other side of that tremendous palisade, in Salt Lake City itself.

It is hardly necessary to state that this aeronautic feat had never been accomplished. Undertaking, therefore, the writer regrets to confess, it had been, and by the same venturesome trio, who, sitting in shame on the roof of the cowshed where they had collapsed at the very outset of their trip, railed at the brick chimney which had wrecked their air ship, cursed the power of the barrel below with humility, and vowed to repeat the attempt within a week. A "charity picnic" afforded an excellent opportunity. The balloon had been patched, the trapper of the trio restored, and once again the immense swollen bag toppled in air, pulling upward with all of its 34,000 cubic feet of gas.

Our party were fairly prompt. We took our places amid the cheers of the crowd. Everything was looked to quickly. "Are you ready?" was the question. "Ready; let go!" ascented the Captain. The cables were parted and, with the cheers of the bystanders came our aerostat shot up into space. The ground, the crowd, the buildings surrounding the garden, the faded tree-top smiling us, dropped like enchantment below—still further below—far beneath. Our undertaking was well begun.

So much has been said of the impression which the air voyager derives during the first half hour or so among that space may be saved here. The thrill of intense excitement as all congestion of blood seemingly smoked the up-turned faces and black pools in the concourse of spectators becoming black and white disks; the cries of "Bon voyage" of all creation come boiling down upon it; all combine to produce a feeling indescribable never felt. The fascination of floating at one vast an altitude as a balloon can soon attain is decidedly less pronounced. Headache, dizziness, Chinese complexion will reply to the car, one scarcely dares gaze down from the rail. A kind of intoxication steals over the navigator. To live and move thus seems a rapture. Small wonder that the man who "balloons" once will "balloon" again and again, each time becoming more infatuated in tempting fate.

Our evening was perfectly serene and cloudless. A gentle breeze wafted us northward. The earth became a pale green and gray map as we reached the level of 2,000 feet above the Bay of San Francisco, which stretched out glimmering toward the horizon. We could discern the city, the Golden Gate, the Farallone Islands. On the east rose Mount Diablo and the Coast Range summits. Northward rippled Sacramento Bay, with a golden dust of cloud hanging over it. The prospect invigorated us and soda water was appropriately absorbed by all present, stronger beverages being interdicted.

Sunset came on. We had been gradually reaching the speed of ninety miles an hour. Not that it was possible to perceive the fact without scientific help. Even if a hurricane be blowing, there is still the endless sensation of floating, floating, for the air-current of and the airship keep exact pace. Thanks to the pieces of tissue paper which were flung out lavishly from time to time, and to the gauze streamers fluttering from our cordage, we could ascertain the direction of the wind. Even a few handfuls of sand thrown out from the ballast bags hanging over the rail caused us to rise perceptibly, for the least and most delicate scales in the chemist's laboratory cannot register the fractions of an ounce which we took the balloon. The sun went down. Dusk advanced. "We must descend and put up for the night, friends," said our Captain. With the vault above turning to a deep indigo, we sank gently, and skirted along the country from which the Coast Range rises.

We were just in time to attract the attention of a number of farm hands returning from work through the fields. With much shouting back and forth, our dragging ropes were caught and made fast. "Tie it to anything, from a gate-post to a steeple," augured from a artist, in a series of whoops worthy of a calliope. After a stiff battle, in which four of our kind assistants were pretty severely pulled about, we found ourselves on terra firma, and on the way to a neighboring farm-house. There we made light of a famous supper, washed down gayly with superb California wine. Our first trip was accomplished, and we slept the sleep which it would be a great pity for only the just to enjoy.

"Daylight already?" was the common exclamation when our vigilant Captain administered smutty shakings to each one of us. In an hour breakfast was over, and we were preparing our steps through the fields. The balloon was loosed after hearty handshakes with our hospitable hosts; once more the delightful sensation of boundless freedom and buoyancy. "Isn't this rising early in the morning with a vengeance?" queried one of the party, as the Captain announced us to be overtopping 16,000 feet.

The men who will make a joke of that character under such untutinal circumstances, deserves to be thrown out over their conveyance," responded the Captain, grimly. But our atmospheric conditions were not long favorable to jesting. The cold grew intense. Our voices seemed mysteriously muffled, and it was necessary to shout instead of chat. Ears tingled, and the rush of blood to the forehead increased that our sudden nose-bleedings that followed. Our Captain, prudent sailor, thoroughly appreciated among the assessional powers of his craft. We dropped apace to a warmer and more normal level, where life was livable at lower pressure.

By this time our second day was well begun. The morning mists evaporated around, above and below us. The west wind spun us toward the gigantic peaks of the Sierra Nevada, which finally rose in full sight. "Look ye there!" cried the Captain, "we'll crested them with cheers.

"Ah, old fellows, we will be on the other side of you soon," cried one of the party.

"Take care," responded the Captain, smilingly; "you are by no means there yet."

Beautifully penciled in green and black, the forests and peaks extended from view. "Look over there," ejaculated the Captain. "Do you make out the track of the Central Pacific? See! There is a train climbing up that grade." Our artist did make out railroad and train, and contrived to sketch the same. In a little while we passed nearly over both, and caught the rumble and roar of wheels and the sight of a flurry of human beings, the cause of which we knew not, and got back to the balloon. But our mighty air ship could not delay for courtesies; the lightning was fast behind. Steadily, wind and all else favorable, we rose and swept forward. With a fresh cheer we saw the highest peak of the Range to maintain withdrawn lying 3,000 feet beneath us.

"At this rate we shall be on the other side, and asleep in Salt Lake City to-night," cried two of us.

Alas! this least was scarcely uttered before its punishment came upon us. Streaks of cloud suddenly appeared above the great Nevada table lands, and the wind veered to the north. Its speed and cure increased. Our Captain's uneasiness grew evident. A consultation was held, and he frowned over the chart. We began to sink rapidly. Clearly as were in train for experiences of a nature unexpected to all.

"Throw out the ballast!" called our Captain. Ringe once more, we darted up the wind veered to the north. Its speed and cure increased. Our Captain's uneasiness grew evident. A consultation was held, and he frowned over the chart. We began to sink rapidly. Clearly as were in train for experiences of a nature unexpected to all.

"The brazen perpetrator of that unrighteousness is fined $10 for contempt of court," thunde red the Judge.

with all the ballast!" commanded our leader. It was in vain. We shot down perpendicularly with the speed of a bullet—1,500 feet in each second. Presently the whizzing of the gale in the tree tops of the mountain summit became terribly audible. To land under such circumstances was impossible. Everything we possessed was tossed overboard—our spare clothing, our provisions—still to no purpose.

A moment or two later, with a series of crashes, and bounds, and leaps that made us hold on like grim death itself, our basket was dragging through the thick-set pine tops. Who could fitly describe the frightful sensations that ensued? With all visions dissipated of success in our expedition, and possibly reaching Salt Lake City or anywhere else alive, we crouched with clinched hold and set teeth in the basket. Occasionally, as we were borne across some depression in the mountain sides, we were free from collisions, and were swept somewhat upward. I well remember that during one of these intervals our Captain, finding the rope of the escape valve had become entangled above, with masterly address clambered the network of the bounding globe, and, clinging tightly to what slender hold he found, adjusted it. It was a feat to tremble at in recollecting. In less than ten minutes after it had been accomplished we struck the tree tops again, and were hurled more mercilessly than before among their clinging branches, until with one tremendous shock our basket struck the strong limbs of a mighty forest giant and held firm. To pull the ripping rope was the work of a second. With a crack a whole seam of the balloon parted. The gas fell about us in our wretched situation, nearly choking us. Our late tyrant collapsed and hung suspended from its collossal peg, the pine tree. We were safe.

Upon the remaining adventures of that luckless day neither reporter nor artist is disposed to dilate. Our valiant Captain, being inured to such untimely ends to all the pomp and circumstance of glorious ballooning, was subsequently seen to smile over the affair.

With vast difficulty we managed to glide down the slippery trunk of the pine, whose boughs formed the nest which we perched, grew eighty feet from the ground. We had landed on a mountain top. Here, as scarcely a quarter of an hour before the expected dinner was discovered, at the foot of a steep declivity. A solitary Chinaman stood beside it plying a fan. We made our way toward him. At first our haggard appearance and scarcely understood tongue made the unfortunate Celestial little disposed to listen to us or have aught to do with us; but, speedily becoming convinced that we had no designs upon his claim, he lent a wondering and compassionate ear to the narration of our misfortunes, and, overcome by the marvelous powers of his craft. We dropped apace to a warmer and more normal level, where life was livable at lower pressure.

By this time our second day was well begun. The morning mists evaporated around, above and below us. The west wind spun us toward the gigantic peaks of the Sierra Nevada, which finally rose in full sight. "Look ye there!" ejaculated the Captain, "we'll crested them with cheers.

"Ah, old fellows, we will be on the other side of you soon," cried one of the party.

"Take care," responded the Captain, smilingly; "you are by no means there yet."

Beautifully penciled in green and black, the forests and peaks extended from view. "Look over there," ejaculated the Captain. "Do you make out the track of the Central Pacific? See! There is a train climbing up that grade." Our artist did make out railroad and train, and contrived to sketch the same. In a little while we passed nearly over both, and caught the rumble and roar of wheels and the sight of a flurry of human beings, the cause of which we knew not, and got back to the balloon. But our mighty air ship could not delay for courtesies; the lightning was fast behind. Steadily, wind and all else favorable, we rose and swept forward. With a fresh cheer we saw the highest peak of the Range to maintain withdrawn lying 3,000 feet beneath us.

"At this rate we shall be on the other side, and asleep in Salt Lake City to-night," cried two of us.

Alas! this least was scarcely uttered before its punishment came upon us. Streaks of cloud suddenly appeared above the great Nevada table lands, and the wind veered to the north. Its speed and cure increased. Our Captain's uneasiness grew evident. A consultation was held, and he frowned over the chart. We began to sink rapidly. Clearly as were in train for experiences of a nature unexpected to all.

"Throw out the ballast!" called our Captain. Ringe once more, we darted up

THE JOURNAL

Charlevoix, Mich., March 27, 1884

BODY ROT.

Col. Ingersoll's Description of It and Its Effects.

There is prejudice against any man engaged in the liquor business. I do not feel that from the time it comes from the cooled and poisonous worm in the distillery until it empties into the hell of death, dishonor, and crime, that alcohol is demoralizing to everybody that touches it, from its source to whom it ends. I do not believe that anybody can contemplate the subject without being prejudiced against the crime. All we have to do is to think of the wrecks on either side of the stream of death, of the suicides, of the insanity of the poverty, pauperism, and destruction coming from alcohol, of the little children tugging at the breast of weeping, despairing, starving mothers begging for bread, of the men of genius it has wrecked, of the men struggling with imaginary serpents produced by the deadly thing, and when we think of the jails and almshouses, of the asylums, of the prisons, and of the scaffolds on either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against the side stuff called alcohol.

Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, and age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the loving mother, extinguishes natural affection, destroys conjugal love, blots out filial attachments, blights paternal hope, and brings premature age in sorrow and sickness to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength, sickness not health, death, not life. It makes wives widows, children orphans, fathers fiends, and all paupers. It feeds rheumatism, nurses gout, welcomes epidemics, invites cholera, imparts pestilence, engenders consumption, and covers the land with idleness, misery, and crime. It produces contortions, fosters quarrels, cherishes vice. It crowds our penitentiaries and furnishes victims for the scaffold.

Alcohol is the blood of the gambler, the inspiration of the burglar, the stimulus of the highwayman, and the support of the midnight incendiary. It suggests the lie and countenances the liar, condemns the thief, esteems the blasphemer. It violates obligations, overthrows friendship, turns love to hate, secrets crime and misconceive. It curses the father to butcher his helpless offspring, and the child to sharpen the parricidal ax.

Alcohol burns up mist, consumes wonder, destroys life, curses God and despises heaven. It subverts statesmen, nurses pestilence, fosters the mercenary and stains the judicial ermine. It bribes voters, disqualifies voters, exempts electors, nullifies conventions, and endangers the government. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislator, dishonors the statesman, and disarms the patriot. It hangs shame on honor, terror on safety, despair on hope, misery on happiness, and with the malevolence of a fiend exhibits sorrow to frighten the donkey and howling to tease it. It goes before to destroy, follows after to mock, curses out and back, and causes the world and laughs at the ruin it has wrought. It robs of wealth, takes from it manliness for self. It is the sum of all villainies, the climax of crimes, the measure of abominations, the debauchee's best friend and God's worst enemy.

F. J. Cheney & Co. proposes to offer one hundred dollars reward for a case of catarrh which cannot be cured.

Waiting For the Boom.

The people are now favorably situated in this country and in England for one of those sudden changes which usually starts a era of good times. The two conditions are plenty food and cheap money. Today food and money are both cheap. Cheap food means that the working classes can buy more than usual with their wages, and cheap money means that capitalists can afford to employ labor freely. Both conditions are favorable to a rapid increase of wealth, and the only thing that is needed to start the movement is confidence. Capitalists must be willing to invest their money in enterprises, and laborers must be willing to work for moderate wages. Both capitalists and laborers are now willing, but they are afraid to act. They have been so often deceived by false booms that they are afraid of another. They have been so often disappointed by the failure of booms to materialize that they are afraid to believe that the boom has really come. Detroit Times.

Now is the time your houses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and lose on the season will find Dr. McLellan's Liniment and Pain Destroyer cheapest. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by C. B. Wood & Co. 8tf

The ways and means committee seem to need to be thronged with men and steel men, from all parts of the country but notably from Pennsylvania, who loudly protest against any change of tariff. Some of them are said to be sleek tongued fellows and can talk iron and steel and the necessity for their protection, without any let up, for hours, waxing warmer and more eloquent as they proceed. Hon. Abram S. Hewitt, member of the committee, himself an iron and steel manufacturer, can see them on every point, tell them facts that they do not seem to know and asks them questions that when answered, shows completely the hollowness of their protests.

Oh! this protection is a sham, cheat, and delusion, and we earnestly hope its days are numbered. The Rapids Progress.

Blood! Blood! Blood! It is necessary to all scientific and correct medicine the blood must be pure. There is no doubt that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the strongest, surest and best blood purifier making on the scene for human existence. Every druggist has it in stock and country dealers should not be without it. Knowing its power to purify the blood, they recommend it freely. Sold by druggists. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

In Brazil, where the inhabitants take coffee many times a day, alcoholism is unknown. Immigrants gradually contract a fondness for coffee, and their children fall into the habit, and never contract a love for liquors that are so fatal in other countries. The number of cafes in the large cities is enormous, while the drinking saloons are very few.

Incipient consumption, coughs (even chronic ones), and all throat troubles are cured by Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25 cents.

The Cheboygan Observer says: "Some of the lumbermen that were recently reduced the wages of their employees to $1 a month. As predicted by us at that time, that proposition for the benefit of the laborer, was probably according to their theory that the laborer should be contented more and the employer to be that it would only cost him so much money, for the privilege of putting the poor laborer in the poor house. Probably they would keep their employees at work for their board and clothes would endure."

F. J. Cheney & Co. proposes to offer one hundred dollars reward for a case of catarrh which cannot be cured.

Waiting For the Boom.

The people are now favorably situated in this country and in England for one of those sudden changes which usually starts a era of good times. The two conditions are plenty food and cheap money. Today food and money are both cheap. Cheap food means that the working classes can buy more than usual with their wages, and cheap money means that capitalists can afford to employ labor freely. Both conditions are favorable to a rapid increase of wealth, and the only thing that is needed to start the movement is confidence. Capitalists must be willing to invest their money in enterprises, and laborers must be willing to work for moderate wages. Both capitalists and laborers are now willing, but they are afraid to act. They have been so often deceived by false booms that they are afraid of another. They have been so often disappointed by the failure of booms to materialize that they are afraid to believe that the boom has really come. Detroit Times.

Now is the time your horses and cattle need attention. To prevent disease and lose on the season will find Dr. McLellan's Liniment and Pain Destroyer cheapest. Full pounds 25 cents. Sold by C. B. Wood & Co. 8tf

The ways and means committee seem to need to be thronged with men and steel men, from all parts of the country but notably from Pennsylvania, who loudly protest against any change of tariff. Some of them are said to be sleek tongued fellows and can talk iron and steel and the necessity for their protection, without any let up, for hours, waxing warmer and more eloquent as they proceed. Hon. Abram S. Hewitt, member of the committee, himself an iron and steel manufacturer, can see them on every point, tell them facts that they do not seem to know and asks them questions that when answered, shows completely the hollowness of their protests.

Oh! this protection is a sham, cheat, and delusion, and we earnestly hope its days are numbered. The Rapids Progress.

Blood! Blood! Blood! It is necessary to all scientific and correct medicine the blood must be pure. There is no doubt that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the strongest, surest and best blood purifier making on the scene for human existence. Every druggist has it in stock and country dealers should not be without it. Knowing its power to purify the blood, they recommend it freely. Sold by druggists. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

WOOD WANTED.

1,000 cords good 16 inch block wood wanted on subscription, at the JOURNAL office. 37mg 4 while the wood are good

PIMPLES.

I will mail free the recipe for a simple VEGETABLE that will remove TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES and BLACKHEADS, leaving the skin soft, clear and beautiful, absolutely free from poisonous ingredients and the growth of hair on a bald head or smooth face. Address, including a 3c stamp, Ben Vandiver & Co., 12 Barclay St., N. Y.

ERRORS OF YOUTH.

A GENTLEMAN who suffered for years from Nervous Debility, Premature Decay, and all the effects of youthful indiscretion, will for the sake of suffering humanity, send free to all who need it, the recipe and direction for making the simple remedy by which he was cured. Sufferers wishing to profit by the advertiser's experience can do so by addressing in perfect confidence, John B. Ogden, 42 Cedar St., New York.

FARM FOR SALE.

Consisting of 111 acres, six miles from Charlevoix, on main road. Soil clay loam. A good house and two frame bank barns. About 70 acres cleared, balance good beech and maple timber. About 250 fruit trees beginning to bear. One half mile from school and one mile from church. Three thousand cedar posts and one hundred dollars worth of wood will be sold with the farm if desired. Will be sold cheap for cash or on time. Inquire of the owner on the premises, or address Box 1, Charlevoix, Mich.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The advertiser having been permanently cured of that dread disease, Consumption, by a simple remedy, is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To all who desire it, he will send a copy of the prescription used, (free of charge), with the directions for preparing and using the same, which they will find a sure CURE for COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, &c. Parties wishing the prescription, will please address, Rev. E. A. Wilson, 194 Penn St., Williamsburgh, N. Y.

FOR SALE.

SECOND HAND

Stationary Engine and Boiler

50 hp cylinder, 16x30 in., Boiler 17 feet long, 42 in. diameter, 76 flues. The engine has been thoroughly overhauled, and is practically as good as new. Price and terms to suit. Enquire of S. M. SMITH,

Or of Washburn & Ackerl, at the Machine Shop. 39tf

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT. State of Michigan. The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. The South National Bank of Grand Rapids, Plaintiff, vs. Nelson Newton, defendant, as follows, to wit: On Monday, January 28th, A. D. 1884, a writ of attachment was duly issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in favor of the above named plaintiff, against the estate of the above named defendant, Nelson Newton, directed to the sheriff of said county of Charlevoix, commanding him to attach the goods, chattels, moneys and effects of said Nelson Newton, the above named defendant, or so much thereof as should be sufficient to satisfy the sum of one thousand and seventy-six dollars, which said writ was returnable on the 8th day of February, 1884. Dated this 28th day of January, A. D. 1884.

BLAIR, KINGSLEY & KLEINMANS,
Attorneys for plaintiff.

NOTICE OF ATTACHMENT. State of Michigan. The circuit court for the county of Charlevoix. Lewis Reynolds, Walter T. Brown, plaintiffs, vs. John Monroe, James Matthews, defendants. Notice is hereby given that on the 8th day of December A. D. 1883, a writ of attachment was issued out of the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in favor of the above named plaintiffs, against the estate of the above named defendants, John Monroe and James Matthews, directed to the sheriff of said county of Charlevoix, commanding him to attach the goods, chattels, moneys and effects of said John Monroe and James Matthews, the defendants above named, to the amount specified, and which writ was made returnable on the 8th day of January A. D. 1884.

Dated February 6th, A. D. 1884.

CREE & SHANK & CREE,
Attorneys for plaintiffs.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN
In the Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.

At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the village of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 10th day of March, A. D. 1884.

Present, Charles Chadwick, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Thomas Moore, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Mary Ann Moore, administratrix of said estate, praying for a license to sell the interest of said deceased in certain real estate belonging to said estate, as in said petition described.

It is ordered that the 14th day of April next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the village of Charlevoix, in said County, and show cause why a license to sell the interest of said deceased in said real estate should not be granted; and it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix County Journal, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Charlevoix, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

CHARLES CHADWICK,
Judge of Probate.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.

Default having been made in the conditions of a mortgage executed by Thomas Moore, of Charlevoix, Michigan, to Mary Ann Moore, of the same place, bearing date the 1st day of March, A. D. 1883, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Charlevoix, in the State of Michigan, on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1883, in liber "A" of mortgages, on page 307, which said mortgage was duly assigned by said Mary Ann Moore to Mary Ann Moore, administratrix of the estate of Thomas Moore, deceased, by assignment bearing date the 1st day of March, A. D. 1884, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the county of Charlevoix, in the State of Michigan, on the 2nd day of March, A. D. 1884, in liber "A" of assignments of mortgages, on page 307, which said default consists in the non-payment of the principal sum and interest due and payable on said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, and the whole amount due and payable on said mortgage at the date of this notice being the sum of one thousand and seventy-six dollars, and no part of said sum having been paid, and by reason of said default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative, and the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, to wit: The south half of the north-east quarter of section number twenty-five, in township number thirty-four north, of range number seven west, containing eighty acres of land, more or less, according to the United States survey thereof, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county of Charlevoix, or his deputy, at the front door of the court house in the village of Charlevoix, in said county, on the 14th day of June, A. D. 1884, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, which is the place where the circuit court for said county is held, and at which sale the amount due on said mortgage will be the sum of one thousand and seventy-six dollars, and the costs of foreclosure and sale.

Dated March 10th, A. D. 1884.

MARY ANN MOORE,
Assignee of Mortgage.

CREE & SHANK & CREE,
Attorneys for Assignee.

Grand Rapids Democrat.

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Terms of subscription:

Daily Democrat—By mail, $8.00 per year in advance, postage paid.

Weekly Democrat, 24 pages, 72 columns for six months; rounds for three months; invariably in advance. Address,

THE DEMOCRAT,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

J. MILO EATON

DEALER IN

REAL ESTATE

OF ALL KINDS.

Houses and Lots for Sale

IN THE MOST DESIRABLE PARTS OF CHARLEVOIX.

WILD LANDS AND IMPROVED FA

FOR SALE IN ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY.

Abstracts of Title Furnished on Short Notice

Represents the

Best Insurance Companies

OFFICE ON BRIDGE STREET. ESTABLISHED IN 18

IMMENSE CUT IN PRICE

OF

All-Wool Goods,

Overcoats and Suitings,

Boots and Shoes

I have a large stock of Clothing and Boots and Shoes which I will close out at cost as I wish to make room for spring goods. All my goods I will warrant

First-Class,

And will be pleased to show them to all parties whether they intend to purchase or not. Remember, I have marked these goods down at actual cost, and they are

Big Bargains.

E. M. Clark

Charlevoix, Feb 17 1884

THIS IS THE SAME

OLD FOX

OF BY GONE YEARS.

And he is, this spring and summer, giving the hounds a hard run for him. They are all after him, in full cry, but he distances them all

The Old Reliable Establishment in Charl

Is full to overflowing with the most complete assortment of

DRESS GOODS, CLOTHI

Boots and Shoes,

Hats and Caps, Gents' Goo

Ladies' Goods, Crockery, Glassware, Carpets

Groceries, Provisions, Flour & F

And you can't guess anything we haven't got

FRESH.

Our sales thus far this year are far in excess of the same time last year, and are daily increasing, which attests the popularity of our establishment.

REMEMBER

We deliver promptly all goods to steamers, stages, private houses in village, and we give our customers prompt attention and perfect satisfaction.

COME AND SEE US

Yours,

AMOS FOX

THE CHARLEVOIX JOURNAL.

UMBER 38. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.: THURSDAY, APRIL 3, 1884. $1.50 PER YEAR.

HE JOURNAL

is published every Thursday morning,

T CHAS. J. STRANG.

Office over I. D. Smith's grocery,

HARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

ERED AT THE POST-OFFICE AT CHARLEVOIX, AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

USINESS DIRECTORY.

ATTORNEYS.

RSHANK & CREE, Attorneys at Law, ce in Butters Block, Charlevoix, Mich. C. SHANK. C. J. CREE.

T & CALL, Attorneys at Law, Real Estate and Loan Agents. Lake St., east of post Charlevoix, Mich

D & AUBERLY, Attorneys at Law, East ston, Mich.

D W. MAYNE, Attorney and Counselor Real Estate business promptly attended to. ROMPT DETROIT.

A. JERSEY, Attorney and Counselor at Law. Office in United States Hotel, Boyne Mich.

L NEWBERRY Attorney at Law, and Circuit Court Commissioner. Office in Beak ng, entrance on Mitchell St. Petoskey, Mich

E CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

ILO TAYLY, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich

DOW, KEAT & MARTIN, Attorneys at Law. Office opposite U. S. Hotel, Boyne City, Mich.

F. WISNER, Attorney and Solicitor, Notary Public and Circuit Court Commissioner.

GARRETT, Attorney at Law, Boyne City, Mich.

BANKS AND BANKERS.

K OF CHARLEVOIX. Capital $ stock. Savings department. Depositors secured by deposit of government bonds, real estate, and good notes for more than above amount. Loans on first mortgages. Drafts and exchange. REYNOLDS & BROWN.

CHURCHES.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school session at 12 m. Prayer meeting every Thursday evening. Rev. E. A. WILSON, pastor.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Sunday services at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. Sunday school at close of morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7. H. T. HOPKINS, pastor.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

BOYNE HOOK AND LADDER FIRE COMPANY. First fire and hand force engine and hook and ladder truck. H. P. BABBE, Secretary.

HOMEOPATHIC PHARMACY.

A FULL LINE of Homeopathic Medicines, Books, Pocket Cases, etc. CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

LIVERY STABLE.

MILO EATON, Proprietor. Good Horses and Rigs. Keep Boys Saddle Horses if Desired.

PHYSICIANS.

A. CHRISTIAN, M. D. Office at Residence.

LEWIS M. D. Physician and Surgeon. Office at residence, Mitchell St., Charlevoix, Mich.

GRAVES, M. D. Office in New Block, Charlevoix.

E. GIBSON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon. Office at residence, Charlevoix, Mich.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS.

CHALY'S HARSHA, Notary Public, Real Estate Broker, and Insurance Agent, Charlevoix.

SECRET SOCIETIES.

A. & A. Scottish Rite Bodies meet second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

Charlevoix Lodge No. 207, meets every Saturday evening, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

Charlevoix Lodge No. 207, meets every Saturday evening, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

Charlevoix Chapter No. 93, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

Charlevoix Council No. 13, meets first Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

A. E. CHESNEY, Prophet.

Merchants' & Farmers' Bank.

F. HARLOWE, Mgr.

Board by the Day or Week

AND

Meals at All Hours.

Also Transient Quarters.

Good Livery Connected.

W. S. JOHNSON,

Bridge Street House.

Boyne City, Michigan.

Robert Miller, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Fountain City House.

Richard Cooper, Proprietor.

Charlevoix, Michigan.

1872 1884

DR. G. W. CROUTER,

THE DRUGGIST.

Our Motto: P. P.

PURITY, POLITENESS.

WE MAKE IT A POINT TO SELL ONLY

Full Strength & Fresh Goods

OUR PRICES WILL ALWAYS BE AS LOW AS

STRICTLY PURE DRUGS

CAN BE SOLD.

Our Stock is the Largest in the County.

E. T. BROWN & CO.,

MANUFACTURERS' AGENTS,

Portable and Stationary Engines

Boilers, Mill and Wood-working Machinery.

Mill Supplies, Threshers, and Threshing Engines.

Bargains in Second-Hand Machinery

WRITE FOR PRICE AND CATALOGUE.

WEST BRIDGE ST., GRAND RAPIDS, MICH

PINE LAKE HOUSE

A. J. HALL, Proprietor.

Boyne City, Michigan.

This house is finely located on the Boyne River, at the head of Pine Lake. It is large and well furnished, and is first-class in the entirement of the traveling public.

Pioneer House,

A. B. NOYES, Proprietor.

Ironton, - - Michigan.

Every accommodation for the traveling public.

United States Hotel,

Geo. W. Cairns, Proprietor.

Boyne City, Michigan.

House thoroughly refitted and refurnished.

Sewing Machines CHEAP.

A few fine Sewing Machines for sale at ten to twenty dollars less than usual prices.

EVERY MACHINE WARRANTED

FOR SIX YEARS.

MRS. W. J. BRADLEY

has purchased the

Ladies' and Children's Furnishing Goods

Late formed by Fisher & Inwood, and will be pleased to retain all the old customers, and gain as many more as possible. Call and see her stock

C. R. BELLINGER

carries the largest and finest stock of

JEWELRY,

Silverware, Watches, Clocks and Optical Goods in the town country. Agent for the celebrated ROCKFORD WATCH, the best timekeeper ever made. All goods left for repairs and not called for in six months are subject to sale for charges

O. W. SMITH,

ELECTRO-PLATER,

Manufacturing Jeweler and Lapidist.

Electroplating in Gold and Silver. Any article of Jewelry made to order. AGATES AND JASPERS cut to order.

HALL'S

Catarrh Cure

Recommended by Physicians!

$100 REWARD FOR A CASE IT FAILS TO CURE.

We manufacture and sell it with a positive guarantee that it will cure any case, and we will forfeit the above amount in case it fails in a single instance.

It is unlike any other Catarrh remedy as it is taken internally, acting upon the blood. If you have Catarrh, from the worst chronic case to the slightest cold in the head, get HALL'S CATARRH CURE. Send for testimonials, free. Price, 75 cents per bottle. Sold by druggists. Address all orders

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Dr. Charles Ayer Chalkville, Ala. 24

Grand Rapids & Indiana R. R.

Time Card in effect January, 1884.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No. 1	No. 3	No. 5	No. 7
Cincinnati, lv		7 30am	7 45pm
Richmond		5 27pm	10 57
Winchester		5 51	11 25
Ridgeville		6 11	11 55
Fort Wayne, ar	6 45	7 45	12 50pm	5 45pm
Fort Wayne, lv		7 45	2 50	5 45pm
Kendallville		8 15	3 20	6 15
Ligonier		8 34	3 39	6 34
Wolcottville		8 51	3 57	6 51
Kalamazoo, lv		9 02	4 12	7 02pm
Kalamazoo, ar		9 50	4 57	7 50
Otsego		10 06	5 13	8 06
Allegan		10 20	5 27	8 20
Grand Rapids, ar	7 15pm	10 50	6 00	8 55
Detroit, ar	10 45	1 05	8 35	11 00pm
Howard City	8 47		6 59	9 57
Big Rapids	9 30		7 40	10 40
Reed City	10 07		8 17	11 18
Cadillac, ar	10 45		8 54	11 55
Cadillac, lv			9 00	12 00am
Traverse City, ar			11 30	2 30
Kalkaska, lv			9 47	12 00pm
Kalkaska, ar			9 52	12 05
Boone Falls			9 57	12 20
Petoskey, ar			10 20	12 44
Harbor Springs			11 15	1 35
Mackinaw City			12 30	2 50
St. Ignace			12 50	3 00
Newberry			10 00	8 50
Marquette			2 50pm	5 50pm
Negaunee, ar			3 15	7 08

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No. 2	No. 4	No. 6	No. 8
Negaunee, lv			5 45pm	7 30am
Marquette			9 00	10 45
St. Ignace			5 45am	6 15pm
Mackinaw City			6 30	7 00
Harbor Springs			7 00	7 30
Petoskey, lv			7 28	11 35
Boyne Falls			8 15	12 22am
Manistee			9 10	2 11
Kalkaska			9 51	2 58
Traverse City, lv			8 45am
Cadillac, ar			11 37	5 30
Cadillac, lv		3 30pm	11 45	5 50
Reed City		4 30	12 42pm	7 16
Big Rapids		5 12	1 21	7 58
Howard City		6 00	2 05	8 47
Detroit, lv	8 30am	1 15	8 10	10 05
Grand Rapids, ar	7 40	4 05	10 25	12 05am
Grand Rapids, lv		4 30pm	1 05	12 20pm
Kalamazoo, ar		6 32	3 03	2 20
Kalamazoo, lv		6 42	3 12	2 30
Vicksburg		7 22	3 50	3 05
Schoolcraft		7 40	4 12	3 20
Kendallville		9 18	5 35	5 31
Fort Wayne, ar	12 30pm		10 25	6 42
Fort Wayne, lv	12 35	2 30am	12 00am
Bluffton	1 09	3 05	12 35
Winchester	1 25	3 25	12 55
Richmond, ar	1 57	4 07	1 30
Cincinnati, ar	7 00pm	12 30pm	7 30am

C. L. DARWOOD, Agt. G. P. Agt. Grand Rapids, Mich.

Grand Rapids Democrat,

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

Office: 75 Lyon St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Terms of subscription:

Daily Democrat—By mail, $8.00 per year in advance, postage paid.

Weekly Democrat, 24 pages, 72 columns for six months; rounds for three months; invariably in advance. Address,

THE DEMOCRAT,
Grand Rapids, Mich.

JOHN NICHOLLS,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.,

Manufacturer of and Dealer in

HARDWOOD AND PINE

LUMBER!

ALSO

Dressed Lumber, Car Blades,

WAGON STAKES, SHINGLES, LATH, ETC.

LUMBER SAWED AND BILLS FILLED TO ORDER.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY

The Great Agitator of Woman's Right to be Equal with Man at the Ballot Box.

At the foot of the Green Mountains, South Adams, Mass., in 1820, was born this woman who has so faithfully and devotedly championed the franchise of her sex at the ballot box. Her ingress into the ranks of the woman's rights cause emanated from her early experience as a school teacher, her compensation being but eight dollars a month, while men received for the same services from twenty four to thirty dollars. After fifteen years of the closest economy she had saved only $600 out of her meagre salary, while, had she received equal compensation for equal service her savings would have aggregated at least $2,000. The contrast aroused her conceptions of injustice, and from 1852 she has been one of the leading spirits in every woman's rights convention held in America; was all these years, and still is, the secretary of the national association.

A great many people suppose that "woman's rights" is an eccentric "hobby" with Miss Anthony. Not so. From 1856 to 1876 she was an ardent worker with Wendell Phillips and Lloyd Garrison in the anti-slavery cause, and continued to advocate freedom for the negro until the emancipation edict gave them their liberty. She is also a great temperance worker, and, in fact, wherever there is a cause in which justice and the good of all humanity is involved, the voice, the heart and sympathies of Susan B. Anthony is foremost in the contest.

Miss Anthony has a fine figure and a large, well shaped head. The world calls her cross grained and singular. She has indeed her peculiar ways, but they are only exterior. Her nature is a broad, generous and sympathetic one, though she never weeps or sentimentalizes. Our likeness well portrays the strong character of Miss Anthony, and our readers can rely upon its being a faithful reproduction of an excellent photograph very lately taken.

The Folly of Protection.

One great product of the American agriculturist has recently been sent out from the leading markets of continental Europe. Germany has placed an inhibition on the importation of American pork, and France has imitated Bismarck's example. This action is a severe blow to an interest that was rapidly developing into one of the most important of American enterprises.

The American farmer is the one who will suffer most by reason of this hostile attitude of Germany and France toward the American hog. It deprives him of an excessive market for his surplus pork product, and must necessarily tend to lower the price of that staple article. He is reduced now to the English and home markets, which of course must soon become glutted.

It is but natural that the American farmer should make inquiry as to the cause of these arbitrary decrees of the two great governments of Europe. He is told by the protectionist organs that they are due to the decisions of inclusive in the American pork, that Germany and France were moved by the [illegible] policy in prohibiting American pork. But these statements are far from the truth. Neither the German chancellor nor the French government assign these reasons as the real ground of their arbitrary conduct. They put it squarely upon the ground of protection to their home pork raisers and packers. They found that the American imports were fast crowding out the home product, lowering prices, and working ruin to the German and French packing trade. They accordingly took immediate steps to prevent any further depression in the home markets, and resolved upon the prohibition of American pork. In taking this course they simply carried into practical effect the American idea of protection. How strange is the irony of fate!

The American people have no right to complain of this treatment. It is in perfect harmony with the divine injunction of "an eye for an eye," etc. For years we have placed restrictions upon the sale of foreign products in this country, and in every possible way hampered and hindered commercial intercourse with other nations. A few years ago Canada placed a retaliatory tariff upon American goods, and we no longer enjoy the benefit of her markets. Germany and France have also responded with prohibitory duties upon our products. Thus restriction has begot restriction, until to-day we enjoy the freedom of the markets of only one great country, viz., England. And the latter buys from us only what she cannot get elsewhere. She is largely dependent upon America for her provisions and grains, but she is encouraging by every means in her power the production of the breadstuffs in her Indian and African possessions, so that she may eventually be made absolutely independent of us. All this foreboders ruin to the American farmer. The tariff is responsible for this unfortunate condition of things, and the tax-ridden agriculturist is beginning to realize this fact. Protection must go! Lansing Journal.

Another Form of Inflation.

A protective tariff is but another form of inflation, as it tends to create fictitious values, and free traders recognize the fact that to abolish it all at once would be injurious to the business interests of the country, in the same way that an immediate withdrawal of the greenbacks from circulation at the end of the war would have disturbed business arrangements. They demand that it shall be gradually reduced until a free trade basis is reached. In this the people are with them, and the party that opposes them, or attempts to delay the party, will get left. Grand Rapids Radical.

The American Journalist says the country papers do more to shape the destinies of the people than the whole metropolitan press combined." It also says "the city press supplies the current news in the mass and the country newspaper digests it into the shape of practical and effective thought." The facts are spread before them by the great city dailies, and they control or guide public sentiment."

English farmers are clamoring for an act prohibiting the importation of American cattle or cattle from any country where the foot and mouth disease exists. It is stated that absolute exclusion of foreign cattle is the object of this move so that the prices of home products may be increased. This is only another instance of the grasping nature of the protection policy.

The Big Rapids Herald has interviewed all the big lumbermen of that county, and from the published opinion it seems that one third favor free trade, one third that to remove the tariff would be injurious, while another portion think this would be obviated by cutting it immediately for the revenue. With over two-thirds from these interviewed in favor of free lumber, it would be [illegible]

THE JOURNAL

BY CHAS. J. STRANG.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

THE Self-acting Sewing Machine Company of Leadenhall street, London, has taken out and is working a patent which will save the necessity for the use of either hands or feet. The new motor drives the sewing machine by a process of clockwork—neither bulky nor complicated. The motive power is completely under control, so that while it can be made to drive a needle at the rate of about a thousand stitches a minute it can also be worked slowly.

THIS altogether improbable story is told by a Washington correspondent: Susan B. Anthony has been in Washington some time canvassing among Congressmen in behalf of female suffrage. One day last week she encountered a new member from the far West, who, being introduced to her, broke out in the following fashion: "Glad to make your acquaintance, Mrs. Anthony. Saw your son in the Senate the other day. Looks a little broken down. Never mind that. Ought to feel proud of him. Sturdy old boy. Lots of life in him yet. Guess he'll last as long as Rhode Island. Good day." And without giving the venerable virgin time to recover from her astonishment the bumptious Representative of the sage-grass regions disappeared in the crowd.

EVERYBODY knows how exasperating it is to lose a key, particularly when you lose it outside a locked door that you are anxious to get on the other side of. It appears that the British Parliament keeps its doors locked between sessions now. It used to keep them locked when in session formerly. Just before the present sitting began the key of the House of Commons was lost, and the dispatches say that great anxiety prevailed in consequence. One can only imagine how he, the members from Ireland would feel if the key had been permanently lost; and what dire disaster would have supervened if her Majesty's loyal opposition had been prevented from moving a vote of censure on the Government's Egyptian policy if they had not turned up.

IT is not a matter of surprise at all that the Chicago baby show which lately developed a "kicker." The wonder is that among fifty or sixty babies there were not several kickers. In vindication of baby character it is only fair to say that the one objection that is raised comes from the father of a baby, who thinks that his wife should have taken the prize for "the handsomest mother" present. He complains that his wife was absurd until somebody started a boom for one of the homeliest mothers in the house, just for a joke, and gave her a majority of votes. He admits that the managers were not to blame, as they could only award according to the number of votes cast; but this sort of thing is calculated to discourage exhibitions of babies and beauties in Chicago and other cities.

A YOUNG lady recently arrived at New Bedford, Mass., on the bark Veronica, from Fayal. This young lad was married at the Islands several weeks ago, yet, singularly, the first glimpse of her husband was obtained through the cabin window of the Veronica, as he stood on Propeller wharf impatiently waiting for the vessel to come alongside the dock. The courtship had been conducted by the friends of the young people. Photographs were exchanged, and the contract was made. The bridegroom forwarded a power of attorney, and the ceremony of marriage was performed by a priest at Fayal, marrying the young girl to a man thousands of miles away. When they met in the cabin the girl blushed, the husband smiled, and they presumably shook hands. Both were apparently completely satisfied with their venture, and the husband bore his young wife proudly away.

SENATOR PHILETUS SAWYER, of Wisconsin, was "raised" in St. Lawrence County, New York, "thought his time" of his father, and started out for himself when 17 years old. He had in his belt $1,200 and used to pay his expenses on his way West. He landed and borrowed and borrowed at Rochester. In a few years he began to accumulate. He made lucky speculations in timber lands, and his wealth increased. He easily he returned to build home in St. Lawrence County, where he found his brother in straitened circumstances. Debt had got the best of him, and to satisfy a mortgage his home was about to be sold. "What is the amount?" asked Philetus. "Twelve hundred dollars," answered Philemon, with a face as long as the Signal Officer's report. "O, brace up," said the Wisconsin statesman; "I'll pay you what I owe you, which, with the interest, will be enough to straighten this matter out." "But," said the former, "you don't owe me anything." "Yes, I do," replied Shorty. "You remember lending me $1 when I went West; well here it is with returns," and he counted out $1,500. "Every dollar I took away with me has brought me $1,500 in return. If you ever get hard up let me know, and I'll help you out again."

APROPOS of the Mapleson-Gerster unpleasantness, Eugene Field, of the Chicago Daily News, perpetrates the following:

One night the charming Gerster said:
"Now, listen, Colonel, to me—
I will see sing—I'll quit the stage,
Unless I'm paid what's due me.
I'm used to think that you should think
That I am such a geese
To let you fatten all the chink
On Mrs. Nordica!"

Then Mapleson, in guileful wise,
Protested he was jested,
And Gerster on the midnight train
Incontinently dusted.
Back to her home in York she hied—
The operatic clemmer
And [illegible] single summer.

But Mapleson, when she had fled,
Forthwith began to weave—
The telegraph cannot be said:
"Come back, my [illegible] to hurry.
I'll do [illegible] ever I can,
And be or ever to [illegible] newsbiz,
And pay your salary when it's due—
That let easy, tri-weekly."

So back to Maple's on went she,
As we've [illegible] know,
And now as opera's on [illegible]
Beats Maple's on high C.
When a fat singer starts a recent row,
The papers take the [illegible]—
This story tales suffer now
To all the uncle, may be.

A PRESS publicanthe has been collecting the statistics of divorce, and lecturing on the theories with which they supply him. The results are interesting, and in some respects singular. Some well-known theories are quite upset by his facts and figures. Taking a fixed standard of 1,000 marriages, the philosopher distributes all countries into three groups—groups in which the divorces average from 1 to 7 in the 1,000; group B, where they run from 8 to 10; group C, where in a thousand marriages there are from 11 to 25 divorces. It is strange to find among the first class the Italians, the Russians, and the Swedes. It seems that a puritanic, restless character of living, however, the doctor said banana must go, and leave them all at home. So, when the doctor carried her out, almost against her will.

Andy made so many promises to be good and mind nurse that she was persuaded that he would try to keep his word. And so he did. But nurse was unreasonable, and no boy likes to be called off from making a kite to run errands. Such "confounded" long ones, too the adjective is Andy's own. I should have said no boy, but Andy's species is rare, when he was only making paste for the beloved kite. I have it snatched away from him!

True, he was mixing it in a cut-glass goblet; but what matter? Due glass was as good as another; indeed, if it had been handy, he would have preferred a tin cup.

Altogether he was a much abused boy! If it were not for a girl either! I would have serious thoughts of running away. What a lark it would be to have old nursey flying around, with her apron strings floating in the air, dodging up to neighbors to hunt for Master Andy!

"I wish I was not a girl!" says Mac, the hardest time of anything in creation! I don't want to be a niminy, piminy, fol-de-rol girl either! I wish I were a bird; they don't have to mind. Yes, I'd even like to be a hornet! Look at that chap hunting flies over there! He has no nurse, and I'll bet does just as he loses a mind to."

These words, uttered aloud, were scarcely out of the little boy's mouth when, wonderful to relate, the very hornet he had been envying flew up to him and said:

"Would you really like to be one of us? Remember, a hornet's life is not all pleasure. He must work hard for his living, like all the rest of the Master's creatures. Think before you decide."

"Do you have nurses?"

"No."

"Then I'll be a hornet!"

How strange! At once he felt himself growing smaller and smaller. Now—see, he could fly! It was a delightful sensation to feel himself floating through the air.

